Bishop Marvin was a seer as well as a saint. The following quotation from his "Doctrinal Integrity of Methodism" is a strong contribution to reverence for sex, and a warning against some tendencies of the "Woman's Movement" that ought to be heeded. I will use it as a close to this paper: "The Woman's movement assails, without any mincing or disguise—or at least many of its advocates do, and, logically, it comes to that—the Scriptural order as to domestic relations. A large portion of its champions are infidels. The system itself is logically infidel and disorganizing. It is fatal to the existence of the family, and the family is the corner stone of all organizations, both social and civil. Without the family the State goes to pieces, and anarchy takes possession of the world. Then civilization itself becomes impossible. Loosen woman from her heaven-appointed and most beautiful orbit, and everything goes to wreck. It is the charm of woman's modesty and purity that holds all society in its coherency. Analyze it and you will see that this is true. Woman's modesty and purity are the very heart of the social fabric. They form the center of gravitation, holding everything in its place. Yet there are not wanting popular preachers, and influential dignitaries of the Church, who are urging this mad theory, and lending the influence of their character to coarsen woman into a political hack, so that all the magnetism of her pure, high nature will be destroyed."

DR. PRETTYMAN AND THE WOMAN QUESTION.

By Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D. D.

The Advocate of September 5 contains a paper, copied from the Baltimore Southern Methodist, and written by Dr. Prettyman, entitled, "Lalty Rights Again."

The Doctor deprecates the reopening of the discussion; and then, with striking inconsistency, proceeds to discuss the question most vigorously. He says:

"It can hardly be doubted that the present effort in the Church to force women out of their natural and Scriptural place is but an annex to the general political question of woman's suffrage. The recent history of this movement in this country and in England is of such a character as to lead every lover of the peace of the Church, and of the dignity of womanhood, to hope that our Zion may be saved from the scandal of it."

The movement is characterized as "the present effort in the Church to force women out of their natural and Scriptural place." This may be rhetoric, but is as unjust as it is unkind. In defense of some of the best women of Methodism, I pronounce the statement unproved and unprovable. He tells us that, "It can be hardly doubted that it is but an annex to the general political question of woman's suffrage." What does he mean by the term "annex?" Does he mean to intimate that this movement in our Church is a political trick? If so, I not only declare that it can be doubted and is doubted by many of the wisest and best among us, who do not believe that such women as Miss Belle Bennett, Miss Head, Mrs. Johnson and their associates are at all capable of the things Dr. Prettyman's insinuations charge them with.

The next fierce and cruel thrust is to identify "this movement" with the militant suffragette movement in England. Again, I declare the statement as unproved, unprovable, and most unjust.

Listen to the volcanic Doctor again: "Every lover of the peace of the Church hopes that our Zion may be saved the scandal of it." Does Dr. Prettyman hope that such vitriolic discussion of this question is going to be passed over silently by people as true to the Church, and who are as verily lovers of peace as he is, but who differ from him on this question? Is this his way of preventing a reopening of this discussion?

Again, he recklessly declares, as an accepted truth, that which is not a fact at all: "This demand is not made on the assertion that our women are being prevented from entering any field of actual Christian service that is adapted to their gifts or graces." Where did he get this idea? Boards of Stewards in all the Conferences need them; Quarterly and District Conferences need them; their presence and personal participation in all of these "fields of actual Christian service adapted to their gifts and graces," are needed and asked for. The Doctor seems utterly ignorant of the motive and meaning of the movement.

At length the Doctor does attempt to argue a little—hear him: "So far as this is a Church question, the demand of the modern woman can not be allowed without first convicting our Lord of unpardonable injustice in not calling Mary of Bethany or of Magdalen to the apostolic office, or of at least giving a woman a commission among the seventy. It may be of little importance that the new woman of the modern world differs in opinion from the Apostle Paul, but it is rather serious to set up a doctrine at this late day in opposition to the fact of nature, the age-long precedent of human civilization and the practice of Jesus."

"What proves too much, proves nothing:" the Doctor proves too much—the same logic he uses would "convict our Lord of unpardonable injustice in not calling" Lazarus and Joseph of Arimathea and a lot more men of faith and fidelity among the one hundred and twenty who are in evidence between the Ascension and Pentecost, "to the apostolic office." Has not this learned Doctor learned long ago that there is no positive conclusions to be drawn from negative propositions? No woman is mentioned in the New Testament as ever having received the Lord's Supper—are they, therefore, barred from the Lord's table? No Roman was called to the Apostolic College. Was St. Augustine, therefore, out of place in the higher ranks of the Christian ministry? Our Lord had other reasons for leaving out the Marys than a supposed, but never proved, antipathy to women in the ministry.

He also appeals to the opinion of Paul. He presumes to know what Paul's opinion is. Let us see: Luke tells us that he and Paul found in "the home of Phyllis, the evangelist (one of the seven 'deacons' of Acts, vi), four young women, daughters of Phyllis, who preached"—yes, that is the right word (if prophetenousai does not mean they preached, the Greek lexicons and writers generally are all at fault); they preached, "they instructed publicly," say Liddell and Scott, and they are accepted authorities. It is a fact that neither Luke nor Paul are reported as disapproving it. Philip evidently endorsed it. Was Paul as evidently opposed to this as some assert. In I. Cor., xi:5, he gives directions concerning the dress of women when preaching. Again the word prophetenou occurs. It is insisted that in xiv:34, he says: "Let the women keep silence in the churches." Yes, but what does he mean by keeping silent? Does he contradict his teaching in xi:5? Does he mean that women must not sing? Does he mean that they must not teach in the churches? In I. Tim., ii:12, he says: "I permit not a woman to teach, nor to have dominion over a man." The word gunai is often used in the sense of wife. Suppose I insist that Paul meant, "I permit not a wife to teach (dictate), nor to have dominion over a husband"—would I be far from his exact meaning? Read the context and see. Priscilla had a hand in teaching Apollos how to preach—neither Luke nor Paul are reported as disapproving it. Paul certainly speaks commendingly of her in Rom., xvi:3-5. Shall we forbid our women to sing or pray or teach in our Sunday schools or prayer meetings or Epworth Leagues or missionary assemblies or institutes? These things are as surely condemned by Paul as their preaching and taking part in our Conferences. If Paul's utterances can be alleged as proof that the latter are wrong, they can be as truly quoted against the former. What did Paul mean by keeping silent? Whatever he meant he surely did not intend to forbid our women to sing or pray in public in the Church, nor to teach a Sunday school class, nor preach a sermon (the last of which he endorses in I. Cor., xi:5), nor to lead missionary meetings, nor to address a League assembly. He evidently meant something else. The Corinthians understood what he meant and we may learn if we will study the conditions, customs and prejudices of that time and place.

The Doctor appeals to the laws of nature. A few centuries ago the laws of nature, as then interpreted, were far otherwise than as now interpreted; so the Doctor's interpretation of nature may be as far afield as was the interpretations of it by the men who condemned Galileo. There is absolutely no logic in this appeal.

The Doctor's charges about Miss Belle Bennett's "adroit move" and "little grace" are unworthy of him, and as far from fact as they are from kindness.

He is also much opposed to the discussion of the matter in the Annual Conferences. Why? Are not Annual Conferences in the habit of discussing questions about to be entertained by the General Conference? Such has ever been the custom in my Conference. Why should we be choked off of this question? Does the Doctor propose to do the choking? I suspect he will find it a Herculean task. Why not in the Conferences as well as in the Advocates? He has opened the discussion in the Advocates—he opened vigorously—why should he try to close the Conferences against it? How is he to keep it out of the Conferences anyway? Will he persuade some brother in each Conference who is also afraid to have the light let in on the subject, to be ready to jump up as soon as the matter is proposed and "move to lay it on the table?" Will the Conferences brook that method of choking it off? Hardly.

Let the matter be discussed in the Advocates—not as Dr. Prettiman discusses it—but calmly, dispassionately, earnestly, seeking the truth; and in like manner in the Conferences. Any effort to choke off debate, to forbid study of the question or legitimate expression of opinion will act as a boomerang to the side that resorts to such unfairness. The question will be discussed; and brother, if you cannot maintain your side of it, be sure the weakness of your contention will be found out; and no "move to lay on the table" can shield you.

Be sure of one thing: Whether you appeal to the Old Testament or the New, to the policy and teaching of Wesley and early Methodism, or to the principles of Methodism, you are going to find some things that cannot be used against this movement. Be sober, thoughtful and kind and open to the truth, and the truth will be reached.

Church News

Dr. J. E. Boggs, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Brownwood, Texas, has received 68 members during the present year, about half of them on profession of faith.

Centenary Church, St. Louis, after undergoing extensive repairs, was reopened on September 8. The pulpit was occupied both in the morning and evening by Dr. W. F. McMurry, who preached two eloquent sermons and raised a collection of $10,000.

Dr. E. V. Regester, pastor of the Mt. Vernon M. E. Church, South, of Washington City, recently declared in a sermon that the Methodists have more colleges than any other religious denomination in the world, not excepting the Roman Catholics.

A new Spanish hymn book is soon to be issued by the American Tract Society, and will contain four hundred hymns selected from a list of over three thousand. When printed, this book will serve all the evangelical denominations in countries where Spanish is spoken.—Midland Methodist.

Dr. John M. Moore attended the recent Presiding Elders' Conference at Dallas, Texas, and delivered a stirring address on Home Missions. He is now swinging the circle of the Annual Conferences in the interest of the great work committed to his hands. He is a most alert and resourceful leader, and we are fortunate in having him in his present position.

Rev. S. Baring-Gould, the noted English clergyman who wrote "Onward, Christian Soldiers," celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday some time since. What led him to write the hymn was the fact that his Sunday school children were to march from one village to another, and he could find no song for them to sing while in the procession that pleased him.

Rev. J. D. Pointer and his wife, of Iota, La., who were in the itinerancy of the M. E. Church, have been appointed to work as missionaries in the Dark Continent. Before her marriage, Mrs. Potter was Miss Marvin McNeil. She was a native of Gloster, Miss., and was graduated from the Meridian Woman's College. The field to which Mr. and Mrs. Pointer will go is Louanda, West Africa.

Mr. Ollie James, United States Senator from Kentucky, and one of the most noted Democratic politicians in the country, is said to be an ardent Methodist. A writer in a secular paper says of him: "At a prayer meeting he is supremely bappy, and I think he had rather participate in a lively protracted meeting than to engage in a political campaign, of which he is known to be very fond." His wife, who was Miss Ruth Thomas, is the daughter of a Methodist preacher.

Dr. Daniel Steele, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, suggests "pastors emeritus" as a designation for the retired preachers of that denomination, instead of calling them "worn-out preachers" or "superannuates." Dr. James A. Anderson, editor of the Western Methodist, approves of the proposal, and we presume that he would like to see it adopted also in the Church, South. We, too, are disposed to regard this suggestion as a meritorious and happy one.

It is announced that Dr. S. H. Wainright, who has been serving the University City Southern Methodist congregation, of St. Louis, will return to Japan, having been elected secretary of the Christian Literature Movement in that country, which is being fostered by all the Protestant denominations operating there. He will edit a monthly magazine and seek to furnish the Japanese with attractive reading matter that is wholesome and religious in sentiment. It is also expected that the best books in other languages will be translated and put into circulation among the Mikado's subjects.

All four of Bishop Hoss's Conferences have been assigned to others. Bishop Mouzon has already held the Denver and Missouri, and Bishop Denny has held the Southwest Missouri, and will also preside over the St. Louis, which meets on September 25. Bishop McCoy will relieve Bishop Denny of the Louisville Conference, which will meet on the same date as the St. Louis. It must not be inferred from the foregoing that Bishop Hoss is expected to be on the ineffective list for a long time. This action was made necessary by the fact that all his Conferences were arranged to meet before October 1, and that he could not take even a brief season of rest and attend them.

A charming letter from Mrs. W. B. Murrah, who, with the Bishop, is now in the Orient, appeared in the Jackson Daily News of the 16th inst. Referring to their delightful voyage across the Pacific on the Japanese ship, "Shinyo Marie," she says: "So far, Mr. Murrah has preached twice on board to very devout and attentive listeners. Although this ship is supposed to be run by heathen people, the captain says he never allows a Sunday to pass without some kind of recognition of the day. If there is no minister on board, he will read the service himself." It would seem that this is another attestation of the widening influence of Christianity among the pagan nations.

The injunction asked for by some of the dissatisfied members of the Board of Trust of Randolph-Macon College was not argued on September 7, as was expected. A modified form of the injunction was agreed upon, leaving the real points at issue to be taken up at a later date. Discussing the significance of this action, Dr. James Cannon, in the Baltimore-Richmond Christian Advocate, says: "This modification of the original injunction will allow the Annual Conferences to act upon the names of the persons set up by the Board of Trustees as suitable persons to fill vacancies existing in said Board, but will not allow the Board of Trustees to elect them until after the court has decided the question raised in the Bill of Complaint, namely, is the agreement made by the Trustees with the Conferences such a delegation of Trust as to be a violation of the charter provision, which requires the Trustees to fill all vacancies?"

The Montana Conference of the M. E. Church, South, reported at its recent session 1,246 church members, and a Sunday school enrollment of 1,223. Thirty-four infants and 38 adults were baptized; about a hundred members were received during the year, more than half of them on profession of faith. There was no net increase in numbers, the gains and losses about offsetting each other. A new church, costing $10,000, was erected at Missoula, the seat of the State University. The figures of the East Columbia Conference showed a church membership of slightly more than 2,100, and a net gain of 226. The status of the work in this territory is of special interest in view of the fact that we are asked to change the name of our Church as a means of popularizing it in the West and Northwest. We have single presiding elder's districts in Louisiana and Mississippi that are more than twice as large as both of these Annual Conferences.

Secular News and Comment

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

The International Harvester Company claims that it paid out recently more than four million dollars in trying to produce a binder twine that would resist the attacks of grasshoppers and crickets.

The United Fruit Company has purchased a tract of land at a cost of $25,000 in New Orleans, upon which it will soon begin the construction of the largest wireless telegraph station in the world.

There are said to be 12,473,000 telephones in use in the world, and that there are 29,566,000 miles of telephone wires, representing a total cost of $1,729,000,000. Surely the people of this age have something to say, and are willing to pay for the opportunity of saying it.

New England is said to have paid in 1911, 2,722,000 for tomatoes shipped from other countries. There is no estimate of how much money was paid by the South for this same vegetable. The soil of the South is peculiarly adapted to tomato raising, and it should become a great industry in the future.

During the past season spinners consumed 14,515,000 bales of cotton, which is about 1,500,000 bales more than the previous highest record. It appears that if this immense demand for cotton exists, there should be no trouble in keeping up the price of this popular Southern product.

A 60-foot ocean-going craft is to be constructed in Delaware with a crystal-clear plate-glass bottom. The object of this novel bottom is to enable scientists better to inspect the bottom of the sea. The world has 127,000,000 square miles of ocean and sea surface, and very little is known about the bottom of any of either the oceans or seas.

In August Mississippi shipped to St. Louis, 6,559 head of fat cattle. This is 827 head more than during the same month of 1911. Stock raising is a promising industry in the South, but it seems a little expensive to have to pay freight on our cattle to St. Louis, in order to sell them, and then pay freight on the meat after it is butchered.

There will be a conference of the special representatives of the American Indians in Columbus, Ohio, some time during October. This convention expects to consider questions that concern the relations of the Indians to America. This meeting promises to be of some importance, considering the fact that there are 265,683 Indians in this country.

It is said that A. G. Vanderbilt is soon to become heir of enough money to give him rank among the richest men in America, among whom the following are the leaders: J. D. Rockefeller (said to be worth a billion dollars), Andrew Carnegie, J. P. Morgan, William Rockefeller, George F. Baker, James B. Duke, James Stillman, Henry C. Frick, and W. K. Vanderbilt.

The population of the United States from 1900 to 1910 increased 21 per cent. During the same time the number of cattle in the United States decreased from 67,709,000 to 61,804,000 head, and the number of hogs decreased 62,868,000 to 58,186,000 head. Is there any wonder, with such an increase in the number of consumers, and such a decrease in supply, that prices should go higher?

That this is the age of the foreigner in the United States is clearly attested by the figures recently given out by the United States

Census Bureau. They show more than 13,000,000 foreigners in the United States, of which number more than 77 per cent live north of the Ohio River and east of the Mississippi River. Only during the last ten years has any considerable number landed in the South, and the increase here is very small compared with the East. The South is yet the land of the American.

A recent news report says that the Illinois Central railroad will soon begin extensive improvements in New Orleans. Another announcement is to the effect that the Frisco System will spend $2,500,000 in the Crescent City in improvements. These two announcements, together with the fact that the Texas and Pacific has already received permission to spend ten million dollars on terminals here, have a tendency to stimulate the country's confidence in the future of New Orleans.

It is claimed that Dr. Sun Yat Sen is to receive a salary of $20,000 a month for managing the construction of 70,000 miles of railroads in China. He is also to finance the enterprise, securing loans from where he can. The plan by which the roads must be built grants the right of their use but forty years, after which time all railroad property will revert back to the Chinese Government. This appears to be a good scheme, and will doubtless mean great things for China in the future.

On October 1, the new postal law, compelling all newspapers, except religious, fraternal, temperance, and scientific journals, to publish the names of all stockholders, editors, business and advertising representatives, and to append the word "advertisement" to every editorial for which money is received, will go into effect. This law is said to mean great injury to many periodicals, but it will have a tendency to make the editorial matter of many papers somewhat more reliable.

GALLMAN, VIA WHITWORTH, AND HOME.

Dear Brother Meek: I spent last week with Rev. J. C. Ellis at Gallman in the third revival meeting that I have held for him during his very successful pastorate of four years. The meeting was satisfactory in many respects. The attendance was splendid and many people testified to having been blessed. Four men and women were added to the Church. The little Church at Gallman is in good condition, and during the pastorate of Brother Ellis has made splendid progress. The people on this work will greatly regret to see the quadrennium of Brother Ellis close. He was in favor with them from the beginning, and has more and more endeared himself to them as the years have gone by. No pastor that I know of does more substantial work than Brother Ellis. His family also are very popular. His oldest daughter, Miss May Neal, who made such a splendid record for scholarship at Whitworth, left during our meeting to take a good position in the High School at Hattiesburg. His next daughter is making good at Whitworth now. Brother Ellis is to be commended for his determination to give every one of his children a thorough education. I was glad to find that Sister Ellis' health was so much improved, and that their talk about transferring had almost ceased. Her short talks to the congregation during the meeting were, by all means, the best preaching done.

Speaking of preachers' children at school, reminds me to say that Brother Cottrell, at Bay St. Louis, probably holds the banner, as I met at Whitworth, as I returned, his three young lady daughters busy with their work in that splendid institution. He certainly has a large interest in this session of the college. May they all delight his heart by making fine records.

It seemed to me that Whitworth had a very fine opening. The "old girls," as they called them, had not finished coming in. Counting the faculty and College families, there will be this week 180 persons boarding in the institution, which will make the enrollment fully 200 the first week. Close competition does not seem to hurt Whitworth. The beautiful new home of President Cooper is about finished, and is an ornament to the campus. This has been erected entirely at the expense of Brother Cooper. The sentiment expressed by a gentleman at Brookhaven the other day, "I am glad to see Dr. Cooper with such a nice home, for he deserves it," will be shared by everyone who knows him. Here at Jefferson Street things are moving along nicely, and we hope to go to Conference with the same good report that this Church has always sent up. We have had 60 accessions, 40 on profession of faith.

H. B. WATKINS, Pastor.

THE OPENING AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

The friends of Millsaps College will be gratified to know that the twenty-first session has opened with a most encouraging outlook, especially in view of the large number of new students both in the Freshman class and the preparatory school, most of whom give evidence at once of a manly and ambitious spirit. The new president, Dr. A. F. Watkins, has taken hold of the institution with a devoted earnestness and manifest fitness which should command the hearty co-operation of all concerned.

On Wednesday morning, the 18th, a large audience of students, citizens and visiting friends gathered in the college chapel to witness the opening exercises of the session. Appropriate addresses were made by the President, some of the visitors, and several of the faculty. Again on Friday evening the chapel was filled almost to the limit of its seating capacity on the occasion of "College Night" exercises and the Y. M. C. A. reception. At this time addresses were made by selected students on the various phases of college activity, all of which were well received. These were followed by a most appropriate, sympathetic and hopeful talk by Dr. Watkins. At the close of the speeches the audience repaired to the Y. M. C. A. Hall, where delightful refreshments were served, and an hour of social intercourse was greatly enjoyed by faculty, students, and visiting friends.

The new member of the teaching force, Prof. J. R. Lin, who takes the chair of History and Economics, comes to us with a splendid record and wide experience, and has already made a very favorable impression. The enrollment has already reached about two hundred and twenty-five, and students are still coming in. The faculty and students are in fine spirits. Various improvements will be effected during the year, and we confidently expect this to be the best session in the history of the college.

THE PORT GIBSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

At nine o'clock on the morning of August 28, the Port Gibson District Conference was called to order, with the presiding elder, Dr. W. H. Huntley, in the chair. The evening before, Brother Ira B. Robertson had preached and those who heard him say the sermon bore marks of old-time power.

There was a considerable amount of business to be disposed of, but everything moved along with the harmony and precision of clock work. The reports generally were good and the preachers all very hopeful. From a financial standpoint, practically all the charges were in arrears, but the key-note of the Conference was, "Faith," and no doubt this obstacle will be removed. The Sam Jones Camp Ground question received, so it is hoped, final adjustment. It was given back into charge of the district trustees, and these were instructed to appoint a committee of five, three of whom must be members of the Glover Church. This committee is to have charge of the grounds, and see that an annual camp meeting is held.

Brother L. L. Stokes was licensed to preach. Brothers S. H. Frazier and A. H. Steele were recommended for admission into the Annual Conference, and Brother W. W. Hopper was recommended for readmission.

In considering the name of Brother Frazier, the Conference voted unanimously to recommend him for admission, and then raised by subscription money sufficient to send him for one session to Millsaps College. No better action, nor one more worthy of repetition, has been taken by a District Conference. We hope that this will become a perpetual fund, and that worthy young men for many years to come may be benefitted by this precedent.

Brothers J. N. Sessions, W. W. Ellis, J. M. Forman and H. H. Crisler were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference; and J. G. East and R. Whittaker, alternates. The ad interim committee on licensing is composed of T. B. Holloman, J. E. Gray, J. E. Sampley, and H. B. Watkins.

Rev. H. J. Marshall, for the Orphan's Home; Dr. Robt. Selby, Secretary of Education, and Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Millsaps College, were present and represented their various interests ably. Dr. Holloman at frequent intervals called the attention of the Conference to the fact that we have two Church papers and a history of Methodism, all of which need subscribers. Centerville was selected as the next meeting place of the Conference.

Altogether, this was a very good Conference, indeed. Our Presiding Elder was at his best; the attendance, when everything is taken into consideration, was unusually good. The sermons preached by Brothers Robertson, Holloman, Crisler, and Dr. A. F. Watkins, were edifying, as was also the address by Dr. Selby.

The Sunday school work was represented by Brother R. A. Maddox. He seems to thoroughly understand his job, and will, we are sure, do a good work as field secretary.

We are thankful for this session of the Port Gibson District Conference, and we hope that the inspiration received there will make our burdens lighter, and help us to carry better reports to the Annual Conference than we have ever before done.

ELMER C. GUNN,
Secretary.

Glover, Miss., Sept. 13, 1912.

MRS. SICILY NICHOLSON WILLIS: AN APPRECIATION.

Every life is a great life if lived according to the will of our Lord and Master. We cannot fail if we trust him and do our best. The world is badly in need of more lives like the life of our Savior, who went about doing good. Such a life was that of Mrs. Sicily Ann Willis (nee Nicholson). Born and reared in a home of culture and piety, surrounded by the most elevating and uplifting influences, coupled with the shining example of the consistent lives of her devout parents, it is no wonder that she was the great Christian we knew her to be.

She was born and reared in Claiborne Parish, near Arizona, La. When but a child she became a happy and devoted Christian, and her love and loyalty for her Master grew more intense with the passing years. She was happily married to a useful and religious man, Mr. J. W. Willis, with whom she lived as a true helpmeet until his ascension, about twelve years ago. Their lives were so happily blended that they seemed specially created for each other.

Of this union there were born six children: two died in infancy, and four being with her in her last hours on earth. The sons are Mr. J. G. Willis of Doyline and Dr. J. Clinton Willis of Shreveport (one of the most skillful surgeons in the South); while the daughters are Mrs. Ella Nelson, Ruston, La., and Mrs. Ida Brown, Arcadia, La. Mrs. Willis leaves two brothers—Rev. W. W. Nicholson, Arizona, La., and Colonel J. W. Nicholson, professor of mathematics, Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge, La.; and one sister, Mrs. Sallie Dutcher, of Ruston.

Her life was a long and useful one. Although she was about seventy years old, no one ever thought of her as being old. She did not spend time day-dreaming of the lamented past, but she lived and loved in the glorious present and hoped for the golden future.

So gentle was she in temperament, so tactful and quiet was she in approaching others, that she had the good fortune to be one of the best loved persons in all the community. She knew the way to the human heart, and longed to win every soul for her Lord. Her religion was not of the kind that boasts in doing great things—it was the type that is kind, easy to be entreated, not puffed up, and which did not behave itself unseemly. She was an optimist both by nature and by grace. She always discovered the good in every heart. She had a simple and trustful faith in her Heavenly Father and unfailing confidence in man. She possessed the rare trait of feeling equally at ease in the presence of the rich and poor, the wise and the ignorant. All felt that they had a true friend in her. It was a blessing to be in her presence. Not long ago a person whose home she had recently visited remarked to me, "Things seem to go easier—and it is easier to be good, when she is in our home."

She is gone before but not lost. She is not dead but sleepeth. We know where to find her. Let us so live that we may enjoy her fellowship on the other shore as we did here.

LIBRARY MOVEMENT SUCCEEDING.

Dear Bro. Meek:

I am much obliged to you for calling attention, through the Advocate, to the proposed library for the white convicts on the Rankin State Farm. It is bearing fruit.

You will be pleased to learn that the enterprise is succeeding through the kindness of many at home and abroad. Already, more than 3000 books and magazines have been sent to my address at Jackson, Miss., and still they come. Some of the books may not prove "par excellence," but many of them are "bonne et belle." Not a few are brand-new and nicely bound. When the library is finished it will be quite a miscellaneous collection. The prisoners appreciate the books, and will take care of them.

The American Bible Society has given more than 3,000 Bibles, Testaments and Gospels, to the value of $200, at the wholesale cost of manufacture. This enables me to give every convict some portion of the Scriptures.

JNO. D. ELLIS.

THE METHODIST CHURCH AT ITTA BENA MISS., AND ITS PASTOR.

This handsome and commodious structure, which has recently been completed at a cost of approximately $20,000, was begun under the pastorate of Rev. J. W. Dorman nearly two years ago. The walls were going up when Rev. S. L. Pope, the present pastor, took charge last December, and under his efficient management the enterprise has gone steadily forward to completion. In prosecuting the work he has been ably assisted by a resourceful building committee composed of the following gentlemen: J. W. Bradford, chairman, Lambert Reese, secretary and treasurer; J. F. Russell, G. B. Clower, J. L. Haley, Dr. C. B. Moore, and Dr. T. B. Holloman. This church is modern in design, has excellent Sunday school facilities, and is most attractive in appearance. Brother Pope and his worthy flock are to be congratulated upon its erection, which is a notable achievement in the history of our Mississippi Delta Methodism. Itta Bena at present has a population of about 1500, but is growing and has promise of a bright future. Methodism there is alert and vigorous, and the charge pays its pastor $1500 and is considered one of the most desirable in the North Mississippi Conference.

BACK TO SCHOOL.

I gotta go to school again
 An' learn a lot of stuff,
 An' after playin' like I been
 I think it's kinder tough;
 An' yet—in school there's lots of fun
 An' mischief, but I guess
 It ain't so bad that school's begun
 'Cause we kin play—recess.
 I'm playin' better pullaway
 Than I could used to do,
 An' if the fellers catch me—say,
 They got to hustle, too!
 An' when it comes to wrastlin', well,
 I throws Jim Blake each try;
 An' Jim he wrestles somethin' swell,
 For he's a husky guy.
 Then there's a girl acrost the aisle
 That I like pretty fine
 (Don't tell the kids—they'd laugh and smile);
 Her name is Caroline.
 An' maybe I will jump a grade.
 Oh, I'll be happy, then.
 School ain't the worst place ever made.
 I'm glad I'm back again.

MARY'S OCCUPATION.

At the great exposition in Omaha some years ago it was the custom for the people to register or sign their names in the different State buildings. People who registered were asked to give their occupations, so that the book read like this, "John Smith, farmer"; "Thomas Brown, carpenter," and so on.

A little golden-haired girl asked that she might register. She was told to write her name and occupation, and this is what she wrote, "Mary Jones; I help mamma."

What a beautiful occupation Mary had! I think that we all ought to have this occupation. I am sure of this, that every child who tries to help mamma and to please Jesus will have the happiest possible life.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

A PONY AND A SIX-MULE TEAM.

"My little boy must go to bed early to-night," said mamma, "for to-morrow he will want to be up with the sun to meet someone whom he will be, oh, so glad to see."

"Who will it be, mamma?" asked Glen.

"I will let you guess," said mamma.

"Grandpa," shouted Glen, dancing about the room. "Hip, hip, hurrah!"

"Yes, grandpa. Now fly away to your nest, Glen bird." Mamma caught his hand, and away they romped to his bed. Soon he was fast asleep.

It seemed almost no time before it was morning, and mamma was laying out a nice, clean suit for him. When he ran down stairs the first person he saw was grandpa, a tall, straight man with white hair and beard. Glen ran into his arms and said: "Grandpa, I'm glad you came. I almost thought you were Santa Claus. You look just like him."

Grandpa laughed and gave him a big hug. Then they walked about the garden enjoying the sunshine.

"So you think I look like Santa Clause, do you, Perhaps I am. I brought you the very nicest gift you ever had." And he led Glen back to the back lawn, and there was a little pony, with a glossy bay coat and long, wavy mane and tail. Glen's eyes danced when he saw him, and his feet danced, too.

"Oh, I'm so glad, I don't know what to do."

"His name is Star, because he has a white star in his forehead," said grandpa. "Up you go," and he put Glen on the pony's back and led him about the lawn. Soon he was not afraid to ride alone all about the town.

Glen took great delight caring for Star. At first he was kind and gentle with him. But Glen had a quick temper, and always wanted his own way. Sometimes Star wanted his own way, too, and then there was trouble. One day Glen was riding him across the lawn, in a great hurry to visit a friend. Star, however, was in no hurry. He stopped every little way to nibble grass. Glen jerked the bridle and shouted, "Get up," and slapped him with his hat. But Star was hungry and would stop to eat. Then Glen became angry and shouted and scolded and kicked him.

Grandpa, who was sitting on the porch, called to him: "Let Star eat, and come here, please."

Glen came slowly and sat on the lowest step.

"I want to tell you something I saw in the war," Glen ran up the steps and stood by his side. He liked grandfather's war stories.

"Our army had just returned from Appomattox, where General Lee had given his sword to General Grant; that meant the war was over. But General Grant gave it back to him, and told Lee that his soldiers might keep their horses, too, because they would need them on their farms. Wasn't that kind of him? We were all feeling happy because the cruel war was over. Soon we would meet the dear folks at home. Our baggage was being removed from the landing at City Point to our old camp ground. There were big wagons, each with a six-mule team. The teamsters drove their teams with one line. They had to go up a steep hill. Each teamster when he came to the steepest point would lash his mules and swear and yell, growing more frantic till the top was reached; then the soldiers would shout and cheer. One after the other came up that way, except the very last load. That teamster made no ado. When he came to the foot of the hill he let his mules rest. He spoke kindly to them. 'Good boys,' he said, 'there is work for you, but you are good for it.' When he reached the steepest place he didn't shout or swear at his team. He just cracked his big snake whip, and the mules jumped into their collars as though it were fun to pull that heavy load, and up they went. The soldiers stood looking on, too surprised to cheer. I said: 'Boys, there's a teamster for you! Why don't you cheer him? He deserves it. The man who can handle mules like that has the making of a general in him.'"

"That's so," they said; "the chaplain is right."

And they gave him a rousing cheer.

"Now run along, my boy. Star is waiting for you at the gate. He thinks this is a fine day for a ride."—Michigan Christian Advocate.

CHURCH EXTENSION DONATIONS BY TWO METHODISMS.

Reports from the meetings of the Joint Commission on Federation, the fraternal address of the Rev. F. M. Thomas, D. D., at Minneapolis in May, and other things have created no little interest in the minds of thoughtful ministers and laymen on both sides of the line, in the history and present status of the two great Methodisms. The following exhibit, showing Church Extension donations during the past ten years, will also, no doubt, be of much interest. The figures for the Methodist Episcopal Church are taken from the February issue of "The Christian Republic," the official organ of their Board of Home Missions and Church Extension, and those for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, from the books in the office of our Board of Church Extension. It will be noted that these figures refer only to donations to churches and do not take into consideration the loans made.

Editorial.

OUR POSITION ON THE WOMAN QUESTION.

We publish in this issue two articles on the question of laity rights for the women of our Church. We cannot say that we are surprised at the precipitation of this discussion, though it has opened several months sooner than we had hoped that it would. Our conviction of the unwisdom of this attempt to take woman out of what we conceive to be her divinely appointed sphere could scarcely be deeper and stronger. In our judgment, this movement is fraught with graver possibilities for evil to the Church and to society than any other which has been inaugurated in modern times, and we feel it to be our duty to resist it to the full extent of our ability. But in the fight which we shall make against it we shall endeavor to be fair, honorable and courteous. The Advocate is not our personal organ and we apprehend it to be our duty to give both sides an equal opportunity to be heard, though, of course, the amount of space devoted to this discussion will necessarily have to be kept within reasonable limits.

There is one thing, however, upon which we shall uniformly insist, and that is, that the discussion shall be kept upon a proper plane. We remember that when we most courteously opened the discussion of this question a few months before the last General Conference the first replies that came pitched the battle upon a low level to which we found it humiliating to descend, though we were forced to do so to defend ourselves from the unfair and discourteous attacks that were made upon us. Profiting by that experience, we will not allow this to occur again. Those wishing to debate this issue in our columns should consider the fact that the Advocate is a religious journal and write in a Christian and brotherly spirit. Otherwise, their copy will be returned or consigned to the wastebasket. An argument loses nothing by being set forth in decorous language. It was said of John Fletcher, the illustrious vicar of Madely, who as a controversialist vanquished all who dared to measure lances with him, that his strongest point was that his opponents could never cause him to lose his temper or to make an ungenerous thrust. He outmeasured them even more in the nobility of his spirit than in the force of his logic.

We desire to say again that we yield to none in our regard for the women of our Church and our admiration for the noble work which they have accomplished. In character and achievement they are unsurpassed, and the meed of highest praise is justly due them. In the splendid history of Methodism from its opening years up to the present, they have had an honorable part. Not a little of its imperishable glory has been due to their influence and inspiration. And this shining record they have made with never a mention of 'laity rights.' If the women of Southern Methodism to-day stand in the forefront of the nation's social workers, they reached that position under a regime wholly different from that which some are now seeking to establish. And if they have gained this distinction, outstripping all others, without the rights of the laity, why change a system that has demonstrated its superiority in the higher efficiency of the laborer that it has developed? When already in the lead, had we not better let uncertain experimentation alone?

We do not believe that a majority of the women of our Church favor this 'laity rights' movement. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, which is quite as large as the Woman's Home Mission Society, has never endorsed it, but, on the contrary, has more than once shown a lack of sympathy with it. Nor has it ever been demonstrated that the rank and file of the Home Mission Society approve of this agitation. So far as we have been able to judge, it has been instigated and kept up by a few insistent leaders. In fact, as Dr. Prettyman recently stated in his able article, the sentiment against it at the last Council Meeting was so strong that its advocacy in the joint Bulletin now issued in the interest of our woman's work, was forbidden.

One other point we wish to touch upon. It has been asserted that this question was hastily and superficially considered by the last General Conference. We do not think the facts at all bear out this claim. The sisters interested in the movement conducted a vigorous campaign in its behalf for several months. Literature was mailed in abundance to every delegate, a lively discussion was kept up in the church papers for many weeks, and just before the meeting in Asheville petitions endorsing it were largely circulated, the machinery of the Home Mission Society being used in the prosecution of the task. When the College of Bishops met they carefully considered the question and unanimously pronounced against it. When the General Conference was organized, the matter was referred to the Committee on Revisals, by which the champions of the movement were patiently and fully heard, with the result that the report was largely against them. The General Conference in open session considered the measure at unusual length, violating all precedents and according Miss Bennett the privileges of the floor to speak in its advocacy. When after the extended debate the vote was taken, it stood 188 to 74 against the petitioners.

In view of this history, how it can be said that this question was hastily considered by the last General Conference we do not see. In our opinion, it has already been so thoroughly gone over that the further discussion of it, which now seems to be inevitable, is likely to prove little else than a threshing over of old straw. We think it is most regrettable that there are those among us who are not willing to accept the voice of the Church concerning this matter, which was so emphatically and overwhelmingly expressed at Asheville. As we see it, its continued agitation is calculated to do much harm and no good. But so long as error seeks to en throne itself, there is no alternative for the champions of truth but faithfully to combat it. This issue is of the most fundamental importance, and no weak spirit of gallantry or sickly sentimentality should be allowed to becloud it. It should be settled upon its real merits, prayerfully and in the fear of God.

REV. GEORGE H. THOMPSON.

We give our readers this week a thought-provoking and helpful sermon by the Rev. George H. Thompson, of Hattiesburg. As a discourse is usually more appreciated if something is known of its author, we will recount briefly a few of the leading events of Brother Thompson's life. He was born in Smith County, Miss., but when he was an infant, his parents moved near the present village of Grange, in Lawrence County, where he was reared. His school advantages up to the nineteenth year of his age were meager; but after that he went to Centenary College for a year, attended for one session the Hattiesburg High School, when the brilliant Dr. W. R. Sims was principal, and later spent two years at Vanderbilt University. He was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of the Mt. Carmel Circuit in September, 1887, and was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference in 1889. He was married on April 10, 1890, to Miss Clara Eloise Ingram, and of this union eight children were born, all of whom are living. Since his entrance into the itinerancy, Brother Thompson has served the following charges: Scranton, Madison, Rose Hill, Lauderdale, De Kalb, Benton, Flora, Lumberton, Brookhaven, and the Brookhaven District. He is at present finishing a quadrennium at Court Street Church, Hattiesburg, where he has done a great work and is held in high esteem. Striking in appearance, a forceful speaker, and a diligent pastor, he is regarded as one of the most resourceful and useful members of the Mississippi Conference. He is in the prime of his powers, and a large service for the Master is expected of him in the coming years.

THE DEATH OF EX-SENATOR MONEY.

In the death of ex-Senator Money, which occurred at his home, Fairhaven, on the coast between Biloxi and Gulfport, on September 18, Mississippi lost one of her best known citizens. Though he did not have the philosophic cast of mind and splendid eloquence of Senator Lamar, the keen analytical power and profound originality of Senator George, or the legal learning and military prestige of General Walthall, he was yet a remarkable man—remarkable in his superb courage, in the extent and versatility of his information, and in his unbroken series of successes as a politician. Mr. Money's education was very largely self-acquired. He was not a literary but a law graduate of the University of Mississippi. It was by dint of tireless toil that he so fully furnished his mind. As a speaker he was clear and convincing, and invariably enlightened and impressed his audiences. He served twenty-eight years in the two Houses of Congress, where he took high rank. Though he escaped defeat, Mr. Money at times was sharply criticized during his public career. Once or twice he seemed about to be overwhelmed by the waves of popular disapproval, but he managed triumphantly to surmount them, and his last days in the public service were free from bitterness and strife.

Mr. Money was reared under Methodist influences and always had great respect for his father's Church. His wife, however, was a member of the Church of the Disciples, and it is our impression that after his marriage he was affiliated with that denomination. We do not ascribe to him the highest order of greatness as a publicist or statesman, but he was undoubtedly possessed of uncommon gifts and will in the years to come occupy a prominent place in the history of his State. His remains were laid to rest at Carrollton, where he lived most of his life, and where Senator George, of whom he was a close and trusted friend, is also buried. How fast the generations follow one another to the tomb! Neither the conspicuous nor the humble are exempted from this unceasing march. It is the way that all must go.

DR. DU BOSE'S PAMPHLET.

We have in hand a copy of Dr. Du Bose's pamphlet, "Shall the Name Be Restored?" which has recently come from the press. It deals, of course, with the question as to whether our Church shall be given a new official designation. It is neatly printed and bound, and is written in the charming style for which the distinguished author has become noted. We have read it with interest, though we strongly dissent from some of the conclusions of the writer. It was said of Daniel Webster that he always made the best speech of any one on his side; so we think it may be said that Dr. Du Bose has brought out the full strength of the cause which he has espoused. The pamphlet may be had of Messrs. Smith and Lamar, and the price is ten cents. It contains much matter of historical interest, and should have a wide circulation.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Our latest news from Bishop Hoss is that he is improving rapidly at Tate Springs, Tenn.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, agent for the Memphis Tri-State Hospital, has lately assisted in a successful meeting at Stephenson, Tenn.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan was scheduled to spend last Sunday in New Iberia, La., being announced to preach both at 11 o'clock and at the evening hour.

Rev. C. H. Ellis, of Terry, Miss., who is "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed," reports progress in his present field of labor. Read his account of his meetings, which appears elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate.

We regret to be informed that Louis, the son of Rev. and Mrs. S. L. Pope, has been seriously ill for some time in their home at Itta Bena, Miss. He was thought to be improving when we last heard, and we trust that ere this he is well on the way toward a complete recovery.

We are indebted to Rev. W. F. McCrory, our pastor at Rocky Springs, Miss., for three subscriptions, sent in a few days ago. His work continues to prosper, and he is hopeful of rounding out the year in good shape. He has already held three of his meetings, with encouraging success.

Rev. R. I. Collins continues to keep busy on the Cockrum (Miss.) charge, and his labors have not been in vain. He has had 22 accessions to the Church during the year, and other signs of progress are not wanting. We are grateful to him for his watchfulness in looking after the interests of the Advocate in his field.

Get ready for Orphanage Work Day. In Louisiana it is Saturday, October 12, and in Mississippi, Saturday, October 19. Let the money earned on these days be gathered up on the succeeding Sabbaths. Let's break the record and give our Orphanages a big boost. The year has been financially a hard one, and they need it.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Vicksburg, recently spent several days at his old home settlement within the bounds of the Buena Vista charge, North Mississippi Conference. While there he assisted Rev. T. J. Durrett, the pastor, in a meeting. He says: "I found Brother Durrett a good man to be with and a good man to help. He is in favor with his people and is doing excellent work."

Rev. H. R. Singleton, of Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans, is assisting Rev. J. F. Foster in a meeting at De Ridder, La.

Rev. Martin Hebert is holding a tent meeting in Mermentau, La., in which he is being ably assisted by Rev. H. N. Harrison, of Lafayette.

Rev. C. C. Clark has given up his work as pastor of the South Mansfield Circuit, and will teach school in Vermilion Parish, La., during the coming year.

We are pleased to record lists of subscribers sent in during the past week by Rev. L. E. Alford, of Sumrall, Miss., and Rev. Thomas J. Martin, of the Wesley (La.) charge.

Rev. A. W. Turner, the Louisiana Conference Evangelist, announces that his future address will be 1703 Stephens Ave., Shreveport, La. All correspondents will please take notice.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, of Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, spent last week out of the city on business. His pulpit was filled on last Sunday morning by Rev. A. J. Gearheard, and in the evening by Rev. A. G. Shankle.

Rev. J. M. Morse, pastor of the Capitol Street Methodist Church, of Jackson, Miss., has announced that he will begin a series of revival services on Sunday, September 29. He will have with him Rev. John B. Andrews, the noted Arkansas evangelist.

Rev. J. H. Hoffpauir is closing his third year on the Vermilion (La.) charge, and it is stated that his people are asking for his return. The Vermilion Circuit is Brother Hoffpauir's first appointment, and it has made commendable progress during his pastorate.

We are told that Rev. J. M. Alford, our pastor at Rayville, La., has recently climbed his family tree and found more than thirty living preachers. He is one of the Mississippi Alfords, whose reputation for numbers in the ministry competes with that of the Hoffpauirs in Louisiana.

Rev. W. J. Newsom, our pastor at Glenmora, La., remembered the Advocate last week with a nice list of subscribers. He is now engaged in a revival meeting at the Old Fellowship Church, one of his appointments, in which he is being assisted by Rev. S. S. Holladay, of Pelican.

Rev. T. J. Norworthy, pastor at Monroe, La., recently spent a week in Southwest Missouri, where he wrought before coming to Louisiana last spring. While absent from Monroe, his pulpit was ably filled by Rev. Wm. Schuhle, presiding elder of the Monroe District.

Rev. E. B. Troy is being assisted in a revival meeting at West Monroe, La., by Rev. J. M. Alford, of Rayville, who is doing the preaching, and Prof. Lifsey, of Shreveport, who is leading the singing. Reports from West Monroe are that the crowds are large and that the interest is deepening.

Miss Ruth Coles, of Estherwood, La., is the treasurer of the Lafayette District Epworth League, and has proved herself an effective money raiser. She has met with unusual success in collecting the full amount of the League's pledge for the French Mission work in the Lafayette District.

The press dispatches report that Bishop A. W. Wilson has returned from a trip abroad, and that his physical condition is good. We felt honored to have him serve as our fraternal messenger to the Methodists of Great Britain, but we are happy to know that he is again at home. There is no more majestic figure in world-wide Methodism than our beloved Senior Bishop.

The Cuipepper revival at Columbia, Miss., was fruitful in results, though we cannot give figures as to the conversions and accessions. It was announced in the secular papers that Brother Cuipepper would proceed to Poplarville and conduct a series of services, but later the press dispatches stated that he was quite ill. We have no late news, either as to his condition or his plans.

The fact that the two articles on the woman question appear together in this issue of the Advocate is not a thing of design. We should have preferred to print one at a time, but they had both been in type for two or three weeks, and we did not, in justice to the writers, wish to withhold them longer. Each of them is a vigorous discussion, and will, no doubt, find sympathetic readers.

After a pleasant stay of several weeks at Petoskey, Michigan, and other northern points, Mr. J. B. Streater has returned to his home at Black Hawk, Miss., making the trip from Memphis in an automobile, together with Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Williamson, who reside in the Bluff City. Mr. and Mrs. Williamson tarried in Black Hawk for three or four days, visiting Brother Streater and other relatives.

Rev. H. B. Vandenburg is closing his third year on the Church Point (La.) charge, where he has done a good work in a difficult field. He was recently assisted by Rev. D. M. Boddie, a student in Centenary College, in a meeting at Church Point. There were six accessions to the Church, which speaks well for the success of the meeting, for Church Point is one of the most thoroughly Romanized towns in South Louisiana.

We received the following interesting news on a postal card from Rev. M. L. White, of Prentiss, Miss., last week: "On the second Sunday night at my regular appointment at Santee, I received four bright young men into the Church. From Santee I went to help Rev. J. H. Moore of the Walnut Grove charge in a meeting at Pine Grove. We had a good meeting, in which eleven were added to the Church. Brother Moore is well liked by his people."

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Utica, Miss., writes that as he was leaving Pelahatchie, where he recently assisted in a revival, the pastor, Rev. W. J. Dawson, told him that there had been 52 accessions to the Church, and that 22 infants had been baptized. Whether the results have since increased we are not informed, but certainly this was a fine meeting. To lead souls to Christ and into his Church for spiritual nurture and service, is the supreme work of the ministry.

Rev. F. B. Ormond, of Hickory, Miss., under date of the 23d inst., writes: "I am just up from an attack of chills and fever lasting several weeks. I have not been able to preach for over a month, but I trust that I am now on the road to a complete recovery." We regret to hear of Brother Ormond's illness, but are pleased to know that he is now much better. We note that he is to begin a meeting at Hickory the latter part of this week, in which he will have the assistance of Rev. D. E. Kelley.

In last week's Advocate, misled by a secular weekly, we stated that Rev. J. A. Moore, of Magnolia, had assisted Rev. J. G. Galloway in a meeting at Crystal Springs. This was an error. Brother Moore filled the pulpit at Crystal Springs on the first Sunday in September, in the absence of Brother Galloway, and that evening joined Rev. R. H. Barr at North Wesson, where protracted services were conducted. We strive to be careful in gathering the news in our territory, and we sincerely regret that we blundered in this instance.

In a personal note to the Editor, Rev. T. J. O'Neill, the capable presiding elder of the Newton District, says: "In the revival meetings in which I have assisted this summer there have been added exactly one hundred to the Church. The indications now are that we will report the greatest number of accessions to the Church in this district this year that we have reported during any year of my incumbency as presiding elder. For this and many other blessings, I give thanks to almighty God." We like the ring of this message. Brother O'Neill has a right to be happy over such a showing.

We regret to know that President J. R. Countiss, of Grenada College, has been somewhat indisposed since the opening of that institution, but we are pleased to state that he is about well again. Brother Countiss in a personal note makes the following reference to the service which our pastor, Rev. J. A. Hall, is rendering in Grenada: "Brother Hall is moving on well with his work. He has large congregations and his prayer meetings are the largest I have ever attended anywhere. He has lately visited his parents in Indiana. Taking him Sunday after Sunday, I have enjoyed no man's preaching more."

We received Monday morning the following pathetic note from Rev. C. C. Evans, our pastor at Decatur, Miss.: "My poor soul is sad beyond expression. My wife died at the Touro Infirmary, in New Orleans, Sunday morning, after 1 o'clock a.m. She underwent an operation on September 13, and since that time her condition had been very serious. Her faith was something glorious. We are parted, but not forever." Our heart bleeds for our suffering brother. God alone can comfort him in such an hour. He will have the sympathy and prayers of a host of friends in this trying ordeal. How unspeakably precious are the sweet assurances of the Gospel when our loved ones thus go from us! Indeed, but for them we would be utterly and hopelessly crushed. What most solaces us is the priceless truth, that they are only "lost awhile."

Miss Belle Roberts, who is canvassing for the Advocate along the line of the Illinois Central Railroad in Mississippi, writes: "Many who do not take the paper are glad to get a copy. They tell me the next time I see them, that they did not retire until they had read everything in it, and that they do not see how they have gone so long without it; and they give me their subscription." That many of our people are ignorant of the value of the Advocate, we not in the least doubt. Sometimes, when we reflect upon the many complimentary things that are said about the paper by leading men of the connection and the meager support that is given it by the patronizing Conferences, we are disposed to think that a Church paper, like a prophet, "is not without honor save in its own country." If you appreciate the Advocate, talk it up. If all who take it would lend a helping hand, its circulation could be largely increased. And that would mean much to the Methodism of Mississippi and Louisiana.

Under date of the 18th inst., Rev. R. A. Tucker, presiding elder of the Holly Springs District, sends us the following optimistic news note: "My fourth round began with a good quarterly conference on the Taylor Circuit last Saturday (the 15th). The pastor, Rev. A. S. Raper, reported 31 additions to the Church this year. Two of the churches have paid more than their assessments for the pastor's salary, and the others are in good shape to pay out. The pastor has all of the assessments for Conference collections cash in hand. This is very creditable both to the preacher and people when it is remembered that this is a country circuit, and that no cotton has been picked as yet. We are expecting other charges to do as well. All over the district the signs are encouraging." We heartily congratulate Brothers Tucker, Raper, and the good people of the Taylor charge upon this happy situation. Brother Tucker is wearing the elder's harness for the first year, and from the gait he is going, he is likely to wear it for many more.

GRENADA COLLEGE OPENING.

Dear Dr. Meek: Grenada College reports a fine opening. The number of boarding pupils for the first week is about the same as that for the entire session last year. The town patronage is larger than for many years, and the appreciation of the college among the home people is most gratifying. Knowing teachers, pupils, and management as they do, their endorsement is most valuable. We have an especially strong faculty in music and the number of pupils enrolled in that department is already in excess of last year, and it was then unusually large for the size of the student body.

We are proud of our curriculum and our faculty, but our especial pride is in the character of our students. No school can show a finer body of cultured, Christian young women. Their deportment is complimented by all who see them. I am delighted to have my own daughter grow up with such companions, for association means more, oftentimes, than textbooks and technical training.

We had with us at the opening Trustees Mitchell, Jacob, and DuBard, who made appropriate talks, besides Brothers Bachman and Freeman, Wroten and Ray, and the pastors of the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches, who gave us words of cheer and encouragement.

The extensive improvements in grounds, buildings, and furnishings elicited warmest words of praise from students and visitors. The healthy growth of the college is the best forecast of its future.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO PASTORS AND PEOPLE.

This is the time of the year when many young people are leaving their present places of residence to take up temporary or permanent abode in New Orleans, in many cases for the purpose of school attendance. This is a crisis in life when many drift away from the Church, and is the very time when Christian influence is most needed. The Baraca-Philathea Class of the First Methodist Church, New Orleans, with an average attendance during the last winter months of from 35 to 40, desires to co-operate at this point to prevent such defections. If the name, New Orleans address, probable date of arrival (together with other information that might be of value) of young people, of either sex, coming to the city, are sent to one of the persons below named, we will put ourselves and members of our class into prompt touch with them. If some other Methodist Church is more convenient, it will be our pleasure to notify the pastor of that church of their arrival.

It is our aim so to study the Bible as to get from it the most practical good, never compromising with any theory which would tend to the dethronement of the "good old-time religion," but in a manner without offense to any person of any creed or denomination we aim, too, to surround our class with a wholesome, helpful social atmosphere. We bespeak your interest in our work.

Signed by L. M. Jeffers, President, 218 Metropolitan Bldg.; C. F. Niebergall, Leader, 1172 Calhoun Street; Dr. J. W. Moore and Rev. W. W. Hoimes, pastors, 1108 St. Charles Street.

THE ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB.

A few extracts from letters of club members will give the reader some idea of the many attractive features of the club and explain why it is so popular. Here are a few samples taken from the correspondence at random:

"The piano is just grand! The club plan is equally as good as the piano."

"I am perfectly delighted with my Ludden & Bates Piano and fully satisfied."

"I am delighted with it."

"To say that we are pleased would but mildly express our feeling."

"I have studied the plan very carefully and consider it very liberal."

"We are perfectly delighted with it."

"It is quite in keeping with the 'Sterling' quality, which an acquaintance of twenty years leads me to expect always from your house."

"I do not believe any one can get up a better plan."

Almost every letter received contains similar expressions of appreciation. The advertising manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate cordially invites you to write for your copy of the club booklet and catalogue which describes the plan and instruments fully. Obituaries.

On the morning of September 5, in Quitman, Miss., just as the mid-night hour was merging into the light and joy of a new day, the precious soul of little R. L. CRISCOE, Jr., sought the glory of the everlasting hills, where no sun ever sets and no clouds ever obscure the beatific vision of the bright little jewels in Heaven. The tiny little rosebud had only blessed the home of its fond young parents nine short weeks. After a few days of illness the weakened little body could no longer hold the bright young spirit, and it left its earthly habitation with lingering memories of hope and love clustering about it. Sorrowful, indeed, is that home with its broken circle and vacant place. The sympathy of scores of friends would gladly seek to alleviate the woe of the bleeding hearts about the shadowed hearthstone, but can only commend them to the Source of all strength and grace, which has ever proven sufficient in the sore trial and bereavement of others.

HATTIE DAUGHDRILL.

ANNA EAVES CROSS was born in Middleborough, England, April 21, 1864, and came to America three years later. In early childhood she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church in Portsmouth, Ohio, at which place she was married to Robert A. Cross on December 31, 1890. For a number of years she was a member of Parker Memorial Methodist Church of New Orleans, and a most consecrated and exemplary member. She was one of the most successful and beloved teachers in the Sunday school, and was interested in every department of Church activity. After a lingering, painful illness of seven months, she fell asleep on July 6, 1912. The end was peace and triumph. The long days of pain were borne with Christian fortitude that often rose into heroic rejoicing, and all who came into that sick room felt it to be the very threshold of Heaven. Her blessings, as she laid her hands upon her husband and upon her children—Leah, Agnes and Robert—and then upon her pastor, were as whisperings from the other world; and when she was gone we felt that she had gone to be "forever with the Lord."

HER PASTOR.

REV. JOHN WESLEY HARRIS departed this life at his home in Hardy, Miss., July 3, 1912. He was born in Harrisburg, N. C., May 30, 1837; was converted when but a youth, and joined the Methodist Church and lived a consistent member till his death. He came to Mississippi in 1859; and from there joined the Confederate Army and made a faithful soldier. At the close of the war he settled at Hardy, where he has many friends among all classes, who honored and loved him. His life told of the spirit of his Lord and Master that abode within him. His memory is precious and will long abide for good. He was a devout believer in the doctrine of entire sanctification. He sought and obtained the experience in 1896, and walked in this blessed life till he was called to his final reward. He was licensed to preach in 1897, and loved the work. This precious man bore the marks of a deep spirituality. He impressed me with his devout spirit as but few men have done. He loved the fellowship of his brethren; would go for miles to be in a revival meeting, and rejoiced in seeing souls led to his Lord. Brother Harris was twice married, but had no children. His last companion, a devout Christian woman, still lives and mourns her great loss in his death. May our Father comfort her. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

J. S. SANDERS.

HOW SHALL THE FUND BE RAISED?

Dear Brother Meek: I have noted with pleasure some kind remarks about the action of the Port Gibson District Conference with reference to providing for the education for the ministry of a young man at Millsaps College. I also noted what Brother Terry said in the last issue of the Advocate about other districts doing the same thing. There have been in your paper other articles commending the education of our young men for the ministry. Dr. Watkins struck the key-note, it seems to me, when he said, "Let's give the young men the money—not lend it to them, so that they will come out of school and start in the itinerancy without a load of debt."

The plan of taking collections for this worthy object seems to be all right, but this method has its drawbacks. As matters stand now, it appears to me that many of our country charges would be asked for a collection every preaching day in the year, if all of the claims were taken in that way. Indeed, if such claims were taken separately, the proceedings would soon become so monotonous that every time a layman saw a preacher start towards him, he would think that the preacher was after money. Yet a religion that does not reach a man's pocket-book, is not, in my humble opinion, very securely founded.

Yet it seems to me that there is a better way. Why not talk up an endowment plan? Why could we not get some of our substantial laymen to contribute towards such a noble purpose? The plan of taking up collections is all right as long as it lasts, and that may be as long as the sentiment in such and such a case lasts; but the endowment plan carries along with it the idea of perpetuity.

Public or private collections may be the best plan for present emergencies; but has it the wearing and staying qualities of the endowment plan? I am not in a position with either facts or experience to discuss the subject beyond merely the suggestions I have made. I leave the discussion of methods to some abler pen than mine, and hope to see some one take up and handle the subject with such force that something definite will be done in this direction.

KEATCHIE, LA.

We have just closed our revival campaign on the Keatchie charge for this season, and it has been a very, very gracious season, indeed. I believe more than a hundred have been reclaimed or converted during these meetings on this historic old charge. We held meetings at Logansport, Belle Bower, Longstreet and Keatchie, Bro. W. R. Harvill assisted us at the first two places named; Brother George D. Anders at the third, and our presiding elder, Rev. P. M. Brown, at the fourth and last. All of these meetings were good, but especially was our Lord exalted at Belle Bower and Longstreet. Many were led to God in these two meetings, and differences between church members of years' standing were settled. These are indeed great people on the Keatchie charge, and the Lord is a great Lord with many of them. I rejoice to read of the fruitful meetings that have been held in our Conference, and, in fact, throughout all of our connection this year, I believe we are beginning to have the great revival for which we Methodists have been praying.

Tidings From the Field

Ida Charge, Louisiana Conference.

I will give you my first report for the Ida charge. I was appointed to the work the first of April to take the place of Brother Waltman. I have held all my meetings, being assisted at Ida by Rev. W. W. Perry, of the Texas Avenue Charge, of Shreveport, and at Gilliam by Brother Sloane. The preaching by these two brethren was of a high order. I held three other meetings by myself, organizing at one place with 11 members; at another place I had 22 accessions, and three at the last place, making 31 additions since April. We will have one church to dedicate before Conference. I am now living in Shreveport (on Preachers' Avenue), and will enter Centenary College when it opens to-morrow.

F. J. MCCOY.

September 17, 1912.

Mooreville, Miss.

We have closed our protracted meetings on the Mooreville charge. The Lord has blessed us in our efforts by giving to us an outpouring of his Spirit. The Church has been spiritually revived, and some that had grown cold renewed their faith in God, and made known their intentions to walk closer to God and to be more faithful in the discharge of Christian duty. Brother J. W. Raper, and one of my local preachers, rendered valuable services, preaching some good revival sermons. We had Rev. G. W. McLain with us at Mooreville. The result was one of the old-time Methodist revivals. For a time it seemed that the services would be void of any spiritual manifestation. Then we quietly stole away in the twilight shadows to the grove—the brethren to one grove and the sisters to another. The second evening young men asked for prayer, and some professed to have put on Christ. The ladies returned at the same time, shouting the praise of God. We had no sermon that night. Neither did we need one—but we worked, prayed and shouted. The altar was soon filled with penitents, and souls were born into the kingdom. Brother McLain gets close to God and delivers the message with a burning zeal that starts the fires on the altars of the hearts of the hearers, and the result is religious joy and souls born into the kingdom.

W. W. HARTSFIELD, Pastor.

Vardaman, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: Our Third Quarterly Conference is now a matter of history. Rev. J. E. Cunningham, our very active presiding elder, preached four times for us to the satisfaction and profit of all. His sermon on "Love One Another," was presented in such a manner that the large congregation was drawn closer together in the bonds of love and Christian fellowship, and were made to feel that they were in the presence of the God of love. The financial report of the stewards was by far the best of the year. Brother Cunningham preached the third Sunday night in August at Ellzey, where we were beginning our protracted meeting. Rev. S. E. Galloway, who has been in school at Nashville for the past two years, assisted during the meeting and did some splendid preaching. The large church could not accommodate the crowds at night. We received nine into the Church. Could we have continued the meeting another week, we, no doubt, would have had a sweeping revival. We have had good meetings at every church on the charge this year. Brother Galloway will continue in school for three years yet. He is a young man of great promise and the Church will hear from him in days to come, if he will but continue true to her doctrines; for God has always honored the preaching of "the whosoever-will" doctrine, and will continue to do so, if it is delivered in the spirit of the Master.

D. M. GEAN, P. C.

Bucatunna, Miss.

We had a glorious revival at Lewis Chapel. To say that Rev. B. W. Lewis did the preaching is to say it was done well. Considering the ability of the members, there had been great preparations made. The roads were put in good condition, and every thing about the church looked clean and inviting. Besides preparation in material things, a prayer circle was formed among the members. Souls were hungering and thirsting for the Gospel truth. They had in a general way prepared the way of the Lord. The Lord came and graciously blessed every service. The old-time power was manifested. Many souls were blessed; a number were converted, and nine were added to the Church.

S. N. YOUNG, P. C.

Ringgold, La.

I will now report the four revival meetings that have been held on the Ringgold charge this year. We began at Rocky Mound the third Sunday in July and continued until the following Saturday. By the help of God and my membership I held this meeting, which resulted in four accessions to the Church, some reclamations, and in a number being blessed.

We began at Grand Bayou on Saturday night before the fourth Sunday and continued until after the first Sunday in August. Rev. P. O. Lowrey encouraged us with some helpful talks on Sunday school work. Rev. F. R. Power, our pastor at Mooringsport, did the preaching, and in spite of hindrances, we had a splendid meeting. The membership was encouraged and 13 were added to the Church.

Brother Power did some of the preaching in our next meeting which continued from Thursday morning before the second Sunday in August until the following Thursday night. I preached for the first four days. Although the rain came down upon us, we were also blessed with showers from the presence of the Lord, and, in spite of little hindrances, God gave us a good meeting and six new members, besides a number of reclamations. We closed our last meeting last night, the third Sunday in September, with our presiding elder, Rev. R. W. Tucker, in charge for the last week. All who know Brother Tucker and have heard him preach know that those who heard him in this meeting were blessed. We had one addition to the Church. Ringgold is dominated by the Baptist Church, and our great work is to edify our own little flock and enlighten all other believers. The congregation remembered Brother Tucker with a nice little purse, as the people of Grand Bayou also did Brother Power. At the suggestion of Brother Power the Grand Bayou flock surprised their pastor with a nice suit of clothes as a present. For these good meetings, the kind courtesies which have been extended to us, and all other blessings, we are thankful, and take new courage to fight on for the Master.

FOR THE HOME AND FARM.

Nashville, Tenn., November 17, 1891: "I desire to express my high appreciation of your Gray's Ointment as a most valuable veterinary medicine. TERRY, MISS.

I am greatly rejoiced in that I can report some real progress in the work of the Lord on the Terry charge.

Since July 27, we have held three special revival meetings. At Spring Ridge, Rev. J. R. Jones, P. E., gave us two helpful sermons at the beginning of the meeting, which continued nine days. The attendance was good, and many testified to great spiritual help as a result of the services.

At Forest Hill, August 11, at 11 a. m., a good beginning was made. Owing to rains and other hindrances, the meeting was continued only five days. Some few professed saving faith in Christ, while many others claimed to have been greatly helped in their spiritual life, and family altars were pledged.

From September 1 to September 10, at Byram, daily services were held of unusual interest from first to last. With few exceptions, the large audiences gave evidence of deep interest and many pledged a new life of service to God.

As we estimate results, we are confident that the better basis of work, the deepened spiritual life, prayer meetings, family altars, etc., will mean much for the future of these churches. Nine were received on profession of faith and three by certificate. At Forest Hill and Bynum, Rev. R. W. Thurman, now of Terry Miss., rendered valuable assistance. He has evangelistic gifts and grace, and ought to render large service to the Church and the cause of Christ. I take pleasure in commending him to brethren needing help in revival, or evangelistic meetings.

In concluding this imperfect notice of the dealings of God with us, may I ask the faithful who may chance to read it, to pray in our behalf that God may yet do even greater things for us.

We have a noble people, capable, under God, of accomplishing great things in his service. Yours in Christ. C. H. ELLIS.

PLEASANT GROVE CHARGE, MISS. CONFERENCE.

Dear Dr. Meek: If you will allow me a little space in the Advocate, I'll tell the readers something of what we are doing. This is a new charge, formed at the last Conference. There are four churches, viz.: Tillton, Mallieu, Pearlhaven and Pleasant Grove. During the year we have built a new parsonage at Pleasant Grove. It lacks some of being completed, and we owe about $50 on it. The boll weevil, together with a lack of liberality, causes the finances to be badly in arrears. Early in the year we held a meeting at Pearlhaven, with the assistance of Rev. J. D. Decell, of Osyka, Miss. The preaching was well done. I know of no man. I'd rather have in a meeting than Lloyd Decell. He is a strong, logical, forceful, consecrated preacher of the gospel. His hearers are fully convinced that his heart is in the work, and his message is from God. There was great good done—several were saved, and one young man joined the Church. The Church has been doing better ever since the meeting.

The meetings at Pleasant Grove, Mallieu and Tillton were held by the pastor. All were good. At Mallieu sickness, etc., hindered us. Also the men were all on the road and worked until 6:30 and 7 o'clock. We had some good spiritual services.

At Pleasant Grove we had three services a day. There were several conversions and reclamations, and eight accessions to the Church. Also there were sixteen infants baptized during the meeting. At Tillton we had Pentecostal showers. Two days during the meeting the morning services were not closed until 2:30 in the afternoon. Sinners, under deep and pungent conviction, kept coming, kneeling, weeping and saying, "pray for us." The visible results were between 66 and 75 conversions and reclamations, about twelve new family altars pledged, nineteen infants baptized, and 37 accessions to the Church—one of these by certificate. The Lord was present in great power. The fact that so many of the old Church members were saved during the meeting makes it great. Lord, give us a revival in the Church that the members of the Church may be saved! We held special children's services. Most of the accessions at Tillton were from the Sunday school.

We all hate to part with our "beloved," but according to the law of the Church, we will bid him adieu at the fourth quarterly Conference. A great preacher, a great presiding elder, and a great man he is. He has the interests of the Church and kingdom of our Lord at heart. One always finds him to be the same firm, spiritual, prayerful, consecrated leader of the hosts of God. May the Lord bless him. We young preachers, who need a great deal of sympathy, encouragement and advice, have certainly found all of these in our leader. Pray for us.

FROM OSYKA, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Osyka has been wonderfully blessed for the past two weeks. On Sunday, Sept. 8, Rev. H. A. Gatlin began our revival meeting here. God was with us in the pulpit and pew from the beginning. Great crowds hung upon the words of the fearless and earnest preacher. "Overflows" necessitated our going to the Baptist Church for four services. Brother Gatlin is a tactful and forceful dispenser of the Word. His themes were wisely chosen and affectionately presented. "The two great epochs of every man's life, and how to meet them," "The new birth," "Evidences of the new birth," and "Profit and Loss," are sermons which will long be remembered in our town. Four accessions to the Church, and a general uplift to the church and town are some of the results. God be praised, his Son adored, and his Holy Spirit glorified! Amen.

Our meeting having closed on Friday night, the 13th inst, Brother P. S. Rogers, pastor of the Baptist Church, began his meeting Sunday, Sept. 15, with Rev. Wm. A. Borum, of Jackson, Miss., doing the preaching. A broad-minded, sweet-spirited Christian gentleman is he. His sermons have had a wonderful effect on the churches of the town. His position against the popular evils of the day, such as card playing, dancing, gambling in cotton futures, etc., is clear, firm and positive.

A high standard of conscious Christian experience and an unselfish service are the high notes of his gospel. He believes the same Bible that teaches a heaven, teaches also there is a hell, and 4000 students assembled at Washington, D. C., cannot change his mind.

These two meetings have been an epoch in the history of Osyka. J. LOYD DECELL.

TRAINED MISSIONARIES.

The Foreign Missions Conference of North America, which met in New York in January, dealt with all the great problems underlying missionary enterprise. One of the important matters receiving their consideration was the study and preparation of men and women for the Foreign fields. Dr. Mott, in one of his addresses on this subject, said: "I need not dwell upon the fact of which every missionary leader is becoming increasingly aware, and to which many are extremely sensitive, that the future conduct of the missionary enterprise depends largely upon the quality and training of those sent out.... Missionary societies are becoming increasingly aware that there is one thing that must be done, and that is to send out men and women who are intellectually and temperamentally equipped for the task. The supremacy of the task grows upon us.... and the feeling also grows on us that it depends on the quality of men and women who now go in, not merely to represent Christianity as private citizens, but as leaders and teachers. The standard of missionary preparation has risen on the field. We need leaders of leaders."

Our Part in the Training. The Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, cordially endorses the words uttered by Dr. Mott. We realize the fact that the unusual demands of the times in all nations require women fully equipped to meet these demands. In order that our women may be fitted to meet these critical tasks, we are putting the best we have in teachers and directors in our Training Schools. We cannot accomplish this great purpose without adequate financial support. This leads to that all-important question:

Have You Paid Your $2.00?

The Council has asked every Auxiliary to contribute $2 per annum to the endowment fund of our Scarritt Bible and Training School. Has your Auxiliary sent in this amount? There has been a failure to comply somewhere, as the following figures will show: We have 6,245 adult auxiliaries (counting both departments) in our Woman's Missionary Society, and last year we paid in to the Treasury $33,354.44 for this endowment fund, only a third of what should have been paid. In our three Conferences 515 auxiliaries paid $353.35. Why wasn't the other two-thirds paid? Can we expect our school to do effective work, or rank with other great organizations, thus handicapped?

HOME MISSION WORK.

Nov. 17-24, 1912.

The Week of Prayer for the Home Department this year will be observed during the great national Home Mission Week celebration. This Home Mission Week should be the great inspiration to the Home Department that the Jubilee was to the Foreign Department. There are 4345 auxiliaries in the Home Department, and each one is urged to take some part in the observance of this week. Do you need facts to convince you of its importance? They are here, staring you in the face. We are compelled to make improvements in our schools, or else greatly retard and hamper our work. The buildings were put up, but could we foresee a shortage in our collections? This is what has happened to us, however, and we are $16,570 in debt, as follows:

Vashti Home and School,
Thomasville, Ga. $1320
Sue Bennett School, London, Ky. 4500
Ruth Hargrove Institute, Key
West, Fla. 2750
Brevard Institute, Brevard, N. C. 3000
Virginia Johnson Home & School, Dallas, Tex. 5000

$16570

The raising of this money is not all that the Week of Prayer or Home Mission Week means. There is a deeper and more far-reaching purpose in view. It is to impress upon us "the supreme importance of saving America for the Kingdom of God through the established agencies of the Church."

MISS GODAT GOES TO SCARRITT.

Miss Cora Godat, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Godat, of New Orleans, left Tuesday, September 10 for a two-years' training at Scarritt. At the League Assembly, Seashore Camp Grounds, two years ago, this young Christian woman offered herself for missionary service in the Master's Kingdom. A year ago, at the same place, she felt called to make the foreign field her special work, and so gave herself for that great cause. The fruition of her hopes and plans began when she left her home on the 10th for Scarritt, the long wished-for goal. May her two years' training bring her to the culmination of her most cherished ambition! This earnest, consecrated young woman belongs not only to us in New Orleans, but to every Methodist in Louisiana. She is our representative, and, in time, will be our very own missionary. What an added interest this gives us in Scarritt! Let us follow Miss Godat every step of the way, and may she have the assurance that our petitions, in her behalf, are constantly ascending to the throne of grace. May this assurance comfort her, and give her strength to overcome the trials of her new life. While praying for her, let us not forget the precious mother, who, instead of grieving over the separation, is rejoicing in the fact that she has a gift which is so acceptable to the Father.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

A Rayville a Home Department has been organized, with Mrs. J. C. Calhoun, superintendent, and a Missionary Department, with Mrs. C. C. Carter, superintendent.

Miss Birken, teacher of the Beginners' class at Winnsboro, supplied her room with kindergarten chairs by asking the parents to give a chair for each of their children, with the result that she got more than she needed.

One pastor, at least, in a tactful and prayerful way, has requested any of his teachers who would not make an honest effort to put away worldly ways and to know the Lord in a spiritual experience, to resign their places. The pastor, along with the superintendent, is responsible for the characters of the teachers of his children in the church, and it is a cowardly thing for him not to make an effort to correct a bad situation, and he ought to do it with spiritual tact.

Miss Pauline Randle, a teacher in Grant Parish and the daughter of Rev. Robt. Randle, our pastor at Cotton Valley, worked up a Cradle Roll of 42 members, and an Adult Bible class of 17 young ladies, while taking her vacation in a town of less than 400 people. The class's name is "Barbara Heck." Miss Randle is an alumna of our Mansfield Female College. For the most part our Methodist college graduates, make good, and this is one of the many examples that may be cited.

On Friday night, August 2, Mrs. Hunter and Mrs. Welch entertained their classes together on the parsonage lawn at Gilbert in a delightful social for the children. One of the numbers of the program was a contest in putting together pictures that had been arranged in pieces to test the child's judgment and skill in reconstruction. In this exercise Dora Turner received the first prize. The pictures were made on envelopes, and the children were quite proud of their art. Miss Irma Gilbert, a student of elocution in our Mansfield College, recited on the occasion.

Mrs. Susie Nabors Logan, Elementary superintendent of the Mansfield Sunday school, always gives her pupils birthday cakes on the Sunday nearest their birthdays, decorating them with as many burning candles as the child is years old. To sit in the birthday chair while the teacher and children sing the birthday song, and then to go home with a sure enough cake, makes a bright spot in a child's life never to be forgotten. A birthday jar may be had free from Dr. W. F. McMurry, Louisville, Ky., provided the birthday offering, one cent for every year the child is old, is taken, the offerings to go to the fund being raised by the Church Extension Society for aiding in building Sunday school additions to our churches.

The three cardinal virtues of the preacher are preaching ability, pastoral tact, and spirituality. Though he "speak with the tongue of men or angels" and have not love, Christ-likeness, character, the unction peculiar to the messenger of the gospel, "it profiteth nothing." No matter about his pastoral tact, it is the man behind the counsel and the sympathy that counts. And so with our teachers. They teach more by act than by word, and the best lesson is the one that is lived Saturday before it is taught Sunday. Even children know when a lesson sounds "brassy," and when it is connected up with God by a living faith. It might be a good idea to turn some of our teacher training classes into Salvation Army "Knee Drills." It is God that "gives the increase."

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The canvass of 300 ordinary American homes revealed the appalling fact that 143 of them were without Bibles. Now, if every Sunday school teacher would see that every pupil in each special class has, and knows how to use, his own Bible, we might make "charity and missions begin at home."

A certain group of young girls have perfected a fine and beautifully feminine organization, the general laws of which are: Seek beauty; give service; pursue knowledge; be trustworthy; hold on to health; glorify work; and be happy. They have certain simple requirements with which every girl should be able to comply, and nearly every such requirement now is lacking in the average modern girl who does as she pleases.

Rev. K. P. Foust is doing a great Sunday school work in his charge. He has a fine Wesley class at Blue Springs and well organized schools at Sherman, Belden and Liberty. The work at each place is developing the young people and interesting and helping the older people. Mr. Foust is putting himself into the work and can confidently expect even greater results from his labors. No work so enlivens and enlarges church membership as a well organized Sunday school.

In seeking to win men and women to Sunday school work it should be remembered that patience and persistence are needed, for "more men are ever won by siege than by attack." It may be well to allow your friend to think you have given up, in order not to annoy him, when in reality you are only waiting for the truly opportune time. Never give up, and remember that five minutes personal work is worth an hour's preaching every Sunday in the month. This is not to discount the great influence of our pastors at the preaching hour. The above thoughts come largely from Henry Ward Beecher and his wide experience.

The Adult Class that fails to entertain the elderly people in the church at some time during the year misses a great blessing. One men's class in this Conference is preparing for such an afternoon. Rocking-chairs, cushions, foot-stools and well-regulated electric fans will give comfort; flowers everywhere will give beauty, and a judiciously selected program on a fine Victrola will furnish the amusement. Suitable refreshments will give opportunity for these dear older folk, who can get out but rarely, to see and talk one with the other. Automobiles will be sent for every one and the class will act as a background of love and interest and helpfulness. Of course, they will receive a rich blessing.

Prof. Walter S. Athearn, whose utterances on Sunday school matters are ever full of interest, says, "It is the business of the Sunday school, not only to teach, but also to tie the lesson taught to the skies. This is done by an appeal to the emotional life, through worship, at the time the lesson is taught. This means that every lesson taught should close with prayer, and that no items in the Sunday school program should be allowed to interfere with the mission of the hour, which is to lead a child or any pupil to Christ through a lesson reverently and prayerfully taught." To witness the hilarity and general disorder attending the opening and closing of some few classes, is to realize the necessity of every teacher writing the above in his note book, and taking the spirit of quietness and intense desire for winning souls into the presence of each class and on every Sunday.

Get Rid of Shiftless Help

THE farm labor problem in the South is a serious one. Scarcity of dependable help causes tremendous money losses every year, especially on big farms and ranches.

Don't let poor, shiftless help hamper and delay your farm work. Save your share of these money losses. Turn them into profits. A solves the problem in a practical way. Solves it permanently, too, by doing as much work as 3 to 6 men and 15 to 30 strong horses or mules. And no matter what kind of work it is doing, a man of ordinary mechanical ability can properly operate and care for the tractor. It is a One Man Outfit, both in traction and belt.

Less stock to feed—fewer farm hands to board—means a saving that pays for your tractor in a few seasons. Then there is the additional saving in fuel expense. A Hart-Parr tractor uses cheapest KEROSENE for fuel and uses it only when actually producing power.

You need this tractor because it furnishes dependable power, day after day, without tiring. You need it because it really is an economy over any other kind of power, either animal or mechanical.

A Distinction With a Difference

YOU may not always get what you pay for. It takes a good judge of values to do that, but if there is one sure rule in business it is—you pay for all you get. You may not be able to see the difference between engines of similar appearance at different prices, but if you buy from a reputable firm you may be sure the difference in quality is there.

I H C Oil and Gas Engines

cost more than some others because they are more carefully made, and more thoroughly tested. Skillful designing, better material, better workmanship, more careful assembling, and more thorough testing, tell in the long run. Given equal care an I H C engine costs less per year of service than any other engine you can buy. If an I H C engine is given all the work it will do, pumping, sawing wood, running the grindstone, feed grinder, hay press, silage cutter, repair shop machines, cream separator, churn, washing machine, etc., etc., it will pay for itself in a very short time in money and labor saved.

I H C engines are made in every style—horizontal and vertical, air and water-cooled, stationary, portable, and mounted on skids, to operate on gas, gasoline, kerosene, naphtha, distillate or alcohol, in sizes from 1 to 50-H.P. Kerosene tractors, 12, 15, 20, 25 and 45-H.P.

THE MONTROSE TRAINING SCHOOL.

Dear Doctor Meek: As I have not seen anything in the Advocate from Montrose since the opening of our school, except what was written by our worthy pastor and the president, Rev. G. H. Galloway, I feel that it is time some one should let the members of the Mississippi Conference and the Church at large know how everything is progressing here. There is a spirit among both the old and the young here to improve themselves intellectually, and if the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference and the Church at large will rally to the support of this school it bids fair to become the equal of any in the State when it comes to doing real good among the people. Numbers of young men and women have gone out from here to other colleges, and some are teaching and doing well.

Dr. Meek, all Brother Galloway needs is the support of the Conference and of the Church at large. Let every presiding elder in the Mississippi Conference pledge to send one young preacher from his District to this school and divide the cost among the churches of his District and see if it pays. If we pray for the results, we shall see the Church showing such interest that some of our brethren that have the means will join the brethren that Brother Galloway mentioned in his article not long since, and pay the board and tuition of a young man. My prayer is that we may all be faithful in this good work.

L. J. JONES.

ST. TAMMANY (LA.) CIRCUIT.

We have been having some good meetings on my charge. I have had Rev. E. L. Whiddon to help me in three meetings—Mandeville, Waldheim, and Talisheek. Notwithstanding the fact that Mandeville is a Roman Catholic town, we had a great meeting—no doubt the greatest Protestant meeting ever held in Mandeville. There were something like 25 conversions, and 12 united with our Church, and several with the Baptist Church. Our church at Mandeville has taken on new life as a result of this meeting, and those who were indifferent to church work are now enthused and willing to do anything the pastor asks of them.

Our meeting at Waldheim, or the Old Talisheek Camp Ground, as some know it, was, to say the least, a great meeting. We had 23 conversions and 19 united with our Church. This meeting had the old time ring, and it did every body good to attend such gracious services.

At Talisheek the outward signs were not so good as at the other places, yet we feel that a great deal of good was done in this new saw-mill town.

I should feel that I had not given a report of these meetings, unless I were to say something of Brother E. L. Whiddon. He is known to many of the Mississippi preachers, but to the Louisiana preachers he is no doubt a stranger. He came to me from Humble, Texas, and is the district evangelist for the Houston District. As a preacher of the fundamental doctrines of our Church, there is no better in the South. He certainly is careful along this line to leave nothing unsaid that should be said, and he is well versed in the doctrines of our Church. He is a forcible speaker and keeps the attention of his audiences. His sermon on repentance is a great piece of literature, as well as a great sermon. He has a unique way of presenting his thoughts, which is original, and draws large crowds to hear him at every service. He is a great mixer and organizes a circulating library everywhere he goes. This in itself is a great work. I believe he has a great future, and will do good anywhere he may go. I feel that he will make one of our leading evangelists in the course of time as he is yet very young. My prayer is that God may spare his life to the Church and the cause he so dearly loves for many years. Our work is progressing all along the line, Doctor, and notwithstanding the wet spring and summer, which resulted in poor crops, we expect to go to Conference with the best report that ever came up from the St. Tammany charge.

AGAINST THE ARMY CANTEEN.

The question as to whether the Army canteen, at which intoxicating beverages may be had by our soldiers, should be allowed, has long been engaging public attention. As a rule, prohibitionists have heartily favored its suppression, while those who are in sympathy with the licensed sale of intoxicants have stood for its maintenance. Since 1901, our various Army posts have been without the canteen, not even the sale of beer being allowed. An effort is now being made in Congress to pass a measure which would again make permissible the sale of beer. Its advocates argue that to permit this would tend to keep the men in the Army from going into towns and securing stronger and more injurious kinds of intoxicants, and furthermore, that beer is a preventive of certain diseases which soldiers are peculiarly liable to contract.

We scarcely need to say that in our opinion there is no merit in either of these contentions, and we are pleased to see that, through Senator Gallinger, of New Hampshire, a memorial has been presented to Congress from many of the most eminent physicians and scientists in the nation in which they are vigorously combated. This paper affirms that there have been fewer cases of alcoholism in the Army since the suppression of the canteen, and that a study of comparative statistics shows that beer as a safeguard from the diseases referred to is a failure. The interesting document concludes as follows:

"It is not only in the state of drunkenness that men step into danger of incurring venereal diseases, but in the state of exhilaration and weakened self-control, which follows the use of comparatively small amounts of alcoholic liquors. Modern scientific investigation has shown clearly that one of the earliest effects of the use of alcoholic liquors is impaired self-control. This impairment of self-control not only follows the use of the stronger alcoholic liquors, but may also follow the use of beer.

"Army tests, conducted by generals and Army medical officers, have repeatedly shown the disadvantage not only of the spirits drinker, but of even the beer drinker, in health, endurance, morale, and marksmanship—the qualities which are especially necessary for the efficiency of the soldier.

"In view of the foregoing facts, we respectfully submit that science and experience indicate that the sale of beer in the Army is not only not required to diminish venereal diseases, but that its reinstatement would conflict with the best interests of the soldier himself, physically and morally, both in the Army and when he returns to civil life, and that it would be in direct opposition to the highest efficiency of the Army as a means of national defense."

This is a matter of great importance, and should have the attention of patriotic citizens everywhere. Our representatives in Congress should be made to feel that the enlightened moral sentiment of the country demands the defeat of the measure pending before that body. If we need men who are thoroughly sober anywhere, it is in the Army and Navy, where at times a single act of indiscretion might involve us in serious international complications, or perhaps plunge the nation into a long and bloody war. The restoration of the Army canteen in any form would be a calamity.

CONSERVING THE RESULTS.

Though we have had no way of tabulating the figures, from the reports that have reached our office we are under the impression that this has been a revival year in our patronizing territory, and that there have been an unusually large number of conversions and accessions to the Church. This is, indeed, most gratifying. It is a great thing to win souls to Christ and start them on the upward way that leads to high character and the heavenly home. When this work is being successfully accomplished we may well be happy; for it means that Zion is faithfully fulfilling her lofty mission, "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."

But the bringing of new converts into a church imposes upon it a great responsibility. Babies in Christ must be fed and nurtured if they are to grow and develop into strong Christian men and women. The older members of the household of faith should energetically strive to shield, encourage and help them. And the pastor, whose work never ends, needs to be especially vigilant, active, and tactful during the days immediately following a season of spiritual refreshing and ingathering.

Perhaps the reason why a revival often seems to count for so little is that when it is over so many cease to work and the results are not properly conserved. There is such a thing as losing the fruits of a victory after it has been won. We should strive to see that those who have lately been born into the kingdom continue to attend the services of the sanctuary; that they read their Bibles, and that they are duly impressed with the importance of secret prayer. They should also be wisely and discreetly enlisted in the active service of the Master. These four things—church attendance, the reading of the Bible, prayer, and work—will do much toward keeping them from going astray. But much else is needed. The shepherding of our Lord's precious lambs is a task that might well fill an angel's heart and hands. No man is sufficient for it. He must have the assistance of the Holy Spirit, and even then his inadequacy for this duty must painfully oppress him. But it should ever be remembered that this is not the pastor's work alone, but that of the whole saved congregation.

The guarding of an immortal soul from spiritual dwarfhood and apostasy is an achievement scarcely less noble than that of first delivering it from Satan's thralldom. And every under-shepherd, clerical or lay, who is faithful in this service shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away when the Chief Shepherd shall appear.

THE LOW OR THE HIGH—WHICH?

Dr. Forhes Ross, a London physician, affirms that the British people are gradually degenerating, and describes the typical Englishman of the far future as follows: "the face of a typical criminal, with prognathous jaws, receding forehead, broad, flat nose, well marked canine teeth, small eyes, short neck, head set well back between the shoulders, and a depraved gorilla expression." This claim that the offspring of the world's foremost people are destined in the course of centuries to become veritable apes, seems to us to be quite scientific. Some of the greatest scientists of modern times have insistently taught that man sprang from the monkey; add to this the law, generally accepted among them, of a "reversion to type," and it will be seen that Dr. Ross's contention is not without a good scientific basis. The truth is, the general tendency of skeptical science from its beginning has been to depreciate and degrade man. Christianity, on the contrary, honors and exalts him. The one begins with him as a brute and leaves him laid low in the dust, with no future beyond the tomb: the other begins with him as creation's masterpiece, made in the image of God, and leaves him a majestic citizen of the skies, immortal, and still wearing the likeness of his reigning Lord. Which shall we accept—the low or high estimate of humanity's origin, present value, and future? Shall we subscribe to the speculations of the scientists, or believe in the sublime teachings of the Holy Scriptures?

NECESSARY TO MAKE A GOOD METHODIST.

The true natal hour of Methodism was when in the Aldergate-Street "Society" meeting John Wesley felt his heart "strangely warmed." It had its birth in a conscious religious experience, and from the beginning has stood uncompromisingly for this as the need and privilege of every man. No person is a good Methodist in the highest and truest sense who does not "know his sins forgiven." More than any other Church ours emphasizes the Scriptural doctrine of the witness of the Spirit, which alone can bring the fullest joy and the largest usefulness in the Christian life. To this teaching, no doubt, is to be attributed the deep piety and great fervor that have characterized the followers of Wesley in all lands. Never should we allow it to be lost sight of, or given a smaller place in our theology.

THE NEGLECT OF A GREAT METHODIST DOCTRINE.

In a recent issue of the Nashville Christian Advocate, Dr. R. G. Smith discusses the great need of preaching on the power and work of the Holy Spirit.

He introduces his subject by reference to Dr. W. T. Davidson's recent work on "The Holy Spirit," in which he makes the statement that the "witness of the Spirit" is obsolescent. Dr. Smith then shows that when the Wesleyan movement began, the preaching of the doctrine of the "witness of the Spirit" was greatly needed; after which he discusses the problem of the Holy Spirit under four heads:

"1. The preaching of it persistently and powerfully would do much toward the destruction of the religious parasites produced by much of the professional evangelism of the present time.

"2. The preaching of this great doctrine is especially needed at this time because of the large number of people who, though members of the Church, have no real personal religious experience.

"3. The preaching of this doctrine would do more than anything else could do to bring our people into their Christian inheritance of joy.

"4. There are no difficulties of a serious nature to be overcome in the preaching of this doctrine."

It is not the purpose of this scribe to enlarge on the point discussed by Dr. Smith. What the Doctor has said is both timely and to the point. However, I take this means of commending to all God's children, who may read this article, the consideration of the truths which it so forcibly presents.

If I have read my Bible aright, all men and churches are powerless to advance God's Kingdom (which is spiritual) if they be without the "witness of the Spirit." Through well-organized and disciplined churches, Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, etc., we may do much good to the bodies of men. We may maintain charities where such are greatly needed. We may, by the power of suggestion and kindly help, uplift the fallen and do much, on a mere human basis, to dispel the gloom of this old world and introduce physical and temporal happiness among men. But when it comes to the business of regenerating a soul and putting men on a right basis with God, there is no power to accomplish that end save that of the Holy Spirit.

We each can do as we may choose relative to allowing God, through the power of the Holy Spirit, to have the right of way in our lives. If we yield to this holy influence, God can then speak and work through us to the salvation of souls. If we refuse submission to the Holy Spirit, we may still maintain a moral life and preach nothing save truth, but we will be as salt that has lost its savor, so far as spirituality is concerned. The powers of darkness cringe not at sight of a mere moral or good man. Heathenism can boast of both moral and good men. The chief glory of Christianity lies in the fact that it teaches the truth that man can have conscious fellowship with God here and now. That fellowship is had through the Holy Spirit. The fruit of that fellowship is a holy life, together with a persevering effort, under God, to advance the Kingdom of Christ. "He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing." No man can "abide in Christ," save by the power of the Holy Spirit.

J. TILLERY LEWIS.

Clarksdale, Miss., Sept. 14,

A LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

Dear Friends: Dr. J. W. Miller says, "To every one of us God gives something that he wants us to say to others," and it is in my heart this morning to send a message of love and greeting to the friends in Louisiana.

The summer has been delightful in every way, and these words of our Lord come to me as I write: "Freely ye have received, freely give." These bright, beautiful autumn days are reminders that the home-coming time is near at hand, as is also the time to take up again the broken threads of work. We cannot take all and give nothing in return.

These words recall a sermon I heard recently by Dr. Beatty, the pastor here, on "Putting something into the world." To me, it seems there has never been a time when the spirit of social service was more actively manifest than at present. It is one of the great movements of the life of to-day. Better home conditions, cleaner jails, better sanitary surroundings, industrial education, and moral and physical training, are some of the problems that are being worked out by the men and women who are "putting something into the world," something to make it a little better and happier because they have lived in it, and wrought and suffered.

Looking over a list of social settlements, charities and church activities in the great city of New York, I was much impressed by the number and variety of these institutions and by the fact that while so many among the idle rich are squandering precious time, a vast number are giving all that is in them of work, character, and love to the service of humanity. Love for Christ is a great transforming power, and the blessing comes only through the giving up of self.

From this dense forest of good works, I can select only a few choice flowers: On the lower east side of Manhattan a club for young people is filling a great need in that crowded section. Trained and cultured leaders are selected to place before these children and young people high ideals, and lead them into more wholesome ways of living, by substituting for the dance hall, concerts, debates, and other amusements and opportunities for recreation.

Through the Seamen's Institute, near the Battery the Church reaches at least 150,000 seamen of the 400,000 annually visiting that port.

Our City Mission Society meets the immigrants at Ellis Island and represents to these people all they know of the love of Christ and his great compassion.

All of these are wonderful factors in the promotion of social progress and the formation of character. But, to me, one of the most important and far-reaching influences for good in New York City is the Bible Teachers' Training School in Lexington and Forty-ninth street. The late Justice Brewer once said: "Anybody who is interested in helping people to explain and illustrate the Bible is a patriot." This school is interdenominational in character and was founded twelve years ago by Dr. W. W. White, at one time a Bible teacher in India. He says the school is a miracle, founded on faith and prayer and supported entirely by voluntary gifts. Through its influence, more than 1500 trained workers have gone into the foreign field, and others into the waste places of our own country. The student body numbers between two and three hundred students, each one of whom is required to do some practical religious work weekly; thus they become a great evangelizing force in the city of New York. A young friend and neighbor, Miss Katherine Emerson, daughter of Dr. Emerson of Mount Vernon, is a graduate from this school and is soon to take up her life work as Bible teacher in a distant city. Who can estimate the influence of this one young life, given wholly to God's service?

I shall close by saying we are looking for great things in Louisiana along missionary lines this fall. Your secretaries write, "The great Home Mission Campaign has begun. Let us labor with our might to make our country God's country."

In view of all that has been accomplished in the past by the women of our Church and other Churches in Louisiana, let us take courage and move forward in His name, remembering that our God is omnipotent. Let each one of us say with Phillips Brooks: "If I can only place one little brick in the pavement of the Lord's pathway, I will place it there, that coming generations may walk thereon to the heavenly city."

MRS. E. R. KENNEDY.

"OLD HUNDRED" AT CORINTH.

(From Kansas City Star.)

"The discussion of the old-time hymns by J. M. Lowe in the Star was of unusual interest to me, because of a Southern incident in the fall of 1862," said James Thomas, known as 'Chevalier Thomas.' "I was lugging a gun along with Pap Price's musketeers in Mississippi. We were trying to join Van Dorn so as to attack Rosecrans at Corinth. All over the country troops were being rushed to the scene of the impending difficulty. We were on the march to Iuka, a place just south of Corinth.

"One day a queer-looking man rode slowly by the camp. He was on a mule, and his stirrups were so high that his knees seemed to come to his breast. He wore an immense Tuscan hat, bent down in front to shade the eyes, and tilted up behind. The rest of the rider's apparel was in harmony with that outlaw hat.

"All sorts of sarcastic allusions were hurled at the rider as he slowly passed down the long line. But he neither turned to the right nor to left; never quickened his pace, but looked stolidly ahead.

"A couple of days later we camped in Iuka and our commander said that Bishop Kavanaugh was in town, and would talk to those who cared to hear him. Fully five thousand soldiers assembled at the meeting place. When the 'scare-crow' of the road was introduced to us as Bishop Kavanaugh, a man noted it through the South for his devotion, you can imagine how some of us felt, and as we faced him we knew he knew.

"Bishop Kavanaugh began by lining the first verse of Old Hundred:

Before Jehovah's awful throne,
Ye nations, bow with sacred joy;
Know that the Lord is God alone,
He can create, and He destroy!"

"What power the old hymn had in the earnest tones of that man. How it resounded through the forest like a declaration from the Almighty himself! I have heard eminent pulpit orators, but never have I been so thrilled as I was then. "A Missouri soldier led, and 3,000 lusty voices joined in:

His sovereign power, without our aid,
Made us of clay and formed us men,
And when like wandering sheep we strayed,
He brought us to His fold again!"

"I have forgotten many things since then—the charge, the hand-to-hand fights with clubbed muskets over the breastworks—but never will I forget that song.

"And then the Bishop talked to us. He told us to be good soldiers; to do our duty to our God and our country, and to let Him cast up the result.

"I bring to you to-day a battle hymn," he said; "the battle hymn of Christ. It is great enough to fight for; it is grand enough to die for. Take it with you on the march; sleep with it in the camp; let it swell aloft on the red field of battle! It is a beckoning hand to the striving, a radiant halo for the victor, a garland for the dying! God bless you, my men! May he keep you true to the hymn, and whate'er the adventure of the conflict!"

"Boom! Boom!"

"May he bring you safe into His beautiful home at last!"

"Boom! Boom!"

"Rosecrans' cannons were thundering in the distance, and our guns were rushing to the front, but not a man of the soldier congregation stirred until the final word: 'Amen.'"

"Fall in, company!"

"Officers galloped about, delivering commands to their companies; the battle line was formed; the artillery barked savagely, and the beautiful autumn day went down in a canopy of smoke and flame—

"Wide as the world is Thy command,
Vast as eternity Thy love.

Firm as a rock thy truth must stand
When rolling years shall cease to move."

"Far into the night you could hear the soldiers singing the hymn as they worked with the dead and wounded. Under the trees, over the meadows, across plain and valley, tenderly, lovingly, as a hope for the living and a benediction for the dead, the solemn cadence filled earth and sky, rising to the very stars."

STRAY THOUGHTS.

Dear Doctor Meek: I have been thinking some about something that Hosea said a long time ago. You remember one time he said, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." I do not know exactly what he was bothered about, but it seems that he thought that the people did not know enough about God and that they were not doing as they ought to do about some things. There are some people who are always trying to find some easier way to worship and serve God. There are some of them that are getting to be very wise about this and about finding something better than the religion that many of us believe in and accept. They are finding out all sorts of cults and "isms." But this is nothing strange nor new under the sun. You remember what a time the old prophets from Elijah to Malachi used to have with the people, trying to keep them straight and to keep them from getting off after things that they ought not to believe in and that they ought not to do. There was always somebody that had something better than the way that God had told the people about. They were all the time having their groves and their baals and different sorts of things. This made the people ignorant of the real truths of God and the things that they really ought to have known about, and the prophets were all the time having trouble trying to make the people understand that they ought not to believe in all these other things.

Then when the Christian Church was getting a start there were a lot of people who thought that they were too wise to believe like the apostles and the great leaders in the Church tried to teach them that they ought to believe. They knew a powerful lot about Neo-Platonism, Nestorianism and Gnosticism. For the life of me, I never could see any sense in some of those things and how sensible people could believe in them. But there were just a lot of people that did believe in these things; and they thought that the people who did not believe in them did not have any sense and that they were to be pitied. Well, there always have been people like that and the Church has had an awful time with people of that sort.

It seems to me that there is a lot of that sort of thing in our country now. There are a lot of people who think that they are so smart that they can't believe in plain, ordinary Christianity. They seem to think that it is too simple for them. But they haven't any more sense than to let a lot of fakirs come along and fool them out of their money slicker than a man with a confidence scheme. It is strange to me how some people can pretend to be so wise and then let some Buddhist, or Hindu fakir, or some of Mrs. Eddy's people, or some of old man Russel's crowd come along and get their money out of them and then leave some kind of foolishness and trash.

One of the slickest fellows I know anything about is old man Russel. He is just raking in the coin and is getting it from all sorts of people. He is getting a good deal of it from people who do not know anything about him and who are not trying to be extra wise about such things.

There are just lots of good Christian people on whom he is unloading his stuff, and they are reading it and thinking that it is all right. He has mixed up enough truth with his teachings to hide the error, so that people do not know exactly what he is driving at until he gets them started his way. Then it is too late for them to break away from him.

Not long ago a good lady gave me three of Russel's books. Now, that lady has been a member of the Methodist Church for many years, and her husband is a superintendent of a Methodist Sunday school and a steward in the Methodist Church. She told me that she thought I would be glad to get the books. Well, I was glad to get them, because they will help make a fire when it gets to be a little cooler, and then it gave me an opportunity to tell her what they are. A woman came to the home of this lady and sold her the books and said that they were such fine books and that her sons would never believe in religion until they had read them. Now, those sons are willing to read the Bible, etc. Hell has been done away with for that family and now they are reading the Bible to try to get satisfied about that. Well, that woman sold those books all over the town to Methodists, Baptists and people of all Christian denominations. Then she went to the Methodist preacher in the town and tried to sell them to him. She got as mad as a hornet because the preacher would not buy the books and told her what he thought of them. There are some of the people who bought those books, Baptist deacons, Methodist stewards, etc., who have been reading them and they think that they are all right. May the good Lord help us somehow! I say this reverently. How are the people going to be saved from all this sort of stuff and trash? I believe that the preachers ought to "cry aloud and spare not." Methodist preachers have promised to banish all "strange and erroneous doctrines" from our midst. Let them do it. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."

People are so glad to get something that will ease their consciences and that will give them an easier way. Can't you tell us something more about Pastor Russel and the International Bible Student's Association, so that we won't be so likely to be taken in by such things? People will read anything in the world, it looks like, except their Bibles and their church papers. I hope some way can be found to get rid of some of the ignorance about such things.

With best wishes, I am your ever faithful friend,

WILLIAM.

"WHATSOEVER YE ASK IN MY NAME."

By Bishop E. R. Hendrix, D.D., LL.D.

When Jesus prayed, he poured out himself before the Father, recounting the Father's love, the works and words of the Father, and the fact that no prayer of his Son had ever failed of an answer. But he was in a world of need, and his petitions were often as definite and specific as when he prayed for his tempted disciples whom Satan would have that he might sift them as wheat. Who can question that it was the former attitude of fellowship with the Father that made certain the petitions of Jesus? In what spirit we pray determines the reach and efficiency of our prayers. "For through him we both (Jews and Gentiles) have our access in one Spirit unto the Father" (Eph. ii, 18). Our confidence in Christ's intercession for us is due to the fact that his is an uninterrupted communion with the Father; for now, as in his pre-existence, the Word is with God, ever toward God. Desire is the soul of prayer; for whatsoever things we desire when we pray, it is those things that take hold of us and help to make our prayer importunate and effectual. The effectual prayer is that which works first in us, and so becomes effectual in its working in the heart of God and in the lives of men. Our Lord's were no feeble desires that show themselves in feeble prayers, for "in the days of his flesh he offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears." We are borne in his passionate longings and his mighty intercessions who is in the bosom of the Father. What a vantage ground for prayer—in the bosom of the Father!—The October Epworth Era.

GIPSY SMITH AND W. T. STEAD.

Gipsy Smith tells a beautiful story about W. T. Stead. It is a side glimpse at his character which is very touching. He tells how on one occasion Mr. Stead went down to the Rhondda Valley to spend a Sunday with him during a mission he was holding at Pontypridd. At the close of the evening service Mr. Stead entered the inquiry room, where the missionary was engaged with from 200 to 300 men and women; and as he sat there a young collier went up and spoke to him. "Mr. Stead," he said, "I represent six of my chums—young colliers—who are all at work now down in the pit. They have sent me to bring you a message. We made up our minds to be infidels, and we thought we were. But we worshiped you, Mr. Stead; you have been our hero. We read everything we could get hold of written by you. A few months ago, however, we read one of your articles which knocked the infidelity out of us and made us all give our hearts to God. My companions asked me to come and thank you for that article," added the young collier. Mr. Stead could make no reply. He gripped the young fellow's hand and sobbed with joy. When he was alone with Gipsy Smith, Mr. Stead told him that he had shaken hands with many of the crowned heads of Europe, but nothing had given him such supreme joy as he experienced when he gripped the hand of the young collier. "I feel," he said, "as if I want to leave the editorial chair and become an evangelist."—New York Advocate.

(Mr. Stead, as perhaps most of our readers know, was the brilliant editor of the English Review of Reviews. He was one of the distinguished men who went down on the ill-fated Titanic.—Editor New Orleans Advocate.)

MISSISSIPPI ORPHANAGE WORK DAY.

Saturday, October 19, 1912.

We call upon all the pastors and Sunday school superintendents of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, and all the people, to observe Work Day, October 19th. Read "Our Home," study all that is in it about Work Day, and prepare your programs for Rally Day. Tell every one about Work Day and how to observe it. Get as many business men as you can to agree to give 10 per cent. of that day's sales. If the pastors and superintendents will push this work, the Home will realize at least $10,000. But of course, there will be about one-half who will not observe Work Day, or say anything at all about it. So, by the neglect or forgetfulness of these, we will probably get only about $6,000 when we should get $10,000. Brother Pastor and Brother Superintendent, I want you to remember when you fail to observe Work Day that you are among the one hundred and fifty pastors in the State, through whose negligence the Home will lose the $4,000. That would pay all we owe, and we would have enough left to get all our children a Christmas present.

We appreciate the co-operation of our pastors and superintendents and people in the past; they have made it possible for the Home to achieve great things. I am sure their efforts will be even greater this year, and the result gratifying and encouraging.

Let every friend of the Home pray that the Holy Spirit may work in us, and with us, and through us, to the accomplishment of God's will. Then let all work to this same end. God and man working together, can bring things to pass.

W. M. WILLIAMS, Superintendent.

Church News

Three hundred and sixty-five new members received within a year, is the record of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Fostoria, Ohio.

Dr. B. M. Messick, one of the most widely known members of the Louisville (Ky.) Conference has for some time been seriously ill at his home in Louisville.

San Francisco is said to have the only Japanese Young Woman's Christian Association in the United States. It was lately organized, and has a membership of 150.

The Christian Observer (Presbyterian), of Louisville, Ky., has recently entered upon the one hundredth year of its existence. Its career has been a useful and highly creditable one.

Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, the noted evangelist, who was so critically ill in Australia several weeks ago, is reported to have completely recovered. He is still prosecuting his evangelistic labors in that far-away country.

Mr. John Wanamaker has given $60,000 for a Y. M. C. A. building in Peking, China. Of the eight Chinese directors of the Association in that city, seven were educated in other lands. The Secretary was formerly a student at Princeton University.

Dr. George P. Eckman, the editor of the New York Christian Advocate, has a brilliant lecture on "Bargains in Brains, or What to Do With One's Head." Dr. Eckman is proving himself to be a worthy successor of the renowned Dr. Buckley on the tripod.

Dr. George R. Crose, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, of Baltimore, Md., has been elected to the presidency of Depauw University, to succeed Dr. McConnell, who was chosen to the Bishopric last May. Whether Dr. Crose will accept, is not known at this writing.

The American Bible Society has issued during the year 1912, at home and abroad, 430,098 Bibles, 670,728 Testaments, and 2,590,375 portions of the Word, making in all 3,691,201 volumes; which is an increase over all previous records. The total issues of the Society in the ninety-six years of its history amount to 94,219,105 volumes.

Bishop Joseph F. Berry, of the M. E. Church, had a fall some time since, but notwithstanding kept steadily on with his work. It now develops that one of his ribs was broken, and he is resting at his summer home at Bemus Point, on Lake Chataqua, N. Y. A zeal that tolls on in spite of a fractured rib is of an unusual order.

Though they yet have many unsupplied charges, the Presbyterians are making gratifying gains in the matter of ministerial supply. In the Northern Church in 1902 the number of candidates for the ministry was 572; in 1912 the number is 1,205. During the same years the number in the Southern Church has increased from 291 to 465.

Ex Vice-President C. W. Fairbanks, who is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is a regular reader of the church paper which serves the territory in which he resides. He recently sent Dr. Gilbert, the editor of the Western Christian Advocate, the following encouraging message: "I want to congratulate you upon the excellence of the Western. I read it every week with the utmost pleasure."

The Central Christian Advocate, of Kansas City, states that the work of supervision will cost the Methodist Episcopal Church this year the sum of $1,160,000, and at least $5,000,000 for the next quadrennium. The Central thinks that, though the expense of this service is large, the money is well invested. This is scarcely a debatable question. There is no great institution or business concern that hesitates to pay well for competent oversight and leadership.

A District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Kentucky is said to have refused to issue or renew a local preacher's license unless the applicant is a subscriber to his church paper. This action was somewhat extreme, and yet we are not prepared to say that there was no wisdom in it. A man who is not enough interested in the affairs of the Church to want to know of the progress that the work is making, is not apt to contribute much to its upbuilding. Nor is it to the local preacher alone that this truth applies. It fits equally well stewards and all other church officials.

The Commercial-Appeal states that the Methodist pastors of Memphis registered a strong protest against keeping the Tri-State Fair, which recently met in that city, open on Sunday. This action was most timely. It is also reported that at their meeting on October 21 these pastors will have submitted for their discussion papers on the several candidates for the presidency. We are not sure that these brethren are wise in venturing out into the political field. The average pastor is rather too prone to mix up in politics even when left to himself, and we do not think any additional stimulus in this direction is needed.

General Booth, the founder of the Salvation Army, left behind property valued at $2,400, which he bequeathed to the organization of which he was the official head. Besides this, he had about $25,000 which was settled upon him several years ago for his private use, in order that the Army might not be taxed with the expense of supporting him. John Wesley and General Booth, though handling a large amount of money, used it for the good of humanity and died poor. Mrs. Eddle left an estate of more than a million; Dr. Dowle was quite a rich man when he passed away, and some of the living leaders of new cults are skillful money gatherers. It is needless to ask which of these—the givers or the accumulators—most resemble Him "who had not where to lay his head."

Fourteen railroads have joined together for the purpose of erecting new freight and passenger terminals in Chicago. The estimated cost of the new terminals is $200,000,000.

Jackson, Miss., on Tuesday, Sept. 24, voted to abandon the aldermanic for the commission form of government, thus rescinding its action of some time since, when the same proposition was voted down.

Between thirty and forty thousand children enrolled in the public schools of New Orleans last week. Many others will start to school later. The public schools of the Crescent City are said to be among the best in the South.

A French scientist claims to have discovered valuable deposits of radium-bearing ore in Colorado. It may be so, but at the present price of radium it is not likely that this announcement will create much excitement among the common people.

It is claimed that large deposits of potash have been found in Jasper and Smith Counties, Miss., and that a company has been organized with a capital of $3,000,000 for the purpose of developing the mines and manufacturing a commercial fertilizer.

It has been figured out that only one man in ten thousand is self-supporting at the age of 70 years. This being true, it would seem that young men who are healthy and have some earning ability would pay more attention to where their money goes. The saving habit is a most valuable one.

In a great demonstration held in Philadelphia last Wednesday, $135,000 was subscribed to aid Ireland in her fight for home rule. At the same time, a demonstration in another eastern city pledged funds to fight the cause. It seems that the Irish in America had just as well pair, keep their money, and stay out of the Irish-English home-rule muddle.

A press dispatch claims that 2000 Jews were discharged from their places of employment in Boston because they wilfully observed Saturday, September 21, as a holiday, that being the Jewish day of Atonement. If such action was taken by the Boston employers, it is needless to say that the sympathy of the whole country will be with the injured Jews.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley is reported as declaring that oysters on the half shell suffer untold agony while being eaten. This is a case where the source of information would be of greater interest than the information itself. Like so many others who achieve distinction, Dr. Wiley seems disposed to talk rather too freely in what a contemporary calls "these parlous times."

Alabama will hold a State Fair during October. Among the other exhibits will be what is called an educational exhibit. The people of Alabama will be given an opportunity to see the equipment of every kind of a schoolroom, from the one-roomed country school to the best fitted room of their best colleges. We are glad to note that some of the States are as much interested in the raising and training of their children, as they are in stock-raising and vegetable culture.

There is some talk of attempting to induce Congress to assume the task of improving all the wagon roads in the United States at the expense of the Government. Such a task would mean the expenditure of twenty-five billion dollars as an initial cost, and $2,500,000 per year for upkeep. There are 2,500,000 miles of wagon road in this country. There is little likelihood of the good roads enthusiasts ever accomplishing this undertaking.

Dr. Edgar E. Brandon, who recently returned from South America, where he has been studying the educational conditions in Latin America, reports that in one respect the great universities there are superior to our own schools. He says that most of the professors are men engaged in the practice of their professions. Doctors with large practices, lawyers with many clients, editors of great papers, and engineers with constant demands on their time are persuaded to give four and five hours each week to class work, thus bringing into the school-room practical as well as experimental knowledge.

The fifteenth International Congress on Hygiene and Demography was in session during last week in Washington, D. C. This is the first time the great body of physicians and scientists composing that congress ever met in the United States. Its primary object is to improve the health of the whole world. Experts working under its guidance have been engaged for some time in studying the causes and cures of many of the most malignant diseases. Among the many conclusions reached in Washington last week, possibly the most far-reaching were those concerning flies and marriage. The Congress would make it necessary for every man to present a perfect health certificate before he is eligible to marriage. It further declared the house fly most dangerous of all pests to the health of humanity.

REV. W. G. BACKUS.

William Gurley Bacus was born in Selma, Ala., September 6, 1844. His father, Henry Backus, was a prominent physician, and was for years a leading practitioner in that section. He was not a member of the Church. His mother, Ann Gurley Backus, was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; but, having a large family, she was not a regular attendant upon its services; yet, doubtless she exerted a good influence upon the tender heart of her young son. He spent his boyhood days in Selma, and received his education there, attending a private school and completing the course of study it offered, which must have been good, for the young man was very well equipped in mind for the battles of life when he left the schoolroom. He came from a cultured home, and he was a good student and diligent reader.

Brother Backus early in life turned his face toward the sanctuary of the Lord, and could heartily join with David in saying, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord;" and it was yet while young that he said, "Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem." He was but a boy when he joined the Presbyterian Church. He was a member of that Church for a number of years, and was a very faithful and consistent member, taking part in all the religious services. He loved to attend preaching; his delight was to engage in the worship of God. While the influences thrown around his young life were not ideal, he showed the moral stamina he possessed and chose none but the best Christian people as his companions; his moral character was excellent, and his was a consistent Christian's life from his boyhood.

At the age of 18 he joined the Confederate Army, serving as a private till the close of the war, being a member of the Twenty-ninth Alabama regiment under the leadership of General Bragg. Here he proved to be a brave and true soldier. There was death and destruction all around him, but he came out unscarred. But he was about to enter into a warfare in which he should receive many scars. He laid down the musket and put on the armor of God; he sheathed his sword, having fought the battle of the Lost Cause, but he grasped the sword of the Spirit and went forth into another battle under the leadership of King Emmanuel, the Captain of our salvation—went forth in a victorious fight in which he came out more than conqueror.

After some six or eight years of fellowship with the Church of his first choice, and after the close of the Civil War, he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and remained a devoted member till his death. Returning to Monte Vallo, Ala., after the duties on the battlefield were over, he taught school there; afterwards he moved to Birmingham and taught at Pratt City; he also taught for a short while in Texas. He was licensed to preach in Birmingham under Doctor McCoy, the father of Bishop J. H. McCoy, and he was a local preacher till 1882, when he joined the Mississippi Conference.

He was married in 1882 to Miss Maggie Gray, in Jackson County, Miss., not long before he joined the Conference. It was largely under the influence and through the desire of his wife that he came into the Conference. They both felt that his life's work was in the itinerancy; that from there would come the most satisfaction to his life and to hers; that there his life would count for most, and she was anxious that he begin at once. There were born to them seven children. Henry, the oldest, dying in infancy. Six are yet living: Mrs. Daisy Bynum, Mrs. Nellie Morris, Mrs. Lucile Goodwin and Misses Mary, Ethel and Gurley.

Beginning with his appointment which he received at the Conference of 1882, at the hands of Bishop Wilson, he served the following charges: Coalville, Covington, La., Americus, DeKalb, Heidelberg, Estabuchie, Summit, Bogue Chitto, Caseyville, Rocky Springs, Binnsville. He was on the superannuated list during the year 1901, but was effective again during 1902; and at the Conference of 1902 at Nachez, he was again put on the honor roll of his Conference, there to remain till he should answer the final roll call above.

As a pastor and worker Brother Backus was faithful and active. He never had cause to feel ashamed of his report at Conference, for he was conscious that it represented the best efforts he could put forth. It could truthfully be said of him that he had done the best he could. His reports usually showed a considerable increase in the membership of the Church, sometimes near a hundred, with the larger proportion of them on profession of faith, and his finances were well up. His old parishioners from various charges delight to tell of his good work as a pastor, in visiting his people, laboring, preaching, and, like his Lord, going about doing good. It is no disparagement to other faithful men to say that from some portions of his fields of labor, especially the DeKalb Charge, where he served four years, comes the report that his was the most successful pastorate, and he the best loved pastor they ever had. That man is yet living, and for whom the last word cannot yet be said, who owes his conversion to the services of Brother Backus. We refer to the Rev. Louis Fayard, a faithful and useful servant of the Lord. To have been the agent of God in his conversion is worth the labors of a dozen pastorates. But he has many shining monuments to his life and labors; his aim in life was to do good, and many will rise up that day and call him blessed. He was never well—and strong physically, and hence he was of a wandering temperament and somewhat restless as a worker. His brethren of the ministry and the laymen alike speak well of him. One of his brethren writes, "I found him very religious. I knew of him as an emotional man, very zealous and earnest, constantly doing his best."

Brother Backus was a good preacher. His mind was keen and analytical and well supplied, though in later years his poor health prevented his applying himself to his studies in such a way as to make him thoroughly furnished unto every good word and work. In prayer he was able. His religion was a joyful one; his disposition was sunny. He preached the gospel in great confidence; he believed in its power. No wonder he did. He had no doubt of his own acceptance with God; his heart had been thoroughly cleansed, his iniquity had been purged, and he always had the consciousness of the presence of his divine Lord and the witness of the Spirit to his sonship and heirship. If his head was ever wrong, his heart was not; if his acts were questioned, his motives were not. He preached a pure gospel, the acceptance of which leads to a pure life. The commandments of God were to him yea and amen. He took no part in the theory that they were made to break and not to keep. He believed not only in the possibility, but the actuality of a holy life. Nothing less is Methodistic, and he was thoroughly that. Trained in the faith of the Presbyterians, he believed in the final perseverance of the saints; but only as the result of a pure heart and a holy life. His faith in God was strong. Nothing short of that would have equipped him for the many hard battles he had to fight, and the issues of life he had to meet.

No one claims that he was a faultless man. To err is human. One writes, "He was a good man, of simple faith and devoted life, and was, I doubt not, a worthy member of the great brotherhood of itinerant Methodist preachers." When the final roll is called and his record in its completeness shall be made plain, he will have many sheaves to lay down at the feet of his Lord, and he will bear many trophies as the result of his contest with Satan and with sin. Many an unknown deed of kindness and of love will bring forth its fruit, and there shall come to its full fruition a life spent here in toil and labor and pain and suffering; indeed, he who has sown in tears shall reap in joy.

As a father, he was kind and gentle, devoted to his children and they to him. As a husband, he was tender and loving. If he had faults, they were not apparent to his family. His devotion to them was beautiful; their love for him was great. To him his wife was a queen; to her he was a prince. Who would have it otherwise?

From the time of his superannuation in 1902 his lot was not an easy one. The meager allowance the Church was able to provide for him was by no means sufficient to meet his needs. This had to be supplemented; but God was with him, and he was the recipient of many favors and blessings. He moved to the Gulf coast and lived at Mississippi City, Gulfport and Biloxi. He never ceased to preach and never grew tired of it. At times he had charge of churches such as could not be easily supplied; he went out into the byways and hedges. But age and infirmity crept upon him, and it was apparent that his shadow was falling far towards the East. He moved, after spending several years on the coast, to Meridian, Miss., there, as he hoped, to spend his last days in peace and in rest from his labors. But the sun continued to sink in the West. He thought that if he could visit the coast once more, his strength would be renewed and life prolonged. He and family returned to Mississippi City. The sun now was getting low. He was carried to a sanitarium at Biloxi, and there was done for him all that medical skill and tender hands could do. It was plain that the end was not far away. It was the privilege of the writer and other brethren to visit him frequently. We found him confident, trusting yet in the Christ he so long preached to others, looking to the Lamb of God to whom he had pointed so many. He had no pain of body or soul; his malady did not sting him, his conscience did not rebuke him. We asked him if he was ready to go. He replied, "Yes, if the Lord wants me to go." He said, "The joy of the Lord abounds, no doubt about that. I'm leaning heavily on the everlasting arm."

On a bright Monday morning, the 10th day of June, 1912, one hour before noon his sun went down; it went down to rise no more on the beautiful little City of Biloxi, but on the morrow to rise upon that Celestial City, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. He departed in peace without a struggle; he fell asleep to awake in heaven. He was buried from the Main Street Church, Biloxi, Tuesday, June 11. The funeral service was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. T. Griffin, Rev. R. F. Witt and Rev. H. W. VanHook. The pastor of the Church was out of the city, much to his regret. At the cemetery the Masons took part.

He was laid to rest in the city cemetery on the beach where the gentle breezes of the Gulf play across his peaceful tomb. The storms may rage there, but they do not disturb him now. His storms are over, and he is at rest with God.

A PRAYER OF RESIGNATION.

(By Miss Ellie Carver Jamieson.)

How long, my Father, Oh, how long Must I before Thee wait?
Oh! make my feeble spirit strong,
Increase my little faith.

Before Thy sacred altar, place
I made the solemn vow.
In love supply sufficient grace;
Oh! help me keep it now.

Each selfish plan I now resign,
I give my life to Thee.
Just take my will and make it Thine.
And do Thy work through me.

Oh! send Thy Holy Spirit, Lord,
In power and grace divine;
And fill me with that wondrous love—
That perfect love like Thine.

When I'm oppressed on every side
And doubts arise within,
Oh! let me in Thy Word confide
And to Thy promise cling.

Lord, since it is Thy sacred will
For Thee I gladly wait.
But bid my restless soul lie still
In such a sacred place.

And when Thy voice shall bid me go,
Lord, help me to obey;
And if the path I do not know,
Let Jesus lead the way.

METHODISM VS. CATHOLICISM.

By Bishop E. E. Hoss.

I do not often answer anonymous letters. As a rule, they do not deserve an answer. The following one, however, which has reached me within recent days, gives an occasion for saying some things that ought to be said. That it represents the body of intelligent Catholics, many of whom are my warm personal friends, I do not believe, but that it expresses the mind of an uninformed element in that Church is unquestionably true. For their sake, as much as for other reasons, I am writing this article. But here is the letter:

"Rev. Bishop: Why this 'baiting' of Catholics by Methodists? Why can't Methodists attend to their own business, as Catholics do, and let Catholics alone? This 'baiting' by Methodists of the pope and Catholicism is bringing Methodism into disrepute, making Methodists the laughing stock of the world. It is a disgrace to Methodists. Anything to insult the pope and Catholics is the stock in trade of some Methodists. Those Methodists in Rome should be recalled. They do no good for Methodism in Rome. They consort with socialists, anarchists, infidels, Freemasons, and such riffraff of hell. They think if they can insult the pope and proselyte a few they are doing something; but, in fact, they do nothing but disgrace Methodism.—Layman."

My reply is a broad and sweeping denial of the statement that the Methodists are engaged in "baiting" the Catholics. The allegation is so utterly without foundation in fact that it passes my ability to conceive how anybody could make it. If there is a company of Christian people in the world who are animated by a truly liberal spirit, it is the Methodists. They live and let live. Claiming the right to cherish and to propagate their own convictions, they are entirely willing to concede the same rights to others. Not for one moment do they wish to force anybody to accept their teachings or to enlist under their banner. The mere thought of persecution for religion's sake is utterly abhorrent to their minds.

Here in the United States there is an open field for all the Churches, and no Church that is entitled to be called Christian can wish to narrow or limit it. When Protestants become Roman Catholics, as is sometimes the case, there are not a few of us who regret the fact; but we never dream of trying to interfere with their liberty of choice. The gentleman who puts this interrogation to me asserts that Catholics "attend to their own business." Why, yes, of course they do; and a large part of that business is to proselyte Protestants. What is the chief end of the Paulist mission? Are they ever held in any community without some one day or night being set aside for the express benefit of Protestants and the fact being advertised in all the local newspapers?

But why should not Methodists be in Rome if they wish to go there? If religion is free, is there any more reason for its being free in the United States than in Italy? Is tolerance a matter of geography or of the lines of latitude and longitude? Does Rome belong to the pope in such a sense that he has the right to keep everyone out of it that disagrees with him? To preach any such doctrine as that is not to commend Romanism to the modern world. The only temporal sovereign in Italy is the Italian king. The pope may be supreme over a voluntary society like his Church, but he has no civil functions that the nations of the world recognize. To insist that he has is to raise a laugh among men of intelligence. Do we not know the story of the forged decretals?

What my inquirer says about the Methodists at Rome is mere assertion. A large part of it is untrue. Bishop Burt, who has long represented the Methodist Episcopal Church there, is my personal friend. I know him to be a man of probity, piety and honor. If he "consorts with socialists, anarchists, infidels, Freemasons, and such riffraff of hell," it is no doubt to do them good. One of the complaints brought against Jesus Christ was that "He ate with publicans and sinners." Must such sinners be given over to the tender mercies of the devil? Is it not the business of the Church to follow the example of her Lord, and to call sinners to repentance?

But are Freemasons to be classed with the "riffraff of hell?" I have known thousands of them in my time. Man for man, they are equal to the best citizens of the United States. A large per cent. of them are devout Christians. In some States, such as Tennessee, they set themselves squarely against all forms of immorality. No man that runs a whiskey saloon or is in any way connected with that business can get into a Masonic lodge. The sin of profane swearing they have put under the ban. It does seem that anybody who starts out with a plea for magnanimity should be slow to bring a railing accusation against so large a company of respectable men. I must admit, however, that in the unrestrained use of the language of abuse and vilification he is simply following the example of such eminent prelates as Archbishop Ireland and others who denounce the Methodists of Rome in words that Col. Roosevelt himself might well have borrowed for use at the recent Chicago convention. (!)

Perhaps I ought to add a paragraph here. In all that I have said I have had in view the Methodists as a whole. That there are some narrow and fanatical folks among them is a thing I am ready to admit. No organization escapes them. That the Roman Catholic Church has not escaped them is evident from the letter to which I have made this reply. If there are Methodists who would be glad to persecute the Catholics—though I know of none such—there are also Catholics who would willingly revive the horrors of the inquisition!

JAMES THADDEUS MURRAH.

Dear Advocate: On Tuesday, August 20, the distressing announcement was whispered over the wires that the soul of our beloved brother, J. T. Murrah, the pastor at Aberdeen, Miss., had been recalled. A shadow was cast over the town. Our homes were sad. The whole Conference was shocked. The next day we buried his body beside that of the "wife of his youth," in the beautiful cemetery at Columbus, Mississippi.

In the midst of more than ordinary men, in many respects James Thaddeus Murrah was an exception. Born of noble blood, reared a gentleman, classically educated, full of vigor and laudable ambition, wedded to his calling—patient, indefatigable, he was an example of high accomplishments and well-merited honors.

The son of one of the noblest men of Southern Methodism, a brother of our distinguished Bishop, he himself was an honor to the family and a credit to the Church. A capital preacher he was—original, logical, convincing, and eloquent, oftentimes in a splendid degree. He was a faithful, energetic pastor, than whom no man has been more popular in the different charges he served. Few among us have been quite so successful.

The most delicate situations and the most trying conditions, he handled with a master's hand. In all the relations of life, his demeanor was that of kindness, gentleness, patience. Whether in the pulpit, home, or social circle, his presence was ever pleasing and inspiring. His cultured bearing and his sympathetic nature made him comfortable in any crowd. His genial disposition would enliven a social occasion, while his warm, big heart invited the confidence of those who were sad and made him a blessing.

There was no manlier man than he—no knightlier spirit. As a father and husband, he was kind, thoughtful and gentle. As a friend, minister and citizen, he filled the sphere of a noble soul.

In common with others, he made mistakes—all men make them. He had his weaknesses—all men have them. But he sincerely tried to correct his mistakes, and he labored assiduously to overcome his weaknesses. As a result, no man in North Mississippi Methodism was in greater demand for our leading charges.

In the midst of a successful pastorate at Aberdeen, disease attacked him a few weeks ago. He sought relief at noted watering places, and at the hands of the best physicians. Finally, his physician here carried him to Memphis for special treatment. Without any warning the summons came, as he was sleeping quietly in his room at the hotel. Thus, having "served his own generation by the will of God, he fell on sleep," and was gathered unto his fathers—it's a beautiful thought! There is nothing great in man but soul. There is nothing great in soul but loyalty to truth and duty. Nothing need be said—nothing could be said that could add to the record that is already closed. We live our lives and leave our influences. "They are known and read of men."

"Jim" Murrah was my friend. Our families have been associated for four generations. His father was the pastor of my father's family; so also was his elder brother. Few men were quite as welcome in my home as he—my children loved no man more.

My personal association with him was always of the most pleasant and helpful character. I am a better man for it, and I thank God that I knew him and loved him. It was a blessed privilege to know him, to share his confidence. Any man was honored whom he called friend.

I am sad to-day that he is gone; but I live in hope that I will see him again, glorified in the likeness of the ascended Christ.

THE BIRTHDAY.

Anna Burnham Bryant.

Bring the birth-day marker!
That's the way to show
How much I've been growing
Since a year ago.

All my last year's dresses
Are too short for me;
This one—with the tucks out—
Only to my knee!

Grandpa rubs his glasses,
Whispers: "Yes, indeed!
How that child is growing—Growing like a weed!"

Mother's word is sweetest:
"Yes, in sun and shower
She's been growing, growing,
Growing like a flower!"

TIMELY RIDDLES.

Where could a square house be located, so that all its windows would face south?
At the north pole.

What is that which has a mouth, but never speaks, and a bed, but never lies in it?
A river.

"How much are nine and nine?" asked the teacher of the juvenile class.

"Ninety-nine," promptly answered the boy at the foot.

If an ice wagon weighs two tons, a block of ice 200 pounds, the team 3,000 pounds and the man on the front of the wagon 160 pounds, what does the man on the back of the wagon weigh?
The ice.

What letter of the alphabet is necessary to make a shoe?
The last.

Why is "O" the most charitable letter in the alphabet?

Because it is found oftener than any other in doing good.—New York Christian Advocate.

ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE FENCE.

"Now count 'em," said Archie, rolling out the pretty, rosy apples on the grass. "What beauties!"

Rob, sitting on the lowest limb of the apple tree where it crossed the fence, looked down on the boys below. "I'll see how many I have, too, and then we'll divide even," he told them. Isn't it good that it's such a great full branch that comes over our side of the fence? I asked Mr.
Gray if we could have all the apples that fell on our lot, and he just laughed and said we didn't have to wait till they fell; all that grew on our side were ours. Look out, now! I'm going to jump."

Rob had his hat full of the yellow and rosy balls, and he poured them out with the others.
"Just eight for each of us," he said, and the boys began gathering them up. Just then they heard a little cough that sounded as if some one wanted to be noticed, but didn't quite like to speak, and down at the other corner of the fence they saw a pair of brown eyes looking through at them.

"It's Trudie Jennings," said Archie in a low voice. "No apples fall on their grass." Then he called aloud, "Hello, Trudie!"

"Hello!" answered Trudie, glad to be seen.
"You've got some nice—nice day." Trudie suddenly decided that it might sound as if she were hinting to say something about the apples, but her eager little face told what she was thinking.

"We don't have to give her any," whispered Lyle. "And there are just enough for three of us."

"No, we don't have to give her any, but they'd make even for four folks, too," said Bob, slowly.

"And if we lived on that other side of the fence," began Archie.

Then Lyle called: "Wait a minute, Trudie; we're coming over to give you some of our apples. We'll have just six apiece."

So in a minute or two Trudie's little apron held a share of the rosy treasures, and Trudie's face was shining.

"Now, I'm going into the house," she said, "to divide mine with mother and the baby. Things always taste sweeter when you divide them."

The boys looked at each other and smiled.
They thought as Trudie did.—The Sunbeam.

A MORE PERTINENT QUESTION.

The daughters of the household, ardent sufragists, were talking politics.

"Taft will sweep the country," declared Mabel.

"Wilson will sweep the country," asserted Maud.

"Roosevelt will sweep the country," averred Margaret.

At this point father took a hand.

"Never mind about who's going to sweep the country," said he. "Who's going to sweep this here kitchen? That's the question now."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

HYMNS WE LOVE.

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee."

To write a hymn that is so popular and so useful as is "Rock of Ages," is a privilege an angel might covet. It is a universal favorite. The British Premier, Hon. W. E. Gladstone, made a version of it in Latin and another in Greek; Prince Albert, of England, repeated it constantly on his deathbed. "For," said he, "if in this hour
I had only my worldly honors and dignities to depend upon, I should be poor indeed."

In the year 1756 a young man of sixteen, while visiting with his mother in Ireland, attended an evangelistic meeting held in a barn at the village of Cadymain. At this meeting the young man was converted. He was none other than Augustus Montague Toplady, who afterwards wrote this famous hymn. Of his conversion, Toplady says:
"Strange that I, who had so long sat under the means of grace in England, should be brought right unto God in an obscure part of Ireland, midst a handful of people together in a barn, and by the ministry of one who could hardly spell his own name. Surely it was the Lord's doing, and is marvelous."

At the age of twenty-one Toplady received orders in the Church of England. He was a strong Calvinist. He was the author of many popular hymns. He died in 1778. "Rock of Ages" was first published in "The Gospel Magazine," of which he was the editor. The hymn has been more or less altered and rearranged several times since then, but the sentiment remains the same.
Much of the popularity of the hymn is due to the revision made by Thomas Cottrill and James Montgomery.

A poor heathen woman in China, in an effort to please her Gods, had excavated with her poor, weak hands a well 20 feet deep, and it was only after this achievement that she learned of the free Gospel of salvation. Eighty years old, she stretched out her aged and crippled fingers, and sang, as the missionaries had taught her:

"Nothing in my hand I bring, Simply to thy cross I cling."

The author's main thought is, the holiest man must say in his prayer:

"Thou must save and thou alone."—Byron Harwell, in the Southern Churchman.

THE JUST MADE PERFECT.

Some one relating the incidents of a visit to Luther Burbank's nursery and gardens in California said he asked Mr. Burbank what he was going to do with the ten thousand seedlings which had failed to fulfill his expectations.
"Throw them on the common pile," was the prompt reply. "Only one seedling in ten thousand, flower or fruit, is fit to survive. That one
I shall perfect in the course of a few seasons."

Years ago we walked through the series of studios belonging to a great artist. We paused before a superb bust which had never been completed and asked, "What is the reason, Mr. A., that you never finished that beautiful head?" "The marble was not what it should be," he replied, and showed us a faint blue line running across the breast. "It doesn't pay," he went on, "to save and finish anything but the best."

The good man will be saved—and "perfected."
Abraham will be there, more majestic than when he awed kings by his presence. David will be there, purified and more songful. John will be there, with his far-seeing eyes, and Paul, who at his best only knew in part and prophesied in part, will come to the fullness of the perfect man in Christ Jesus.—The Advance.

WONDERFUL SWIMMERS.

Nearly all animals are better swimmers than man, and take to the water naturally, while he has to learn to propel himself, says an exchange.
The rhinoceros and hippopotamus are wonderful swimmers and divers, while the Indian elephant crosses great rivers with heavy loads. The elk and the reindeer are first-class swimmers.

The elk keeps his head above water and crosses directly from bank to bank to avoid turning. The reindeer, on the other hand, turns as often as he likes, keeping his head only a little above the surface. But of all swimmers of all climes the best, though not the swiftest, is the polar bear, who passes half of his time in the water. In the regions he frequents it is invariably cold, and cold is normally prohibitive to good swimming.
There are bears that can swim from twenty-five to thirty miles without great effort.

One of the swiftest swimming animals is the squirrel. A sportsman on one occasion, having at hand a squirrel born in captivity, which had never seen water, wanted to see if it could swim, and took it with him in a rowboat to the center of the lake. The squirrel turned towards the bank, head and paws above the water, back and tail underneath it, and began to swim so rapidly that it was with the greatest difficulty that the man recovered it when it neared the shallow water near the land.

It is said that even many nonaquatic birds will swim like ducks if an attempt be made to drown them.—The Presbyterian.

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The annual meeting of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 30, at 11 a. m., in the Advocate office.
J. M. HENRY,
Chairman.

CONCERNING THE ADVOCATE.

The Annual Conferences in our territory are near at hand, and our pastors for the next two months will be exceedingly busy rounding out the work of the year. Various claims, all of which are important, will demand their attention, and in most cases it will require aggressive and persistent effort to carry a clean balance sheet to these annual gatherings. Loath as we are to add, even to the slightest extent, to the heavy burdens borne by our faithful preachers, the exigency of the situation forces us to ask them not to forget amid the multiplicity of their duties the claims of the Advocate. On account of the unfavorable seasons, the floods, etc., the year with us has been financially a hard one. These hindrances have lessened our receipts, but have not reduced our expenses.

Much depends upon what is done in behalf of the Conference organ by our pastors and presiding elders within the next sixty days. We urgently request the brethren to do their best for the paper. We have subscriptions expiring in nearly every charge, many of which we have carried for months, hoping to collect for them this fall. If we fail to do this, it will entail upon us a very heavy loss.

There are two things that we especially ask of every pastor: (1) That he try earnestly to induce every person in his charge now receiving the paper to renew his subscription. We feel sure that an energetic effort to do this would yield substantial results. (2) That he try to secure at least one or more new subscribers. Even one additional name on our files from every charge in Mississippi and Louisiana would help appreciably.

We desire to say again, with the utmost possible emphasis, that the success of the Advocate depends chiefly upon our pastors. All other expedients to extend its circulation are insignificant compared with their influence. Without their active co-operation, there is no hope of anything but failure.

The pressure upon us for space is very great. In an important center like New Orleans, and with a constituency covering two States, we ought in reality to issue a larger journal than we are now doing. It is high time that we were having this end in view, and bestirring ourselves to build up the subscription, so as to make its achievement possible. Never was there a time when the Church needed so urgently as now to publish periodicals that bristle with interesting matter from the first page to the last, and to CIRCULATE THEM. Her future depends upon this to no inconsiderable extent. Her enemy, by means of thousands of printing presses, is scattering broadcast over the land the seeds of vice and death. The only thing that can counteract the effects of this frightful sowing is to scatter far and wide the good seed of the kingdom. And undoubtedly the most effective method of doing this is through the agency of a vigorous and wide-awake weekly press. Surely we have slept long enough, while Satan has been at work. Let us awake, and be up and doing.

We hope that the reports of the brethren at Greenwood, Hazlehurst, and Monroe will enable the Advocate to enter upon the new year in a better condition than ever before in its history. This is quite possible, if every man will do what he can.

MINISTERS ON THE HUSTINGS.

It has been announced in the papers that the Rev. J. Wesley Hill, a Northern Methodist minister, who for some time has been engaged in other work than that of the pastorate, and the Rev. Mr. Gilchrist, a Unitarian ex-pastor in New Orleans, who has been operating in this city a secular organization called The Forum, are soon to take the stump for President Taft, the former to orate in Chicago and the Northwest, and the latter in Louisiana. Ordinarily this announcement would lead us to register a ringing protest against preachers lowering the dignity of their high calling by mixing up in politics, but in the present instance we feel that we can best give expression to our sentiments by relating an incident that occurred in a political campaign in Mississippi some years ago. It was at the time that the Farmer's Alliance was very strong and there was a disposition prevalent throughout the State not to elect lawyers to office.

In a certain county a little pettifogger, who had never had a case outside of the Justice of the Peace Court, and was not fit to practice in that, declared himself a candidate for the State Legislature. He soon found the tide running strongly against him because of his remote connection with the legal profession; so in a speech at a barbecue where a large crowd was gathered he sought to allay this prejudice by making an appeal substantially as follows: "It is urged that I should not be elected because I am a lawyer; there are some attorneys against whom this objection might properly have weight, but you know, fellow-citizens, that I am not a lawyer TO HURT."

So there are some men who carry the word "Reverend" before their names who are NOT PREACHERS TO HURT, and who can scarcely be expected to have a due regard for the proprieties of the ministerial calling. There is little occasion for surprise when they break over bounds and make a spectacle of themselves.

MR. ROOSEVELT IN NEW ORLEANS.

Ex-President Roosevelt, the nominee of the Progressive party for the Presidency of the United States, spent last Friday in New Orleans. He arrived by the way of the I. C. Railroad about ten o'clock and was greeted by a large crowd at the depot. He and his party were carried over the city in automobiles, after which they went to the Grunewald Hotel, where arrangements had been made for them. At the noon hour the ex-President lunched informally with a select company of his friends and supporters at Antoine's Restaurant in the French section of the city; he then returned to the Grunewald and rested until 3:30 o'clock, the hour when he was to make a public address at the Winter Garden on Baronne Street, near Poydras. The audience which assembled to hear him was an immense one, overflowing the vast building, which seats 3000 people, and extending far out into the street.

As the Advocate has no connection with politics, we shall have nothing to say as to the matter of Mr. Roosevelt's speech. From his standpoint, it was a very adroit and able utterance, one which only a man of unusual mentality could have made. Indeed, as a speaker he went far beyond our expectations. His bearing before the audience was easy and graceful, his manner was deliberate and impressive, his gestures were forceful and appropriate, his articulation was distinct, and his voice, though not rounded and full, was well modulated and carried admirably. He held the attention of the vast throng marvelously well, an was frequently cheered, though it seemed to us that a large majority of those present were not in sympathy with him. On the whole, we doubt whether there is in the nation a man who is more effective than he on the hustings. He lacks the powerful voice and smoothness of Mr. Bryan, but is more direct and incisive and gets into closer touch with his hearers. Whatever may be his future, it must be admitted that Mr. Roosevelt is an extraordinary personality—a man of remarkable intellect, great administrative ability, and tremendous force. Whether he uses it wisely or not, he has an immense capacity for achievement.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. A. W. Turner, the Louisiana Conference Evangelist, was in New Orleans last Monday.

Rev. W. F. McCrory, our pastor at Rocky Springs, Miss., was in New Orleans last Tuesday, and paid the Advocate an appreciated call. He was in the city to consult an oculist.

Dr. J. M. Henry, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and Dr. J. W. Moore, pastor of First Church, New Orleans, spent last Sunday in Crowley, La., where they went to meet Bishop Mouzon.

A general forward movement is being made on the Belle City (La.) Circuit, of which Rev. Louis Hoffpauir is the young and vigorous pastor. Hays, one of the points on the charge, is planning to erect a new church in the near future.

Do not forget that Work Day is near at hand for both the Louisiana Orphanage at Ruston and the Mississippi Orphanage at Jackson. October 12 is the Louisiana Orphanage Work Day, and October 19 is the Mississippi Orphanage Work Day.

Rev. H. M. Johnson reports favorably of conditions at Summit and East McComb, and thinks that, notwithstanding unfavorable circumstances, the outlook is encouraging. He expected to begin a series of revival services at East McComb last Sunday.

A ladies' Sunday school class at Lake Arthur, La., has taken the name of Eliza Isles, in honor of Miss Eliza Isles, who is a deaconess at Houma. Miss Isles is a native of Calcasieu Parish, in which Lake Arthur was located until the recent division of that parish.

Rev. T. E. Gregory, of Tyro, Miss., writes as follows: "Sister Mollie McKie, a daughter of Rev. R. P. Goar, died here on September 23. She was a devout Christian." We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that the Heavenly Father may comfort and sustain them.

We make grateful acknowledgment to Mrs. W. L. Gilmer for a list of six subscriptions, sent from Stonewall, La. She also favored us with an interesting account of the revival services held at that place, which appears elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate. We shall not soon forget this kindly service.

Good reports are coming from Gueydan and Abbeville, La., where Rev. J. D. Nesom serves as fine a class of people as are to be found in South Louisiana. Brother Nesom is just finishing his first year on this charge, and will make a flattering report at the coming session of the Louisiana Conference.

On Sunday morning, September 22, a fine ten-pound boy found his way into the parsonage home of Rev. and Mrs. M. A. Burns, at Greenwood Springs, Miss. When the message was sent us, both the mother and little one were reported to be doing finely. We extend to the happy parents our most hearty congratulations.

In forwarding some subscriptions to this office, for which we extend him thanks, Rev. R. H. Bamberg, of Vernon, La., adds: "The work is progressing very well in this charge. We have been blessed with some good meetings, and some of our churches are in better condition than they have been in for quite awhile."

Rev. Felix R. Hill, Jr., the pastor of Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, has been invited to deliver an address on "Heroes of the Lalty in the Early History of Tennessee Methodism" on the occasion of the centennial of the organization of the Tennessee Conference, which will be celebrated in McKendree Church, Nashville, on October 9.

Rev. A. A. Bernard, who is supplying the Rayne (La.) charge, is reported as doing a good work.

That worthy veteran of the North Mississippi Conference, Dr. T. C. Wier, is visiting relatives in Muskogee, Oklahoma. We have in hand an interesting letter from his facile pen, which reached us too late for this issue of the Advocate, but which we will let our readers enjoy next week.

We publish this week a most interesting letter from Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, one of Louisiana Methodism's foremost workers, who has been spending some time at Mount Vernon, New York. No matter whether she is at home or is tarrying at some far-away place, the Master's work is ever uppermost in her mind. Do not fail to read her helpful message.

In a note written from Tupelo, Miss., Rev. L. B. Hankins says: "I am at home again after spending seven weeks in revival meetings with Brothers Sargent and Burns. These brethren are in high favor with their flocks, and their meetings were very successful. It has been a season of refreshing to me to be with these worthy pastors and their good people."

The press dispatches report that Baron Yun Chi Ho and five other alleged leaders in the conspiracy to assassinate the Japanese Governor General of Korea have been convicted, and each of them sentenced to serve a term of ten years in prison. Eighteen others were given a sentence of seven years; forty, six years; and forty-two, five years. Seventeen were acquitted.

Rev. C. C. Selecman, who served a part of this year as pastor in New Orleans, was stationed at Webb City, Mo., at the session of the Southwest Missouri Conference which adjourned last week. Brother Selecman had been serving the Webb City charge for the past four months.

Rev. H. B. Thomason, formerly a preacher in the Louisiana Conference, but now of Oklahoma, recently held a very successful meeting at the Bayou Chicot Church, near St. Landry, La., where he was formerly the pastor. He was ably assisted by Rev. G. A. Morgan, of Washington, La., and Rev. W. B. Peritt, of Marksville, La. The result of the meeting was 19 accessions to the Church by profession of faith.

Despite the fact that many things have hindered the work in his field, Rev. S. W. Vowell writes hopefully of the prospect in the Rural Hill (Miss.) charge. At his request we have sent him some sample copies of the Advocate, and he will endeavor to extend the circulation of the Conference organ among his people. We have little doubt that we shall hear from his efforts in this direction.

Bishop Mouzon spent last Sunday in Crowley, La., where he preached to a large audience in the morning and was the principal speaker at a rally held Sunday night in the interest of the new church which is being built there. On Monday evening he attended a banquet in Lake Charles, given by the Adult Bible Class, of which Brother J. B. Kent is the teacher. His address before that body was reported as inspirational.

From the issue of the Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative of September 28, we take the following: "Rev. G. W. Bachman pleased and helped a good congregation at prayer meeting in the Methodist Church last Wednesday evening. Mr. Bachman is always a favorite in our town. He remarked on the large number of persons who were present, saying, 'Many towns larger than Carrollton do not have so many at prayer meeting.'"

Rev. M. L. White, of Prentiss, Miss., assisted Rev. W. S. Waldrop in a successful meeting at Jamestown, on the Great Northern Railroad, week before last. There were 15 accessions to the Church and 8 infants were baptised. He reports that Brother Waldrop is doing a fine work and that he is held in high esteem by his people. Brother White stated that he had an engagement to be with Brother Flurry in a protracted meeting at New Zion this week.

In a business note to this office, written on September 30, Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, makes the following reference to his meeting, which is now in progress: "We are having a real revival in Sildell. Some souls have been saved; many others blessed, and more than fifteen family altars have been erected. Our services will continue for a few days longer. Brother S. L. Riggs is doing the preaching, and he is reaching the people with his earnest messages."

At the District Conference held in Lake Arthur last May, the Lafayette District adopted a resolution commending a movement to bring about closer fraternal relations between the Northern Methodists and our Church in that territory. As a result of the effort, the Boards of Stewards of the two Churches in Lake Charles recently held a joint meeting in our church, where matters of common interest were discussed. A union revival meeting will soon be held by the two Lake Charles Methodist churches.

Rev. W. L. Kleinschmidt has had a gracious meeting at Jena, La., in which he had the assistance of Rev. W. W. Perry, of Shreveport. He will tell of it in our "Tidings from the Field" department next week.

The Sunday school of the First Methodist Church of Shreveport has adopted as its Rally Cry, "Twelve Hundred Pupils." The attendance upon the Epworth League service every Sunday is reported to be a hundred or more. Truly, this is a great congregation, and in the person of Dr. G. E. Cameron it has a leader who really leads.

Rev. H. C. Gatlin, in a business note to this office, thus refers to the recent session of the Southwest Missouri Conference and his last year's work: "The Conference was a good one. By appointment of the Bishop, I go to a new field next year, Chilhowie. We had a very pleasant and successful pastorate at Appleton City. About $300 was spent in improving the church; the congregation grew in numbers, and, best of all, I will leave it stronger spiritually."

In sending in his fourth round of appointments, Rev. C. C. Miller, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, speaks encouragingly of the work under his supervision. Brother Miller is winding up a quadrennium of service in his present position, and it has been of a high order. He has wrought well, and the brethren of the Baton Rouge District, both clerical and lay, will give him up with regret. Not the least of his resources is the cheering sunshine that he takes with him wherever he goes.

Rev. Olin Ray, pastor of the Grenada (Miss.) circuit, has lately brought us under obligations to him for some effective work done for the Advocate. Brother Ray has returned to Millsaps College and resumed his course of study, but will continue to meet his appointments and look after his charge. Of affairs at Millsaps, he says: "We have had a good opening, and everything is moving along smoothly. Dr. Watkins has won the confidence and respect of all, and the prospects for the College were never so bright."

Dr. J. T. Sawyer occupied the pulpit of the Lake View Presbyterian Church, of this city, last Sunday at 11 o'clock. He reports that he had an attentive congregation and a good service. He also had an engagement to preach for the Presbyterians at Westwego, across the river, in the afternoon, but the constant downpour of rain prevented him from doing so. Dr. Sawyer is often called upon for pulpit service by other denominations, as well as by his own, and never fails to give a helpful message to those who are so fortunate as to hear him.

Rev. A. W. O'Bryant, one of the stirring local preachers within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference, sends us the following report of a meeting in which he took an active part: "We have just closed a successful meeting at Harvard Schoolhouse (Old Mt. Carmel), ten miles east of Quitman, Miss. Visible results were not lacking, several being converted. Rev. R. E. Rutledge, of Daleville, did all the preaching, except three sermons which were delivered by the writer and Rev. A. V. Davis, of De Soto. We hope to organize a church at this place in the near future."

Mrs. M. E. Carr, of Oak Ridge, La., in ordering us to continue to send her the Conference organ, says: "I am forwarding you $1.50 to pay for my subscription to the New Orleans Christian Advocate one year in advance. I do not think I have failed to make such a remittance for thirty years or more." It is generally those Methodists who take their church paper the longest who most appreciate it. And we confess to a partiality for our long-time readers and supporters. May the loving Heavenly Father richly bless them every one and make their paths shine more and more unto the perfect day.

Rev. E. C. Sullivan, of Ebenezer, Miss., under date of Sept. 23, writes: "This charge is mourning the death of Brother W. R. Broom, our recording steward. His place as a church official will be hard to fill. But we trust that our loss has been to him a great gain." Rapidly God's servants are gathering home; we miss them sorely when they go and sigh for their companionship, but the purpose of our existence here is to prepare us for a loftier one in eternity. To a Christian, death is but the beginning of life, and if we are faithful, we may hope to overtake those who have preceded us in the Heavenly City.

Rev. George R. Stuart, of Cleveland, Tenn., sends us the following statement: "To save large and useless correspondence please allow me to say through your columns that after I enter the pastorate on the first of October, I cannot make engagements for evangelistic work outside of my own Conference. My singer, J. Dale Stentz, who has had charge of the music in my meetings and is one of the best soloists and choir leaders

I have ever had, will assist pastors in revival work. Any pastor needing some one to take care of the entire singing proposition may secure this man, whom I unreservedly recommend, by writing him at Cleveland, Tenn."

Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, the efficient Sunday school field worker of the North Mississippi Conference, writes of two Sunday schools that were expecting to observe Rally Day last Sunday, having carefully planned and prepared for the occasion. One was at West Point, where the principal address was to be made by Mr. R. M. Weaver, of Corinth. The other was at Greenville, where Mrs. Edmund Taylor, Mr. W. P. Kretschmar, and Miss Kilpatrick were down for the discussion of important questions. Brothers Lewis and Lagrone are 'progressive' pastors, and are usually found abreast of the foremost in all the forward movements of the Church.

From the Raleigh Christian Advocate of September 19, we take the following: "Dr. F. N. Parker, of the Chair of Biblical Literature of Trinity College, occupied the pulpit at Edenton Street (Raleigh) last Sunday morning. We regret that our duties called us out of the city so that we could not hear him, but echoes of his address that reached our ears indicate that he reached a high mark. We should expect nothing else. Dr. Parker is a finished scholar and a profound thinker. There is no stronger man among us. And he had a great theme. The campaign for the endowment fund is on in Raleigh this week, but we go to press too soon to report the result."

We acknowledge the reception of a pamphlet, entitled "The Minister's High Calling," by Professor Thomas Carter of Vanderbilt University. It is an illuminating discussion of a great theme—scholarly, discriminating, and most suggestive. Dr. Carter in preparing this paper, and the Ministerial Training and Supply Department of our General Board of Education in printing and distributing it, have rendered the Church an important service. It ought to be read by every pastor in Southern Methodism and placed in the hands of our young men who are disposed to be active in Christian work. It is well calculated to help them, and might open for some of them the way into a larger field of usefulness.

Rev. H. Armstrong, one of the honored superannuates of the Louisiana Conference, still finds work to do for the Master and is accomplishing much good by his labors. He says: "I am preaching this year at the same places I did last year, being thus employed three Sundays in each month, and sometimes four, and I can truly report improvement. At Riverton the fathers and mothers and children attend preaching, and for two or three months they have had a good Sunday school, which is well supplied with our literature. There is no organized church at this point, but I have managed to secure a few subscribers to the Advocate. The congregations have greatly improved, and with a proper effort and good help, I think there would be a sweeping revival. I have been preaching at Olla, my home, from two to four times a month for four years and nine months. The attendance and order have been good, and there has seemed to be an increasing solemnity among the hearers." Brother Armstrong also states that Olla has lately enjoyed a good meeting, which was conducted by evangelists of the Methodist Protestant Church, and which resulted in about 35 conversions.

Mansfield Female College

MANSFIELD, LA.

Mansfield Female College has opened with the largest number of boarding students in many years, and the patronage from the town is larger than usual.

Friends of the College in town and in Shreveport have "showered" us with handsomely papered rooms, table linen, and table ware, and other friends have sent us of the choicest girls in all Louisiana, with one or two from another State.

We do not propose to encroach on the territory of another Conference school, nor cut terms to induce. The College will welcome those who may wish to come from other States, but our field should furnish more girls than we can now accommodate.

We want ten girls in the next ten days. Let every friend get busy and it will be easy to do.

JULIA E. DOWDLE was born in Lowndes County, Miss., January 23, 1849, and died August 9, 1912. In youth she joined the Methodist Church. After some years she transferred her membership to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Her's was a life of afflictions, but she trusted in God. For more than twenty years she was a constant attendant at the bedside of her paralyzed daughter, all the time suffering pain in her own body. Edith, the daughter, survives her mother, and is now cared for by her faithful Aunt Esther, who, we pray, may be sustained by our kind Heavenly Father, whose watchful eye is never closed, and who notes even so small a thing as the sparrow's fall. Across the river of death there is a sweet rest for those who have been much weary on this earth.

A FRIEND.

On September 10 the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burt Atwood and took away their precious baby, little NOVAL. He was three months and five days old, and was a sweet little child. It was hard to give him up, but we know that God found a better place than this world for him. Little Noval suffered a great deal, but he is now at rest. Weep not, father, mother and friends, for heaven is made brighter by his going. Let us so live that we may meet him around God's throne where there will be no more parting. We visited him a short time before his death, and found him in great pain. The clouds hang heavily over us now, but there is the rainbow of promise that assures us that by trusting in Christ we may overcome sin and gain an eternal victory over the grave, and meet our loved one in the bright beyond.

MADIE and MAUD SHERMAN.

On Thursday morning, September 12, the spirit of Rev. W. B. HULL returned unto God who gave it. His end was peaceful. He fell like ripe fruit into nature's lap, and was with ease gathered, not harshly plucked. He was buried Friday morning at Liberty Hill Cemetery, four miles west of McGool. The funeral service, conducted by Rev. V. C. Curtis, of Kosciusko, was largely attended. A choir, specially selected for the occasion, rendered his favorite hymns: "Savior More Than Life To Me," "Up to the Beautiful Giver of Life," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and "Nearer My God to Thee." Brother Hull died in his 79th year. He served his beloved Southland as sergeant and lieutenant in Company "D," Thirty-seventh Mississippi regiment. He was licensed to preach during the year 1870. In every walk of life, as Christian, husband, father, friend, he was true. It may be truly said of him, "He went about doing good." With kindly word and action he wrote his name upon the hearts of men and long will the influence of his pure, useful life live to ennoble and to bless all whose privilege and pleasure it was to know him.

P. F. LUTER.

Mrs. EMMA OLIVIA ROPER was born August 24, 1865, in Lauderdale County, Miss., near Meridian, and departed this life August 28, 1912, at her home in Lake Como, Jasper County, Miss. She was the daughter of Jacob and Cecil Nichols, and was married to B. F. Roper on January 17, 1884. Unto them were born thirteen children, nine of whom, with her husband, survive her. The family moved to Jasper County in 1898. Sister Roper suffered greatly the last several months of her life, being afflicted with cancer. In all her sufferings she was patient and submissive, being sustained by an unshaken faith in God. She dated her conversion back to the time when she was eighteen years old, though she did not unite with the Church until later in life. She joined at Holder's Church in August, 1909. She will be greatly missed in the community where she lived, for she was an excellent neighbor and was untiring in service for all who needed her aid. She had several special manifestations of acceptance with God during her last illness, and died triumphantly. We pray God's blessings upon the bereaved husband and children. Her pastor, W. A. HAYS.

Mrs. MARY M. HALL, nee Sharkey, was born October 10, 1829, and died May 18, 1911. She came to Leake County, Miss., in 1836; was married to R. J. Hall on December 24, 1846, and joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of twelve, of which she remained a member till called to her reward. She lived a consistent, Christian life, her influence being felt for good. The members of the family say that it was real comforting to be with her during her last illness. Rev. M. L. White, who was her pastor for four years, pays to her the following tribute: "She was one of the connecting links with the old-fashioned Methodism in the days of Lorenzo Dow, Vick, Owen, C. K. Marshall, and John Lane; was baptized by the latter in infancy; lived in the Roberson road, or trace, that led from Jackson to Tennessee and Kentucky, and also near the Natchez trace, and had the opportunity of meeting the great men of Methodism who often spent nights at her father's house. I have sat for hours and heard her tell of those pioneer preachers, and of the great meetings at Hopocca church. Sister Hall was one of the greatest women I ever knew; strictly spiritual; perfectly loyal to the Church; a preacher's friend and counselor, and was liberal with her money to the very last. Her home was the preacher's home always. Everybody loved and revered her. I was greatly grieved on hearing of her death, but was not surprised that she died well." May her mantle fall upon many others. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

R. T. PICKETT.

Mrs. CORDELIA COKER was born May 17, 1843, in Alabama, and died July 16, 1912, at the home of her son, Samuel, near Yazoo City, Miss. When she was a small child Sister Coker's parents moved their family to Deasonville, Miss. There she spent her youth, and on October 4, 1860, she was married to Mr. John Coker. They made their home near Eden, Miss., where they lived happily together until Mr. Coker's death on December 15, 1895. Nine children were born to them, five of whom became grown: one daughter, Mrs. Ousely, preceded her mother to heaven several years ago. The surviving children are Robert J., Samuel B., John N., and Miss Mary. Sister Coker joined the M. E. Church, South, in her childhood and until her death was a consistent and faithful Christian and church member. She was not demonstrative, but in a modest way she did sincere service in our Father's Kingdom. Though practically an invalid for many years, she faithfully discharged the duties incident to rearing a large family and also tenderly cared for two infirm orphans. Her life was, indeed, full of cares and sorrows, yet no one was ever more cheerful and optimistic. All who knew her will miss this kind, sweet old mother in Israel.

F. L. APPLEWHITE.

On February 4, 1844, in Alabama, HILLIARD W. HUNTER was born. At the age fifteen he joined the Methodist Church. Beginning at seventeen years of age, he served four years, and won distinction in the Confederate army. In 1869 he was married to Miss Eliza Ann Jones, daughter of Rev. William S. Jones. After her death, in 1881, he married Miss Mary E. Foster, daughter of Rev. Thomas L. Foster, of precious memory. For nearly fifty years he was a member of the Masonic fraternity. At different times he served his State nobly in affairs of public trust. He died in his home in Water Valley, Miss., July 10, 1911. The widow and nine children survive him. All of them are Methodists. The boys and girls are an honor to their parents.

The above is a brief outline of the life record of a noble, good man—a gentleman, a patriot, a Christian. Though practically an invalid for many years, Brother Hunter never lost control of himself. First of all, he was true to God. For perhaps fifty years he was an officer in the Church, whose doctrines he lived, and whose policy he loved. Faithfulness is the word that describes his character, in every relation. I never knew a truer, cleaner, fairer man. No man's bond was better than his word. No one ever had a better neighbor than was found in him. There was no mistaking his position on any question—moral or political. He said but little, but meant what he said and said what he meant. No honest man could misinterpret his contract; no truthful man ever questioned his sincerity; no manly man ever doubted his courage. He was as brave as Julius Caesar and yet as timid as a child. He never bragged, but he never ran; he never swaggered, but he never flinched. In the competition of this materialistic age, he plead no consideration except that which is due an honest man—courtesy and fairness. His record as a soldier would be a credit to any State. His loyalty as a citizen, all men respect who delight in faithfulness. His devotion to God and his Church was beautiful in its simplicity, constancy and sincerity. His "daily walk" was that of a model of Christian husbandhood and fatherhood.

Better than "millions of money," the heritage he left his family—an untarnished name and a blameless character. If they are faithful, as he was faithful, all of them will meet in blessed reunion, "when the mists have rolled away."

A GREAT MEETING.

Dear Brother Meek: Great revivals have swept over the entire Chunky charge, but the greatest of all was the meeting held at the Cotton States Lumber Company's logging camp, seven miles north of Meehan, Miss. I began the meeting there on Friday night before the second Sunday in September, and on Monday I was re-enforced by the coming of Brothers Dan and John Kelley. Brother John did the singing and Brother Dan did the preaching. The attendance and interest were good from the beginning. I do not think that, under the circumstances, it will be saying too much to say that it was the greatest meeting Rev. Dan Kelley ever held. Some people hooted at the idea of going out into the woods to hold a meeting among the log cutters. We went, just the same and built a large camp shed, 30 by 40 feet in size, and seated it well. The lumber company furnished the lumber. We had large crowds all the time, especially at night; the men had to work during the day meetings. The result of the meeting was a large number of conversions, and 69 additions to the Church. Possibly others will join later. A Sunday school and prayer meeting were organized, and a thank offering of $141.10 was taken to cover the expenses of the meeting. I could say more, but it is sufficient to say that this was one of the greatest meetings the writer was ever in. To God be all the glory. Amen.

Tidings From the Field

Bayou Chicot, La.

The Bayou Chicot church had a glorious meeting and the membership was greatly revived and built up by the able preaching of Brother H. B. Thomason, of Oklahoma, who came all the way down here to preach to the people of Chicot. He was our pastor five years ago, and the people had great confidence in him. The work he did here probably no other one could have done; he was assisted by Brother Morgan and also by Brother W. B. Peritt. His singing was also much appreciated. Nineteen united with the Church on profession of faith. Our eyes beheld glorious things; we saw eight bright, young men go up to the altar for membership. C. T. THOMPSON.

Hesterville, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: I enjoy reading the Advocate very much. My work here is moving along nicely. We have had excellent meetings all over the work. Our congregations were fine and we have had a good many additions to the membership. Brother Armour helped us two days at Bethel. He did some good preaching, and we all enjoyed his sermons very much. I am going after the benevolent collections now in earnest, as we have our protracted meetings out of the way. We already have considerable part of the money subscribed. I shall try to raise these assessments by personal effort. We have our committees, but I intend to work in private as well as in public. We have a good, loyal people here at Hesterville; all they need is developing. E. C. NEWBERN, P. C.

Stonewall, La.

The protracted meeting held at this place in August was the best held here in many years. Great good was accomplished. The preaching was done by Rev. P. M. Brown, the presiding elder of this district, who is well known and loved here. The sermons were of the pure gospel type—full of power. The morning services were especially blessed. All Christians, no matter of what denomination, joined in these services, and were built up in the most holy faith. There were several bright conversions, and a number who had been members of the Church for years received the assurance that they were children of God. The meeting was closed by Rev. W. R. Harvell, the faithful pastor, who had labored long and earnestly for the conversion of the unsaved and whose heart was made glad. Nine new members were received into the Church. Mrs. W. L. GILMER.

Many, La.

Perhaps a letter from the Many Charge will not be out of place; especially as I am closing out my fourth year, and must soon leave the field to other hands. Here at Many we have done some good work. We have built a handsome addition to the church, painted it on the outside, and papered it on the inside, and stained and varnished all the church furniture. As a result the building is now quite pretty and attractive. They have a good parsonage, which is very well furnished; and, best of all, a people as good as the best. We have had three protracted meetings this year, but they were not revivals. One of the appointments on the Many Circuit (Laring) will be moved to Oakdale. This appointment is composed of as fine Christian people as can be found anywhere; and they will make possible the building up of a good, strong station at Oakdale. But Many will still be a good place, and will take good care of a preacher. They deserve, and will, we are sure, receive a good man. There is something of sadness to a pastor who has served a people for a four-year term, in the coming of Conference, when he knows that he must move. But there is joy in the thought that Methodism is like a family, and that there is always work and always love. So we are ready to receive marching orders at Conference.

B. H. SHEPPARD, P. C.

Church Point, La.

Dear Doctor Meek: As a I about through with my protracted meetings for this season (four in all), with your permission, I would like to report some of the visible results. At Long Point we held our meeting under a large tabernacle. There were more than 500 people at many of the services. Brother M. Hebert did the preaching. There were two additions by certificate. The people were benefited and love Brother Hebert. Next we were at Branch. Brother C. C. Weir assisted me in this meeting. Four united with the Church on profession of faith. Brother Weir certainly endeared himself to the people at Branch. The next meeting was at Church Point, where Rev. B. D. Boddie assisted me. We had six additions to the Church on profession of faith. We closed our last meeting on Monday night at the Prudhomme church. Brother Boddie was with me here also. Fifteen were received into the Church on profession of faith, with one to be received later—all young people. We have had 30 accessions to the Church to date, all on profession of faith except three. We have some money pledged to paint our church at Church Point. As the rice harvesting season is now at hand, I expect to make an earnest effort to collect our Conference claims.—H. B. Vandenburg, P. C.

Bayou Pierre (Miss.) Circuit.

Please allow me space in the Advocate to tell of my work. In some respects we have thus far had a good year. We count ourselves fortunate in having had good help in our protracted meetings during the summer, and the results were good at each one of our churches. The following brethren came to us: Revs. J. Lloyd Decell, H. B. Watkins, R. H. Barr and J. T. Leggett. We regret very much that Brother Leggett, our beloved presiding elder, had to leave us (on account of having taken sick) before our Sweet Water meeting closed. On the evening of August 8, we received a most hearty pounding at the hands of our good people of the Center Point Church. I must confess that we were just a little excited when the buggies and wagons rolled up in front of the parsonage, but we soon overcame the excitement and invited all to come in. Dr. Meek, you would have enjoyed seeing this heavy-set preacher moving somewhat swiftly around the parsonage. I will not attempt to enumerate the nice things brought us, but will say that as a result of the pounding, we have enough sugar to last us till Conference, and a large quantity of rice and coffee. My horse looks more attractive, having recently received a new set of harness, which was presented by the good people of the Center Point and Pleasant Valley churches. We are thankful for the good things that have been given us, to one and all. That God may wonderfully bless and keep them is the prayer of their pastor. JASPER L. SMITH.

LET THE CANDIDATES IN LOUISIANA BESTIR THEMSELVES THAT THEY MAY BE PRIZE-WINNERS.

It will be noticed in the printed list of candidates below that there are no names except those from Louisiana. After consulting with the leaders in Mississippi, where thus far there had been practically no interest in the contest, we decided to settle with those who had sent in subscriptions from the State of Mississippi and discontinue the contest in that State.

The contest, however, is on in full blast in Louisiana. The leader is less than 150 votes ahead, and it might be said that the leader secured one-third of her votes within one week's time. You could put yourself at the top if you would just settle down to hard work and try. Let us hear from every candidate in Louisiana with a fine list of subscribers.

The following is a list of the four leaders:

From the Colporteur.

There is pressing need just now for every dollar due for books. Most of the dues are for small amounts, in each case, but the aggregate means much to the Colporteur. Some of these accounts have already run far over the time limit of three months. Therefore, it is sincerely hoped that all concerned who read this will remit promptly, "lest we forget."

Among the many good books (new ones) for fall and winter reading, we note for the preachers and intellectual laymen that great one by Dr. J. W. Lee, "The Religion of Science," the price of which is $1.50; and for the boys and girls of all ages, those charming books of the Willie Wyld Series—"The Voyage to Zanzibar," "Hunting Wild Game in Africa," "Lost in The Jungles"—50 cents each, postpaid. For these and others wanted, let us have orders promptly and rapidly, or invitations to "come with the books," and thus keeping us very busy till the Conferences.

A SOLUTION OF THE FARM LABOR PROBLEM.

Modern business methods of farming now make it possible for the southern planter to successfully solve that serious labor problem. He no longer needs to bother with unreliable, inefficient and consequently expensive hired laborers.

This solution of one of the gravest problems that confronts the southern planter is made by the use of Oil Tractors. No longer is one man confined to the capacity of one, two or four horses or mules. With one of these tractors he can go into the field and do the work that ordinarily requires from fifteen to thirty horses, depending on the size of the tractor he has.

This makes it possible for the farmer to do his work himself or with the aid of the one best man out of the entire number he ordinarily has needed. Thus, where he does need to hire help, he hires only the very best. And all his work is done by this best man or by himself. This in itself is a big item; it very materially increases the quality of the field work that is done. So that the use of these tractors decreases the annual labor cost and at the same time greatly increases the efficiency and quality of the work that is done. The engine expense is less than the feed bills for the work animals it displaces; thus helping to decrease the annual cost of operating the farm.

Interesting and valuable literature regarding the use of these tractors can be had by writing Hart-Parr Co., 330 R Lawler Street, Charles City, Iowa.

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

One progressive Men's Class is now using half a column in the county paper for announcements, class news, and helpful suggestions.

In the vocabulary of the Wesley Adult Classes all men are brothers. To its sympathy, compassion and aid, no other commendation is required than the need of a fellow-man for whom Christ died.

"The strength of an army does not consist in the number of men alone, as Xerxes discovered long ago, but in the kind of men—in their strength and courage, in their power of united action."

Many beautiful and helpful Rally Day exercises have been held, but quite a goodly number of schools have not yet won the "Harvest Home" blessing. However, October is quite as good a month as September for the accentuation and observance of this day.

One rather young woman, who has only had six days in school in all of her life, has organized a factory settlement into a really good Sunday school. They have no suitable room and meet out of doors close by the factory. Such interest, in the face of such odds, puts most of us to shame.

Mrs. J. J. Garner's fine Men's Class at Lula is doing a great work. They have sent a large and interesting collection of books, magazines, etc., to the State Penitentiary. Mr. Caswell, class president, writes of the good the class is doing along many lines and of its value to the town and church.

A bright and clever teacher of boys, who has some fine ones of her own, has stretched a tent right by the church, and all during these heated months has taught her lessons under it. She has thus kept them interested, and concentrated their attention on matters pertaining to the Bible and Sunday school.

Nicholas Murray Butler says: "The neglect of the English Bible on the part of the rising generation strikes out of their consciousness one element—the one that for centuries has been the controlling element in the production of our civilization and mine." Our people dare not neglect the reading and study of the Scriptures.

Christian activity is a necessary correlative of really successful teaching. Give a man, woman or child a task and you have won his interest as well as his energies. "Impression, minus expression, means spiritual loss." "Impression, plus expression, means the building of Christian character." Men will often tell you they have let the Church alone because the Church has not set them to doing a man's work.

To accomplish the real mission of the Sunday school, there are several forward steps to be taken: (1) a closer relationship must be secured between Church boards and the Sunday school; (2) more time must be given in which to do the work; (3) a sincere effort must be made for more adequate equipment; (4) trained leadership must be emphasized, and may be accomplished by: (a) Our colleges and seminaries, from which we should expect trained ministers and lay-workers, ready to assist the hungry people even now waiting to receive instruction; (h) Local Sunday schools, which should conduct training classes to increase their own teacher supply; (c) Training institutes, which should be established where the place is sufficiently large.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

As one of the rallying features for this fall, how would a parents' meeting do? Would it not be entirely practical to have a grand social at a suitable place, and have a "get-together meeting," serve refreshments, make speeches, and have a general understanding, and plan a forward move along co-operative lines? Surely nothing would mean more, and it could be accomplished at so little an outlay. The pastor could have a heart-to-heart talk with his co-laborers and the parents of the children under his pastoral care, and the teachers could talk to the parents on such subjects as their part in helping in lesson study, in discipline, and in nurture. The parents could also speak to the teachers on what they expect them to do for their children. What might such a meeting mean! Either just before or after the regular Sunday 'Rally Day' service, by all means, let us have the parents' meeting.

When we see a teacher and one member doing all the talking in the class, while the other members are called on to take no part, we are reminded of the social bore who doesn't give you a chance to put in a word sideways. If teaching is "causing to understand," and education is "drawing out," then the teacher of such a class is a failure. These silent members can't be helped until they are led to express themselves and actively to take hold of the lesson; and this can't be done by the teacher and one other running a talking bee. Sometimes we are persuaded that more Sunday school classes are talked to death than are killed by any other method, and this manner of their killing is far less humane. The common law of courtesy would demand that each member of the class have an equal say in the recitation period, as well as in the business meeting; but some teachers seem not to take this view of it, judged by some of the hearing of lessons that we witness.

As an illustration of what it means to teach Temperance in the Sunday school is seen in the following: Regular temperance lessons have been in our curriculum since 1891. Since that date the temperance cause has grown as hut few moral movements have ever grown, and to-day the Sunday school army is arrayed on the side of sobriety and prohibition almost to a man. Who can estimate the influence of this continuous temperance teaching upon the minds of growing children? The same is true of missions, Christian stewardship, and all forms of morals. Reaching the child when so young, and coming so close to him in the face-to-face contact of the class room, the capable teacher's influence upon his life is scarcely less than that of the pastor himself. Judges of courts and reformers have long ago learned that "formation is better than reformation," and that the Sunday school, next to the Christian home, is the greatest agency in creating Christian ideals and moral habits needed in our modern life. What would the world be without the Sunday school!

Our Sunday School Board has prepared a standard of excellence for our Sunday schools, which may be had from the Publishing House. The 100 per cent excellence is made by ten items, each grading 10 points, as follows: The Cradle Roll, Home Department, Wesley Adult Bible Class (organized and enrolled according to standard), Teacher Training Class, or Student's Graded Instruction, and the use of our own literature, Missionary Instruction and Offering, Definite Decision for Christ Urged, Annual Observance of Children's Day, and Offering as Required by our Discipline, Good Records, and a Session Every Sunday in the year. As surely as every builder needs a plan, every Sunday school should have a goal; and this standard should be the least that our schools in Louisiana should be content in attaining. It is printed in large type, suitable for hanging on the wall, and it should adorn every Sunday school auditorium. As yet we cannot state the price, but it is not on expensive paper, and we judge that the cost is but a trifle.

The Best Cough Syrup is Easily Made at Home

Costs Little and Acts Quickly.
Money Refunded if It Fails.

This recipe makes a pint of cough syrup, and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It stops obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—in a hurry, and is splendid for sore lungs, asthma, croup, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in gualacal and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this recipe, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe. This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled. Its low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Woman's Missionary Work

FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

There is great rejoicing in the North Mississippi Conference over the appointment of a deaconess for the work at Corinth. This is the first deaconess in our Conference, and the entire community rejoices with the pastor and the Church. Corinth is a fine field for this work, as there are one thousand girls employed in its factories, and many more in other activities. Miss Ethelyn Knapp, of St. Joseph, Mo., is "our deaconess," and all workers are asked to remember her in prayer, and give her encouragement in her new field of labor.

Our President, Mrs. W. W. Scales, Jr., is at home again after an absence of one month, spent in the invigorating climate of Michigan. She feels refreshed and renewed in spirit, and is ready to begin anew the work so dear to her and to the hearts of all consecrated workers in the Master's vineyard. Mrs. A. C. YEAGER.

ITEMS OF INTEREST FROM MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

There is one District Secretary in the Mississippi Conference who has not failed to let the Press Superintendent hear from her every week since their first correspondence, and she has something of interest to report each time. This is Mrs. J. R. Ellis, of Mount Olive. She is planning for a fine District Meeting, October 8-10, at Taylorsville. All auxiliaries in the Hattiesburg District will bear in mind this date, as it will serve as an announcement..... Misses Moulner and Lipscomb have returned to Kansas City to resume their work at Scarritt, which opened September 12..... The Hattiesburg churches are bearing the expenses of our deaconess candidate, Miss Maud Fall, who left for Kansas City with the above mentioned young ladies. Before her departure the Philathea Union gave her a shower and supplied many dainty and useful things. Mrs. B. E. Brister, District Secretary of the Brookhaven District, enjoyed a feast of good things at Monteagle during Missionary Week.

One of our Secretaries, Mrs. Haud, of Shubuta, has visited every auxiliary in her District, the Meridian, since the annual meeting.

A NEW SOCIETY AT WILLIAMSBURG.

In response to a call from Brother J. C. Chambers to go to Williamsburg, one of his churches, and help complete the organization of a Woman's Missionary Society, I went to Collins August 28, and after spending a few hours most pleasantly in the lovely home of Hon. D. A. McIntosh and family, Mrs. McIntosh and I, after being joined by Mrs. H. M. McIntosh and Mrs. W. U. Corley, started for the historic old town of Williamsburg, four miles out in the country. Through the kindness of Hon. H. M. McIntosh we made the trip in his auto over as "good roads" as can be found anywhere in the State. At Williamsburg we were met by a number of women and girls, and later by Brother Chambers who had been detained in Collins. Splendid talks were made by Mrs. D. A. and H. M. McIntosh and W. U. Corley; after which the Williamsburg society went into permanent organization with 12 earnest, consecrated members. Officers were elected, committees appointed, six subscribers secured for the "Missionary Voice," and 12 missionary "Helps" ordered. A fine beginning, don't you think? I am expecting this to be one of the best societies in the Hattiesburg District; they have the material. Brother Chambers is a "live wire" in the work of the Woman's Missionary Society, as well as in all other lines of church work. It was through his influence that this society was made possible. "He has a great circuit, and travels it." Sincerely, Mrs. J. R. ELLIS.

WEDDING BELLS.

The following appears in the Monthly Bulletin, published by the North Mississippi Conference Society: "Wedding bells will soon be ringing in missionary circles. After a service of five years, one of the foreign missionaries of our Conference will return to the home land. Absence has not conquered love, for her heart has proved true to one to whom her troth was pledged before she chose service in the Master's vineyard. Announcement of names would be previous at this time, but this will serve to incite guessing."

SOCIAL SERVICE IN HEATHEN LANDS.

There are 20,000 fallen women in Shanghai. A startling revelation, is it not? and yet Christ said, "Neither do I condemn thee; go, and sin no more." What depth of love and tenderness those few words contain! The world is still learning the beautiful lesson Jesus sought to teach on that memorable occasion. A number of Christian women decided to open a home for these poor, neglected creatures. As soon as its opening was noised abroad, the young girls and women began coming in numbers, and ere long the home was filled. The wife of one of the highest officials hearing of this home, and then visiting it, remarked, "No one but a Jesus person would do this," and no other would. This is only one home, many more are needed. As soon as the opportunity presents itself, let us be ready to embrace it.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SOCIETY.

The two Conference Corresponding Secretaries are sending out a circular letter to the Auxiliaries. They urge that our pledges be paid in full in both departments. If this is done, we feel that we can make liberal offerings during our Week of Prayer, November 17-24. Mary Keener Institute and our Home Mission School are looking to us for large gifts at this time. May our love be the measure by which we give. The great "Home Mission Campaign" has begun. Our Secretaries ask that we have a grand rally of all the Protestant denominations in our towns during one day of that week. "Let us labor with our might to make 'Our Country, God's Country.'"

MISS DAISY DAVIES.

We are exceedingly fortunate in securing Miss Daisy Davies for two weeks in November. She will travel through Louisiana attending our missionary institutes and District Meetings. It is a rare privilege to listen to Miss Daisy Davies; she is an inspiration to any meeting. Begin to plan and pray for these meetings now; they will occur after the 15th of November.

MRS. ALICE HARGROVE BAROLA, Agent, M. E. Church South, South Brook 1116, Louisville, Kentucky.

FROM LOUISIANA THIRD VICE PRESIDENT.

We had such a pleasant and profitable session of our Mission Study (class last Monday, finishing the book, "Conservation of National Ideals." It was novel in that it was a joint session of the Rayne and Crowley Circles. Five of the ladies from our neighboring town came over, Mrs. W. F. Johnston, the Third Vice President; Mrs. R. C. Holt, District Secretary, and Meses. Nolan, Harkins and Crandall. About twenty were present, and a most enjoyable social evening was spent. One striking feature was the recitation, "The Converted Brahman," by Mrs. J. W. Wynn, who has marked histrionic gifts. I thought that this might be suggestive to other adjoining towns, or in cities several circles could join advantageously.

Mrs. R. H. WYNN.

UNION OF AUXILIARIES.

At the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council, held in the city of our nation's government, in April last, the visitors from all over the country far outnumbered the Council members. Their attendance was faithful and their interest, earnest and intense. A petition from them was presented to the Council, requesting that definite and uniform action on the part of this law-making body be taken in regard to union, praying that the Council make binding the laws that unite the two departments of work. Though the Council reports that throughout the session the spirit of union seemed to grow apace, that love and faith found ways to remove the difficulties that unbelief might have magnified; yet in the auxiliaries the spirit of opposition seems stubborn and hard to remove. Some Home Mission societies have even disbanded rather than unite, and others utterly refuse to even listen to explanations. They maintain the ground that as long as union is not mandatory they will retain the existing order of things. It seems to be an inherent quality in some women's natures to love the pressure of a ruling hand, to require a certain measure of compulsion to induce them to recognize that they are free agents. We have followed our leaders—grand, noble, Spirit-filled women they are—and they have made no mistakes. Can we not follow all the way?

Mrs. A. C. YEAGER.

NEWS FROM OUR FOREIGN FIELDS.

Brazil.

The following unsolicited notice appeared in an article advertising government schools in Piracicaba: "Of schools in our city not directed by the government, Collegio Piracicabano is without doubt the best, and also one of the best of the state of Sao Paulo. It is designed exclusively for the female sex. It was founded in 1831 by the noble educator, Miss Martha H. Watts. At present, it is directed by the distinguished American teacher, Miss Lily A. Stradley. The results of the study of languages there are remarkable." Miss Margaret Simpson is doing fine work in the kindergarten connected with Central Institute in Rio. She is working under great disadvantages, not even having a musician. The need of better equipment is plainly seen.

Mexico.

Wanted at Once.—A trained kindergarten for Mexico City. The missionaries who were forced to leave Mexico on account of political disturbances are now returning to their work. Mrs. O'Beirne has returned to Durango, and Miss Sue Ford will be stationed there; also Misses Willson and Harper will return to Chihuahua as soon as the way is opened. Miss Case has returned to Mexico City. She has two men missionaries with her. Miss Capers will be stationed in San Luis. Earthquakes continue in Guadalajara. The spirit of unrest still hovers over the city. A new building is needed in Saltillo, one which will prove adequate for the future development of the school. Saltillo is the capital of Coahuila, and this state is considered to be the most advanced in educational matters. It is a city of culture and refinement, an excellent setting for the development of fine Christian character. It has been considered a place of comparative safety during the revolution, and it is hoped that this fact will lead to a material increase in population when the state of unrest is ended. Our Normal School is already quite popular, and a steady growth is predicted for its future.

Cuba.

Public examinations were held in Matanzas the middle of July; and of the one hundred and eighty aspirants for teachers' certificates, only two received the highest grade, and one of these was a fine bluff (Ark.) girl from the Irene Toland School. The young people of the Pine Bluff Auxiliary are to be congratulated upon having such a fine representative.

China.

The missionaries in China are asking for Sunday school cards. These cards need not be new or up to date. Gather them up and send to Miss Sophia Manns, Sungkong, China. Mr. Li, presiding elder of the Soochow District, recently conducted a week's service. Twenty-seven young women decided to come out on the Lord's side, and thirteen gave themselves for special service. McTyeire School is over crowded. Something must be done for its relief. Applicants are being turned away almost daily, and every child refused admittance may mean a soul lost for Christ. Kindergarten work is becoming very popular in China. Wu Ting Fang says: "The kindergarten is a new and very useful institution in China, and I welcome it as one of the agencies introduced for the making of a new China."

Korea.

An interesting story is told of the conversion of a young Korean who afterwards became a Sunday school superintendent. A colporteur passing through the little village in which this man lived, was so anxious to dispose of some of his New Testaments that he offered them for a very small sum. This young man finding them so cheap bought quite a number of them, and then used them for papering his house! One day his eye fell on the opposite wall, and he read John iii:16. The words seemed so wonderful to him that he determined to know more of this love. He was converted and is now an exceptionally fine character. What power the Word of God has!

Home Mission Week.

During Home Mission Week we are to study the conditions of our land, and see if we are ready for China to follow in our footsteps. Home Mission Week may bring some startling revelations to us. One thing we should pray for, and that is, that we may see the intimate relation existing between these two great branches of missions, and that one is dependent upon the other. May the observance of this week bring us to a deeper realization of God's love, and impress upon us the wonderful fact that we are "one in Christ Jesus."

Advocate Piano Club Delights Everybody

SOME TIME ago the Advertising Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate announced the formation of the Advocate Piano Club and extended a cordial invitation to all to join. The response was immediate and enthusiastic, even beyond our expectation, so that the Club has proven a big success from the very start. As some of the readers may have overlooked the original announcement, we repeat the objects of the Club in this issue for their special benefit. They are 1st—By clubbing our interests in groups of one hundred buyers, to secure the lowest wholesale price for each club member, thereby saving approximately one-third the cost on high grade pianos.

2nd—To obtain for club members the most advantageous terms of easy monthly or quarterly payments.

3rd—To remove every possible objection to the easy payment plan, and to protect the widow and the orphan by providing that in the event of your death after one-fifth of your purchase price has been paid in cash and the payments promptly met when due, all further payments are cancelled and your family is given a receipt in full.

4th—To insure the highest quality of instrument, fully guaranteed by an old and reliable house. Each club member has the privilege of returning the piano and getting back every dollar he has paid on it if a ten days' trial in his own home does not prove it to be exactly as represented. In addition, he is protected by the life time guarantee and the very liberal exchange privilege.

5th—To enable club members to dispose of their old pianos at the highest possible price in exchange for a new one or for a self-player.

6th—To secure for club members the protection afforded by the guarantees of Ludden & Bates, one of the oldest, largest and most reliable piano companies of America.

The Proof of the Pudding Is In the Eating.

Realizing the responsibilities which rest upon us we have organized the club in such a manner as to insure perfect satisfaction and absolute protection to every club member. We cannot afford to have anyone dissatisfied, so we give every member privileges which leave them absolutely nothing to be dissatisfied about.

The following letters from club members will give you some idea as to how well the club has accomplished its mission:

"I am more than pleased with the club piano which I recently purchased from you. It is better than I expected. All my friends who have tried it congratulate me on securing such an instrument."

"I do not see how we let so many years go by without this wonderful and perfect piece of mechanism (player piano)."

"The piano is giving perfect satisfaction. We recommend it to everyone we see."

"I have studied the plan very carefully and consider it a very liberal one. As to my piano, I consider it a splendid instrument and am proud to be in possession of it."

"Club piano received in good order. We are well pleased with it. Better and nicer than pianos sold here for from three hundred and fifty to five hundred dollars. Our little town is pretty well stocked with pianos of different makes, and it is considered that we have the best piano in town."

"I think my piano is just grand, and I feel more thankful every day that I have it. The Club plan is equally as good as the piano."

"I like the Club plan and think it excellent for those in moderate circumstances. We are highly pleased with the instrument purchased for the school here."

"I am pleased with the Club plan and more than pleased with my piano. Its tone is the sweetest and construction perfect."

"I am well pleased with my piano and wouldn't exchange it for any other."

"Several have said that it has the sweetest tone of any they have ever heard."

"I am perfectly satisfied, as I am paying for mine in a way I hardly realize."

"The Ludden & Bates piano is the only one I ever saw for the price that I would recommend to one of my pupils."

"To say we are pleased would but mildly express our feeling. Everyone is carried away with it."

The new Club catalog, beautifully illustrated and elegantly printed, has just been received from the publishers. We have a copy for you. Write for it to-day. Address:

WHAT MATTERS?

It matters little where I was born,
Or if my parents were rich or poor;
Whether they shrank from the cold world's scorn,
Or walked in the pride of wealth secure;
But whether I live an honest man,
And hold my integrity firm in my clutch,
I tell you, my brother, as plain as I can,
It matters much!

It matters little how long I stay
In a world of sorrow, sin and care;
Whether in youth I am called away,
Or live till my bones and pate are bare;
But whether I do the best I can
To soften the weight of adversity's touch
On the faded cheek of my fellow-man,
It matters much!

It matters little where be my grave,
On the land or on the sea,
By purling brook or 'neath stormy wave,
It matters little or naught to me;
But whether the Angel of Death comes down
And marks my brow with his loving touch,
As one that shall wear the victor's crown,
It matters much!

DO THE PREACHERS NEED IT?

By Dr. George P. Eckman, in the New York Christian Advocate.

A correspondent who says that he is a traveling salesman requests an editorial on the question, "Are our ministers drifting away from vital, definitely spiritual subjects in their discourses in these days; and if so, why?" He affirms that too many of the sermons to which he has listened of late have seemed to appeal "to the whims of the multitude," instead of "pointing lost men to the one and only possible way of salvation."

Another correspondent, who does not reveal his name or business, sends us an editorial from the Rochester Post-Express on "Going to Church," and asks that it be reproduced in our columns on the ground that "preachers need it." Perhaps the people also need it, and for the benefit of both pulpit and pew extracts from it are herewith presented:

"May not the anxiety which reverend gentlemen manifest to devise ways in which the church shall be more attractive furnish the reason why folks are seemingly more and more difficult to entice within the fold? The service must be made agreeable, the Sunday afternoon must deserve the name of 'pleasant,' lecturers offer all kinds of themes—some of them remotely connected with religion—as reason why people should go to church. The music is to be of the best; the sermon will be short; perhaps magic lantern views will help to enliven the proceedings. The secular is linked with the religious so intimately that sometimes the latter is almost lost sight of."

A story is inserted at this point which describes a clergyman delivering a series of discourses on popular works of fiction. After the course had reached its end some one sent the preacher a little volume which it was suggested would make as suitable a subject for the next address as any "best seller" on the market. It was the New Testament. The editorial continues:

"We go to church to worship and, if that purpose is lost sight of, all the social betterment ideas and lectures aiming at the improvement of the mind are beside the point. It would be interesting to compare the attendance at churches in which the idea of making the service border on the character of entertainment has been followed with what it used to be in the days when worship, and worship only, was the thing which drew people to the sanctuary. It is all very well to make the service attractive; but, if the service element tends to disappear, then the change is likely to do more harm than good. It is not social enjoyment that people ought to seek in church; the ideal of the minister should not merely be that of getting people away from the temptation of the streets. Recitations from the poets and beautiful music will be of little avail, if they do not form part of a direct and unmistakable preaching of the gospel. It is not by alluring people with the bait of enjoyment that their souls are to be won; it is by appealing to their sense of duty. To inveigle people into church under specious pretexts is not likely to win them to prayer, and unless they pray they might just as well stay at home. Indeed, a man of character may very reasonably resent the trick—for such he is likely to esteem it—of getting him into church with a promise of some entertainment. But the minister with a high ideal of his responsibility, who bids him to come and hear the Word of God, will command respect, and stands a better chance of winning the man for a church-goer. We have had too much of the meretricious and the ad captandum in our churches; why not try the sound and substantial fare which won the hearts and minds of a generation ago? The Bible, explained by a minister in solemn earnest, is infinitely more interesting than talk about magic lantern slides. If we want men to come to church for their souls' good, why not appeal to conscience?"

The Editor of The Christian Advocate has been so recently a pastor that he cannot yet bring himself to make criticisms of the pulpit of his day, unless they seem to be demanded by serious evils which he would have rebuked before his own congregation. Moreover, it is the announced policy of the paper to adapt itself to the people rather than to the preacher. But there is enough ground for the complaints of these two correspondents to justify a specific appeal to the ministry. The temptation to seek an audience by methods our fathers would have scorned is very seductive. A clever man can produce cogent arguments for yielding to it. But usually the men who employ the greatest skill and ingenuity in securing large congregations by freakish performances could have gained them without resorting to meretricious expedients, by expending the same degree of "brains" in legitimate sermon making, and the same amount of energy in much needed pastoral work.

RELIGIOUS PAPERS IN THE HOME.

By T. Chalmers Potter, D.D.

A pastor has no aid, in these days of extended knowledge, the equal of a good family religious paper. It is the assistant pastor writ large. It preaches to a family every day, while he does it twice a week. His words, however well received on Sunday, leave an effect dependent on the good or ill use of memory. Like the elder son's relation to the household of the prodigal, the newspaper is ever with the family, and is referred to every day. Many church officers, sons of households where the weekly religious newspaper was an old and cherished feature, are providing nothing to take its place in their own families. Their children show the loss. Whether church members or not, they are often woefully ignorant of the Bible; scarcely knowing the distinctive objects of their own denomination as among others; know little of mission fields allotted in providence to their Church, nor of the cries therefrom for help, which they can usually hear about alone through their religious newspaper; are unacquainted with what is transpiring in the religious as distinct from the secular world; are in ignorance of movements philanthropic, evangelistic or otherwise, that are profoundly stirring the hearts of zealous Christians to-day.

The array of facts, appeals and discussions that move others are lost for them, since they have no religious paper to lay these things fully before them every week. All that influence, worked so thoroughly into some lives, as yeast goes through every particle of a batch of dough, is missing in them. We cannot interest and lay hold of their sympathies in religious services as we can among those who have been familiar with the lights and shadows of religious activities from their youth. This information is not obtained from religious and devotional books. There is not the continuity of effect to them that comes with the portable, convenient, informal, fresh and persistent weekly.—From Zion's Herald.

Life is made up of things that defy all valuation by this world's standard—things the worth of which can only be expressed in that mystic coinage that is stamped with the image of One wearing a crown of thorns, and has for its superscription, "Ye did it unto Me." And it is missing these things that degrades and vulgarizes life.—Percy C. Ainsworth.

ARE THINGS ALWAYS JUST WHAT THEY SEEM?

Dear Doctor: Did you read Bishop Guin's sermon, published in the Playmate in the morning of September 27? This sermon was delivered at the opening of the new Christian University in State Street, New Orleans. Well, I read that sermon and there were some very interesting things in it to me. He told me again and then departed from it as soon as he could. How he could get a sermon in education out of the fact in which some expressed his indignation at the departure of the Bishop because Mary poured the anointment of oil on him, was not easy to understand. But then I do not suppose the Bishop cared so much about the fact. He was making for a "pretext" to say some things. Well, he said some things all right. He said that there are three systems of education, and that two of these are reasonable, while one of them is not reasonable. One of these systems is the atheistic, another is the Christian, and the other is the public system. The atheistic is reasonable, because there are some people that do not believe in God and that do not believe in the soul. So the atheistic system is the reasonable system for people who do not believe in God and who do not believe in the soul. The Christian system is reasonable, because there are some people who do believe in God and who do believe in the soul, and so the Christian system is reasonable for these. The public system is like that there is a God and that there is a soul, but does not allow anything to be said about God, and the soul, so it is unreasonable for both classes. It is unreasonable for atheists because they do not hold to the idea of a God. It is unreasonable for Christians because it does not teach the children about God and their responsibility to him. That looks like pretty good argument, but who is responsible for the public schools in this matter? Is it the responsibility of the child to God, if it is not the Romanist people who want to have everything run their way?

Then he started in and gave it to the atheistic plan of education in good fashion, and said that this kind of education is to be found in the public schools of France. He said that they used to call the public education in France "neutral," "nonsectarian," "undenominational," etc. Then he quoted a statement made in 1904 by one of the French cabinet ministers, in which this minister confessed that they had been calling this atheistic system of education by these other names to fool the people, but now he was willing to confess that this had all the time been a ruse and now they were willing to say that the system of public education in France was purely atheistic.

After saying this, the Bishop said some things about Christian education which any good Christian minister preaching on Christian education might have said. Then he began to pay his worthy respects to the system of public school education as it is found in America. He said that he was afraid of the American system of education. Then he quoted from some public school teacher who called the public school system "idiotic" and the most momentous failure in our American life.

I wonder if that prelate thinks he can stick that down the American people. The Bishop's authority said that it "is mal-educating or absolutely harrasing nearly 18,000,000 children every year." This is illuminating news, indeed. We ought to become frightened and we ought to put that thing out of business right now. Then the Bishop gave us the illuminating information that the system is un-American, because Catholics are required to pay a tax to support it. Then he showed why it was that he had something to say about atheistic education and used France as an illustration of a country where they have that kind of education. He said that this education is called by the same names that the atheistic education was first called by in France, and that we will likely find after a while that we have been given atheistic education all the time here on. The next thing that the Bishop said was that our country leads the world in crime, because we charge all of these things on the system of public education.

He said that public education is un-American, because Catholics are asked to support it and that they do not want it. This does not seem to be in keeping with the facts in the case, because everybody knows that our public schools are full of Catholic children, and that many of the teachers are Catholics. Now it may be that the president does not want to have the public schools because when people have their hands given genuine enlightenment they do not believe in the truthfulness of St. Roman's chapel, Sacred Heart of Jesus and a thousand Virgin Marys. The public schools do not teach them to believe in these things, but teaches them that all this is stuff and foolishness. The Catholic people in general seem to want the public schools because they send their children to them. It certainly cannot be said that it is un-American that they have to pay for something that they get a benefit from.

Then he suggested in this sermon that our public schools are atheistic and deplored the fact that nothing is taught about God and that religion does not have a place in the public schools. All good Christian people are sorry that there is no religion in the public schools. But whose fault is it? I should like to know. The Romanist clergy has done all that it can to keep anything that looks like religion out of the public schools, and now here a Romanist Bishop turns around and says that this is a terrible thing. I am glad to see that he is beginning to see the error. Let them get to work and try to come to some kind of an agreement with the other people of the country about putting religion into the schools. It is a notorious fact that his kind raise a racket and a fuss every time anything is done to put religious instruction in the public schools.

As far as his criticism about the crime record of the United States and the divorce record is concerned, one need only to look to the Latin American countries where Romanism has always had the right of way where people are found living in open adultery and a large percentage of the people are illegitimate offspring. I do not suppose the boasted Catholic education is responsible for such conditions. What do you suppose is responsible for these things? Then I have been wondering why it is that such things as the Mafia and the Camorrista are to be found in good old Italy, right under the shadow of the Vatican, and where a priest has been recently convicted of sharing in the doings of the Camorrista. Certainly something else, beside public education as it is found in America must be responsible for such things.

Then he said that there were a great many of the children of this country who do not learn anything of God in the schools and that they do not learn anything of God in the churches, because they do not go to the churches. That is all sadly true. But how about Catholic Mexico, with the Virgin of Guadalupe and the Virgin of Remedios? There are people there who know the virgins, but they do not know that Jesus died for their sins. How about all Romanist countries where more is said of saints and virgins than about Christ himself?

Doctor, these Romanists do not seem to be leaving a stone unturned to undo our American institutions. Neither are they apparently leaving a stone unturned to get a hold on the government and American affairs in general. Our Protestant people need to wake up. We have a good many Catholic people who are our good friends and who are related to us in one way and another, and our relations with these are pleasant; but we do not want to let these gowned gentlemen, with all their schemes to get the control of affairs, go too far. The Governor of our State gave his official presence at the time that this sermon was delivered. And you know how the President has been moving and bringing his military speaking in this crowd of gowned gentlemen. We believe that they are intimidating the people with their arrogant teaching. Will you let them get things into their heads so that they can run them as they themselves? I am not sure that we will let us be led by them in the street. They will step up on us every time they get a chance. I never could understand how it was that a certain convent in Nashville got an advertisement into the Nashville Advocate in the winter last. This was there about with the advertisement of a school of sister churches. This was in circulation through a Methodist paper in Methodist parishes to send their daughters to a Romanist institution. The Nashville Advocate is read almost entirely by Methodist people. Why this advertisement there?

Now, you may not want to publish this. If you do not, I will not say. Some people may think that I am narrow. That may be true. But I just got to thinking about these things and thought that I would write it for about them.

Yours ever sincere

WILLIAM

THE CHURCH AND THE MAN OF TO-DAY.

By Rev. M. M. Black, M. A.

It does not take a close observer to note that a large per cent of the men of our day take little or no interest in the work of the Church, and are seldom seen in the house of God. Men are greatly in evidence at the social clubs, the theaters, the moving picture shows, at political gatherings and business men's conventions, but alas! they are not in evidence in any large number at the services of the sanctuary. On a certain Sunday morning during the year 1911, a Sunday-school worker on his way to church counted not less than one hundred and fifty men and boys over fifteen years of age on the streets and loafing around the drug stores within a distance of three blocks, while at the Sunday-school, which is one of the leading ones in a Southern city of eight or nine thousand inhabitants, the total attendance, including men and women, boys and girls, was about one hundred and fifty. Very few of those whom said observer saw on the streets that morning attended services anywhere, and there were scores of loafers in other parts of the city of whom the same was true.

During the past winter the "Men and Religion Forward Movement" made careful investigation of many matters pertaining to the public welfare, and especially in regard to church work and religion. In seventy-five North American cities having a combined population of twenty million. Among the facts brought to light are the following: "The membership in all the Protestant Churches consists of 20.7 per cent of men, 34 per cent of women, 0.2 per cent of boys between the ages of twelve and eighteen, and 9.1 per cent of girls between the ages of twelve and eighteen. Sixty-five per cent of those who attend the Sunday morning services in the Protestant Churches are women, the morning attendance being sixty-five per cent of the total attendance for the day." This is a pretty fair index of conditions that prevail all over the country, except in some rural districts where a much larger per cent of men attend church than in the cities and towns. Says Mr. John F. Dobbs, in his recent work, "The Modern Man and the Church": "There are about three million less men in the Protestant Church in the United States than there are women and girls. Among the 'absent' list there are many more men than women. Here lies the challenge of the Church."

Various reasons are assigned for the neglect of the Church by multitudes of men in our day. One is that the average working man, because of exhausting labor through the week, is too tired on Sunday morning to go to Church, but remains in bed, or lounges about the house. Unfortunately; modern industrialism is so exacting in its demands upon the time and strength of the toiler that in many cases he is worn out when Saturday night comes, and unless he is very devout, the temptation to spend the Sabbath in loafing or pleasure-seeking is not to be resisted. A large number of men in the employ of railroad companies and manufacturing concerns are kept busy even on the Sabbath, and though they may desire at first to attend church, being deprived of the privilege, they soon grow indifferent.

It is scarcely to be doubted that some men neglect the house of God because they are wedded to evil habits or secret sins, and are likely to be made uncomfortable by something in the sermon, when sin is held up in its true colors; and hence they remain away.

In many cases men stay away from church for social reasons, the complaint being not infrequently made that the churches are run in the interest of the well-to-do, and that a working man receives scant courtesy when he goes to church. Unfortunately, this is true of some churches, which are little better than exclusive ecclesiastical clubs for the entertainment and edification of high-flyers and social butterflies. Many a church of to-day is suffering because of a lack of fellowship, of real brotherhood. Plain, every-day workmen know when they are welcome, and a cordial greeting puts them at their ease.

The failure of many professing Christians to walk uprightly is often the reason that some men assign for non-attendance and lack of interest in the Church. Coming in contact day by day with church members who are dishonest and tricky or selfish, hard-hearted and hypocritical, they conclude that religion is but an empty form and the Church a useless thing. While such an excuse is often but a mere pretense for neglect, nevertheless the faults, and follies, and sins of church members do lessen the respect of the world for the Church, and foster indifference and skepticism. Men on the outside are asking: "What's the good of church membership, anyway?" A deacon in a church was seen walking down a New England village street, and some one said: "There goes the founder of the Atheist Society." Of the existence of the society the deacon did not know; but his wrong life had largely led its members into unbelief. The Church of to-day, if she is to influence and win men, "must produce men and women above the average for moral worth and spiritual life," she must insist on a high standard among her members.

If man were merely a high order of animal with no outlook upon life except for this world, his neglect of the Church and of what she has to offer might be pardonable in some degree. There is, sad to say, a vast amount of practical atheism in our day. On every hand, while men profess to believe in God, they are forgetting him, and while claiming to accept the Bible, thousands are living as if there were no hereafter, as if the Judgment and the immortality of the soul were but myths.

Although we live in an age of wonderful inventions, and although many things have changed, the eternal truths of God have not changed. Human need is the same in all ages. Men of to-day need deliverance from the guilt and bondage of sin no less than did our forefathers; they need the inspiration of noble ideas; they need the fellowship of godly souls; they need strength from the unseen but ever present Christ in order to "live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world." Nowhere except in and through the Church with her Bible and her living Savior can man find an answer to the deep questionings of his heart as to the nature of God and the means of approach unto him, as to what duty is, and as to the mysteries of death and eternity.

How is the modern man to obtain the spiritual blessings that he so much needs except through worship, except through communion with the divine Lord, who came to be the Friend and Helper of every man? Rightly has it been said that "worship is as necessary for human growth as is the light for the plant, or the pole for the magnetic needle. It is the crying need of the day. When a man fails to bow in reverence before God, he is either a hardened wretch, or God has forsaken him." The loss of reverence, of interest in worship is one of the most lamentable signs of the times. The strenuous life of our day makes it imperative that business men should obtain the mental relaxation and spiritual invigoration that come only through worship, through the proper observance of the Sabbath.

The Bible, even in this twentieth century with all our boasted progress, is not an outgrown book. The world will never get beyond the ethics of the Sermon on the Mount, nor beyond the matchless personality of Jesus of Nazareth. David said of the sword of Goliath on one occasion: "There is none like that; give it me." In like manner, we may say of the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, "There is none like it."

The modern business man, despite his absorption in material enterprises, has the same spiritual needs as other men. While he is apt to be stoical in his concealment of the disappointments that fall to his lot, not having the support and comfort of the gospel, he feels his disappointments and sorrows all the more keenly, and is poorly prepared to face and endure them. Because of the intense strain upon character and the manifold temptations to which they are subjected in this strenuous age, many business men cannot stand the strain, and go to pieces morally and spiritually, some even going so far as to commit suicide because of losses and failure. Let us not forget that no matter how successful and charitable and public-spirited men may be, they are lost in the darkness of sin and doubt until brought into the kingdom of heaven.

Dr. N. D. Hillis relates the following pathetic incident which reveals how sadly business men need the help and comfort of the Christian Church. He was called one day to an elegant mansion in a large city, the owner of which was approaching his three-score years and ten. In the parlor lay the coffin of his dead daughter. On the other side sat his chum, his closest friend. Suddenly the sorrowing man broke into speech, and this was the substance of his soliloquy: "There is nothing in these things. You and I have been living for a good time and success. We have gotten everything we could during the week. We have been good poker players on Saturday night, we have spent our Sundays in the automobile, and driving, and social pleasures. We have put the club and the bank first, and my son has disgraced me with his shameless marriage, and my daughter is dead. I tell you," he said, using his friend's name, "there is only one place in which to bring up a family, and that is the Christian Church. There is only one way to use Sunday for children, and that is to take them to Church. With money, and wine, and poker, and pleasure all day Sunday, and parties all Sunday night, my family has been ruined. People don't know what the result of this kind of living will be until the end comes—but I know."

Because the man of to-day is beset behind and before with temptation, he needs all the more the character-building, character-fortifying power and influence of the Christian Church. The business world is demanding as never before that men who serve in the banks and department stores and factories and on the railroads and in the shops shall be honest and sober and trustworthy. How shall they measure up to this lofty standard except as they are trained and developed in Christian manhood through the agency of the Sunday school and the Church, which are the greatest agencies for the making of true manhood in all the world? The social clubs of our day do not tend to build men up in righteousness, but on the contrary, often help to debauch and corrupt them.

It is a fact much to be regretted that the work of the Church is so sadly underestimated and unappreciated by the average man of to-day. To quote again from Mr. John F. Dobbs: "The world has not yet learned the value of a saved life, of the spiritual education of a child, of the comforting of a broken heart, or the giving of hope to the dying. The minister and the Church deal wholly with the hidden values of morals, ideals, courage, peace, hope, and comfort. From these all other values flow, but the average business man is too blind to see that this is the case."

If the Church of our day would grip men, it must exhibit a religion of action and helpful service. It is only the going Church that will be a growing Church. A few years ago a certain labor leader, who tried in vain to get the clergymen of his city to aid in securing the passage of a child labor bill, said at last: "I hate spirituality."

The Church has often failed to do her duty to the poor and the unfortunate, when her members should be the first to carry relief and comfort. Instead of being a life-saving station, she has in many instances become a select hospital for sick Christians, with no aggressive evangelism.

The Church of to-day offers big-hearted, courageous, many men a place of service, noble work for God and humanity. She needs the strong, aggressive, far-sighted men of this generation to carry on her work, to push her conquests. The business men of to-day constitute a Niagara of power, if only they can be harnessed into service. One duty of every pastor is to discover the hidden possibilities of service in men, and put them to work for the Master.

Many men of our time are adrift on the seas of worldliness and intemperance and materialism, and are fast going down to ruin. These men are lost to the Church and to the kingdom of God. The Church cannot be true to her mission, unless she is doing her utmost to save and utilize every man and woman within the range of her influence. Who among us would be rash enough to say that present conditions cannot be improved? No true pastor will rest content until he has done his best to reach every unsaved man in his parish. The personal touch counts most.

"Tis not a cause of small import

The pastor's care demands:

But what might fill an angel's heart,
And filled a Savior's hands."

THE GIFT OF LAUGHTER.

The Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, the celebrated Brooklyn divine, was visiting the famous London preacher, the Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon.

After a hard day of work and serious discussion, these two mighty men of God went out into the country together for a holiday. They roamed the fields in high spirits like boys let loose from school, chatting and laughing and free from care.

Dr. Cuyler had just told a story at which Mr. Spurgeon laughed uproariously. Then suddenly he turned to Dr. Cuyler and exclaimed, "Theodore, let's kneel down and thank God for laughter!" And there, on the green carpet of grass, under the trees, two of the world's greatest men knelt and thanked the dear Lord for the bright and joyous gift of laughter.

"God never gave man a greater gift," says Marshall P. Wilder, "than the power to make others laugh, unless it is the privilege of laughing himself. We honor, revere and admire our great soldiers, statesmen and men of letters; but we love the man that makes us laugh. The laugh-maker is a public benefactor, for laughter is the salt of life, and keeps the whole dish sweet."—Michigan Christian Advocate.

The United States produces 31,000,000 barrels of salt annually. Collier's Weekly is responsible for the statement that this is one commodity that has not advanced in price during the last fifty years.

Church News

Birmingham College has nineteen ministerial students this year.

The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will hold their mid-year meeting at Greenwood, S. C., from October 31, through November 3.

Bishop J. C. Kilgo will dedicate the Grace Episcopal Church of Atlanta, Ga., on Sunday, October 9. The pastor of this enterprising flock is Dr. C. O. Jones.

The Wesleyan Female College, of Macon, Ga., opened with an enrollment of about 300 students, and it is stated that there are yet others to come. This historic institution seems to grow stronger and more useful as the years pass.

At the recent session of the St. Louis Conference Rev. H. P. Crowe, who had been serving the Farmington District, was stationed at Fredericktown, Mo., which is the seat of Marvin Collegiate Institute. Rev. J. M. Bradley was returned to Sikeston.

The Florida Christian Advocate of September 26 carried upon its cover page a most excellent picture of Dr. W. L. Clifton, the president of Southern College. The many Mississippi friends of Dr. Clifton will be pleased to know that the institution of which he is the head had a most auspicious opening on August 24.

Dr. George R. Grose, pastor of Grace Church, Baltimore, whose election to the presidency of De Pauw University, at Greencastle, Ind., was mentioned in our columns last week, has signified his acceptance. He is considered exceptionally well qualified for the position.

The fourth volume of "Holston Methodism," by Dr. R. N. Price, has just been issued by the Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South. It contains an introduction by Dr. B. Sullins. The Methodists of the Holston country have made a history well worth writing, and Dr. Price has most admirably performed the needed service.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix has recently offered Bishop Capdler some valuable additions to the collection of Wesleyana which is being gathered in the Wesley Memorial Building of Atlanta. Both of these chief pastors are deeply interested in the preservation of Methodist history and in the collection of relics connected with noted men and events of our Church in the past.

Bishop E. D. Mouzon, according to report, has gained forty pounds since his election to the episcopacy. This increase in weight has come in spite of hard work and a large amount of travel. Perhaps taking him away from the student's desk has contributed to this result.

The Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate says: "The Youth's Companion is authority for the statement that during the last year eight churches were built and thirty saloons went out of business each day. Thus does God's kingdom march triumphantly on." Still there are those who are such thorough pessimists that they insist that the world is growing worse instead of better.

Rev. Merritt J. Cofer, the business manager and assistant editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, died suddenly in Atlanta on September 29. He had gone to his office as usual in the morning, and soon after his arrival there was seized with the attack which speedily took him away. Brother Cofer was a strong, resourceful, manly man, and will be greatly missed. He was an esteemed member of the North Georgia Conference, and was seventy-four years of age. We sympathize with the Wesleyan Christian Advocate and Georgia Methodism in the loss which they have sustained.

Bishop J. H. McCoy was hurt in a railroad wreck on the L. & N., five miles north of Athens, Ala., on Tuesday morning, October 1. His shoulder was severely sprained, and his injuries are considered serious, but not dangerous. It is thought, however, that all his engagements will likely have to be canceled for three or four weeks. The wreck was burned, and the Bishop lost his baggage in the fire. The whole Church will sympathize with this beloved chief pastor in his misfortune, and feel grateful that his valuable life was spared. We trust that his period of disability will be of brief duration.

A London press dispatch of October 3, says: "The opening of the new central hall of the Wesleyan body at Westminster to-day brought together not only the leading representatives of that denomination, but those of other churches, as well as dignitaries from the London municipalities. The festivities connected with the inauguration will be spread over a fortnight. The ceremonies began with a religious service in the great hall of the new structure, which is to be officially recognized as the head chapel of the Westminster circuit, under the ministry of the Rev. John E. Wakerley. The dome of the magnificent building provides a new landmark for London. It towers 200 feet above the street, and is the third largest in the city."

The Waynesville (N. C.) Courier in a recent issue paid the following deserved tribute to one of the most capable and energetic workers in Southern Methodism: "Dr. James Cannon returned Wednesday and, as usual, rushed to his office and eagerly began dispatching his work and business. We have never known a more prodigious worker than Dr. Cannon, or one who could do more in a given time, or one who had clearer views and handled large undertakings more methodically and effectually. Dr. Cannon is bringing things to pass. Indeed, but few realize or appreciate what he is accomplishing. By and by, they will know. The great Southern Chautauqua is most fortunate in having a man to manage its affairs who can measure up to the tremendous undertaking."

THE METHODIST TRAINING SCHOOL.

The Methodist Training School began its seventh session on September 12th at ten o'clock. Many of the old students and a large number of new ones met with friends from the city in the library where the opening exercises were held. The Scripture lesson was read by Dr. E. B. Chappell. In offering the prayer Dr. Chappell prayed earnestly that the students might lose their lives in service to the Master. This seemed to be the dominant note of the program. The address of welcome was made by Miss Zadie Young. In a few well chosen words she welcomed the new students to all of the privileges of the institution. She spoke particularly of the delights of the class work, the joys of the social hour, the exhilaration of the gymnasium practice, and the helpfulness of the religious services. She made special mention of the strength that has come to the students as a result of using the prayer rooms.

Dr. G. H. Detwiler delivered a most eloquent and thoughtful address on "Our Obligation at Home." Dr. Detwiler is strictly modern in his interpretation of the question of missions. He draws no distinction between home and foreign work, but emphasizes with all strength both of these departments of the one great work of missions. He presented the life of a Christian worker as one full of trials and difficulties, but abounding in joy and peace.

The other address was delivered by Dr. Ed. F. Cook, Foreign Secretary of the Board of Missions. His subject was "Our Obligation Abroad."

He portrayed in graphic and forceful language the present-day conditions in each of the foreign fields and urged a ready response on the part of our strongest young men and women. He closed with an impassioned appeal not only for missionaries to go to the foreign fields, but for a more ready response on the part of the Church at home to the great and growing demands of the coming kingdom.

Misses Ella K. Hooper and Willie Lee Rowan, of Louisiana, and Misses Julia Carter, Maude Pope, Maud Wiggs and Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Cain of Mississippi, have entered for training. These young people have begun their work in real earnest and will no doubt greatly profit by the splendid advantages which are afforded in the Training School and in the City of Nashville.

Dr. John R. Mott has declared that the most important work of the present day Church is the thorough training of the young men and young women for Christian service. Let us, therefore, not forget to pray for our Training School, that it may be fully equipped for its responsible work.

GALLOWAY MEMORIAL FUND FOR THE OLD PREACHERS.

We trust the brethren of the Mississippi Conference, and especially the superintendents of our Mississippi Conference Sunday schools, will not forget the earnest plea of the Joint Board of Finance, that the first Sunday in November be observed in all our Sunday schools as "Galloway Memorial Day." The collection which the Board asks to be taken on that day we hope will reach the sum of $1500. The fund will be a memorial to our late beloved Bishop Galloway, to be known as the "Galloway Memorial Endowment Fund for Superannuated Preachers."

The thanks of the Board are hereby extended The Commercial Appeal, of Memphis, Tenn., for its lengthy notice of this Memorial Day. Contribution envelopes and conditional programs will be mailed every charge within the next two weeks.

Brethren, help us to help these old preachers!
Yours faithfully,

NOLAN B. HARMON.

It is claimed that reports are being circulated in China that the United States is soon to adopt old Mexico as a part of this Nation. As a result thousands of Chinamen have recently gone to Mexico with the hope of thus being absorbed into the United States.

The University of Missouri claims the oldest printing press in the United States actually in service. It is a Ramage press, and was made in 1787. It was given to the Missouri School of Journalism a short time since by Mr. A. H. Everett, of Kansas City.

Leonardi da Vinci's masterpiece, "Mona Lisa," which was stolen from the Louvre Museum in Paris last year, is reported to have been found recently in the home of a man of modest means in Russia. Expert detectives, who have been working on the case, give as their opinion that the thief was employed by an art collector of unlimited means, who expected later to get possession of the great painting.

In the primary held in New Orleans last week the following men, who represent the administration forces of the Crescent City, were declared the party nominees for the offices of Mayor and Commissioners, to serve under the new commission form of government: For Mayor, Hon. As an invited guest of the Chicago University and other institutions, Prof. Caspar Rene Gregory, of the University of Leipzig, Germany, traveled nearly 23,000 miles in the United States and Canada during the last year. Prof. Gregory is said to be the only American who holds a professorship in any of the great German Universities.

Thirteen thousand employes of Southern railroads are to receive a 10 per cent raise in wages as a result of the decision of the arbitrators, Presiding Judge Martin A. Knapp, of the Commerce Court, and Charles P. Neill, United States Commissioner of Labor, who rendered their decision last Thursday. For some time a general strike had been threatened by the employes, but it is claimed that both the laborers and the railroad owners are satisfied with the decision.

Colonel L. M. Mauns, of the U. S. Army Medical Corps, in an address before the Association of Military Surgeons in Baltimore, Md., last week, declared that alcohol, both as a medicine and a beverage, should be barred from the Army and Navy. He said that almost every crime committed in the Army is due to drink, and that incompetency, both among officers and soldiers, is almost always due to this cause. He would make abstinence compulsory in the Army and Navy.

An effort is being made by certain railroads of the south to influence the school boards to adopt as a part of the public school curriculum the study of railroading. This is, indeed, the age of vocational education, but it is our opinion that it is too much so. The purpose of our educational system should be first to make a broad minded,

It is claimed that food speculators now have more than $14,000,000 worth of dairy products in cold storage, which will be sold to the consumers at the highest possible market price. There is in the United States a well organized business of buying butter and eggs during the plentiful season and holding these products out of the market during the summer, thus keeping up the cost of these table necessities at the time when they ordinarily would be cheap, and also enabling the holders to dictate the price during the winter months.

It has been announced that there will be no Glidden Tour this year. The Tour, which is designed to be conducted annually in the interest of good roads, was to have been made the last of October and the first of November. Two reasons are given for its being canceled for this year: The fact that the few dozen drivers wanted to be at home to vote on election day, and that the manufacturers of gasoline-burning cars were angered because an electric-power car was used as a pathfinder. We question whether the cause of good roads has been injured by the Tour being annulled.

Vilhjalmur Stefansson, who recently discovered what is claimed to be a new race, called the "blonde Eskimos," desires that the new race be quarantined against both commerce and religion. He claims that if missionaries go there they may spread measles, and an average of fifty per cent of the Eskimos who have measles die from the effects of the disease. He says that this strange race is living comfortably without the blessings of the commercial world, and that it has a religion of its own. Does their religion teach Christ? If not, then it is better for the whole race to know Christ and perish than to live and at last die in darkness.

Nathan Straus, a physician and philanthropist, in his report before the International Congress of Hygiene and Demography last week, claimed that of the 2,200 infants that were fed during the last year on an exclusively sterilized milk diet, only one died, and that one from pneumonia fever. This record, in the face of statistics showing that an average of one out of every four infants born die before reaching one year of age, is remarkable. Certainly, if 2,200 infants can live in New York City for one year on sterilized milk, then Dr. Straus' claim that it is inhuman to jeopardize a child's life by feeding it anything else is worthy of some consideration.

In spite of the claim that the story of Barbara Frietchie is fiction, Frederick, Md., has decided to erect a monument to her memory, claiming that her name coupled with the poem written by Whittier has done more than any other one thing to advertise the town. Who would have ever heard of Frederick, Md., except for the fact that every school boy's hair stands on end as he reads:

"Up from the meadows rich with corn,
Clear in the cool September morn,
The clustered spires of Frederick stand,
Green-walled by the hills of Maryland.
Round about them orchards sweep,
Apple and peach tree fruited deep,
Fair as the garden of the Lord
To the eyes of the famished rebel horde."

HOBSON WILL SPEAK.

The Anti-Saloon League and Prohibitionists generally have set Thursday, October 24, during Fair week, as the date for their State Conference at Jackson. Sixty-five of the 78 counties have been organized by the League Superintendent, Dr. G. W. Eichelberger, with county and precinct committees. These committeemen want a State Conference, where they can confer and agree upon uniform concerted action. In this way some counties can get the benefit of the plans so successfully adopted by those counties that have practically wiped out the liquor sales.

The Conference will be held in a tent within the Fair Grounds that will seat 800, from 3 to 12 a. m. Bishop H. C. Morrison will address the Conference. Bishop Morrison is a member of the National Board of Trustees of the Anti-Saloon League of America, and is a prince of platform speakers. At 8 o'clock p. m. Hon. Richmond P. Hobson, a member of Congress from Alabama, of Merrimac fame, will deliver his address on "Driving Liquor Out of the Nation."

This is a great opportunity for Mississippians. The Conference in the forenoon will be presided over by Capt. W. T. Ratliff, Chairman of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League. Hundreds of Committeemen and hundreds of Prohibitionists are expected to be present.

Dr. Eichelberger has just returned from an eight-days' trip to the Gulf Coast. He says that law enforcement is being well looked after there by the committees and the courts. Recently, at Gulfport, not a single indicted 'blind tiger' escaped heavy punishment of both fine and imprisonment, and they included the white ring leaders at Gulfport, Biloxi and Pass Christian. He says that when Jackson and Vicksburg clean up, the State will be in a fairly good condition from a liquor standpoint.

FINE OPENING AT CENTENARY.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am sure that you and many of your readers will be pleased to hear of our recent opening at Centenary College, and our prospects for the school year. It affords me great pleasure to tell you that our work begins most encouragingly. From the start, the attendance was beyond our expectations, and new students are entering almost every day. We have room for perhaps not above a dozen more in the dormitories. I have no doubt that our total enrollment quite soon will be considerably higher than at any time last year. We have a superior faculty, and a good corps of competent instructors. Important health and sanitary improvements are being made on the college building and grounds. Altogether, conditions are much more satisfactory at Centenary than ever before since the school was established in Shreveport.

We feel that we are doing work here that is worth while. What rests heavily upon my heart now is the desire I have to make it possible for a number of young preachers and some poor but most worthy young men to come at once to the college. I must have help. For nearly three years I have been able to take care of several of our best students—preachers among them. Some financial help—not a great deal—has come to me. The time has come when I must have more aid to bear this burden. Who among our large-hearted Methodist laymen will respond—and do so soon? Never in these late years have opportunities been so great, and prospects so bright at Centenary as now.

A VALEDICTORY TO DR. FEATHERSTUN.

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B. D.

It would seem hardly charitable to attack a man when he is evidently staggering to his feet for the last time, and when other and more powerful antagonists have come to your aid and shown his doctrine to be neither in harmony with Methodist theology, Church history, or human experience the world over. So we might leave Dr. Featherstun with Dr. Tillett standing by his side on the same page, showing him the error of his way; and with Dr. Meek in previous issues convincingly refuting him; and with a final word from Dr. E. B. Partin showing the ethical danger of his teaching that children are born regenerate. But Dr. Featherstun has appealed unto Caesar, even the New Testament; and unto the New Testament we must go, for it is admittedly the final authority on all matters of faith and practice. It is not, however, the first time that we have gone to this authority; though Dr. Featherstun entitles his article, "The Regeneration of Infants As Told in the New Testament," as though the Bible teaching on the subject had not previously been considered.

The passage of overwhelming significance concerning regeneration in the New Testament (Christ's conversation with Nicodemus), Dr. Featherstun does not even allude to; nor indeed is regeneration the subject under discussion in a single Scriptural reference which he quotes. A remarkable treatment of the subject, verily! So we must insist that Christ's great discussion of this subject be not overlooked; especially since in a previous article I appealed to it and said: "The common sense of men, until of late, has ever recognized that when Christ said, 'Ye must be born again,' he referred to a birth subsequent to physical birth and of a spiritual nature." To this our brother made reply: "I am astounded that my learned brother does not know (I thank Dr. Featherstun for his compliments in pointing out my ignorance) that 'anthen' does not mean 'at a subsequent time,' the R. V. says 'anew.'" If Dr. Featherstun would look up authorities more carefully, he would not find himself tripped so often. He appeals from the common version and common sense to scholarship! Very well, what has scholarship to say about this 'anthen'? It is universally agreed that Thayer's Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament is the most authoritative work on the subject extant. Well, Dr. Thayer, after stating that anthen does mean sometimes "over again, indicating repetition," specifies this passage, John 3:3, as an instance where the word plainly means 'again,' as our familiar version renders it, and cites the remark of Nicodemus, "How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the second time, etc." as indicating that Nicodemus understood Christ to use the word as referring to a birth subsequent to natural birth. Christ admitted the idea of subsequence in his reply, and simply made more clear that this second birth is possible because it is of a spiritual nature. The very word "anew," which Dr. Featherstun seems to think would help him, is defined in both Webster and Worcester as meaning, "over again, again, in a new manner or style." The expression, "the new birth," implies the old birth as preceding it. So there is no possibility of, consistently with the New Testament, teaching that regeneration is coincident with or precedes natural birth.

But turning to Dr. Featherstun's article, it is very easy to see what is the matter with him. It is, evidently this: That he either cannot or will not see and admit that, previous to regeneration, the Spirit of God has ever and does ever work universally in the world, through the atonement of Christ, leading men ever toward the repentance and faith that brings a renewal of the heart. If Dr. Featherstun finds any evidence of the Spirit of God touching human life at all, he labels it at once, regeneration. So he claims that the verse, John 1:9, "This was the true Light, which light-eth every man that cometh into the world," means that all men—Caesar, Nero, Ghenghis Kahn, Li Hung Chang, Jews, Turks—are born regenerate! are born Christians! as he later claims. Now isn't that new theology for you? In contrast with such folly, hear the generally accepted explanation of such passages as given by Dr. Tillett: "As a matter of fact, no man is in a mere state of nature. Grace arrested man in his fall, and placed him in a salvable state, and endowed him with gracious ability to meet all the conditions of personal salvation. Fallen man has never been without the benefits and influence of the atonement. Uppermost among these benefits is what is called prevenient grace, a certain gracious influence of the Holy Spirit upon the heart and will of man that goes before regeneration." A similar interpretation of this verse we gave in "Conscience and Its Culture": "Every right moral impulse, too, comes through Him (Christ); for in this sense he is 'The true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.' Certainly not enlightening every man through an historical knowledge of his life and teachings; but through the 'Spirit of truth' which he has given to all, and in response to which all may come unto God and receive the benefits of his passion."

It is indeed distressing that a master in Israel, a Doctor of Divinity, should be unable to distinguish between prevenient grace and regenerating grace; and should claim passages of Scripture indicating that God's Spirit is everywhere working among men as teaching that they are already regenerated, when regeneration is the goal towards which the Holy Spirit is leading them, young and old alike. Dr. Huntley seems to share, in some measure, Dr. Featherstun's failure to distinguish, "The grace of God by Christ preventing us, that we may have a good will, and working with us, when we have that good will," as was indicated in his contribution written July 18th.

Far be it from me to question the love of God for the little ones, or his tender care over them, or his sure receiving of them, cleansed from all sin, should they die before coming to years of accountability; but far be it from me on the other hand to fail to recognize and impress the fact that every man and every little child must respond to the gracious influences of God's Spirit, and must, the little ones, and the old ones in the spirit of the little ones, "come to Jesus;" and that it is only as and only when they come to him, accepting him as their Savior, loving him, trusting him, that they are renewed by the Holy Ghost. Or, briefly and conclusively, they must give their hearts to God, as their part in this matter; else human freedom and responsibility are but words signifying nothing.

That all need, as they come to years of conscious knowledge, thought, and choice, to come thus to Christ for salvation is plainly the teaching of Scripture. Dr. Featherstun subtly denies this. He says "every sinner is a backslider;" but plainly teaches that some, a few, have never "renounced by sin their justification and regeneration," so have never become sinners. We will let the New Testament answer Dr. Featherstun here, the language is too strong for us: "If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us." "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." "Every mouth is stopped and all the world guilty before God." I have never met one of Dr. Featherstun's fair ones, who says, I've never had to come to Jesus. I've always been with him; I've never had to seek the renewal of the Holy Ghost, I've always had it; I've never needed to seek justification, I've always been justified. But if ever I do meet such an one, I'll show him from God's Word that he is deceiving himself and the truth is not in him, that he is making God a liar also by his claims; and I am quite confident I will find him either the rankest hypocrite, or the weakest imbecile that ever walked the earth.

We are surprised to find Dr. Featherstun making reference to I. Cor., 7:14 in this connection. Evidence in his defense must be scant, indeed, when he has to appeal to such. The passage reads: "The unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband: else were your children unclean; but now are they holy." The sanctification and holiness referred to is, as Meyer puts it (whose exegetical authority the whole world recognizes), "not the moral holiness of the new birth (the subjective condition of which is nothing else but faith), but the holy consecration of that bond of Christian fellowship which forms the ekklesia Theou (Church of God)." Conybeare and Howson's note suggests the following paraphrase, which makes plain the meaning of this obscure verse: If both husband and wife were unbelieving, then would the children be "unclean," i. e., "beyond the hallowed pale of God's people;" but as one or the other is a Christian, now are they "holy," i. e., "within the consecrated limits" and influences. If the word holy here meant regenerate, the verse would specifically assert that only the children of Christian parents are born so, the rest are "unclean." Then what would become of Dr. Featherstun's doctrine that all are born regenerate?

That no one is born regenerate is as strongly asserted as it can be in any form of human speech in the opening sentences of John's Gospel, when he affirms (1:12,13) that men become sons of God, not by being born so. "Which were born, not of blood,"—none are born Christians: "nor of the will of the flesh,"—nor by their own efforts and determinings, no man can make himself a Christian; "nor of the will of man,"—not through any human agency or effort can this transformation be wrought; "but of God,"—by the renewing by the Holy Ghost of the hearts of "as many as receive him" and "believe on his name."

Further argument is surely unnecessary. We are willing to leave the verdict with the jury; assured that only the "natural man, who receiveth not the things of the Spirit" can fail to see that the "most sacred rights" which Christian parents, pastors and teachers hold in trust for their children is not to tell them that the work of grace is already wrought in them, but the right to "bring their little ones to Jesus," telling them of his love and power to save; that they, receiving him and believing on his name, may become sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty. God grant that our labors may not have been in vain in the Lord.

Our apology for continuing this discussion at such length is the fact, well stated by Dr. Meek, that "It is certainly a thing of tremendous consequence whether we are to teach our children that they stand in need of Christ's saving power and should seek to come in touch with it, or that they are born regenerate and need no new birth. Upon a right answer of this question the eternal destiny of thousands may be hinged."

A FELLOW'S MOTHER.

A fellow's mother, said Fred, the wise,
With his rosy cheeks and merry blue eyes,
Knows what to do if a fellow gets hurt
By a thump or bruise or fall in the dirt.

She does not care—not much, I mean,
If a fellow's face is not quite clean;
And if your trousers are torn at the knee,
She can put in a patch you'd never see.

A fellow's mother is never mad,
And only sorry if you are bad;
And I'll tell you this, if you're only true,
She'll always forgive you, whatever you do.

A fellow's mean who would never try
To keep the tear from her loving eye;
And the fellow's worse who sees it not
That his mother's the truest friend he's got.

WHAT THE SPIDER TOLD.

"I was spinning a web on a rose vine," said the spider, "and the little girl was sewing patchwork on the doorstep. Her thread knotted and her needle broke and her eyes were full of tears. 'I can't do it!' she cried; 'I can't! I can't!' Then the mother came and told her to look at me. Every time I spun a nice thread, and tried to fasten it to a branch, the wind blew and tore it away. This happened several times, but at last I made one that did not break, and fastened it and spun other threads to join it. Then the mother smiled.

"What a patient spider!" she said.

"The little girl smiled, too, and took up her work. And when the sun went down there was a beautiful web in the rose vine and a square of beautiful patchwork on the doorstep."—The Young Evangelist.

HOW HE WAS CURED.

The young husband who had been an only son at home, petted and indulged beyond every point of reason, began to show signs of petty royalty soon after his marriage. Most of his friends were men of great wealth who lived extremely well, and association with them made him somewhat hard to please in the matter of cooking. Scarcely a meal at his home table passed without criticism from him.

"What is this meant for?" he would ask after tasting an entree that his bride had racked her brain to prepare.

"What on earth is this?" he would say when dessert came on.

"Is this supposed to be salad?" he would inquire sarcastically when the lettuce was served.

The merry-hearted little wife stood it as long as she could, and finally decided to retaliate. The next evening she wore her very prettiest gown, and fairly bubbled over with wit. They went in to dinner.

The soup tureen was brought in. Tied to one handle was a decorated card, and on that card was written in a big, round hand:

"This is soup."

Roast beef followed, with a placard announcement:

"This is roast beef."

The potatoes were labeled. The gravy dish was placarded. The olives bore a card inscribed "Olives," the salad bowl carried a tag marked "Salad," and when the ice pudding came in a card announced, "This is really ice pudding."

The wife talked of a thousand different things all through the meal, never once referring by word or look to the labeled dishes. Neither then nor thereafter did she say a word about them, and never since that evening has the captious husband ventured to inquire the name of anything set before him.—Times-Democrat.

HOW SIN GROWS.

When I was a little girl about six years old I was very fond of sewing for my dollie.

I always treasured the little left-over scraps of lace and ribbon that mother couldn't use and would trim most beautiful hats and dresses for "Lady Jane," my favorite doll.

One day mother was sewing for me and I for Lady Jane when mother had occasion to leave the room.

Oh, I blush to tell you what I did while mother was gone. I cut the lace that she was using—the lace that I knew she wanted. When I heard her coming I knew she would hate to see her pretty lace cut, so I looked around for a place to hide it, and where do you think I did hide it? Under my dear little innocent baby sister, who lay asleep in her cradle.

Well, when mother came back she saw, of course, that part of her lace was gone, and as there was no one else in the room but me, she knew I must have taken it.

To test my honesty she said: "Clara, some one has cut mother's lace. Can you tell me who did it?"

"Why, mother," I said, with my head hung low, and a tell-tale blush on my cheeks, "the nurse girl came in just now to see if little sister was still asleep, and I expect she cut it."

Do you not see now how my first sin led me to others? First, I cut the lace, then sneakily hid it under my little sister, then I told an awful lie and tried to lay my sin on the innocent nurse girl.

Poor mother was heart-broken, of course, and began to cry because her little girl had told her an awful lie. She took me on her lap and told me what a dreadful thing it was. That God had heard me, and that it was a sin against him, and now I must ask him to forgive me and help me never, never to be guilty again of such a wrong again.

I was very miserable all day, just as God wants us to be when we sin against him. I did as mother told me to, however; I asked God to forgive me and he did forgive me and made me happy again.

No matter how great our sins are, if we are truly sorry for them, and ask God to forgive us for them, he will.—The Child's Gem.

ADVICE, WHAT IS IT?

Rev. H. P. Lewis.

Webster says, "It is an opinion recommended or offered as worthy to be followed; counsel, suggestion."

It is easy to give advice when you are fully competent to give it, and feel sure that the advice sought will be appreciated and acted upon. It is not always wise to offer advice unless you are quite sure it will be received in the same spirit in which it is given. Even then you had best hesitate, pray over it, then ask God to guide you in giving it. It is astonishing how few people, even among those who are in need of good advice, appreciate it when given by old, experienced people. See I. Kings, 12th chapter. Rehoboam rejected the advice and counsel of the old men, who had experience as well as age on their side, and who had the good of the country at heart. See what it led to. Rehoboam played the fool completely. Thousands have done likewise since his day.

Many years ago, in Covington County, Miss., a young man by the name of John Williams married a wife, moved on a small farm, and went to work. There lived in his neighborhood an old lady who had more sense about farming than many of the present-day farmers seem to have. She said to Williams, "You will find plenty of men ready to give you advice about farming." Then she said, "Follow the advice of the man who has plenty of corn in his crib and meat in his smoke-house."

When I had had fifty years experience in the Christian ministry, had had many hardships, seen many rise and fall financially, and had learned a little about the value of time and money, I ventured to give a young man I had known intimately more than twenty years, a little fatherly advice along financial lines. I saw he was a little reckless and did not seem to realize the value of time or money; and as I had fifty years of experience behind me, had known many men—some preachers—to fail in business, because of a lack of ability, or something else, to manage their finances, I really thought I ought to advise my young brother; I felt sure that in consideration of my age and experience he would appreciate the interest I felt in him, even if he did not see proper to act upon my advice. Alas, how mistaken I was! He simply gave me to understand that my old foggy ideas, advice, etc., were not appreciated, saying among other things, "I am paddling my own canoe." Perhaps I was wrong in venturing to give the young brother advice. He had been to college; had been to Vanderbilt; had traveled some little, and had seen much more of the world than I had. He knew I had never been to college; hence, he concluded that I was not competent to give advice to one who was a graduate of one of our Southern colleges. I have been slow to give him advice since.

More than forty years ago, while riding along a public road in Covington County, Miss., I saw something in the road ahead of me, nicely wrapped in a piece of brown paper. The thought occurred to me, some one has lost a package; I will take charge of it till I find the owner. Accordingly, I stopped my horse, got out of my buggy, felt of the object, found it was only a "pine knot." I noticed some writing on the package; it read, "Everything is not gold that glitters." I thought, "that is so." So many people seem to be getting on well, who are in need of advice, but don't know it, and would not accept and appreciate good advice if given them.

A young lady in Rankin County, many years ago, asked my advice about marrying a certain young man. I said to her, "I will advise you as I did a young lady, a Miss Dixon, in Copiah County, some years ago. Not knowing anything about the young man, I said to Miss Dixon, 'Commit the whole matter into the hands of God. If you will, he will guide you in the matter.' " "I know that," said the woman, "but I am afraid he won't let me have my way." So it is with so many who need the advice and counsel of older and wiser people, but who are not disposed to take advice unless it be in keeping with their own ideas about matters. Read the 13th chapter of Proverbs, especially the tenth verse: "Only by pride cometh contention; but with the well advised is wisdom."

Editorial.

Dr. W. B. Palmore, in a recent article, includes New Orleans in a list of small cities which he said would become important as a result of the construction of the Panama Canal. Where has Brother Palmore been all these years that he has not learned that for three-quarters of a century New Orleans has been one of the leading cities of the United States? Can it be that in touring other countries he has neglected to inform himself concerning his own?

As a result of the Men and Religion Forward Movement in Atlanta, the restricted district has been abolished in that city, and Christian workers are endeavoring to reclaim its residents and, where they desire it, to secure them employment under proper safeguards. All honor to those engaged in this work! It is a crying shame that such cesspools of iniquity should be allowed to exist in any of our cities. And it is certainly commendable to seek to rescue the perishing who are going down to destruction in them. We have no right to adjudge any who are lost in sin as beyond the recovering agencies of redemption and leave them absolutely in Satan's hands. A larger faith in Christ's power to save is one of the imperative needs of the Church to-day.

The New York Independent finds fault with Dr. M. A. Matthews, of Seattle, Moderator of the Northern Presbyterian General Assembly, for flaying the heretics in an address at Winona Lake, Indiana. That exhortation will do Dr. Matthews no harm. As we heard an intelligent minister say not long since, the Independent comes nearer being always wrong on all questions—religious, political and social—than any other periodical issued in the United States. Some of the writing which it allows anonymous correspondents to do concerning the people of the South could scarcely be more misleading and unjust. Indeed, we should be amply justified if we were to characterize some of these contributions in terms much more severe.

LET THE ANNUAL CONFERENCES ALONE.

The Central Methodist Advocate states that at the recent session of the Kentucky Conference a resolution was adopted doing away with the reports of the pastors and allowing no verbal account of the work accomplished except the brief summaries given by the presiding elders. Whether the pastors' names were called and their characters passed one by one, or whether the Northern plan was adopted in toto, our contemporary does not say.

We sincerely regret to see this innovation coming southward. We think that when a pastor has toiled for twelve months in an obscure field, often almost unnoticed and with but little to cheer him, he should at Conference be entitled to the privilege of speaking a few words concerning his struggles and his triumphs. If the leaders want to save time, let them find some other way of doing it. The rank and file of our pastors carry very largely the burdens of the Church and their indispensable services receive but little public recognition. By no means should this be lessened. We make a hero of the foreign missionary and can listen to him at any length (which is well enough), but it seems that some would have us ignore and seal the lips of the circuit rider, whose privations are often far greater than those of the worker in foreign lands and who is not less a hero. We hope the time will never come when a brother who has had sore trials and conflicts during the year may not open his heart to his brethren on the floor of the Annual Conference and be given their sympathy and words of encouragement.

Nor do we desire to see the historic method of calling each preacher's name and having his brethren answer, "Nothing against him," dispensed with. There is something impressive in taking the men up one at a time and asking particularly about him whose name is called. It is an individual inspection by the Conference that is not without its value—a challenge to the entire body to speak out if aught be known against the man whose character is under examination. To go through this work by making a general inquiry concerning all the preachers in a district at one time, would be far less direct and impressive.

We earnestly wish that the 'reconstructionists' among us would let the Annual Conference alone. Its very uniqueness is one reason why we should like to see it preserved in substantially its present form. Dr. C. W. Carter, in his great Semi-centennial Address before the last session of the Louisiana Conference, in speaking of the first Conference that he ever attended, said: "I was surprised to find that the business was carried on by questions and answers. As far as I have been able to find out, a Methodist Conference is the only deliberative body that transacts its business in this way; and I take it that the Methodist success in thus conducting the Conference business is a splendid tribute to wise old Socrates, who invented this method." Wesley's Conferences were far more personal, far more direct and searching in their inquiries, and far more minute in their details than ours, and doubtless for this very reason they were more useful and more potent in their influence. The present disposition to do away with details and the close inspection of every man and his work is thoroughly un-Wesleyan.

Most of the proposed changes in the proceedings of the Annual Conference show a lack of appreciation of the true purpose for which it exists. It is no place for a theological institute—was never designed for that; neither is it a time for a revival, though there ought, of course, to be spiritual and helpful preaching. Its primary purpose is to look carefully into the work of the Church during the year, to consider its needs, to scrutinize the agencies by which it is to be carried on, and to so adjust them as to secure the largest results. Its chief work was not meant to be educational or evangelistic, but supervisory and administrative. In this day when the Baptists, who are growing so rapidly, are in their councils and computations giving recognition, not only to every pastoral charge, but also to every church, it is no time for us to commence to deal in sweeping generalities and lose sight of the inconspicuous worker and the small field. This tendency to lose contact with the masses of our people is, perhaps, the gravest peril of Methodism. And this danger is all the more threatening because so few of our leaders seem to realize it.

Nor is it true, as is sometimes alleged, that there is a lack of interest in the proceedings of our Annual Conferences. We have been present at all kinds of religious gatherings, and we know of none which for continued attendance and sustained interest will compare with them. Let the Conferences go on as they have been doing; let the questions be called and answered as heretofore, and let the connectional men come and tell us of the general work of the Church. This is what these bodies meet for. We recommend that those among us who have a passion for making changes turn their attention to something else. In whacking away with their destructive axes and chopping down things right and left, this is one tree that they should spare. The splendid fruit that it has borne should plead in its behalf and secure for it immunity from violent hands.

A FIGHTER OR A BUILDER—WHICH?

There is so much done in the world that is offensive to the Christian's sense of what is right that he is apt to be led into many battles in this life, battles against the existing evils about him. The man who fights everything that is wrong will surely be fighting all his life. To live in the spirit of contention is to be always miserable. To develop the traits of a successful fighter is to sacrifice the characteristics that make one winsome and lovable. To possess an offensive personality means scarcely less than that your way of approach to the hearts of the most of mankind is barred. To be thus handicapped is the greatest misfortune that can befall a man.

Is there a way to avoid such a fate? Is it not necessary for the Christian to ally himself with those forces that are ever contending with sin in its hideousness? There is a way to avoid such misfortune, and there is a way to contend with sin that is more effective than the modern methods of warfare. The world loves a builder. To be a constructive genius is to be a man welcome everywhere. The positive method of accomplishing anything is more effective than the negative method. To prove that a thing is true is at the same time positive proof that everything contrary to it is false. It is better to find the truth and hold it up to the world than to spend our time picking out the false and trying to destroy it.

A teacher of music does not say to his pupil, "This is a discord," and then set him to making hideous noises by striking the wrong notes. He points out the harmonies and sets him to practicing the chords on the instrument. Would it not be better if we, as ministers and Christians, would spend our time pointing out the beauties of the Christian life, and the glories of the heavenly home, and seldom be heard crying aloud and sparing not against the many evils of the land?

The successful real estate agent sends out his literature advertising the property he desires to sell. The folders contain no criticism of other lands, but are radiant with the best things that can be said of the property for sale. That is good business. Jesus spent nearly all of his time teaching the right way and doing good. He said over and over, "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto," etc. He denounced some people and some practices, but not many. The very day that he died, when the men were before him who had committed the blackest crime of all ages—the crucifying of Jesus—he condemned them not, but said: "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do." If the best business method is, to sell your own goods on their merits and not on the demerits of other goods; and Christ's example to us was that of a man of peace who laid down a system of constructive ethics, and who said little in criticism of the existing conditions, then is it not well for the Church to lay down the sword and take up the trowel?

The man who denounces the saloon keeper is apt to make him his enemy. To specify the sins of this age is often the quickest way to depopulate our churches at the regular services. It is true that there is much that is wrong, even in the lives of church members, and what we say may be right; but all things that are right may not be expedient. It is better to tell of Jesus and his love and of the beauties of the Christian life to a hundred people than to denounce the devil and his angels to just ten. "Finally, brethren," says Paul, "whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." If we follow these instructions we will have little time to fight existing evils, and will be very busy teaching the beauties of the kingdom of heaven. Then let us be builders—constructive Christians, known for the good we do and not for the sins we fight.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Bishop Thirkfield, of the M. E. Church, who resides in New Orleans, delivered a thoughtful lecture to a mixed audience at the Y. M. C. A. hall last Sunday afternoon.

Rev. J. Lloyd Decell closed a very successful meeting at Liberty, Miss., last Sunday night, in which he was ably assisted by Rev. I. L. Peebles. There were nine accessions to the Church.

"We are looking forward to the best session in the history of the school," are the words with which Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Millsaps College, closes a personal letter to this office.

Next Saturday is work day for the Louisiana Orphanage. Do not forget it. The following Saturday is work day for the Mississippi Orphanage. Plan for it. These are important dates and should not be overlooked.

The Crowley (La.) Signal recently published a picture of our pastor there, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, and stated that the new $30,000 church building would soon be a fact. Both the announcement and the picture made a good appearance.

It gave us great pleasure to meet Rev. David L. Fleming, chaplain of the Second Cavalry, United States Army, located at Fort Bliss, Texas, who has been spending some time recently in New Orleans visiting relatives. He honored the Advocate with a brief call.

Miss Bettye Lois, a young lady weighing 81-2 pounds, arrived at the parsonage in Zwolle, La., Oct. 3. Her parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. Cude Rousseau, were duly proud of their infant daughter, and their friends rejoice with them over the fact that both the mother and child are doing nicely.

Rev. W. M. Young, pastor at Amory, Miss., reports that he has had a net gain of seventy-five members thus far this year. His finances are all in good shape and he has rendered some effective work for the Advocate. Brother Young will be able to make a good report at the Conference in December.

Two vacant lots situated in Gretna, La., belonging to the M. E. Church, South, for more than fifty years, the Church having no record of owning the property until recently, were sold last Monday for $600. The proceeds of the sale will be used in building the new parsonage in McDonoghville.

The following announcement was sent to the Advocate by Rev. J. M. Lewis, of Vancleave, Miss.: "The New Prospect Camp Meeting will begin on Thursday night before the fourth Sunday of October and close Monday night after the fourth Sunday. Preachers coming to the camp grounds will be met by hacks at Ocean Springs."

The fourth round of quarterly conference dates for the Aberdeen District appear only in part in this issue. After the entire list of conferences had been scheduled, Rev. J. E. Cunningham, the alert presiding elder, wired us that some changes would be made and to hold out the names of all appointments appearing after November 14.

Rev. E. L. Whiddon, whose recent successful meeting in Beaumont, Texas, is mentioned by Rev. W. J. Johnson in another part of this issue, will soon begin a revival meeting at Sun, La., from which place he will go to Anguilla, Miss. Brother Whiddon has held some very successful meetings in Louisiana during the last few months.

Rev. W. L. Doss is making commendable progress at Epworth Church, New Orleans. He has an exceptionally strong body of young people and workers among the young people. His Sunday school is one of the best in the city, and his Epworth League is doing good work. Brother Doss will tell of his work in the Advocate next week.

Miss Belle M. Roberts found time to spend last week in Terry, Miss., where she used her talent as a personal worker in helping Brother Ellis, the pastor, in a revival meeting. She reports that the crowds in attendance were large. In speaking of Brother Ellis, she says: "He rides a beautiful horse about Terry, and rides and walks like a grand old soldier."

In a letter dated October 5, Rev. F. B. Ormond, our pastor at Hickory, Miss., says: "This entire town and community is in the throes of a great revival. The gospel is being preached with great power by Evangelist D. E. Kelley. At this writing twenty-seven have made application for membership in the Church." Such a meeting is enough to make the pastor rejoice.

Rev. C. A. Battle, pastor of Felicity Church, New Orleans, is announced to deliver a lecture to men only in the auditorium of the Y. M. C. A. building on St. Charles Street next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Brother Battle is a young man with more than ordinary platform ability, and the young men of that institution are expecting a strong message from him.

Rev. J. W. Price, the faithful pastor of the Oak Ridge (Miss.) circuit, is closing a very successful year's work. In a letter, containing a nice list of subscribers to the Advocate, Brother Price recently took occasion to write a few words of encouragement. It takes money to meet the current expenses of a church paper, but the "milk of human kindness" in the form of good wishes and kindly appreciation is never amiss.

At the quarterly meeting at First Church, Columbus, Miss., Tuesday night, October 1, Dr. H. G. Henderson, the pastor, reported fifty additions to the Church during the last ten months, and the foreign and home mission assessments on the Church, amounting to $469, paid. The Church will pay $300 as a missionary special this year. First Church is composed of loyal Methodists and is led on by a faithful shepherd.

Dr. A. F. Smith, of Jackson, Miss., arrived in New Orleans last Monday, and is now assisting Rev. H. R. Singleton, the pastor, in a revival meeting at Parker Memorial Church. He preached his first sermon to the Parker Memorial congregation on Monday night on the subject of "Prayer." The large audience that heard him was impressed with his earnest Christian zeal and deep insight into the spiritual truths of God.

In a business letter to this office, Rev. J. C. Long, our pastor at Philadelphia, Miss., says: "I am moving along nicely with my work, and hope to wind up with good results." It is not unusual for a minister to be full of hope in the beginning of the year and full of gloom at the close of the year, but Brother Long expresses hope also at the close of the year; and if reports be true, he is justified in expressing feelings of good cheer. He serves a royal people.

Dr. J. W. Moore has announced a series of sermons to business men, the first of which he preached to his congregation at First Church, New Orleans, last Sunday night on the subject, "Virtues of Business Men." On October 13th he will use as a theme, "Temptations of Business Men," and on October 20th, "Opportunities of Business Men." Dr. Moore is an able preacher, and those who heard the first of his three lectures are impatient to hear the next two.

We received the following letter from Rev. J. H. Holder, of Okolona, Miss., dated October 3: "I am in receipt of the news that our brother, Rev. J. B. Randolph, of Como, Miss., has suffered a second relapse from typhoid fever. He has been sick ninety-two days to-day. He and his good little wife are making a brave fight for his life. Let unceasing prayer be made to the Great Physician for his recovery." This is, indeed, sad news, and our heart goes out to them in this hour of their affliction. Let the brethren heed the call to prayer in their behalf.

On account of the illness and death in his home, in New Orleans, of Captain Edwin Crispin, the father of Mrs. Meek, who passed away last Monday morning at 2 o'clock, the editor has not been able to give this issue of the Advocate much attention. He left Monday with his family for Acosta, Miss., where the interment of the remains of the deceased took place on Tuesday. Captain Crispin was a gallant Confederate soldier, having followed the flag of General Forrest for four years. He was in the 88th year of his age, and was an ardent Methodist and a ripe Christian.

In a personal communication to this office, a layman residing in Evangeline Parish, La., writes concerning our church at Bayou Chicot, that it is the only Methodist Church in that parish. In his letter he makes a strong appeal for workers to evangelize that Romanized section of the State in which Evangeline is situated, and points out that the Baptist Church is doing far more in that line than our own Church. A very successful meeting was recently held at Bayou Chicot, and it appears that the field is ripe for a great harvest of souls in that section, if the workers were only at hand.

Brother M. L. White, in a letter written from Prentiss, Miss., where he is pastor, says: "I am just home from a meeting at Mount Zion Church, where I assisted Rev. S. F. Flurry, the pastor. We had four accessions to the Church and baptized four infants. Many were converted. It was a great meeting. The people shouted their praises to God." Brother White is a preacher of the old school, and it is not an unusual thing for the people to shout under the influence of his preaching. A good shouting meeting would be a splendid antidote for the lethargy that seems to be afflicting a great many churches in the South to-day.

Rev. T. B. Holloman, whose ministry to young men and women is always fruitful, is doing a good work at Port Gibson, Miss. He writes: "With sixty boarders from the Port Gibson Female College and our quota, forty boys, from the Chamberlain-Hunt Academy, we are preaching to a full house every Sunday. Our Sunday school has reached the limit of its capacity to accommodate. Methodist parents who have sons or daughters in either of these institutions are at liberty to call on me for any service." Methodist parents often blunder by not communicating with the pastor of the church in the town where they send their children to school.

Under date of October 3, Rev. W. L. Duren, our pastor at Tupelo, Miss., writes as follows: "Brother R. A. Weaver died here Tuesday at 1:15 p. m. of Bright's disease. Our sorrow is great, for men like he was are hard to find, and harder to replace." We regret exceedingly to hear of the death of this choice young man. In both character and capacity he had few equals, and he was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. He was connected with the First Methodist Church of Memphis some years ago, and was pronounced by Mr. John R. Pepper to be one of its noblest spirits and choicest workers. A more extended tribute will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

We take pleasure in publishing the contents of a letter from Rev. R. W. Tucker, who is finishing an unusually fruitful quadrennium as presiding elder of the Ruston (La.) District. He writes as follows: "We have had good revivals throughout the District, and I think we will make a good showing at Monroe. Two more of my sons, J. W. and F. L., are taking their examinations through the Correspondence School, and will knock at the door of the Louisiana Annual Conference for admission on trial. This, together with the fact that I have one already faithful and earnest son in the work, greatly rejoices my heart. I have done the preaching through eight revival meetings this year, and have two more to preach through; and yet my health is good." Brother Tucker has ample reason for rejoicing.

If there is a cause that should stir the heart of every Methodist preacher, it is that of the ministers who are now serving charges in the flood-stricken sections of Louisiana, where the army worm and other pests added to the flood horrors and left famine and sickness in their wake. The following letter from Rev. W. S. Tompkins, a superannuated preacher residing in Virginia, addressed to Mr. S. H. Meyer, of New Orleans, the Louisiana Conference treasurer, shows the extent to which a Methodist preacher considers the welfare of his fellow pastors: "I send my check for $3 to be used for the flood sufferers in your territory. This is in response to the appeal made in the Nashville Advocate of September 27. I want to help those brother ministers who are short in their salaries. I am not a moneyed man by any means; but I am a superannuated Methodist preacher without any income, except what is furnished me by the Conference Board. But I guess I am better situated than some of those afflicted ones. The Lord bless you and yours."

FOR THE FLOOD SUFFERERS.

The following amounts have been received by the treasurer of the Louisiana Conference for the benefit of the preachers in the flood-stricken districts, up to October 5, 1912:

That will save trouble all around.On July 26, 1912, the precious soul of little FREDDIE, son of A. D. and Beulah Lewis, of Lapine, La., took its flight from this world of care to the deathless mansions above. He was permitted to bless the home of his fond parents only one year and eleven months; but his earthly ministry was well done, for the rose does its work as grandly by blossom as does the vine with its fruit. After having helped to sanctify and lift heavenward the very hearts that break at his farewell, he went from this troublesome sphere, leaving the world he blessed and the skies through which he passed still sweet with lingering fragrance, to his glory as an ever unfolding flower in the blessed garden of God.

W. B. INABNET.

On Sunday evening the spirit of little MYRTLE, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Cousins, of Mc-Comb City, Miss., passed into the great beyond, where storm nor temptation dare come, and where peace and joy rule forever. Yes, a home has been made sad, and fond parents mourn their loss; but let us remember that she is basking in the presence of Christ and has no share in pain or sorrow. The funeral service was conducted at the home, amid friends and loved ones, and no one was present but who keenly felt the loss sustained. May God's presence take the place of the little one and may those who weep remember that the Savior said, "Blessed are those that mourn for they shall be comforted."

H. M. JOHNSON.

Death, cruel death, has again invaded our community and snatched away, not one of the aged and infirm, but a girl who was just blossoming into young womanhood; one who by her personal attractiveness and charm as a conversationalist promised to be a useful woman. JESSIE MAE BALDRIDGE was born April 30, 1896, and died in her home, near McNair, Miss., Aug. 26, 1912. She joined the
M. E. Church, South, when she was but 5 years of age. The world and the devil tried hard to win her from the Church, but because of the persistent entreaties and prayers of her Christian parents, they failed. She told her mother on her death bed that she realized that Jesus loved her and that it was well with her. She is, no doubt, basking in the sunlight of God's love—safe in the home of the pure and the good.—Ira B. Robertson.It pleased our Heavenly Father to take from our midst during the month of August, SISTER HARDY, wife of Dr.
Hardy, of Garlandville, Miss. She was one of our oldest and most regular and attentive members, both of the Church and the Sunday school, but for months her place had been vacant on account of her afflictions, which she bore bravely. The last evening I spent with her it was an inspiration to hear her talk of her going away.
When I go to our little church at Garlandville I miss her, and can only look at her well kept home and the path through the pretty lawn that she trod as she went forth to the house of God. When she could not attend services she always sent her children. They will miss her now. She was true to her family and loved them, but she loved her Lord and has gone to reap her reward. Paul tells us that, "It is written, eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man the things
God has prepared for them that love him."

HER FRIEND.

DWIGHT EWELL WATSON, of Guntown, Miss., son of A. C. and A. M.
Watson, was born Nov. 7, 1886; wasconverted and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church at the age of twelve; was married to Miss Lila Middlebrook Dec. 27, 1911, and departed this life July 30, 1912. He was true in spirit, and noble in character. Perhaps there have been few, if any, that were more dutiful as a son, more loving as a brother, more devoted as a husband, or more faithful as a friend.
I don't think I have ever known any young man who had more friends, or one who appreciated his friends more.
He delighted in worship and song, often going with the pastor to assist in the song service. When he was stricken and knew that he had but little chance to recover he was brave and cheerful, kind and more thoughtful of others, seemingly, than of himself. A happy home has been broken up, a good, useful life has come to an end, but the loved ones can bow in submission, and say, "Thy will be done." We will wait for the happy reunion in the sweet by and by.

HIS FRIEND.

MARY CHRISTIAN GOAR MCKIE, daughter of Rev. R. P. Goar, was born September 12, 1869; was married to Raymond R. McKie October, 1886, and died September 23, 1912. She is survived by her husband and two sons, Polk and Ray. It was the writer's privilege and profit to have been closely associated with this good woman for a number of years, during which time her noble character and Christian zeal were manifested in almost every phase of life. If the children of the community were to be given an outing on the lake or river, she was one of the chief chaperons; if the Sunday school was to observe Rally Day, Children's Day, or what not, she was the most potent factor in planning and working out the end in view to a successful conclusion; if any public enterprise of merit was being fostered, she was always one of its chief promoters; if the cloud of grief and bereavement hung over any home, the humblest or the highest, in her community, "Mollie" McKie was the first to enter and the last to leave that home until all that Christian ministrations could do to dispel the cloud had been done.She joined the Methodist Church, South, under her father's ministry when a mere girl, and ever lived close to its teachings, responding to its every demand during all these years.
The beautiful little church, erected in 1907, at Tyro, her home, is in a very great measure a monument to her untiring efforts and zeal, for it was she as much, perhaps, as any other one person, who originated the plan and pushed it to a successful finish. Nature gave her superior endowments and she used them in her Master's vineyard. In her home she was the impersonation of all the graces, being well versed in the proprieties of life. In her church she was a dependable force that was always subject to call. In her community she was always "counted in" for anything worthy.Her Sunday school class might have been mistaken for her own children as they wept over her remains and placed flowers on her grave, when she was laid to rest at Mt. Vernon.Truly,
"She lived for those who loved her,
For those whom she knew to be true,
For the heaven that is above her,
And the good that she could do."

THE C. S. BELL CO. Hillsboro, Ohio

Tidings From the Field

Jena, La.

We have just closed a meeting at Jena that is destined to result in much good. Rev. W. W. Perry, of Shreveport, did the preaching. Our chief aim was to endeavor to have the Church revived and quickened, and I sincerely believe that our efforts were blessed in that respect. As visible results we have organized a woman's prayer meeting that will meet once a week. The women seem to be in dead earnest to be about the Master's business, and their work will prove an impetus to every department of Church work. We also had pledged the erection of six family altars—that in itself is a power for the development of spirituality. Eight new subscribers to the Advocate were secured, and I know that gladdens the editor's heart. We are getting along very well and hope to round up our work in good shape for Conference. Brethren, pray for us.

W. D. KLEINSCHMIDT.

Paris, Miss.

I am securing a new club of subscribers. I have had fine revivals this year and 66 have been added to the Church. Our charge will pay all claims in full, I think. In many respects this has been the best year of my ministry. Although I have been hampered by my fourth year's studies, I have the financial proposition pretty well in hand, and the work well organized. We had the best meeting in our home town in the history of the place, so the old men say. We are all well pleased—the children are all in school, my wife is contented, and I am really enjoying the hard work so necessary here. We give God the glory for the many good things of the year, and rejoice in the prospects before us. We are working and praying for a good report at Conference. As many of the readers know, I have been disabled a part of the year, but I am proud to report that I am some better, and am able to resume my studies and fill all my appointments. I have just returned from helping Brother O'Bryant, at Main Street Church, Water Valley, where the Lord gave a gracious blessing. Many said that it was the best meeting they had had for many years. To God be all the glory. Pray for us.

D. H. CROWSON, P. C.

Greenville, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: Last Sunday we observed Promotion and Rally-day in the Sunday School here. A good programme was prepared and well rendered by competent and interested persons in Sunday school work. We had two papers read and an address on several subjects: "The Mothers Duty to the Sunday School," by Mrs. Edmund Taylor, was a splendid paper, to every word of which we said Amen. "The Boy Problem" was discussed by W. P. Kretschmar, and he gave us the key-note which ought to help us to solve it here. "The Ideal Sunday School" was the theme handled by Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, our Sunday School Secretary. She was at her best. We are looking for great results from the day's work. Brother Dunn, the superintendent, is a young man, but he is doing an excellent work. His time and mind and heart is in it and it is telling on the school. We have had the best year's work of the three years that I have been here, and still it grows. The teachers in the main are the best I have seen in any Sunday school where it has been my privilege to serve. We will be heard from yet.

Fraternally yours,

W. S. LAGRONE.

Sallis Circuit, North Miss.

Mr. Editor: I trust that a few lines from the Sallis charge will not be considered unworthy of publication. Sallis is a small town on the Aberdeen branch of the I. C. Railroad, between Durant and Kosciusko. The Sallis circuit, however, is not so small. True, its membership is not large—a few less than five hundred—but it has eight appointments. These are scattered over a large and hilly territory, making it difficult and laborious to serve. If it was divided into two charges, they would be much easier served and yield larger spiritual results. But in order to support the preacher, they say that not one of these appointments can be taken off. Possibly that is correct, but it would be a great saving of men to reduce it. Two preachers in the past few years have gone down to the very gates of superannuation under the strain. But when the roll is called in the judgment, there will be many answer from the Sallis charge. The labor and trials of God's servants have not been in vain in this field. The present pastorate, though not so fruitful in conversions and accessions to the Church as some in the past, will have a few golden sheaves to offer the Master as fruits of his sacrifice and sufferings for us. There have been some material improvements during the two years now ending. A part of the parsonage has been re-roofed, and the barn has had a new roof put on it. In the early part of 1911, at the earnest and insistent suggestions of the pastor, a flowing well was sunk at the parsonage, which added very much to its comforts and value. Though quite a number of wells had been sunk, there was never before plenty of water at the parsonage. When the present occupants moved in there was not a drop of water to be found for any purpose on the parsonage lot. We now have a flow of six or more gallons per minute as clear and sparkling as the sunlight. In addition to this Sallis has something like half enough money to paint her church. Last year the charge paid more on the benevolences than in any other year of its history, save one. That year a $100 special was placed on the collections. The pastor now thinks that the charge will do as well this year as it did last. But if it does, it will be done at what the people consider a great sacrifice. We have the shortest crops in this section that we have had for years and our people are all farmers. As spiritual results we had 22 accessions on profession of faith last year and sixteen this year. Very few under the influence of our Church are left on the outside. At three places on the charge—Spring Grove, Shrock and Salem—we have had the largest and most profitable Sunday schools in the history of these churches. With the exception of two churches our congregations are larger than last year. With few exceptions, possibly, the people of this charge are true to the Lord, the Church and the pastor, and will be rewarded for their faithfulness, if not for the largeness of the harvest, when the Master comes to reward his servants. Four churches and the pastor are largely indebted to Revs. R. A. Ellis and W. F. Rogers for able and valuable ministerial services.—D. M. Geddie, P. C.

This Will Stop Your Cough in a Hurry

Save $2 by Making This Cough Syrup at Home.

This recipe makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer the most obstinate cough—stops even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, croup, bronchitis, asthma and all throat and lung troubles.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe has attained great popularity throughout the United States and Canada. It has often been imitated, though never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Catarrh and Blood Disease—Doctors Failed to Cure.

Miss Mabel F. Dawkins, 1214 Lafayette St., Fort. Wayne, Ind., writes: "For three years I was troubled with catarrh and blood disease. I tried several doctors and a dozen different remedies, but none of them did me any good. A friend told me of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took two bottles of this medicine and was as well and strong as ever. I feel like a different person and recommend Hood's to any one suffering from catarrh."

NOTICE.

Mississippi Conference.

Will the presiding elders kindly send to me within the next two weeks, or sooner if possible, the names of the lay delegates from their districts to the Mississippi Annual Conference for the year 1912. I also ask for the names of all the candidates who will be up for admission on trial. I would also appreciate it if the secretaries of the various Boards would notify me, if possible, how many of the connectional men, who represent the interests of their Boards, will be present at Conference. We shall be glad to have a full attendance of our connectional men. Yours faithfully,

NOLAN B. HARMON.

BUFORD (MISS.) CHARGE.

If I am permitted the space I will make a few statements concerning my work. After I came home from the Seashore Divinity School on Friday, Brother H. E. Carter, of Monticello, came to me and we started our meeting at Sumner Chapel on the first Sunday in July. Brother Carter did some good, strong preaching, and could we have held the meeting two days longer I think we would have seen good results.....From there I went to old Watterhole's Church at Knox. Rev. Dan Scarborough, of McComb City, did the preaching and it was well done. I must say that Brother Scarborough is one of the most congenial preachers with whom I ever associated. The people loved his preaching very much.....From there I went to assist Brother Ulmer at Baxterville, and then on to Hopewell for the third Sunday in August.....On the first Sunday in September we began a meeting at Foxworth, where Rev. Wiley Furguson did the preaching with force and effectiveness. There were 26 accessions to the Church. Rev. M. L. White, who was as a father to me in the ministry, helping me to my feet in the beginning, came to me the third Sunday in September. We had the best meeting at Jamestown that was ever held there. Fifteen joined the Church.....My last meeting was at Sandy Hook, where Brother Leggett, our presiding elder, preached four able and highly appreciated sermons. I did the rest of the preaching, which was severe on my afflicted throat, but which resulted in a general uplift to the Church. We paid in all $129 for our ministerial help. I am sure we are stronger in the faith, and living nearer up to the teachings of the Methodist Church. We have recently baptized 17 infants. Infant baptism has been a much neglected practice in this neighborhood.....We are moving along in every line of work, but are behind in finances. I am sure there will not be fifty bales of cotton raised on this whole charge. Four of my congregations are in the Pearl River section where the grass worms ate all the crops. The grass worms and boll weevils have given us much trouble, but we are, yet praising God from whom all blessings flow. The preacher feels like going to Conference and looking nice, since the Jamestown congregation presented him with a nice suit of clothes. The mistress of the parsonage is also happy, having received a $46 suite of furniture, all of which is paid for. Thanks to Foxworth and Jamestown. Pray for us.

W. B. WALDROP, P. C.

FANNIN, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: Let me say through the columns of the Advocate that we are still having good times on the Fannin charge. We have held seven revivals and had a number of conversions and eight accessions to the Church. There are only a few within the bounds of this charge who are not members of some Church, but not a few of them (judging the tree by its fruit) needed to get closer to God, and we praise him for this revival of religion in the Church. We have a large number of good people here, however, or they have this preacher badly fooled, and I do not believe I am fooled. They certainly have been good to us; money has been scarce, but we have had plenty to eat ("Such as I have give I unto thee"), and we have no room to complain. The congregations have been growing, the people are easy to please and seem to be satisfied with the kind of food the preacher gives them from the pulpit. I have never succeeded in filling them so full that they did not want more; it seems that they have a coming appetite, or come expecting something next time.

There are eleven white Sunday schools in my territory—five Methodist, five Baptist and one union—with an enrollment of about four hundred. Our revivals have meant much to the life of these schools; about ninety per cent of the scholars are members of the Church. There are also eight colored Sunday schools, with an enrollment of about seven hundred.

We would not stop without saying a word about our public schools; one thing that I like is to know that the teachers are all members of some Christian Church. This is most important. Many children do not hear of Jesus in the home, and in some cases their parents do not take them to church and Sunday school; so all they know of religion is what they see in the life of their school teacher. I am glad that our people are opening their eyes to this fact. The principal here at Fannin, Prof. Hall, is a Methodist preacher, and the assistant is a consistent member of the Baptist Church. We are glad to have them in our community, for they will mean much to the churches and Sunday schools, as well as make for us a successful school. We are making some progress in mission work, and are trying to make an every-member canvass. At some churches the plan is working fine, the missionary committee having taken the campaign into their hands; at other places we have not accomplished much yet, but will soon marshal our forces for a charge. Brethren, pray for us that we may be more fruitful.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

(Adopted by the W. H. M. S., of Decatur, Miss., September 26, 1912.)

Whereas, It has pleased God in his wisdom to take from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. C. C. Evans, and, whereas, by her unselfish efforts among us as president of our society, which position she held at the time of her death, and by her patient devotion to duty in all the affairs of her Christian life, always exemplifying the highest type of Christian womanhood, she has most deeply implanted herself in our hearts and affections; therefore be it Resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Decatur W. H. M. S., while humbly submitting to the will of the Master, do most deeply mourn the death of our beloved president and offer the family and friends our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of great sorrow.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the local paper, and that a copy be furnished the family of the deceased; also that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this society. Signed by: Mrs. B. F. Coursey, Mrs. W. C. Mabry, Mrs. C. M. Wells, Mrs. C. R. Hardy, Miss Maggie Dansby, Committee.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Adopted at the Quarterly Conference held at Santee (Miss.) Church, September 24, 1912.

Whereas It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst Brother I. M. Applewhite, who was for more than forty years a steward of the Methodist Church within this charge, and whose life was one of consecrated service, and while we bow in humble submission to him who doeth all things well, yet we feel keenly the loss of this faithful brother, and well remember that at the end of each Conference year the unpaid assessment of Old Santee Church was equally paid by him and Dr. J. D. Terrell, deceased, and that in the death of Brother Applewhite the Church has lost one of its most useful and consecrated members, the State an honored and loyal citizen, the family a devoted, loving husband and father; therefore, be it resolved by the members of this Quarterly Conference:

First—That we extend to the family our heart-felt sympathy in their hour of bereavement and point them to Him who is able to sustain them, and assure them that we remember them in our prayers.

Second—That these resolutions be spread upon the Quarterly Conference records; that a copy be sent to his family, and a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by M. L. White, pastor, and H. T. McGehee, W. H. Livingston and G. W. Holloway, stewards.

A GOOD MEETING IN BEAUMONT, TEXAS.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am very busy winding up my year's work, but will take time to say a few things in behalf of evangelist Rev. E. L. Whiddon, and his work with me in my mission territory. He came here and pitched his large tent on Live Oak Street, in North Beaumont, and began to preach. He continued for two weeks, preaching three times a day the first week, and twice a day the second week. As a result of these services we received 27 members into our Church, organized a W. H. M. S. and Epworth League, and will in the near future organize a North End Methodist Church. A number joined the other churches. Whiddon is untiring in his labors with the young people, as well as the old. Our Conference is very much in need of such men as Brother Whiddon to build up the Church in its mission territory. He is a hustler as well as an earnest, clear, practical gospel preacher. This meeting has resulted in much good to the people of North End. He had large and attentive congregations up to the very last service.

We hope to see Brother Whiddon made one of our Conference or District Evangelists. First Church is progressing nicely along all lines.

Yours fraternally,

W. J. JOHNSON.

Miss Tsukin Aria, a Japanese girl, has recently received the degree of Ph. D. at Columbia University. She is the first of her country-women to receive this degree.

Comparative Values.

President David Starr Jordan calls attention to the fact that "a single battleship costs as much as a big university, and yet the battleship is doomed to the scrap heap in 10 or 12 years. The cost of a single shot from one of the great guns of the navy would pay the salary of a school teacher for a year. The cost of a pair of battleships would reclaim most of the desert land of the country and thus provide homes for multitudes of people."

Southern Methodists are giving to Foreign Missions less than 50 cents per capita per annum, while on the Home Mission side there are 12 Buddhist temples in California alone. Nor is this all, for a fact quite as startling comes to us when we take up the study of Mormonism. From six members in 1830 they have grown to 400,000 in 1912. In the face of such existing conditions can we feel that we have begun yet to realize our Stewardship?

An Ideal Missionary Society.

The hour and the women arrived. Scripture reading by President, followed by chain of prayers and suitable hymns. Then the members on the program were called for in quick succession, each woman reciting (not reading) her part. When long pieces are read in a soothing tone of voice the mind is apt to wander and drift into dreamland. The press superintendent illustrated the Bulletin on the board, thus giving valuable information. The District Secretary, who was present, personated a missionary and told of existing conditions in Korea. The business of both departments was dispatched promptly. The matter of insurance on the parsonage was brought up, and the amount necessary for three years was secured in a few minutes. Had it not rained, the attendance would have measured up to the standard. Finance—dues paid in full. Conference pledge contributed to by every member present. There is a fine Mission Study Class in which the members distinguish themselves, and honor the cause with splendid presentation of parts assigned to them.

MRS. A. C. YEAGER.

From Florence, Miss.

We have had a very good Foreign Missionary Society at Florence for several years, but we realized that this did not include all God would have us do, so recently our District Secretary, Mrs. Wood of Jackson, made us a visit. Her presence was most helpful, and as a result, we organized the Home Department to our missionary society. Our consecrated second vice-president, Mrs. J. R. Singletary, has organized the girls into a Juvenile society, and they are going forward in the work. Several of our members here exemplify the life of the Savior in their giving, and works of love for the progress of the kingdom on earth.

Mrs. H. L. McCLESKEY.

DISTRICT INSTITUTES.

North Mississippi Conference. The Itineration Committee of the Missionary Council has arranged to give some of the best workers of the various Conferences for a series of District meetings and Institutes. The North Mississippi officers are trying to arrange for these meetings to be held early in November. Miss Daisy Davies will have them in charge. There are few, if any, better qualified for this work. These meetings are to educate and inspire our women, and to deepen their spiritual life. We hope to gain a clearer vision of what God expects each one personally to do in this part of his vineyard. The dates and places of meetings will be announced later.

Conditions in Brazil.

Bishop Lambuth, in a recent letter, says that the situation in Brazil is worse than he ever encountered as regards ill health upon the part of several of the missionaries, and the possible breakdown of others in the near future.

One of the workers in Brazil says, "Only once since I have been in the mission field have we had such a year, and that was when there was an epidemic of yellow fever in Rebeirao Preto and Rio, and of typhoid fever in Petropolis."

When we read such statements as above, our hearts are filled with sadness, for we realize that our work is being fearfully handicapped, and "the fields are already white unto the harvest." With ill health and possible nervous breakdowns the "few laborers" are working against heavy odds. What are we in the homeland doing to alleviate these conditions? Think of it, some of our missionaries are trying to do the work of six women! Can any human creature stand such strenuous demands for any length of time without breaking down? Is it just to them to let them even attempt such sacrifices? The Council sent out four new missionaries, Misses Henderson, Hyde, Kenny, and Jarrett, to reinforce those already on the field. These women sailed from New York on Sept. 20th on the Voltaire in company with Mrs. Brown and Miss Glenn. These new missionaries can relieve the situation only a little at present, for most of their time will be spent in studying the language. Only the strongest, most able-bodied women should be sent to our Foreign fields. While conditions in Brazil seem very dark, there is always a dawn after the night. Miss Richmond is doing a splendid work in Rio at People's Institute. She is only assisted by Miss Simpson, who has charge of the kindergarten which numbers forty. The Petropolis school has more pupils than at any time in its history. In fact, all the schools in Brazil are growing in numbers and in favor with the people and the government. How to meet the demands with the small working force is the problem.

Sad News From China.

A cablegram from China, under date of September 13, announces the death of one of our missionaries. Miss Sophia Manns, from cholera. Miss Manns went to China six years ago from the Northwest Texas Conference. We feel that our work in China has sustained a deep loss, but "our loss is His gain."

nectional work, yet she writes, "Please say to our sisters that the report blanks have gone out like Noah's dove, and I, in my ark, await their return with deep interest." May the Dove return with the "olive branch in its mouth!" In writing of the work she mentions Crowley as being the liveliest place heard from. They publish a church paper there which contains many items of interest, which she hopes, in time, to "pass on to others." It isn't a very difficult task to guess who is pastor in Crowley. Brother Atkinson is noted for his progressive, up-to-date methods. Mrs. McKinney suggests that you write her a personal letter when you return reports. A CAPITAL IDEA.

Speaking of the Advocate Piano Club, here is a letter from one of our Club members, a Georgia lady, which is a fair sample of the letters we are receiving every day. She writes: "I think it a capital idea. I know we would not have had our piano if we had waited to have gotten the whole amount. I find no fault with the Club plan so far, and as for the Club piano, we are just delighted with it. All our friends say they would like to have one just like it. It is just a beauty, and we value it more than anything else in the house."

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The Sunday school at Greenwood has come up to the required "standard of excellence" for our Sunday schools, by organizing Home and Cradle Roll Departments, Mrs. S. A. Alexander being chosen superintendent of the one and Mrs. I. R. Thweat, superintendent of the other. A Teacher Training class had been organized following a recent and very gracious revival led by Rev. P. M. Brown, the presiding elder, some weeks ago. In common with many other Sunday schools the need of ample room is a handicap at Greenwood, but with the present life of the church, additional room is now receiving serious consideration. The building has just been painted and now presents a neat appearance, but the need is room. Among the more than half a dozen from Greenwood who have graduated from our Mansfield Female College, is Mrs. S. A. Alexander, sister of Mrs. A. S. Lutz. She has carried the marks of her Alma Mater through these years of faithful service in the Church, and is teacher of the Young People's Bible class at this time.

The Sunday School Board is sending out samples of Certificates of Honor to be awarded to those pupils that attain a place on the Honor Roll in schools where a system of grading and rewards is adhered to. They are expected to be given quarterly. The points noted on the certificate are for attendance, being on time, offerings, Bibles brought, daily Bible readings, church attendance, lesson study, hand work, and deportment. The plan is to grade the pupils strictly according to the work done, and to award certificates to such as make 85 per cent (more or less) during the quarter. To do this it is necessary to have regular meetings of the teachers and keep correct records, grading each pupil according to the standard set. Even if the certificate is not given, the names could be placed on an honor roll, and in this way the pupil could be made to feel that his work in Sunday school, as in the day school, is counted. Annual diplomas, according to the certificate plan, are to be given to those pupils that get the four quarterly certificates.

The Crowville Sunday school on the Winnsboro charge, in which our Methodists work, subscribes for fourteen of David C. Cook's Mothers' Magazines for the Home Department members. If our farmers and professional men need journals along their special lines, no less do the mothers of our children need to study their nature from the various standpoints from which the specialists know them. Some parents know less about their children than do some farmers about their calves, the children suffering in consequence of their ignorance. The schools teach the farmers agriculture, the machinist mechanics, and the banker book-keeping, but the mothers of children mostly learn the art of nursing and rearing by experimenting on helpless innocence and the child must be forever handicapped for what the parents didn't know—that they might have known, had they used some of the means for studying child nature that is now within reach of all. Our Home Department Magazine is itself a good home magazine, but there are others that should supplement this. The Crowville plan for the Home Department may be a good one.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The only way to make people believe in you is to let them witness some real good in your life.

Several of our progressive Sunday schools are emphasizing the need of having every church member in the Sunday school, and are explaining what the church member's duty is to the school.

Superintendent Dunn, of the First Church, Greenville, will have a Parent's Social on Friday night previous to his Rally Day, thus endeavoring to enlist all the needed grown-ups in the church in his school.

The Rally Day programs gotten out by special schools have been of great interest and artistic appropriateness. Indeed, the progress of obtaining publicity by means of legitimate and helpful advertising has been marked in our Conference for this last year.

The Galloway Memorial Class of First Church, Corinth, is doing fine work. They have 16 now on the roll of their own personally conducted Home Department, and they are doing a vast deal of good because their Home Department visitors dispense good cheer.

Mrs. Scales' Cadet Class at Starkville, Miss., had a splendid attendance the first Sunday it met (Sept. 22) after the A. and M. College opening. It had an enrollment of 65 to begin with, and, best of all, those young fellows are writing home of their fine teacher and of their keen appreciation of her interest in them.

"A New Member Night" once every three months is a pleasant and appreciative way of giving recognition to the members joining the class within that time. They can then realize the real value that the class attaches to their coming. The president, teacher, and new members can be in the "receiving line," as it were, and thus the new pupils may meet in a social way the class fellows who may have had opportunity only to meet them casually before. The new members will then feel a renewed obligation to attend the class and become interested in its activities. Tie them at once to something they like to do and then they will not be so likely to drift. Man is really a social being and is apt to make quick response to anything that promises him an evening of genuine social pleasure; and he will find it, if you will plan for him a New Member's Night.

Do Your Hauling With It

From plowing in Texas, to pulling stumps in Alabama, the Hart-Parr Oil Tractor has, time and again, demonstrated its supremacy over every other kind of power.

Its success as a general purpose tractor on the farm has been so remarkable, many overlook the great utility of this MODERN FARM HORSE for hauling work.

But you can use the tractor for hauling your crops to market and for transporting all kinds of material—lumber, fertilizer, etc.—from the town to your farm. In fact, you can do a general transfer business with it.

Depending on size, a Hart-Parr Oil Tractor will easily haul 5 to 10 loaded wagons on the road and pull them along at a speed of 2 1/4 to 4 miles per hour. Handle this load on the cheapest grade of KEROSENE for fuel. And you, alone, can operate and guide the tractor. Figure out for yourself the great saving over 10 to 20 horses or mules and 5 to 10 men required for the same work.

And right on the farm, this same tractor will pull your compost spreader, haul your hay, and do countless other jobs. At every turn, the tractor saves you time, money and labor. It's a big paying investment.

DENHAM SPRINGS, LA.

On July 20 we began our first meeting at Live Oak, with Dr. J. T. Sawyer to do the preaching, which resulted in many reclamations, some conversions, four accessions on profession of faith, a general quickening of the life of the church, and the organization of a good prayer meeting. Brother Sawyer delivered grand discourses "in the spirit and with power!" On Sunday, August 11, I began at Alford Chapel. Rev. J. W. Faulk came to my assistance on Monday night. He preached for four days to the delight and edification of the people. There were four accessions to the Church. Then on the first Sunday in September I began at this place. Rev. W. W. Drake came to us Monday night in time for service and preached continually for us until Sunday night. While this meeting was greatly hindered by inclement weather, all who heard Brother Drake were much pleased and benefited. There were two accessions to the Church. Our third quarterly conference convened on September 7 at Friendship. Rev. C. C. Miller, the presiding elder, was on hand and preached Saturday at eleven o'clock to a large congregation. After the service we had an old-time dinner that was enjoyed very much. In the afternoon Brother Miller held the conference in his usual genial way, and made a strong plea for the flood sufferers. A collection amounting to $12.60 was taken Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service at which time he was greeted with a still larger congregation; notwithstanding, there was to be no basket dinner for that day. After a splendid service we had the communion service and baptized six children. On Monday night following Brother Faulk continued this meeting, preaching until Thursday. Much good was accomplished. Brother Faulk is a good preacher and knows how to conduct a revival service. Finally, our Conference Evangelist, Rev. A. W. Turner, came to us at Walker on September 21 and began services at the Fair Building the next morning. We labored under great difficulties—preaching in the open air, rain, etc.—yet we had a great meeting. Brother Turner's preaching is strong and forceful. There were 12 accessions, and a new church building was enterprised, $160 subscribed, and a lot well located was negotiated for. A building committee was appointed and the people generally enthused over the prospect. We have received thus far 26 members by certificate and otherwise.

R. V. FULTON.

SWEATMAN, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Inasmuch as we have just finished the last of our revival meetings on this charge, I will endeavor to give a brief outline of the results. To say that we have had great meetings hardly expresses it. The dear Lord has been with us all the year; otherwise we would have gone down as a miserable failure; but it does look like he has revealed himself more powerfully in this year's revivals than ever before. I have seen more real hard sinners convicted and saved from sin than ever before; have also seen more backsliders reclaimed. In short, I have never before seen such clean-cut conversions and so many of them, both in and out of the Church. It was a common thing to have from five to one hundred conversions at an altar service. Oh, it was just wonderful. We had in all some eight hundred conversions at the altar, and we had no hold up of the hand propositions; it was all altar work—people on bended knee before God agonizing over their sins. Out of the above number of conversions, some two hundred of them joined the various churches in our vicinity. We have received one hundred and seventeen into our Church so far and the prospects indicate that more of them will be added before the close of the year. The population in this section is far above the average in the interior. The people are very well to do and intelligent, but the trouble is that they have just allowed themselves to sit on the stool of "do nothing" so long that the devil came near getting them with their means, intellectuality and offspring. We had with us in our meeting Revs. S. L. Pope, of Itta Bena; W. J. O'Bryant, of Water Valley; Thomas L. Porter, of Hickory Flat; A. L. Clanton, of New Edinburg, Ark., and J. H. Earnhardt, of Concord, N. C. All of these brethren did very effective and heart-searching preaching. The greatest thing I can say for them is that they know God and come as near holding up the blessed Christ as any men I know of. We will work from now until Conference in the organization of missionary societies and leagues. We request the prayers of all Christians for God's presence to fortify us for the future battles.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

Dear Brother Meek: Please allow me to express through the Advocate my sincere appreciation of the many expressions of love and sympathy extended to me and my family during this the saddest time in our lives. I wish to say to our friends that while the waters of distress have run high we have not despaired through it all. We have learned to trust our Heavenly Father more and more. We have an abiding hope that we shall meet our loved one again some sweet day. May God bless our friends.

FERNWOOD AND SOUTH McCOMB.

Dear Dr. Meek: This delayed account of our revival meetings for the current year will be read with interest by many of the Advocate family. During the month of June we held a meeting of eight days in South McComb which greatly revived the church and strengthened the cause of Christ in this part of the city. I was assisted by Rev. J. Loyd Decell who expounded the word with power and telling effect. Brother Decell is one of the strongest preachers for a man of his age that I have ever heard. He is fine help in a meeting. There were 31 accessions to the Church during this meeting. Our Meeting at Fernwood was held during the month of August. The preaching was all done by Rev. W. B. Hogg, and it was well done, too. Brother Hogg is a strong preacher and a splendid revivalist, and he did a great work at Fernwood. The church was revived and there were 34 accessions to the membership. The entire membership of this charge would be glad to have either one of these brethren as their pastor for the next four years. Taking everything into consideration this charge is moving along nicely. Early in the year fifty per cent of our assessment for the Conference collections were forwarded to the several treasurers of the Conference boards, and we hope to pay the balance in full. On account of conditions caused by the I. C. strike and the shutting down of the J. J. White saw mill in this part of town, the South McComb Church is having a hard struggle financially. Everything is in good shape at Fernwood, and stays that way twelve months in the year. I say unhesitatingly that this is one of the most desirable pastorate in the Mississippi Conference. Some of the best people God ever made live in the bounds of this charge. They are kind to and thoughtful of their pastor and his family. They are loyal people and will stand by any preacher, whether they like him or not, that the Conference may send here. We have raised about $6000 for all purposes to date and have had about one hundred accessions to the Church. Our Sunday schools have both observed Children's Day and sent in the collection ($34.00) to the treasurer. Both of the Home Mission Societies are doing good work. Our two Epworth Leagues are raising $50 to assist a young preacher at Millsaps College. They have decided to raise this much every year for that purpose.

Last Sunday I organized a church with 21 members at Kokomo, a new town on the Fernwood & Gulf R. R. We have $1100 in sight as a building fund for a house of worship. Dr. H. L. Carruth, of that place, deserves special mention in connection with this movement. He was selected for Sunday school Superintendent, and is also a steward and trustee of the new church. We ask the prayers of all who read the Advocate.

GOD HELPED HIM.

There is a beautiful legend of Fra Bernardo. The monastery had vowed to set a carved altar to the Christ at Christmas-tide. Every monk was to do his own part. All the other monks had finished their work. On Christmas Eve Fra Bernardo knelt and told his Lord of his failure. He had tried with his poor skill to carve something for the altar, for Christ's dear sake, but somehow he could not make anything worthy. So he prayed that his fingers might have skill, and that he might be able that very night to carve the dream of beauty that was in his heart. In the morning the monks sought Bernardo's cell and found him there—

"Dead, smiling still, and prostrate at in prayer;
While at his side a wondrous carving lay—
A face of Christ sublimely tender, sweet—
The work of Fra Bernardo was complete."

So it will be with those who seem to fall but who continue striving faithfully, doing their lowly work as well as they can. When the end comes it will be seen that what to them seemed failure was beautiful with the beauty of Christ. God finishes the work that His lowly ones try to do for him.—The late J. R. Miller, in A Heart Garden.

INDICATED IN INFLAMMATION.

In cases of inflammation or congestion, whether external or in the organs of respiration, Vick's Croup and Pneumonia Salve is found very effective. Pleasing results are obtained by applying direct to the inflamed parts, if the trouble is external. In cases of colds, catarrh, croup and pneumonia it is applied externally over the affected parts, the healing vapors being released by body heat and inhaled, thus reaching all of the cavities of the organs of breathing.

The stimulation thus afforded gives immediate results in reduced fever, easier breathing and encourages excretion of the phlegm with which the passages are engorged in such cases.

The efficiency of the salve is readily tested by melting a teaspoonful and inhaling the vapor resulting.

This article may be purchased in three sizes, 25c, 50c, $1.00 at druggists or direct by mail from the manufacturer. The Vick Chemical Company, 28 Milton Avenue, Greensboro, N. C.

Physicians who are not now using Vick's Salve and who desire to test its efficiency in their practice will be furnished with a full sized jar without charge. Small sample free to anyone on request.

A NOBLE WARFARE.

As we have repeatedly said in these columns, one of the meanest and most despicable of all vices is profanity. That men are guilty of it is evidence incontrovertible of the awful depravity of human nature. Since it can bring neither pleasure nor profit, indulgence in it attests the complete dominancy of evil within the heart as but few other things do. That decent people as they go about the affairs of life should have to listen to profane language and be unable to protect themselves from it, is a crying shame. The Masonic fraternity for some time has been waging a vigorous warfare against this widespread vice, and now the news comes that the Roman Catholics have organized a "Holy Name Society" to combat it. This is, indeed, a noble cause—one in which every disciple of Christ should heartily enlist. We enthusiastically applaud every effort made in this direction, no matter from what source it comes.

The Times-Democrat of October 12 contained an interesting editorial on the "Decay of Profanity." The writer insists that a stroll along the Mississippi River bank, where steamboats are being loaded, may now be made without having to listen to the foul oaths that formerly broke upon the ear, and that even the Billingsgate fish market of London has grown weary of the distinction of being "the Monte Carlo of cussdom," and now insists that all who go there shall use respectful language. He further says: "The swearing squire in England is reported to be dying out, just as the profane justice and cursing statesman of America are now the exception where once they were the rule."

The evidences of the decline of profanity are not yet as manifest as we should like to see them—we yet hear far too much of it; but we are grateful for even this encouraging note. The world will have gone far forward on the path of progress when the race is made up of men, women, and children of clean speech.

THE URGENT NEED OF FULL COLLECTIONS

It is only about six weeks until the meeting of our patronizing Annual Conferences, and there is a vast amount of work to be done in that brief time. The regular activities of the Church must be kept up and stimulated, and the assessments for the various benevolent causes must be largely raised, since in most of the charges this task is unfortunately deferred until the closing weeks of the year. There is every reason why a pastor should do his best to secure his Conference collections in full. This money is essential to the maintenance and extension of the enterprises of the Church, and a deficit anywhere lessens her resources and tends to interfere with her operations in her various departments and fields of service. Every cent that our people are asked to contribute is most urgently needed.

But the task of raising these apportionments should not be regarded as the pastor's alone. It is true that in most of the charges he is expected to look after these claims, but in performing this duty he should have the hearty co-operation of his official board and the members of the Church. Every Methodist should count it a privilege to contribute to these benevolences. Giving is both a duty and a most helpful means of grace. No Christian can neglect it without suffering a loss in his spiritual life. A parasitic spirit—that of always receiving and seldom or never giving—is the antithesis of the spirit of Christ. The grace of liberality is necessary to completeness of character.

Nor is it true, as we sometimes hear said, that our Conference assessments are unduly heavy; that we are being taxed by the authorities of the Church beyond what we are able to pay. Considering our resources, the amounts we are asked for are in reality small. Measured by our willingness, they may seem large, but not so when measured by our financial ability. After years of observation, we do not hesitate to say that there are comparatively few persons in the Church who are contributing as much as they ought. It is not uncommon to see people who are worth thousands of dollars giving the paltry sum of $5 or $10 to carry on the varied and far-reaching activities of the denomination to which they belong. They spend more on personal pleasures of the most trivial and unnecessary kind than they do to speed the coming of our Lord's kingdom. Yet we have amongst us preachers who apologize for the assessments of the Church, thus to some extent condoning the stinginess in their congregations. Quit it, brethren. We are not asking for too much, but rather for too little. Loosened purse-strings is one of the imperative needs of the Christianity of our time. The wealth of the world is in the hands of the professed followers of Christ, and yet for the want of funds to carry on the work of reaping, white and precious harvests are going to waste in many fields.

Let our slogan from now until the Annual Conference gatherings be, "COLLECTIONS IN FULL FROM EVERY CHARGE." We would make this our rallying cry, not because we put material above spiritual things, but because, without adequate funds, the Church must be crippled and hindered in her efforts to bless and save humanity. Spiritual forces work largely through physical agencies. Even sordid commerce has done much to open the way for the advance of the conquering Christ. Steam and electricity are helping to tell the story of redeeming love all around the globe.

Nearly everywhere wide-open doors challenge the disciples of Jesus, and the Macedonian call has become a world cry. Our crops in most sections of Louisiana and Mississippi are fairly good; God in many ways has wonderfully blessed us. Let us not fail to show our appreciation by honoring him with our substance. His needy ones on earth are suffering for the want of assistance that we can give. In doing for them, we shall do for Him who laid down his life for us upon the cross. The charge that sends up full collections will thereby declare for advancement in the noble work of human redemption. On the other hand, the one that reports a deficit will be helping to call a halt or to sound a retreat. Bearing aloft, as we do, the banner of Prince Immanuel, woe be unto us if we cease to go forward. With far greater interests involved than were ever staked upon the outcome of a bloody carnal battle, the Church appeals to every worker to do his full duty in these momentous days of crisis and opportunity. If each will do his honest best, there will be no retrogression or standing still, but a continuous reaching forth to larger things, until the beams of the Sun of Righteousness shall illumine and beautify all the lands of earth. Some one has said that the future wars of the world will be largely matters of finance. To a considerable extent, this will also be true of the campaigns waged to extend the sway of the Prince of Peace.

A BOOK WORTH READING.

We have read with much interest "Their Yesterdays," a new volume from the pen of Harold Bell Wright, which has been issued by the Book Supply Company of Chicago. The story has a nameless hero and heroine, but, notwithstanding, they are live personalities and stand clearly out before the mind. The author writes with an enviable brilliancy; some of his descriptions are strikingly beautiful and impressive. We take it that he had a definite object in view—the exaltation of wifehood and motherhood. He insists that of all the open doors that woman may enter, the old open door which leads into the sphere of home-making is by far the noblest, and the one for which she is best fitted, and in which she can make her influence most powerfully felt. The great extent to which one's early teaching and training affect one's after life is also strongly set forth. If we were to pass any criticism upon the volume it would be that the plot is rather too stiff and artificial. From beginning to end there is little uncertainty and scarcely a single surprise. But, in the main, the work is well done; the sentiment throughout is pure and wholesome, and those who read the story will not only be entertained, but also strengthened and helped. It is not often that we can commend so unreservedly a piece of current fiction.

THE GREATNESS OF METHODISM.

Great beyond conception is Methodism in its various branches, and it is still growing. The Western Christian Advocate is authority for the statement that the Methodist Episcopal Church in the maintenance of its Sunday school work issues annually forty-four million copies of papers and periodicals—enough paper to make a band around the world 660 feet wide.

THE PROBLEM OF THE CITY.

By Charles Stelzle.

It requires a fool or a philosopher to prophesy what a generation may bring forth, and one may be about as trustworthy as the other in the matter of venturing an opinion as to the future of the city. It was a titled statistician who reasoned that a city's food supply could not be brought from a greater distance than 35 miles, because this was the travelling limit of cattle, and that this fact would set the bounds of a city's growth. Sir William Petty argued that if London continued to double its population every 40 years, while England doubled its population only once in 300 years, obviously the men on the farms could not possibly supply the city with provisions, as in his day it required one man on the farm for every man in the city. The trouble with Petty was that he based his conclusions upon the supposition that all the factors involved would remain as they were. This is a common fault with many modern sociologists.

Malthus, the great economist, said that the time would undoubtedly come when it would not be possible to supply the world with sufficient food because, while the population was growing in geometrical proportions, food could be produced only in arithmetical ratios. How was he to know that a famous President of the United States would one day seriously discuss the question of race suicide, and that another man, whose name has become almost equally famous, would invent a wonderful harvesting machine which has revolutionized agricultural life and practice.

The problem of the city is by no means a modern one. Nevertheless, the factors which make the city of the twentieth century possible are of recent origin. The same causes which account for the rapidly growing American cities are responsible for the growth of the cities in foreign lands, for the problem of the city is world-wide. The modern city is the product of the newer civilization. It is the out-growth of economic and social conditions from which there is no turning back.

In 1800 there were six cities in the United States with a population of 8,000 and over, as follows: Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore, Boston, Charleston and Salem, these cities having a combined population of about 200,000, or less than the total population of Portland, Oregon, which ranks twenty-eighth among the cities of this country. In 1910 there were 2,405 places of 2,500 inhabitants or more in the United States, which were counted as "urban" or "city," having a combined population of 42,623,383, or 46.3 per cent. as against a rural population of 49,348,853, or 53.7 per cent. of the total population.

Men live in cities because they can drain vast areas of surrounding farm lands of their products. Petty's 35-mile limit no longer holds. London to-day eats grain which was grown in Manitoba. The milk supply area of our great cities covers several hundred miles.

Whatever other causes there may be—and there are many which we cannot enumerate—the social factor is one of the most important with reference to the development of the city. The city provides better educational facilities than does the country. Recreational life is more advantageous. Standards of living are higher. The hours of labor are shorter. There is a better opportunity for social life. These have a strong tendency to draw the country-man to the city and to keep the city-bred man there. The cities will unquestionably dominate the nation. What is to be the character of the city in 1920 when it will govern all the people? What will happen when the city out-votes the country?

It seems almost incredible that the grossest forms of immorality should be protected in the first city in America through unscrupulous police officers who are commissioned and maintained to eradicate the evil; but this has come to pass because we have permitted a corrupt ring to gain control of municipal life. The average citizen is concerned only when the evil somehow creeps over into his lot. He is not at all interested even though the corruption is eating out the heart of the city's life, provided that it does not seem to injure him. This is one of the gravest perils of the city.

We have permitted land speculators to build our cities for us—men who are interested in their own gain and nothing else. The greatest peril of the city is not the tenement dwellers. The greatest peril is the smug, self-satisfied middle-class, which is quite content with itself and with things as they are. They act as clogs in the wheels of progress. These are the people who must be aroused to a sense of their own personal responsibility.

The Church is in peril in the city mostly because the great middle class, of which the Church is principally composed, has no hearty interest in the conditions which have developed in the city in recent years. The Church is slowly but surely losing ground in the city. If the city is to dominate the nation—and it will—and if the Church continues to lose in the city, it does not require a prophet to foretell the inevitable results.

New York City, N. Y.

A VERY IMPORTANT CAMPAIGN.

John M. Moore, D. D.

The Missions Council of the United States and the Council of Women for Home Missions, representing thirty-two Boards of Home Missions, are expending $40,000 in an educational campaign in the interest of Home Missions. The Executive Secretary, Mr. Charles Stelzle, began work by issuing twelve charts, that present in bold outline twelve subjects that are now being discussed in thousands of papers of the United States, representing the Church, secular, and labor press, in the twelve weeks preceding November 17-24, which is to be observed as Home Mission Week. Five thousand sets of these charts have gone out to our Southern Methodist preachers. According to instruction from Mr. Stelzle they are to be displayed in order, one a week until all twelve are hung in the church or chapel. They are to be explained at the mid-week service in as few or as many words as the pastor may choose to use. The discussions in the public press will suggest proper lines of comment.

In harmony with the general campaign, the Secretary of the Department of Home Missions of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is sending out to all the preachers of the Church a package of literature bearing upon his work and policies. In inaugurating policies for the work of a great department of the Church, mistakes are not only possible, but probable, but the beginning must be made somewhere, and if "doing the will" will insure knowledge of the doctrine, surely a serious effort to meet conditions will result not only in some achievements, but in improved methods. Criticisms which present suggestions for improvements in policies and plans will be welcomed, but the lame man does not want his crutches taken away, if nothing better is substituted.

Home Mission Week is too important a matter not to be observed by every congregation. In the cities joint meetings will be held, at which noted speakers will deliver addresses. The time fixed for Home Mission Week is November 17-24. In Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia, the Annual Conference sessions will interfere with the observance at the time fixed. The Home Mission Secretary has written the officers of the Conference Boards in those States and suggested that where the interference was so great as practically to make the observance of November 17-24 impossible that a later date be chosen, and suggested that January 5-12, 1913, might be an appropriate time. The response from the officers were so near unanimous that the Secretary hereby announces that Home Mission Week will be set for January 5-12 in those churches where its observance has been rendered impracticable by the meeting of the Annual Conference. Southern Methodism should get the full benefit of the great wave of Home Mission sentiment and intelligence which is now passing over the country, and it can do so by every pastor falling in line, reading the literature sent out, and observing to the best of his ability Home Mission Week either at the time designated, or at such time as will best suit his church.

WHAT NEXT?

I have lived to see strange things happen. One of the recent surprises is that the connectional agencies of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should become political machines and, leaving the legitimate work they are established to do, enter the field of politics. There is now before me an address delivered by Henry Ward Beecher at Cooper Institute, February 2, 1860, on woman's suffrage. It is a straight out and out plea for female suffrage. While there is nothing on it to show where it was printed, it came from the office of Prof. A. M. Trawick, from whom I recently received other documents on the same subject. I understand that Professor Trawick is connected with our Boards in Nashville in some capacity, and this literature is being sent out with the official sanction of whatever position he holds. The only effect this literature had on me was to lead me to prepare a sermon in reply, which I shall deliver from Dan to Beersheba, and by which I hope to kill as much sentiment as he can make in behalf of this pestilent heresy. To my mind it is an abomination of abominations, the greatest menace to what is left us of our Protestant home, and directly subversive of the divine order of human society. Beecher's address is significant. The woman suffrage movement had its birth, according to Hon. James Bryce, certainly an impartial witness, in the abolition crusade. That crusade had its culmination in the wild riot of political fanaticism in the Reconstruction era in the South. Henry Ward Beecher was a high priest of the movement and exulted doubtless in the triumph of negro suffrage. The ruin wrought by the mad experiment of negro suffrage was nothing compared to the deeper ruin that will come from woman suffrage. I expect it to come and the painful lesson to be learned, as it seems humanity has to learn all of its lessons at the cost of suffering—then the reaction and return to reason. But I confess that I never expected to see the "equality" literature that emanated from that arch-enemy of our Southern people and their civilization, Henry Ward Beecher, sent out by official distribution from the offices of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.—S. A. Steel, in the Midland Methodist.

WHAT IS THE GOSPEL WORTH TO YOU?

By R. B. Eleazer.

A pastor whose charge has recently undertaken the support of a married missionary on the field at one thousand dollars a year, and has already remitted the first thousand, writes as follows in regard to the matter:

"Our offering is large only in comparison with the little that others are doing. When I think of what is left after this is given, we are still very unprofitable servants. There ought to be five hundred charges in our connection that would rise up and do what this charge has undertaken.

"I do hope that our example will inspire others to cease playing at missions and do something worthy of themselves and worthy of our glorious Christ. But this will never be done till all of our preachers not only have the missionary spirit, but that spirit must possess them."

A consecrated layman of Virginia writes: "I am one of the missionary leaders in asserting that we should so arrange our giving that, while not neglecting the general and benevolent work at home, we should send to the foreign field beyond the United States proper one-half of our contributions, this being by far the greater field, and being so poorly equipped with workers. We should not neglect the one, of course, but neither should we leave the other undone."

How far the Church is falling below the splendid standards outlined by the brethren quoted above is indicated by the fact that the annual assessment for foreign missions averages 24 cents per member, and that the average annual contribution to this cause from all sources, Woman's work included, is only 46 cents—less than a penny a week. This is surely a measure of our ignorance and thoughtlessness, rather than of our interest and ability. May God hasten the day when we shall recognize our obligation to a perishing world, and make some reasonable effort to discharge it.

ONE THING AND ANOTHER.

The preachers on the Alexandria District are rounding to on what, from the present viewpoint, promises to be a good year from the standpoint of the Church. This is a faithful and working hand which I have the pleasure of being associated in the work this year. All are worthy of mention for the work they have done; some are deserving of special mention.

Our brethren in the region of the waters were put into very close places from a financial point of view, but the kindness of some of God's people has to a degree modified the press. May the Lord, and other good people, hear them in mind when distress shall come upon them! Kelly seems to be destined for the Black River country "in the swelling of the flood," this being the third overflow he has withstood in that section. Thanks to the good Lord and the energy of our people in that country, I do not think there will be any permanent injury to the Church in these quarters.

Three men stand out somewhat from the crowd in the matter of things done so far this year: May at Columbia and the surrounding country, Ledbetter at Standard and the country adjacent, and Perritt at Marksville, etc. (that is the only fit geographical termination I know to give that work). The prospects are that there will be five new churches to report at Conference from the works of these three.

Our district and the Conference has lost a valuable man in the person of I. T. Reames, who has gone to Oregon for the health of himself and family. He has not transferred. He will locate at the next session of the Conference. He said the condition of his health was such he could not give proper service to the Church, and, being so young, he would not become a beneficiary upon her bounty. Should his health be restored, he says that he will return to the ministry. What do you think of that?

A goodly number of people have united with the Church, and the Sunday school work, generally, is improving. Thanks to the kindness of the author, I have been permitted to read a book that I think is of interest to every Sunday school teacher and member of the League, not to speak of preachers and such. The volume is "The Story of the English Bible," by P. B. Wells. It contains a vast amount of information concerning our Bible. My, what our ancestors endured in order that we might enjoy as pleasant lives as we have! We and our civilization to-day are the product of their sufferings and work. The book is well written and brings to us in a handy volume the history of the greatest work in the English language. The Bibliography in the last part is particularly good and full. The book is deserving of a great circulation among Bible readers.

I have been here and there during the year, and it appears to me that we are doing some things within the bounds of our Conference that will win the approval of God, and that, notwithstanding rains and floods, we will close a very good year in church work throughout the State; so thinks the "Presiding Elder-at-Large."

BRISCOE CARTER.

THE WORK IN THE SHREVEPORT DISTRICT.

Dear Brother Meek: I am enclosing my fourth round. I have been rather strenuously engaged in revival work all summer. All of us are keeping pretty busy up this way trying to keep the church abreast with this rapidly growing section of our State. Many conversions are reported by the pastors as a result of their meetings. I think we will be able to report a considerable gain in membership. The work at Centenary and Mansfield is well under way and these two institutions will be able to give a most gratifying account of themselves at Monroe in December.

The finishing touches are being given to the beautiful Noel Memorial Church in Shreveport. All pronounce it second to none in the State in beauty and equipment. Work on the new First Church is progressing rapidly. The congregation of this church while waiting for the new building has converted the City Hall into a veritable bee-hive of religious activity. Work will soon commence on the new building in Queensboro. Before another year passes Shreveport Methodism will be housed in buildings second to none in the connection.

The blackboard you saw in the church at Mansfield is growing whiter each week and the indefatigable pastor hopes to knock out all the black, soon after Conference, if not before, if the Bishop doesn't disturb him.

Rev. C. M. Morris, our pastor at Lachute, is bereaved in the loss of his father, who died here this week at the advanced age of seventy-three years. He was a local preacher in our Church and leaves a precious heritage of faith to a large family of children, two of whom are Methodist preachers.

Rev. N. S. Cornell, one of our honored superannuates, passed to his reward a few weeks ago. Brother Cornell is widely known among our older people, having served the Church as pastor and presiding elder for many years with indefatigable zeal and industry. One of his former comrades will no doubt furnish a suitable tribute to his memory.

The Mooringsport and Zwolle pastors are both rejoicing over the recent arrivals in their homes.

Our preachers and people are unanimous in their praise of the Advocate and your editorship. I have frequent class meetings on the subject of subscribing to the Advocate with our official members during the sessions of the Quarterly Conferences.

All you need is to get straight on the question of the rights of women, and I feel sure that our campaign will convert you before the next General Conference. With best wishes to you and the Advocate, I am your friend and brother.

PAUL M. BROWN.

MY LAST PASTORAL CHARGE AND ELSE.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis.

I.

The District Conference of the Woodville District met in Summit in 1877. Rev. Ben Jones, who was called home in 1893, was in charge of the church at that place. James A. Godbey was presiding elder. Rev. John Ritchey had been for four years on Liberty or Amite charge. I had been for four years at Magnolia. Both of us had to move. Ritchey transferred to the North Mississippi Conference. I was his successor on the Amite circuit. A delegation was sent to the District Conference to select a preacher to succeed Ritchey. I was selected and appointed. I had not moved my family in seven years. There being no parsonage on the charge at the time, I let my family remain at Holmesville. There are now three parsonages within the bounds of what constituted the Amite circuit in 1877.

In due time I started to my new charge. I was to preach at the Adams Camp Ground on the fourth Sunday in December, but was rained out. Two of my stewards, J. E. and J. P. Carruth, met me and gave me a cordial welcome each to his home. Both proved to be good and true friends to the new preacher. Brother J. Enoch Carruth went home to glory some years ago. Brother John P. still lives to let his light shine, though he is now old and feeble. Here I will make mention of some good men who were helpful to me, who have since gone to their reward: Rev. E. L. Tarver, Rev. J. E. Jagers, Rev. Wm. Wood, W. B. Raiford, James and Thomas Roberts, Arthur Whittington, D. N. Butler, Winston Wilkinson, Jas. Johnston, J. E. Carruth, Sam Carruth, Ferd Huff, Dr. Sherly, Sam McNulty, Grif and James Terrell and many others—all good men, and I trust that they are now in heaven.

I served the charge three years, went out in the "highways and hedges," and built up churches, etc. In 1880 the work was divided and a Brother Flowers was put in charge of the Liberty circuit, while I was retained on the Adams and Bogue Circuit to work. I received, I suppose, 150 into the Church during the three years I was there, and baptized about 200 children. I acted as colporter for the American Bible Society in 1878, in connection with my pastoral work. As Bible distributor, I had a little laughable experience. On one occasion I called at a house and inquired if they wanted a Bible. The woman of the house asked me what kind of Bibles I had, at the same time eyeing me rather suspiciously. I said, "I have good old Baptist Bibles." She said, "I don't want one of them; I am a Methodist." She then said, "If my husband was here, I specks he would buy one." I then said to her, "The Bible is God's book, and he has only one Bible." "He may not have but one up there," she said, "but they have two down here." I succeeded in selling her a Bible.

On another occasion I stopped at a house, and asked an old lady if they were in need of a Bible. "They have one here," she said, "but it is a song Bible." I saw clearly she would not know a Bible from a United States History, if she saw one; so I passed on to the next house.

I usually stayed from home two, and sometimes three, Sundays on a trip, and was kept busy most of the time, visiting from house to house, reading, singing and praying with and for my people. I did lots of pastoral work and enjoyed it.

On one occasion I rode up to a house about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, dismounted and went in. Everything seemed quiet and a little serious. After a few moments conversation I called for a Bible. I then read some verses, and began to sing:

"Peace be on this house bestowed;
Peace on all that here reside;
Let the unknown peace of God
With the man of peace abide," etc.

As soon as I began to sing, I noticed the mother of the home weeping. I learned afterwards that they were having a big family "broll" when I appeared in sight. It came abruptly to a close. It may have been that my visit was timely. This occurred more than thirty years ago.

Church News

Syracuse University (Methodist Episcopal) has broken all previous records by opening with an enrollment of 3500 students.

Bishop E. H. Hughes, of the M. E. Church, has a book on "The Teaching of Citizenship," of which more than 10,000 copies have been sold.

Dr. Henry Haigh, ex-president of the British Wesleyan Conference, was elected foreign missionary secretary at the recent session of that body.

Dr. R. B. Eggleston, of Richmond, Va., who a short time since was called to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church of Columbus, Miss., has signified his acceptance.

Rev. J. P. Lowrey, the well known Arkansas evangelist, who has been quite ill, is now reported to be able to take an occasional ride in a buggy or carriage. It is thought by his physicians that he will entirely recover.

A letter from Mrs. Mary Hoss Headman, daughter of Bishop Hoss, written from Galbraith Springs, Tenn., on October 9, states that the Bishop's improvement has been encouraging, but that his physicians still insist that he must make no engagements for some time to come.

With a view to promoting and improving Bible study among the Negroes of the South, the International Sunday School Committee is planning to have conducted among them in the various Southern States by trained specialists a series of institutes. In our judgment, this is a needed and timely movement.

Dr. John R. Mott, the noted Methodist layman and missionary leader, accompanied by a band of mission experts, started upon a world tour for the purpose of inspecting the operations of Christian workers in the various foreign fields, on October 5. In any great undertaking accurate information as to needs, difficulties, and methods is most important. Doubtless much good to the cause of Christianity will result from the careful study of conditions abroad by these earnest propagandists of the true faith.

Rev. A. H. Mecklin has lately rounded out a pastorate of fifty years at French Camps, Miss. The Presbyterian of the South says that next to that of the late Dr. Stratton at Natchez, this is the longest term of service that a Presbyterian minister has ever rendered the same congregation in the Magnolia State. It is reported that Mr. Mecklin is in high favor with his flock, and that he will likely continue to be its shepherd for some time to come. The Mecklins have long had an honored place in the history of the Presbyterian Church in Mississippi.

The following from the Central Methodist Advocate, of Lexington, Ky., raises a question that is well worth careful consideration: "There is not in South Carolina a white congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church. What congregations of that Church there are in the State are composed of negroes, and with the Colored M. E. Church already existing in that State, there is very little reason why the white M. E. Church should insist on organizing the Negroes of that State into M. E. Churches, thereby dividing them into two rival organizations."

Galloway College, at Searcy, Ark., has begun the work of the new session most auspiciously, there being already in the boarding department more than 150 girls, and a number of others are expected within the next few weeks. Hargrove College (co-educational) at Ardmore, Okla., has also made a good beginning, though it is harassed by debt and is in urgent need of funds. The latter institution is the only Southern Methodist school now in operation in the State of Oklahoma, though there are others in the process of organization.

The Alabama Christian Advocate declares in favor of having the next General Conference appoint a commission to study the question of laity rights for the women in all its bearings, and report to the succeeding session of that body in 1918. It strikes us that about the only merit in this proposal is that it would, perhaps, defer the obnoxious agitation of this issue for a time. We think the far wiser thing to do is that suggested by the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, namely, to lay the whole matter indefinitely on the table.

One of our Western Conferences is said to have taken the following action: "Resolved, That at the first roll call of the next session of this Conference, each pastor, when his name is called, shall be required to answer the question, 'Is your statistical report ready?'" We are inclined to think that this course of procedure is wise, and that it might generally be adopted to advantage. The way that some of the brethren have of withholding their statistical tables until the session of the Conference is nearly over is a most reprehensible practice, which undoubtedly ought by some method to be remedied.

A COMMENDABLE WORK.

Recently the ladies of the Shreveport First Church gave a "shower" to Mansfield Female College which was much appreciated. There were many useful and valuable gifts, among them being a complete set of china, which was purchased with money donations. Some of the ladies taking part in this interesting event were Mrs. Abel Bliss, Mrs. W. A. Nabors, Mrs. W. J. Crowder, Mrs. Wm. Sebastian, Miss Jessie Holt, Mrs. B. C. Peyton, Mrs. Will Johnson and Mrs. J. H. Fullilove. Mrs. Fullilove has recently presented to the College a complete set of furniture for a guest room, to be a memorial to her two daughters who formerly attended Mansfield College. The "shower" was much appreciated, and was appropriately received by Mrs. Bobbitt, the wife of President Bobbitt, who was present.

The ladies of Mansfield have organized what is called The College Improvement League. This organization has recently added many improvements to the college. Fresh paint, new paper, and attractive pictures have been placed upon the walls of the building, greatly increasing its beauty. This society exists solely for the purpose of helping to make Mansfield College a delightful place to which the mothers of the State may send their daughters to be educated, and any person may become a member of it by paying the membership fee, which is $1, to Mrs. George Wilson, Mansfield, La. If we can get a large number of new members, it will help the good work along.

ELISE B. LIVERMAN.

A GOOD MEETING AND SOME REFLECTIONS.

Dear Brother Meek: Please allow me space to speak a few words concerning our recent meeting at Oak Grove, which was conducted by our pastor, Brother Parker, and our presiding elder, Brother Tucker. Oh, how I wish more could have heard the good sermons Brother Tucker preached for us! I know those who came for mental gratification, for a "feast of reason and a flow of soul," did not go away disappointed. It has been said, "To every one of us God gives something that he wants us to say to others," and it is in my heart to try in my feeble way to write a few words that may be helpful to some one that may chance to read these few lines. It was my good pleasure to be able to attend these services, and a pleasure it was, indeed; for I did so much enjoy them.

All of the sermons were good, but there were two preached during this meeting that impressed me so forcibly that I mention them: One was on "The Power of Prayer." It seems that I can hear the words of the text ringing in my ears now, "Lord teach us how to pray, as John taught his disciples to pray." Prayer is the mightiest power in our hands to-day. Is it not a great sin that we do not use this talent of all talents? What blessings we are withholding from ourselves, the Church, and missions by not praying! But prayer is a costly exercise, and this, possibly, is why so few people dare pray in earnest. If we could learn to ring the prayer-bell, rather than the beggar's bell, we might accomplish more. The picture in my childhood was that of Atlas holding the world on his shoulders, but the picture for all to-day is Christ bearing the world upon his heart. The world with Atlas' shoulders under it we know is a myth, but the world with Christ's heart under it is the mightiest reality of the ages.

The other sermon that impressed me so forcibly was concerning the laying up of our treasures in heaven. While listening to these encouraging words, memory went back over the years that have flown, and I almost wished I was a child again. I thought of the lost opportunities; of wasted advantages; of the little child of whom no less a personage than our great Redeemer hath said, "suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven;" and then I thought of a little treasure that I have there, that all the wealth in this world could not purchase. It broke my heart to part with it—a darling little child. I thought for a time I could not live without him, but God giveth and be taketh away, and says where our treasures are there our hearts are also. And now I thank him for sending this little treasure into my home for so short a time (only nine months was he with us to brighten our home); and I thank him for the light which he kindled there that burned with so pure a flame and taught so sweet a lesson. Yes, let us all strive to lay up our treasures in heaven where we know they will be in better hands than ours. God is so merciful he never puts more on us than he gives us grace and strength to bear. I hope Brother Tucker and Brother Parker will be spared many days yet to preach good sermons where they are so much needed, and that God's richest blessings may be their reward is my humble prayer.

MRS. J. T. WILLIS.

Gibbsland, La.

THE MEETING AT PARKER MEMORIAL.

The meeting at Parker Memorial Church began on October 6, and closed Oct. 15. Rev. A. F. Smith, D. D., of Jackson, Miss., preached twice a day for nine days, to the delight and edification of large congregations. Mrs. Smith, who has a rich and beautiful voice, added greatly to the services by her well chosen solos, while Mr. I. N. Niebergall led the congregation in the old hymns of the Church.

Brother Smith's sermons were just the kind we most needed, and the membership of the church has been greatly blessed, while the unconverted have been made to see our religion in a clearer and more beautiful light than ever before. His sermons were masterpieces of inspiring thought, clothed in beautiful diction, abounding in striking metaphor and simile, all serving to bring to the hearer some great spiritual truth. The members of the church have been revived and prepared for a great winter's work, and about fifteen adults have been received on profession of faith, besides several by letter. This makes 85 accessions for Parker Memorial Church since Conference, 35 of them on profession.

H. R. SINGLETON.

Mansfield Female College.

In the issue of Oct. 3, we asked for TEN more girls. One has arrived and one more will come soon. Now for the other EIGHT. Can't 33,000 Methodists in Louisiana find EIGHT more girls? One new man in the Conference has sent us five. If each charge would send us just ONE, we would have to enlarge our quarters and such an impetus would be given to Christian education among Louisianians that they would rise in the power of their wealth and pride and give old M. F. C. every needed facility for the work of a greater M. F. C.

With fifty or sixty girls we can pay our running expenses and if you will give us one hundred or one hundred and twenty, we can take up one bond each year ourselves and the Conference need not give us one dollar out of its educational assessments.

Our Domestic Science Department has a fine new gas range and also a first-class new Singer Sewing Machine. One-sixth of all our girls in the College classes are taking this course.

NOTICE—Eight more girls wanted now.

It is said that Mrs. Russell Sage has given away to the public no less than $26,575,000. Her latest benefaction was the purchase of Marsh Island for $150,000 and dedicating it in perpetuity to the purpose of making a refuge for migratory birds. Marsh Island is located in South Louisiana.

Mr. H. H. Kohlsaat, editor and publisher of the Chicago Record-Herald since 1910, has again acquired control of the Inter Ocean. Mr. Kohlsaat was in part the owner of this paper from 1891 to 1893. He has announced that under his direction the Inter Ocean will continue to be staunchly loyal to the Republican party.

Recently 200 physicians pledged their bodies after death to medical universities for dissecting purposes. They did this, they claim, as an example, hoping that their influence will prompt others to give their bodies after death, so that the science of medicine and surgery may be further advanced.

Sweden gives annually $5,400 to encourage athletics among adults. It is not necessary to stimulate athletics among the youth, but that country looks with alarm at the tendency of adults to spend their lives in physical inaction. Sweden is said to be the only nation that gives material aid to the cause of athletics.

An order forbidding the importation of absinthe went into effect all over the United States on October 1. It is claimed that in New Orleans, where the absinthe habit is most common, the dealers have provided themselves with a supply sufficient to last for two years, while in New York the supply will be exhausted in two months.

The Parents' Club of one of the New Orleans High Schools has undertaken to secure cheaper street car transportation for school children. It has been learned that the Street Car Company grants certain city employees a half-fare privilege, and the patrons of the public schools believe that a similar privilege should be granted to school children.

There is talk of a Government quarantine against Christmas trees from New England on account of the possibility of their being infested with the gypsy and brown tail moths, which are quite destructive to fruit, shade, and forest trees. These insects are known to exist in limited areas in Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Mississippi is alarmed at the number of postal cards containing questionable or suggestive pictures that are being purchased and sent through the United States mails. They are planning to make a systematic raid on all the picture postal card racks of the State, and will endeavor to sort out and destroy those of an indecent character.

The report of the Census Bureau for the year ending August 31, that there was more cotton spun in the cotton growing States of the South than in all the other States of the Union combined, is very encouraging. The South is rapidly learning that it pays, not only to produce abundant crops and fatten large herds of cattle, but that it is also remunerative to build factories and convert the raw material into usable wares.

The Trustees and Faculty of the University of North Carolina, has appealed to the North Carolina Legislature to make "hazing" a punishable crime. There are, in North Carolina, as in other States, laws against all forms of lawlessness, and these laws are for school boys as well as others. A law to prevent school boys from playing innocent pranks on their associates is not needed, since the present laws cover every form of vicious hazing.

It is authoritatively announced that Dr. Oscar Dowling, the present incumbent, will be named to succeed himself as the head of the Louisiana Board of Health for the next four years. A better selection could not be made. He has been untiring in his efforts to make Louisiana a State of cleanliness and healthfulness. Besides his service to the State as a physician and health officer, he has been instrumental in advertising Louisiana in all parts of America, by travelling in his nation-famed health car and delivering lectures.

New Orleans is at present experiencing an epidemic of diphtheria, which is chiefly prevailing in the uptown sections of the city. On Saturday, the 12th inst., there were reported 177 cases, some of them being in Rugby Academy and in the Josephine Louise Dormitory of Newcomb College. The type of the disease is fortunately very mild. The health authorities are disposed to think that the outbreak is due to an infection of the milk supply of the city, and all households have been advised not to use milk for the present without first boiling it.

The estate of the late Colonel John Jacob Astor has been roughly estimated at $75,000,000, and on this estimate an inheritance tax of $3,150,000 has been paid to the United States. Doubtless, when the estate is finally appraised it will exceed the estimated valuation and a further tax will be levied. The object of estimating the estate and paying the tax in advance was so that the heirs might receive the 5 per cent rebate which is granted to all who pay the tax within six months of the death of the testator. The 5 per cent in this instance amounts to $155,000.

Montenegro has declared war against Turkey. It is probable that all the Balkan States will join the Montenegrans in their effort to drive Turkey from Europe. Of course, the result of the war is hard to forecast at this time, but some comparative statistics are illuminating: Montenegro has a population of 230,000—less than the population of the city of New Orleans alone. Turkey has a population of 23,722,000, of which 6,122,000 live in Europe. The Balkan States have a combined population of 15,138,648, and Greece, which is in sympathy with the Balkan States, has a population of 3,500,000. The enemies of Turkey have a combined fighting force of 1,265,000, and Turkey has a depleted army and an exhausted treasury.

SOME PERTINENT FACTS.

Questions Answered by the Joint Board of Finance of the North Mississippi Conference.

1. How many superannuated preachers and families of deceased preachers are being cared for by the Joint Board of Finance of the Mississippi Conference? Ans. 62.
2. What is the average amount paid them annually? Ans. $145.00 to a family.
3. How is the money distributed among them? Ans. The money is distributed according to their necessities and their time of service.
4. Is the Church doing its duty to these old men? Ans. Not by any means. Railroad corporations, insurance companies, department stores in cities, boards of trustees of colleges and schools, and many other institutions are paying their worn-out, retired workmen living salaries, while the Church barely gives her worn-out preachers enough for food. Let every preacher bestir himself to bring up his assessment for Conference claimants in full. Then let the Sunday schools of the Conference give us a great collection on Galloway Memorial Day, the first Sunday in November.

NOLAN B. HARMON, Secretary.

A REVIVAL AT CANTON.

Dear Brother Meek: We have just closed a revival meeting that lasted eighteen days. The preaching was done by Revs. J. B. and Burke Culpepper. For the first week the meeting was held in our church, and was then moved to the Culpepper tent in the Courthouse square. The services were attended by all classes of people. The preaching was evangelical and forceful. Intense earnestness and deep spirituality characterized these men of God. There was no uncertain sound. Sin was fearlessly and uncompromisingly denounced. There was nothing of the merely perfunctory in their work. They were intensely in earnest. Men who are not church members have announced in public and in private their intention to quit certain forms of evil and to live righteously. This meeting has reached a larger number of people than any religious gathering ever assembled in this city, touching white and black, Gentiles and Jews, Protestants and Roman Catholics. Presbyterians, Baptists, and Episcopalians entered heartily into the good work with us, and all were greatly benefitted.

One commendable feature about a tent meeting is the ease and freedom from restraint that people feel in a church building. For instance, people could clap their hands and applaud what impressed them without appearing to be irreverent and it did them good. The best of order prevailed and not a single incident marred the effect of the meeting. The pastor himself was heartily in accord with whatever these brethren did. They were endorsed by the public generally and several hundred dollars were raised for their compensation after all the expenses of the meeting had been paid.

Thirty-three persons, up to date, have applied for membership in our Church and twelve or fifteen for membership in the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches. Of course, it is impossible at this time to forecast the results of the meeting. Time alone can do this. There is every indication that the good work done will abide and bring forth abundant fruit.

Twenty-nine members had been added by the pastor before the meeting began and this church seems to be in good condition. It is confidently expected that a full report will be brought up to Conference, as was done last year. We hope to install a pipe organ in the near future. We have one of the most attractive towns in the State, and a splendid class of people, who if they will avail themselves of their opportunities, can make this one of the most desirable appointments in the Conference.

OUR BEGINNING.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D. D.

In the Nashville Advocate of September 27, there appears an article entitled, "Centennial of the Tennessee Conference."

At its recent session in McKendree Church, October 9-14, the event was celebrated with quite an elaborate program. The writer says that the Tennessee Conference was formed by the General Conference of 1812, and embraced the Districts of Holston, Cumberland, Nashville, Wabash, Mississippi and Illinois. In his history of Methodism in Mississippi, the Rev. John G. Jones says that the work in the two territories of Mississippi and Louisiana was legally a part of the Tennessee Conference until the meeting of that Conference on Nov. 12, 1812, when the Bishops under authority of the late General Conference determined to make the two territories into an independent Conference, to be known as the Mississippi Conference; and its first session was appointed to meet at Spring Hill, in Jefferson County, Miss., on Nov. 1, 1813. On account of hostilities with the Indians, it was not possible for a Bishop to be present at this organization meeting; nevertheless the Conference was held, with Samuel Sellers as President, and William Winans as Secretary. Besides these officers the following were present: Miles Harper, Richmond Nolley, Lewis Hobbs, John S. Ford, John Phipps, John Schrock, Thomas Griffin, and John I. E. Byrd. All of these names, and some of their faces, were familiar to a few lingering readers of this Advocate.

Through the kindness and good management of Brother Will Ellis, it was the great pleasure of this writer, in company with a half dozen others, to visit this historic spot recently. The session of the Conference was to have been held in the Spring Hill church, but on account of inclement weather—it being impossible to heat the log house—it was held at the residence of Rev. Newet Vick, about two miles from the church. Our party was fortunate in having for its guide Brother Ely Jones, of Harrison, who was reared in the neighborhood, and was well acquainted with the country, having been often with his father a visitor to the old residence. It is doubtful if there lives another man who could have done our exploring party the service that he did. Not remembering so well the site of the old log meeting-house, he helped to secure the services of an old neighbor of the Vicks, now past four-score years of age, and unable to walk from the weight of these years, but who kindly came in a buggy sent for him, and pointed out the place where, as a child, he had attended the ministry of those giants and heroes. It was touching to hear his recital of those times and to catch the evident spirit which possessed him, as doubtless he fancied he saw their forms and heard their voices just across the narrow gulf. That his memory had not failed him we had evidence abundant in the neglected graves and fallen stones that marked the resting places of those who had died in old age, long before the oldest of our company saw the light of day. Taking advantage of this good fortune, we marked well the spot and talked of plans to visit it again in our centennial year, and, if possible, hold some service appropriate to the occasion. Finding the difficulties so great in locating these places of such great interest in our early history, it may be permitted us to suggest that, unless we give attention to these matters soon, the difficulties so easily overcome through our guides will be almost insurmountable by the future historian.

A BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTE.

(The remarks of the Rev. W. L. Duren, of Tupelo, Miss., on the occasion of the funeral of Mr. R. A. Weaver, of Tupelo, who died on October 1, 1912. Mr. Weaver was a son-in-law of the Hon. and Mrs. John M. Allen, and one of the noblest and most useful Christian young men in Mississippi.)

We share together the sorrow of this hour; and we have come to do as tenderly as we may the office which love and faith bid us perform. This day, like an ominous shadow, has hung about us for many weeks; but we could not have come to it more reluctantly if it had been wholly unanticipated. Yet, I thank God that our sorrow is not the sorrow that bends above a bier forsaken of hope. We sorrow not on his account, but our own. We have lost from this life a priceless jewel—a good man. And because we know how poorly we can afford to spare men who are brave and courageous and true in the cause of right, we mourn.

He needs no words of praise to-day from you or me: but we need the comfort and the cheer and the inspiration which his life may lend to us. He had not quite completed his fortieth year; but the true measure of his life is not years, it is faith and service.

He was first of all a Christian. Not a Christian by the confession of a creed only; but by that confession which finds its expression through the purposes and thoughts and deeds of a life. Then he was the embodiment of Christian catholicity. To have been so fixed in his faith and so devoted in his spirit, he was one of the broadest and least fanatical men I have ever known. On the other hand, he was one of the most universally optimistic men I have known. He seemed to me to be faith incarnate. He was so anchored that the issue of a task made no change in his thought. Even when the ominous cloud of disease appeared upon his horizon, with the roseate confidence by which he had lived, he could say: "I think I have a good chance to get well, but if I haven't it is all right." Our consolation to-day is, that there lingered in his life to the end, the spirit, the passion, and the confidence that characterized the life of his Lord. It is not for his sake that we mourn, for God has but translated his own; and he shall ever be to us: a servant resting from his loved employ.

Our mourning is because we know the value of a good man. As a church we know what we have lost—in the prayer meeting, in the teachers' meeting, in the Baraca class, in the choir, and in the Board of Stewards. We will miss him in every place and in every task. The Y. M. C. A. has lost one to whom more than any other man belonged the credit for its success. Who will undertake to estimate their loss? The public school has lost one of its best assets; and the fraternity of cotton men has lost one whom they will not soon replace. I cannot and must not speak of the home, for he leaves to them memories too precious for public recital—'tis a heritage sacredly their own.

It is no wonder that our heads are bowed and our hearts are bleeding, for a lonely place is left against our sky. The traveler, standing in the weird twilight of the evening time, assures himself by the gold that gilds the sky above him that the sun is just beyond the horizon. So as we shall look upon the beautiful deeds of his life, the expressions of abiding faith in Christ, we shall be sure that he is just beyond the horizon in the beautiful land. It will not be long until we shall see him again. So through faith's triumph over our momentary sorrow, we can say:

Lord, he was thine and not our own;
Thou hast not done us wrong;
We thank thee for the precious loan Afforded us so long."

HOW IT WORKS OUT.

Example 1. The A. B. Bowman Loan Fund was contributed by the late Mrs. Marie E. Bowman, of Lee's Summit, Mo., in memory of her deceased son, Abraham Bellfield Bowman. The fund consisted originally of $5000, and was given during the years 1889-95. And now what, after twenty years?

Fifty-one churches have been aided by loans; average loan to each church, more than $600; $30,868.32 is the total of loans; total value of the fifty-one churches, $255,000; 15,300 people can be seated for worship; for every $98 of the original investment a church has been helped; the present capital is $9,270.83.

Example 2. The Marvin Loan Fund was contributed as a memorial to the late Bishop Enoch Mather Marvin by his friends in Missouri during the years 1886-08, and the contributions amounted to $7,720.44. And now, after twenty-two years, what?

Fifty-four churches have been aided by loans; average loan to each church, more than $1,000; $65,226.72 in the total of loans; total value of the 54 churches, $540,000; 21,600 people can be seated for worship; for every $142 of the original contribution a church has been helped; the present capital is $16,111.34.

And now observe: Both the above funds are intact; not a dollar has been lost. A working power has been developed many times the original sum. Hundreds of thousands of dollars of church property have been created, giving shelter to many thousands of worshippers. This is only the outward increase—what of the spiritual, the eternal? And what of the years to follow?

Why not live in good works forever? Write us about the loan fund investment, the Life Annuity feature, and other particulars.

HOW A FAMOUS HYMN WAS WRITTEN.

As Tennyson's nurse was sitting one day at his bedside, sharing to a degree the general anxiety about the patient, she said to him suddenly:

"You have written a great many poems, sir, but I have never heard anybody say that there is a hymn among them all. I wish, sir, you would write a hymn while you are lying on your sick-bed. It might help and comfort many a poor sufferer."

The next morning, when the nurse had taken her quiet place at the bedside, the poet handed her a scrap of paper, saying, "Here is the hymn you wished me to write."

She took it from his hands with an expression of gratified thanks. It proved to be "Crossing the Bar," the poem that was sung in Westminster Abbey at Tennyson's funeral, and which has touched so many hearts.—Evening Mail.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF NO SALOONS.

The city of Cambridge, Mass., has completed twenty-five years of no-license. The event was celebrated by resolutions adopted by the city council and by the ringing of the bells of the city. Cambridge has a population of more than a hundred thousand people, and is one of the fifty largest cities of the country. Its population is made up of cultured, well-to-do people, and a full share of working people, and one-third of its people are of foreign birth or parentage. During these twenty-five years Cambridge has grown seventy per cent in numbers and the property valuation has in the same time increased nearly ninety per cent. During this period savings bank deposits have almost trebled, and a very large increase has been made in the proportion of children who receive a high school education. Cambridge is satisfied with her no-license system. In order to obtain it her citizenship went through a terrific fight. This instance is a convincing proof that any large city can adopt and operate a no-license system, if it will pay the price of resolute and unceasing endeavor.—Baltimore-Richmond Christian Advocate.

JAPANESE DOCTORS.

A Japanese doctor never thinks of asking a poor patient for a fee. Whenever a rich man calls in a doctor he does not expect that he will receive a bill for medical services; in fact, no such thing as a doctor's bill is known in Japan. The strict honesty of the people does not make it necessary for the doctor to ask for a fee. When he has finished his visits to the patient a present is made to him, just as much as the patient can afford. The doctor then smiles, bows, thanks his patient and the transaction is settled.—Times-Democrat.

THE BUGGIES SADIE BOUGHT

"Those baby buggies you may pack and send to the second-hand man," said Mr. Spencer. "Everyone buys go-carts nowadays, and these are so hopelessly old-fashioned that we never could expect to sell them. If we get a dollar apiece I shall be glad to get rid of them."

"Oh, Uncle Frank, would you sell me one for a dollar?" asked an eager voice.

"What in the world do you want with a baby buggy, Sadie, and a green, plush-lined one at that?" laughed Mr. Spencer. "It's entirely too big for your dolls, even if you took the whole family out at once."

But Sadie was in earnest. She had come for a drive with her uncle to the little town where he had bought out a store and was making plans to dispose of the goods, and as soon as she saw the baby buggies a brilliant thought popped into her head. "I want to take Mrs. Adler's baby out riding in it," she said. "You know, Uncle Frank, they live in that big tenement house back of us, and the children have no place at all to play except right on the pavement; but if you will sell me the buggy I can take the baby out in it every day."

"That is a fine plan," said Mr. Spencer. "But are you sure your mamma will like it?"

"Indeed she will," said Sadie. "She told me the next time she went down town she would see the doctor about that poor baby. But all it needed, she thought, was just fresh air, so I know she would be willing to have me do something. I've got my dollar right here, Uncle." And she took a shining coin out of a little lead purse that dangled from her belt.

"How many girls could you find to help you wheel the carriage? Or is there only one poor baby in the tenement house?" asked Uncle Frank gravely.

"There's just lots and lots of them," said Sadie sadly, "but they couldn't all use one buggy. I know of a dozen girls who would be glad to help, and the babies can take turns, even if they can't all go at once."

"I'll sell you the whole lot for one dollar," said Mr. Spencer, taking the money, "and you and your little friends can have a regular parade every fine day. How will that do?"

"Really and truly," said Sadie, jumping down from her perch to count the buggies. "Ten!" she exclaimed, breathlessly. "Thank you ever and ever so much."

Strangers who walk through the beautiful, shady avenue are apt to turn and look at the old-fashioned baby buggies pushed by little girls in pretty white dresses. The laughing babies are clean and sweet, but their clothes are often old and patched, so visitors in the town cannot understand the meaning of the gay little procession. Once in a while a lady stops the big policeman on that beat and hears this explanation: "Yes, ma'am," the blue-coated policeman says with a smile, "the little girls live on this avenue, but the babies don't. They come from the big tenement houses you can see over the tops of the trees. Every year there used to be lots of little funerals from that place, but there hasn't been one this summer. The mothers put the babies in the buggies, and the children keep them out under the trees hours at a time. And lots of folks are taking an interest in the babies, since they have seen how pale they were at first. One lady buys fresh milk every day and keeps it on ice for them, another shows the mothers how to bathe them, and somebody else sees about the clean clothes, and this whole neighborhood takes a hand."

"That was the best bargain I ever made," said Mr. Spencer, watching the procession pass under the drooping elm trees. "That dollar has been too precious to spend, so I'll give it back to you, dear, for a keepsake."

"It was my best bargain, too," said Sadie, tucking the robe about the dimpled feet of her charge. "I never get tired of pushing my buggy any more since Dr. Parks says we are keeping the babies alive and well. Don't you think it worth a great deal to bear that, Uncle?"

"Indeed it is, and you girls deserve every word of it," said Mr. Spencer heartily. "When these old-fashioned buggies wear out, I will see that you have dear little go-carts for your charges; but I don't believe the babies will ever know the difference."

"There never will be any nicer ones than these green plush ones," said Sadie decidedly. "Yes, Patsy, I'll catch up with the others in a minute. Good-by, Uncle Frank!" And she joined the merry little girls farther up the avenue.—Christian Intelligencer.

DECISION.

By Hon. W. A. Belk.

Dear Mr. Editor: There are a number of elements necessary to be embodied in a character in order to make life a success. We have all heard the expression that a person is "a well-rounded man," by which we mean to convey the idea that he possesses many, if not all, of those different elements or characteristics necessary to meet successfully the varied duties and difficulties of life. In this short article I wish to discuss briefly just one of those elements, and that one is DECISION. In my humble judgment, that element is one of the essentials of a successful life, and it is one which is too often found wanting. A man may be well equipped otherwise, but if he has not the power of decision, then indeed is he weak at the very point where he ought to be the strongest. To look at a thing, to size up the situation, to clear away the chaff, to be cool under excitement, to be able to tell just what to do, and when; in short, to possess the ability to rightly decide a matter, is a difficult task to any person, however honest or intelligent. But it is the cultivation of this power or faculty of simply deciding a thing which I am trying to emphasize.

Some people go through life, it would seem, without ever deciding anything. They appear to be unable to get their minds fixed definitely upon any course or upon any principle. Consequently they pass through life without having ever accomplished any purpose. In my opinion, a person ought to begin early in life the simple habit of deciding things for himself. I believe the true teacher is the one who cultivates that faculty in the pupil and teaches him, as did old Socrates, in such a way as to enable him to decide a question for himself. I think the parent and teacher far too often render a child helpless by "over-teaching" him. Let the child be taught to approach each subject carefully and thoughtfully. Let him hear what older persons have to say, but I insist that he be allowed to have opinions of his own and to decide some matters for himself. Let him be advised by the parent and by the teacher, but at the same time let that parent and teacher be very careful lest the individuality of that youth be destroyed and he rendered helpless and incapacitated to form a decision for himself.

Having now said this much, I may go a step further and say that there is another point touching this subject which ought to be emphasized, and that is that we quite often find an individual who is mentally capacitated to form an opinion, and who knows what his decision about a matter ought to be, but can not, or will not, decide, simply because of the lack of moral courage so to do. Peter knew what was right, but was wanting in the manhood necessary to take a stand when that stand seemed to be unpopular or perilous, and as a result he "denied the Christ." Pilate knew what his decision ought to have been when he said, "I find no fault in this man; I will, therefore, chastise him and release him." He was simply afraid of public sentiment. Perhaps he was a politician. At any rate, he did not have the nerve, the manhood, to make the proper ruling. Caesar, "the lion-hearted", almost lost his nerve and hung long upon making a decision, but finally with apologies to himself said, "the die is cast, the Rubicon is crossed," by which he meant to say, "I have now crossed the Rubicon and cannot turn back. It is too late."

I should be glad indeed if I have said one thing herein which might in the slightest degree impress our young men and women with the great importance of simply deciding questions, and then with the further importance of standing firmly by their decisions when once rightly made. Let them not be afraid to take a stand, to decide upon a course, or to defend that position when in the right. I would warn them against hesitation. One writer has said, "hesitation is suicide." Let them think and then not be afraid to act.

Editorial.

UNWORTHY MINISTERIAL AMBITION.

Improper ambition for place in the Church is as old as the history of Christianity. When the Master walked in the flesh among men it manifested itself in his holy presence. On a memorable occasion the mother of James and John came to him and asked that one of her sons might sit on his right hand in his coming kingdom and the other on his left, an aspiration in which these two apostles themselves doubtless shared. Never to be forgotten are the words that came from our Lord's lips in reply. In substance, they were a declaration that prominence of place counts for nothing with God; that service alone is the true measure of greatness. "Whosoever would become great among you, shall be your minister; and whosoever would be first among you, shall be the servant of all. For verily the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

Far be it from us to bring a railing accusation against our brethren in the ministry, but it seems to us that there is too much desire for easy and remunerative places among us in this day. Conversation concerning approaching Conferences and the appointments that are then to be made often, we fear, discloses this fact. To far too great an extent, we appear to have adopted the world's classification of preachers, grading them by the prominence of the positions that they hold. Such an appraisal is fundamentally wrong. The important thing is the Master's estimate—not that of unspiritual men, whether in or out of the Church.

The only legitimate ministerial ambition is that for efficiency in service and the largest possible opportunity for usefulness. The notion that because a man has had one conspicuous appointment he must never have another less so, is pernicious and hurtful. A pastor who cannot go from a charge that pays a large salary to one where the stipend is smaller without disappointment and chagrin, needs to tarry at the mourner's bench. We have sometimes thought it would be a good thing if, like the Wesleyans of England, we could convert all our stations into circuits, and could in some way secure a more equitable adjustment of salaries. Any person who seeks a large place or high office in the Church of God, by that very act demonstrates his unfitness for it.

Nothing becomes an ambassador of Christ more than a spirit of deep and genuine humility. Self must be sunk out of sight before he is truly qualified for the work of his high calling. Egoism and plety do not flourish together. The man who constantly communes with God knows his littleness. A revival among us of the hero spirit which longs to dare and do for the Master where the work is difficult, would reclothe Methodism with power and make its future achievements outstrip those of the past. Soft places make soft men. Only struggle and conflict can produce men of might.

"Oh, do not pray for easy lives!

Pray to be stronger men!

Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers;

Pray for power equal to your tasks!

Then the doing of your work shall be no miracle.

But you shall be a miracle.

Every day you shall wonder at yourself, at the richness

Of life which has come into you by the grace of God."

WANTED—A MORE VIGOROUS NATIONAL CONSCIENCE.

In spite of all that we hear about arbitration and international law and justice, the reign of might seems still to be largely untrammelled in the dealings of the nations with one another. The powerful ones do what they consider to their advantage and their actions, though they may be verbally criticized, are little interfered with. In the case of our own country, when it is to her interest to pursue a certain course, the national sense of honor seems adequate to exercise scarcely any restraint. Three illustrations of this within recent decades may be cited. One is seen in the acquisition of the Hawaiian Islands. It was alleged when the native government was overthrown and annexation to the United States was asked for, that our troops had aided in subverting the reigning dynasty. Believing these charges, Grover Cleveland, whose sense of fairness and justice was his most outstanding characteristic, used his influence against the scheme to connect them with our Republic and was severely censured for the high-minded policy that he pursued. In 1883, Mr. Cleveland was defeated and Benjamin Harrison succeeded to the Presidency. The movement to bring Hawaii under our flag was then renewed and accomplished with but little protest.

The second instance of questionable dealing upon the part of our national government is found in the way we acquired the isthmus across which the Panama Canal is being dug. There is little doubt that the power of the United States was the main instrument in wresting that territory from Colombia. Indeed, ex-President Roosevelt publicly boasts that he "took the isthmus." That it was to the advantage of the whole civilized world for us to have it, is undeniably true; but this fact did not justify us in obtaining it in an improper manner. Yet this achievement has been much more generally applauded than condemned.

A third illustration that expediency and self-interest, more than right, control our national authorities is furnished in the bill fixing the tolls for the Panama Canal, which was recently passed by Congress and approved by the President. That the discrimination in favor of American vessels engaged in our domestic trade is in plain violation of our treaty with Great Britain has, we think, been conclusively shown. Still, that enactment seems to be a popular one. The question is not whether the treaty referred to is a wise and equitable one, but whether, having made it, we may repudiate it at will.

From the foregoing facts, it would seem that we are sadly in need of a quickened national conscience, of a loftier standard of integrity in the management of our public affairs. It was a maxim of the olden time that "the king could do no wrong." We have helped that absurd philosophy of former days but little if we take the position that every nation is a law unto itself and may exercise its power as it pleases. There is a weighty obligation upon States as well as individuals to do what is right. The moral law is universal in its reign, and no human power is great enough to claim exemption from its requirements. If they are disregarded, the penalty for so doing must sooner or later be paid. The Supreme Judge of the universe will finally deal out even-handed justice to each and all.

Mr. Norman Angell, in a recent issue of the London Daily Mail, says that the United States has within the last decade given Great Britain ample provocation for going to war against her, but that no appeal has been made to the sword because of the recognized futility of such a course. We quote, in part, his frank and interesting statement:

"The reason why we shall not go to war is because war would be ineffective: we could not impose our will by war. America is not only impregnable in so far as military force is concerned, but what is perhaps more important in this connection she is quite obviously impregnable. We could, it is true, destroy her navy, bombard her ports, blockade her coasts—and by so doing create a position far more onerous for us than for her. She would be embarrassed; but we should starve—Lancashire from lack of cotton, other parts of our population from high prices of food; our finances would be chaotic from the havoc which the state of war would make with the British millions sunk in American investments; while America, a self-contained continent, would be much less seriously hit. She does not depend upon foreign food; the foreign money she has already secured; her foreign trade is but a drop in a bucket compared to her internal trade; she can far better afford to be locked in than we can afford to be locked out. Her navy serves no earthly purpose connected with any vital function of her national life; by bombarding her coast towns we would do some damage, not much, as all bombardments prove to property which is mainly ours, and which in the end our insurance companies would have to pay for. But beyond that—nothing."

Bullying and relying upon our great strength to protect us may be popular, but there is nothing noble in it. Far better would it be for our Government always to seek to do that which is right, even though it should thereby sometimes suffer apparent loss. A nation can have no better asset in the long run, than a sound and vigorous public conscience.

THE WORLD'S GREAT LIBRARIES.

The educative influence of a great library is far-reaching and immeasurable. Indeed, such institutions have been the great lighthouses of the world, and their multiplication and growth in modern times has been one of the most striking indications of human progress. Dr. G. Knott-Ford Fortescue, who after forty-two years of service is about to sever his connection with the British Museum, recently estimated the relative size of the leading libraries of the world as follows:

British Museum, number of volumes	4,000,000
Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris	3,500,000
Imperial Library, St. Petersburg	1,881,623
Royal Library, Berlin	1,400,000
Royal Library, Munich	1,100,000
Imperial Library, Vienna	1,000,000
Victor Emmanuel Library, Rome	800,000
Bodleian Library	750,000
Royal Library, Brussels	600,000
Advocates' Library, Edinburgh	565,000
Vatican Library	400,000
Library of Trinity College, Dublin	321,347

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Revival services are being planned for the Algiers, First, and Epworth Churches of New Orleans to be held some time between now and Conference.

Rev. W. B. Alsworth, the pastor, began a meeting at Rounsaville, Miss., on the first Sunday in October. He is being assisted by Rev. P. H. Howse, of Hattiesburg.

Rev. J. W. Thomas, pastor of Second Church, New Orleans, left last Sunday night for his old home in Kentucky to look after his business interests. He expects to visit Nashville while absent from New Orleans.

The Alabama Christian Advocate states that Bishop McCoy is fast recovering from the injuries that he recently received in a railroad wreck, and that he expects to take up again his "loved employ" this week. This will be gratifying news to his host of friends throughout the Church.

We have received an announcement of the marriage of Rev. E. H. Rook, of the North Mississippi Conference, and Miss Minnie Jackson, at Memphis, Tenn., on August 29. Brother Rook is our pastor at Lambert, Miss., and a most worthy and useful itinerant. We congratulate both him and his bride, and wish for them a large measure of happiness.

Rev. T. B. Clifford, our pastor at Yazoo City, Miss., who has recently been on a trip to New York, Boston, and other Eastern points, returned home last week.

Rev. W. W. Holmes has the sympathy of his many friends in the illness of his wife, who is confined at their home in New Orleans with an attack of diphtheria. Let prayer be made for her speedy recovery.

The press dispatches report a great meeting at Hickory, Miss., in which Rev. F. B. Ormond, the pastor, was assisted by Rev. D. E. Kelly. It is stated there were 65 accessions to the Church, and that a liberal free-will offering was taken for the expenses of the revival.

We acknowledge the reception of an invitation to the marriage of Miss Hadie Brown, the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Brown of Meridian, Miss., to Dr. Murray Tate, which will take place in Meridian on Wednesday evening, October 23. We extend in advance congratulations and best wishes.

A dainty card brings news of the arrival in the home of Rev. and Mrs. F. R. Power, at Shreveport, La., of Master Fred Frater Power, who made his appearance on October 6. The young gentleman weighs nine pounds, and is monarch of all that he surveys. We extend to the happy parents our most hearty congratulations.

The first number of The Purple and White, a weekly published by the students of Millsaps College, is on our table. Mr. H. H. Boswell is the Editor-in-Chief; Mrs. Stella McGehee, a granddaughter of Bishop Galloway, is the Social Editor, and Mr. J. B. Kirkland is the Business Manager. It is a neatly printed and highly creditable periodical.

Rev. C. P. Moss is winding up his third year at Durant, Miss., in high favor with his flock. While awaiting a helated train in the city in which Brother Moss resides, a few days since, it was the Editor's pleasure to converse with him for a season upon the work of the Church and matters in general. He is a most affable and obliging gentleman, who knows his people and commands their confidence and love. His father before him was a Methodist itinerant, sans peur et sans reproche.

On account of not being robust physically at present, Bishop H. C. Morrison has been forced to cancel a number of engagements made in Mississippi for the month of October, but he is still expected to deliver an address at the State fair in the interest of prohibition. For grace and eloquence on the platform or in the pulpit, Bishop Morrison has few equals in the South. We are much pleased to be informed that he is steadily gaining in strength, and we trust that he will soon be quite himself again.

A beautiful wedding took place at the Methodist Church in Lexington, Miss., on Wednesday evening, October 9, with Miss Kathleen Wilburn and Dr. Otho Hooker as the contracting parties. The impressive words that made them one were spoken by Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, in the presence of an assemblage that filled and overflowed the building. The bride is the daughter of Mr. R. E. Wilburn, the president of the Official Board of our church in Lexington, and is a young lady of many social graces and exemplary Christian character. The groom is a young physician of promise. After the ceremony, the happy couple left for a visit to Chicago and other Northern points.

Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, the energetic secretary of the Joint Board of Finance of the Mississippi Conference, writes as follows: "Programs and contribution cards for Galloway Memorial Day, which we are asking the Sunday schools of our Conference to observe, will be mailed out in a few days. Our pastors and Sunday school superintendents are urged to prepare to make the designated time, the first Sunday in November, memorable because of the collection taken for our superannuate preachers. If all will lend a helping hand, this undertaking will not fail to succeed." See the questions and answers bearing on this subject which appear elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate.

Judge Richard F. Reed, of the Supreme Bench of Mississippi, was down for an address at our First Church in Jackson last Sunday, which was Rally Day for the Sabbath school. In rendering such a service this distinguished jurist is in a noble succession, many of the foremost lawyers of the Magnolia State in bygone years having been active in the work of the Church and willing speakers in its behalf. Judge Robert B. Mayes, who recently retired from the Mississippi Supreme Bench, is an earnest Methodist, as is also his distinguished kinsman, the Hon. Edward Mayes, who has served in the General Conference and held other positions of large responsibility in his denomination.

Rev. O. G. Haliburton has been appointed to the Silver City charge (Mississippi Conference) for the remaining months of the year, and is on the ground and at work. We hope that he may have a pleasant and successful pastorate.

In a business letter to this office, Rev. J. M. Alford, our pastor at Rayville, La., says that two fine meetings have been held recently in his charge. He was assisted in each of them by Rev. A. W. Turner, who, he says, is a "prince in the pulpit."

We received a nice list of subscribers from Richton, Miss., last week, sent in by the pastor, Rev. R. P. Fikes. In his letter, Brother Fikes said that he expected to continue urging his people to subscribe for the Advocate, and hoped to secure many more names before Conference.

At the late session of the St. Louis Conference Dr. Theodore Copeland was returned to Cabanne Church, where the people have again heartily welcomed him as their pastor. The salary paid by this congregation is now $3600, and it is enjoying a large degree of prosperity under the ministry of Dr. Copeland.

Rev. C. C. Selecman has consented to return to New Orleans during November and assist Rev. J. L. Sutton, the pastor, in a revival meeting at Louisiana Avenue Church. Brother Selecman is remembered by those who heard him in New Orleans last winter as a preacher of deeply spiritual and effective sermons. He is now located at Webb City, Mo.

The revival recently held by Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, the pastor at Slidell, La., in which he had the assistance of Rev. S. L. Riggs, was fruitful in results. Brother Lipscomb reports some new members and a general quickening of the spiritual life of the membership of the church. He speaks of the service rendered by Brother Riggs in terms of high commendation.

We are in receipt of a card from ex-Governor J. Y. Sanders, of Louisiana, stating that he has opened a law office in the Hibernia Bank building in New Orleans, and that he will practice his profession in both the Federal and State courts. Mr. Sanders is a man of ability and personal force, and we wish him success at the bar in the Crescent City and elsewhere in the commonwealth, of which he is a distinguished citizen.

Dr. W. H. Huntley, the resourceful presiding elder of the Port Gibson District, in a personal note to the Editor, says: "The people living along the river front below Mayersville determined at a conference, recently held, to have a church ready for dedication by the first Sunday in December. The old house of worship went off with the floods in 1903." We are pleased to be informed of this forward movement. Methodism should never retreat from a field where it once had a footing.

Last week's Carrollton Conservative (Mississippi) makes the following reference to the services in our Church in Carrollton on Sunday, October 6: "Fine congregations attended preaching at the Methodist Church last Sunday. In the forenoon Mr. Thames discussed Christ's sacrifice for sin, and in the evening he discoursed upon the joy of dwelling in God's house. Both sermons were thoughtful, interesting and helpful. The great hymns by the choir and congregation were an uplift to devout worshippers. Especially pleasing was the anthem, 'Glory to God,' and the duet by Mrs. Lloyd and Mrs. D. L. Bingham was a perfect piece of music, faultlessly sung by sweet voices. Three persons were received into the Church on profession of faith."

We are indebted to Rev. J. E. Cunningham, the presiding elder of the Aberdeen District (North Mississippi) for the following note: "After conditions developed making it impossible for Rev. I. D. Borders to come to Aberdeen from California, as only about two months of the Conference year remained, Bishop Morrison left the charge to be supplied by the presiding elder and the assistance of such near-by pastors as he could command. So far all the services have been held regularly. Dr. W. C. Black and Rev. J. R. Countiss have been doing most of the preaching, and they both have been a blessing to the town. Dr. Black has been long in the service and is on the retired list, but he is young in spirit and seemingly as active mentally as he ever was. His pulpit ministrations have delighted our people."

Rev. C. V. Breithaupt sends us the following encouraging report from Houma, La.: "I have just gotten back from the country. Brother Anatole Martin and I have received eleven persons into the Church this month. This runs the number of accessions up to 55 this year, and there are others who will likely join. This is the first year that the Houma Mission has had more than 40 additions within twelve months. I am winding up my fourth year, and during this time there have been 110 accessions to the membership of the charge. It is my purpose to try to make it 150 by Conference." This is indeed a most gratifying showing, and we congratulate Brother Breithaupt upon the success which he and his associates in the work have achieved. It greatly pleases us to see Methodism making headway in the French mission field of Louisiana.

The Andrews' meeting which is being held in the spacious Capitol Street Methodist Church of Jackson, Miss., is reported as exercising a gracious and far-reaching influence for good. In a telegraphic night letter, written last Sunday evening after the day's services were over, Rev. J. M. Morse, under whose direction the revival is being conducted, says: "We are having a great meeting. A thousand men were present at the service to-night, and 200 gave their hands as a pledge that they will live a better life. We will not close until next Sunday. Andrews and Smith are great preachers and workers. A large number have joined the Church." We rejoice with Brother Morse and his worthy flock in this season of refreshing. An outpouring of the Holy Spirit is God's best gift to his people.

From the Times-Democrat we clip the following dispatch from Crowley, La., which was sent on October 11: "A meeting of the building committee of the new Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was held at the church yesterday evening for the purpose of discussing plans and specifications for the new church. Among those present were: Rev. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Lafayette District; Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor of the Crowley Church; P. L. Lawrence, Dr. D. D. Mims, J. H. Griffin, P. J. Wikoff, Walter Fontenot, and C. P. Pond. It was reported at the meeting that the women of the church, who had pledged themselves to raise $5000 toward the new structure, have raised $3000 of the amount and expect to get the remainder during the present year. The Sunday school, within the last six months, has collected over $300 toward the church. The new building will cost over $32,000, most of which has been subscribed, and much of it collected."

It deeply pains us to chronicle the death of Mr. H. E. Buck, who passed away suddenly at his home near Acona, Miss., on October 5. We had known him from boyhood, and we have no hesitancy in saying that he was a worthy man in the highest and truest sense. It is doubtful whether Holmes County had a more exemplary and useful citizen. He was a faithful official in our Church and could always be counted on to do his full share toward the promotion of its interests. Happy-hearted and hopeful, he inspired a like spirit in others. Every good cause had in him a friend, and those among whom he lived trusted and loved him. Stricken, as he was, in the very prime of life, it is hard to give him up. But God knoweth best. May the Heavenly Father have in his gracious keeping the sorrowing and lonely wife and all others whose lives have been saddened by this great bereavement.

From Fort Worth, Texas, under date of 11th inst, Rev. W. M. McIntosh, who as an evangelist ranks with the best, writes: "I am just back from an evangelistic tour through the Panhandle of Texas. Our meeting at Memphis, Texas, was one of the greatest in spiritual power that I have ever witnessed. We had 350 conversions. The Panhandle country is a great section of this State. The people up there do things on a large scale. One is overwhelmed with the hugeness of the plains. There is no finer citizenship anywhere in the South. I was in some counties where they told me that there had not been a prisoner in jail within a year. There is one explanation of this: there is not a legalized harboim within the borders of the Northwest Texas Conference, which covers a large section of the State. I am now on my way to Oklahoma City, where we are to begin a great revival campaign next Sunday. If any of my friends wish to have me hold meetings during the months of November and December, they may write me at Iuka, Miss." In renewing his subscription to the Advocate, Brother McIntosh added a dollar to send the paper to some needy superannuate preacher of the North Mississippi Conference.

TO THE METHODISTS OF NEW ORLEANS.

The Y. M. C. A. is conducting a contest for new members. Two teams have been organized, the Whites and the Reds. I am the captain of the Whites and have the highest individual record for having gained new members of any man on either side, but my team is a few points behind. A much-to-be-desired prize will be given to the captain of the winning team. I want that prize. I am a Methodist; am a linotype operator in the office of our Christian Advocate, and a member of the First Methodist Church. Why not support such a worthy institution as is the Y. M. C. A., and more so now, when by so doing you can help a brother Methodist? Sincerely, L. L. BAILEY.

DATED J. HANCOCK was born Jan. 22, 1851, and died Aug. 14, 1912. He married Miss Rebecca Rowland on Dec. 24, 1874, professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1874 and lived a consistent member for twenty-four years. He was a true Christian from his early boyhood. In his death the Old Ridge Church has lost one of its best members and the community a leading citizen. "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." Brother Hancock was indeed a man perfect as a man could be in this life, and upright altogether. He said a few days before he died that he wanted to be on the right road, and that he felt sure that he was, and was ready to go. He was a true friend to everybody he knew. He died as he had lived—in peace with God and all men. He leaves a wife, nine children, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his going, but we have hope of meeting him in the home beautiful. May the grace of God sustain the bereaved wife and children, and may they live as he lived, die as he died, and meet him in glory—there to enjoy eternal bliss and happiness forever.

His pastor, J. W. PRATT.

MRS. CORA HENRIETTA NUNNERY (nee Gray) was born in North Mississippi and died in Crowley, La., Oct. 1, 1912, at 3 p.m. Mrs. Nunnery was 52 years of age. At 22 years of age she married Mr. J. W. Nunnery, who was raised in the same neighborhood that she was near Wabana, Miss. She leaves her husband and five children—two sons and three daughters—the youngest of whom is about 5 years of age. Sister Nunnery joined the Methodist Church after her marriage to Mr. Nunnery. She was a devout and faithful member. Her life was one of service and devotion to her family and the Church. It was her lot in life to minister to a family of orphan children along with her own. In the spring of this year she, to doubt, overtaxed her strength ministering to an invalid brother, to whom she showed much devotion. She served with a spirit of joy, for she was a happy Christian. She was an inspiration to all who knew her. She was perfectly willing to submit to God's will in her last sickness. Her deepest regret was having to leave her invalid mother, to whom she had ministered so lovingly for years. Her death was that of a saint, ready and willing to answer the call of her Master. She was buried from her home on Oct. 2. Her husband and children will miss her, but her influence in that home abides, and will increase with the passing months and years.

C. D. ATKINSON.

ADAM MONROE BYRD was born in Sumter County, Alabama, July 6, 1853, and died June 21, 1912. He was married, first, to Miss Maggie Simmons in 1877. This happy union of eleven years was blessed with two daughters. His second marriage was to Miss Mary Guller of Meridian, Miss., in July, 1906. God blessed them with two sons and two daughters. His last wife and his six children are left to mourn their loss. When he was but a boy, he resolved to make of himself a great man. He seized the opportunities of his day for an education. He learned the law at Cumberland University and was admitted to the bar in 1884. He was for twenty-eight years a successful lawyer, during which time he was successively County Superintendent of Education, a member of the lower house of the State Legislature, a member of the State Senate, a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1890, District Attorney, Chancellor of the district and for eight years (1902-1910) Representative from the Fifth Congressional District in the National Congress. Eighteen years ago he embraced Jesus as his Saviour and joined the M. E. Church, South, and lived an acceptable member of the same until he went to receive his eternal reward. Judge Byrd was a good friend to the common people. He was a good husband and a kind father and numbered his friends by the thousands. We all miss his smiling face. May God bless and comfort the bereaved family.

J. A. GOLDEN.

MRS. MARGARET ELLIS ELLIS (nee Crowson) was born April 24, 1831, and closed her earthly pilgrimage at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Emma Crowson, near Landersdale, Miss., on September 4, 1912, at the ripe age of eighty-one. Mrs. Ellis was a descendant of colonial blood. On both sides of her ancestry her church lineage reached back to the pioneer days of Methodism in America. On her mother's side of the house she had two uncles (Neighbors) in the Methodist ministry. Her grandfather, Richard Crowson, with his family, moved from East Tennessee to North Alabama in 1811 where he reared a large family. For fifty years he served as a class leader in the Methodist Church. His oldest son, Richard, gave 45 years to the Methodist ministry, and at the age of 65 closed a useful life in Louisiana. His youngest son, John Crowson, was born in 1861, was licensed to preach in 1881, and in 1885 closed a faithful Methodist ministry of 45 years.

The subject of this sketch was his second child. She was reared in obedience and trained to serve God. So at the age of fifteen she embraced faith in Christ, and in 1846 joined the M. E. Church, South, of which she was ever a faithful member. She was early married to Mr. Joseph Armstrong. To this couple was given one child, a daughter. On August 1, 1861, she was married to Mr. Eliza Gray Ellis of Landersdale, Miss., a native of North Carolina. God blessed this union with one daughter and four sons. Mrs. Ellis remained a most loving, faithful and self-sacrificing daughter to her age-stricken parents to their journey's end. She reaped the earthly reward of a long life, and had loving patient care in her feeble days.

As a patriot none excelled her. Resignedly yielding in the civil war all she had to her State's honor and defense, she stood and labored at her post with seemingly unwearying toil and deprivations to support her family and maintain the spirit of war.

As a neighbor she was the peer of any in either the open generosity of the home, or extended benevolence to others. She gave without expecting favors in return. She served, but not to be rewarded. For more than a generation she was looked to, for miles around by those in sickness, sorrow, and distress for ministry or comfort. In sickness she stood only second to the physician, and often filling his place. We were never surprised at any hour, day or night, for a rider to hail, desiring her presence at some sick bed. So thoroughly had she imbibed the spirit of Him who "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister," that it always seemed to her a pleasure, and she never seemed to feel that she had placed any one under obligations. Truly she was a deaconess unordained, save by hands Divine. She was an efficient, true, and faithful wife and mother, bravely in Christ, sustaining her own troubles, and comforting her family in theirs. She unceasingly administered to their needs, and by example and precept pointed them to the better life in Christ.

By the death of her brother and his wife, in the yellow fever scourge in 1878, five orphan children fell to her care. With a tender spirit and Christian purpose she accepted this added responsibility, and became a true mother to the motherless. Today we can only rise up and call her blessed. She lived to see the fruition of these prayers for sixteen years the gospel of her Christ. She lived to see all others of her father's house descend to the grave, while it also received from her sympathizing two husbands and four grown sons. Sweetest of all she knew: "I am and learned more perfectly as I went with those that were." Nor did she escape persecution. At times she was sorely tried, yet with patience and ableness she bore it, various persecutions or ill will. Instead of bitterness and indignation, she looked for the blessing in life about her. Reared in a strictly Presbyterian home, it is not strange that she loved the Church to the end, and was always desirous to see and have the power that her home. When last I conversed with her, she said "Christ is my only hope. I stay my confidence in Him, and I enjoy His saving love." To the end her faith was true, and her love was strong. Her path was "as a shining light" that shined more and more to the perfect day, and though gone, she yet speaks. Her real life, sweet and beautiful, yet moves in memory's hall from which we may, according to our needs, draw blessed lessons. She read and pondered to the last with much comfort and joy, the Bible.

To Christ, dear mother, thou hast gone.

Nor would we call thee back. With peace of faith in Christ alone, We'll follow in thy tracks. As thou hast followed here thy Lord, So also would we do.

With faith and comfort through his word.

He'll safely guide us through. Her joy and blessing.

P. L. CROWSON.

IN GREAT SORROW.

To my Friends and Brethren:

A great sorrow has fallen on us, and we, though cast down, are not forsaken. My first-born son, William Henry Parker, moved last January from Nevada County, Ark., to Hunt County, Texas. About the first of May he was stricken down with what proved to be cerebral meningitis. In his delirium he pleaded at times to be "carried home," and after lingering there for more than four months, he was removed to his old neighborhood, where he suffered for another month, and on last Tuesday morning the spirit made its departure from the body. He was in his fifty-third year, and leaves a family of a wife and nine children. His eldest son is in the Naval Service of the United States. His two eldest daughters are married, leaving the mother, five little girls and a son about 15 years old to live in this cold world. His ideal of moral character was exalted; he was a member of the Methodist Church, and, as far as I have known or heard, he lived up to his high calling. We wait and watch, looking for death, but are still unprepared for it when it comes.

I feel sure that under this burden of the first loss of an adult member of a family of twelve children, we will be remembered as a place of prayer by our many Christian friends.

We have at Mansfield two of the best Leagues in the Conference. Our Senior League has an enrollment of 65, with an attendance ranging from 40 to 80. The members, almost without exception, participate in the services and lead when appointed to do so. We are organizing a mission study class. The Junior League has an enrollment of 25, and practically all attend the devotional meetings. There is one mission study class, and there is a good prospect for others. The credit for these Leagues is chiefly due to my wife, who enjoys working with young people, and succeeds well with them.

THOMAS H. MORRIS, P. C.

West Point, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed a good meeting here. Rev. J. S. Duke, of Nettleton, led the singing and preached to the children every afternoon. He is splendid help. Our congregations were good, considering the time of year. Yesterday was a day to make one's heart rejoice. We had a magnificent Sunday school, and at its close fifteen bright boys and girls from the Junior Sunday school joined the Church on profession of faith, and five adults joined by letter, making a total of twenty. We had two of the largest congregations last Sunday that we have had this year. All told, we have added fifty-seven to the Church during the present year. We observed Rally Day in our Sunday school last Sunday, with 278 present in time to be counted. We had more than 300 there before the service ceased. Mr. R. W. Weaver, of Corinth, made a magnificent speech to us. He is magnifying the high office of layman in the Church of God. May his tribe increase! Kind things are constantly being said about the Advocate, Mr. Editor, and your friends here read it with an increasing appreciation.—E. S. Lewis, P. C.

Walnut, Miss.

The greatest meeting that has ever been held at this place closed on Sunday night, October 6. It was a great meeting for many reasons. It was the first, so far as we know, ever held here by a Methodist preacher. There were a great many who had never heard a Methodist sermon. They had been taught all these years that there was no such thing as experimental religion, and they were filled with malice against us. But few would come to church at first, and some few never did, but with the closing service the house was filled to overflowing. As to results, eternity alone can reveal. But we will note some few results that we saw. Men, women, boys and girls were heard to cry for mercy. Some men whose hairs are white professed a change of heart. Men who were never known to give any thought to Christianity before were thus saved. Fifteen joined our Church, and a number went to the Baptist Church. A Methodist church was practically organized, with a membership of thirty; a lot to build on and almost enough money to erect a church were secured the last night of the meeting. So, taking it all in all, this was the greatest meeting I have ever had the pleasure of being in. The preaching was done by Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, Miss. Brother Bass is a man of God. His preaching is accompanied by the Holy Spirit. It is convicting to the sinner and instructive and edifying to the believer.

Any one needing evangelistic help would make no mistake in getting Brother Bass.—A. L. Davenport, P. C.

Matherville, Miss.

The Lord hath been mindful of us. Several weeks ago our people sent us in a box containing flour, meal, sugar, molasses, crackers, potatoes, starch, soda, baking powder, etc. On the Monday following we received two hogs as a donation. Since that time we have received many other tokens of kindness. As I came in home from Salem Monday morning, our people stopped us and loaded our buggy till nothing more would go into it; and those that know me know how much I can pack in a buggy. We have held but three of our revivals. W. W. Nelson and J. H. Wells were with us in July at Poplar Springs. They preached and sang in the spirit, but closed out just as the people began to get under conviction. There was one conversion. On the fourth Sunday in July we started our meeting at Winfred. The following day Brother C. M. Crossley came to us. There were several clear-cut conversions at this place, and nine were added to the Church on profession of faith. It does my soul good to hear the young men pray at our prayer meetings here. On Aug. 16, we had our quarterly conference at Andrews Chapel. Brother Lewis preached for us at eleven and at night. The following day Brother Crossley reached us and was with us in eleven services. The membership had prepared for a revival by cleaning the church, the grave yard, fixing up the well, and paying more quarterage than all the other four churches together. On Monday we had a confession meeting, and Oh! how the people were blessed. The next day the fire fell; I never saw anything like it. Brother Crossley says it is very seldom that such power is manifested, and that he has only seen such power once or twice before. At least a dozen, if not more, professed to be sanctified at this service, and the very light of heaven was on some of their faces. We had victory in every service. Rev. J. W. Harney held a camp-meeting at Frost Bridge, in the bounds of my charge. I was with him five days, as was also Brother H. Westbrook. Many professed sanctification and quite a lot of good was done on both charges. Brother Harney didn't compromise anywhere. I don't believe we have any more spiritual men in the Mississippi Conference than the men that have been with us this summer. Our churches have been greatly built up, for which we give God the praise. We have two more meetings yet to be held, one of which I will hold myself.

—Algie Oliver.

Try This Home-Made Cough Remedy

Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually ends a deep seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, croup, chest pains, bronchitis and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasantly.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

A CAPITAL IDEA.

Speaking of the Advocate Piano Club, here is a letter from one of our Club members, a Georgia lady, which is a fair sample of the letters we are receiving every day. She writes: "I think it a capital idea. I know we would not have had our piano if we had waited to have gotten the whole amount. I find no fault with the Club plan so far, and as for the Club piano, we are just delighted with it. All our friends say they would like to have one just like it. It is just a beauty, and we value it more than anything else in the house."

A NOTE FROM BOONVILLE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: The regular routine work, as well as many special services and the protracted meeting here at Boonville, has been pleasant and I trust profitable this year, but it seems that the best is coming last. We had Dr. S. A. Steel with us last Sunday. His sermon at eleven o'clock on "The Four Gospels" and his evening sermon on "Prayer" were full of inspiring thought. The large congregations came expecting to hear great sermons and none were disappointed. He remained over Monday night and gave us his great lecture on "The Reign of the Petticoat" to a large audience. His statement of the arguments for and against "woman suffrage" showed that he was familiar with the subject. His recital of facts, historical illustrations, his oratory and beautiful English completely captured the audience. Great as he is, his ideals are greater, and his ambition for the "people called Methodists" is making of him a champion and leader we are proud of.

S. A. BROWN.

Boonville, Miss., Oct. 11, 1912.

Epworth Church, New Orleans.

Dear Doctor Meek: Sunday, October 6, was a good day for us at Epworth Church. In the morning the Sunday school had its annual 'Rally Day.' Preparations had been made in advance for this service, and special effort had been put forth by the pastor and the Sunday school force to have back all those that had been absent during the summer. The number present exceeded our expectations. The reports made by the teachers to the secretary showed 176, but there were enough others not counted to make the attendance fully up to 190, or perhaps 200. This was the best attendance this year. The teachers were most of them back and showed a disposition to take a new hold on things. All this gives promise for a good Sunday school during the coming winter. We have a good body of officers and teachers in our Sunday school. They are willing to give of their time and their energy to the work of the Lord in instructing the young in the Bible and the right way to live.

In the evening the Epworth League meeting was led by the newly elected first vice-president of the League. We had a good attendance and a good service. It was the best meeting for some months. A number of the young people took part in the exercises in other ways than merely by singing. The new officers of the League have begun their work with vim and seem to purpose to look after the interests of the League with zeal. The League has also taken on life after the summer and gives promise of a good season during the winter that is before us. The young people have already been doing a good work, and certainly what they have done in the past can be taken as a prophecy of what they will do in the future.

In the evening, after the League meeting, the pastor preached to a good and attentive congregation. At this time the new officers of the League were installed. The evening service closed with the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, which was partaken of by a good number of the members of the Church present. On the whole, this was a good day for us at Epworth. We are praying the Lord to give us a good revival. Plans have been made for our meeting which will begin on the last Sunday in October. Brother Sutton and Brother Singleton will assist us, and we all feel that the Lord is going to be with us and crown our efforts with success.—Yours faithfully, W. L. Doss, Jr.

We hope that the late dates will afford an opportunity for us to get accurate reports of the whole year's work. FARM HAULING BY TRACTOR.

Hauling or freighting in the South is a serious problem and a heavy task. It matters not whether it is marketing the crops of the farm, hauling fertilizer and other supplies to the farm, or the freighting and hauling of the contractor. It is an expensive proposition.

Farmers and contractor freighters of the South will welcome the advent of the Oil Tractor, the Modern Farm Horse. These tractors will easily and cheaply haul one wagon or a train of wagons on the city streets, the country roads or in the fields.

You do not need specially built wagons. The ordinary farm wagons can be hitched in a string with a cable, a chain or a rope. If it is a contractor, he can use his regular freighting wagons.

One type of these tractors, rated at 40 brake-horse-power, will pull a load requiring 15 to 17 ordinary mules to haul. It is built with two speeds, one of 21.4 miles an hour and the other four miles. When used for freighting it will haul a heavy train of wagons at the low speed and return with the empty ones at the high speed. Or it will haul lighter trains at the higher speed. This tractor is especially well adapted to hauling work, because of these two speeds.

These tractors are used a great deal throughout the world for doing all kinds of agricultural and contract hauling. In addition to this they do all kinds of field work, ordinarily done with horses and mules.

For complete literature on the subject of tractors, write the Hart-Parr Company, 324 R Lawler Street, Charles City, Iowa.

Stole 1,000 Church Members and Got "Skinned Alive."

"My Dear Brother: We have here a Campbellite preacher, the greatest proselyter I ever met. He robbed other churches of 1,000 members and now has 2,200. They built a church costing $75,000.00, seating 2,500, and it seemed all other ministers were afraid of him. A little Lutheran preacher came along and I loaned him a copy of The Bible Model of Baptism. In about two weeks he met the Campbellite in public debate before 4500 people in the auditorium, and he skinned the Campbellite alive and routed him on every point. The vast audience arose and cheered the victor round after round and since then they are as still as an oyster."

The above is one out of hundreds of letters showing how great the need is, and how effectively Mahaffey's book on Baptism does the work where ever given a chance. The price is like a copy, but just now you can get 15 copies for $1. The last big edition is nearly gone and the next will cost more. Send orders direct to Rev. J. E. Mahaffey, Box C, Clinton, S. C., as no one else can fill them at this price.

Bond's Liver Pills

were originated in 1895 by three of the most prominent physicians of the south, who had many years' experience treating diseases depending on a torpid liver.

Grandly has this splendid combination of anti-bilious and anti-malarial agents sustained the reputations of its originators.

Bond's Liver Pills have long since proved to be a most effective remedy for the troubles arising from torpidity of the liver or the bowels.

The small dose—one little pill—and gentle action, make them almost invaluable.

Intelligent readers will not confound Bond's Liver Pills with the numerous so-called "wonderful" remedies that flood the country with reckless and misleading claims of astonishing merit.

When you require an honest and gentle liver or bowel stimulant, take one Bond's Liver Pill at bedtime. You will almost certainly wake up well.

REV. JOHN FLURRY.

Rev. John Flurry was born in Jackson County, Miss., on Jan. 28, 1826, and passed into rest on Aug. 26, 1912. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1845; was converted in 1858, and licensed to preach in 1859. He was married Nov. 4, 1848, to Miss Fannie Bird, and 12 children were born unto them. His wife and three of the children preceded him to the grave several years ago. Brother Flurry was an active local preacher for 43 years, and was always found at his post of duty. In his early ministry he preached often at what was then known as "Cooper Church" on Black Creek, in Jackson County, where many people who are old and feeble to-day first heard the news of salvation from his lips in their early days. He preached often at "Mulberry Grove," a church which was once established on Bluff Creek, north of Vancleave. As a local preacher he preached often at Shiloh, Red Hill and Pine Grove. When the New Prospect Camp Ground Association was organized, he was one of the charter members of the church established at that place. He kept his membership there to the day of his death, and this church, also, became one of his established preaching places. While he was uneducated and had but little knowledge of theology, as the great schools teach theology, yet he was a good expounder of the gospel and, to many, the greatest preacher they ever heard; for it was through him that they were brought to Christ and saved from their sins. He was his pastor's friend and standby; his house was always the preacher's home. He has one son preaching the gospel, Rev. Sam Flurry, of the Mentorium charge. He also has one grandson in the ministry, Rev. John Irvin Flurry, who is working his way through school. For the last ten years Brother Flurry had been an invalid, suffering sometimes untold agony, but through it all he was resigned to the Father's will, and happy in his lot. The last few weeks before he passed away, his children say they never saw him happier and more cheerful—often while lying on his death-bed, he would shout and clap his hands for joy until he would almost be exhausted. He was certainly ready to go; and when the angels came for him there was no regret upon his part. Death was to him no leap in the dark. He knew whom he believed and was persuaded that he was able to keep that which he had committed unto him against that day; so, with shouting and singing, he left this old world of sorrow and woe, and entered into the haven of the redeemed soul.

JAS. M. LEWIS, His Pastor.

PINNED HIS FAITH TO IT.

J. C. S. Douglas of Edenworld, Tenn., writes: "I had been a sufferer from white swelling in my right arm for three years, carried my arm in a sling and could not dress myself. The doctors gave me up to die. Remembering what Gray's Ointment did for me when a child, I decided to pin my faith to it in this case and live or die by it. I began wrapping my whole arm in Gray's Ointment from the elbow to the shoulder and am now perfectly well." Put your faith in Gray's Ointment—you can trust it absolutely to cure all ulcers, old sores, boils, bruises, carbuncles, swellings, and other skin diseases. It has never failed when used properly and never will. Write to Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., for a free sample, or get a 25c box at your druggist or direct by mail from the manufacturer.

PONTOTOC, MISS.

The year is fast closing. We had a very unpromising outlook in the winter months, especially for the country churches. The pastor did not get a hearing till the 1st of May. I held my meetings at my two country churches, one of which, Ebenezer, four miles south of Pontotoc, is a little band, but as plucky as can be found anywhere. Rev. W. L. Duren, of Tupelo, who is one of the finest preachers that I have ever heard, came to us Friday, and preached that night,

Saturday and Sunday morning. He also conducted the quarterly conference like an old presiding elder. Our fellowship, as far as this scribe was concerned, was most delightful. We all missed our genial and most lovable presiding elder, Brother Cunningham, and the hearts of all my people went out to him in his sorrow. Everybody loves Brother Jimmie over this way, and every other way that I have heard of in all the land. . . . My other country church, Palestine, nine miles west, and located in one of the muddiest countries in the winter, and one of the most delightful in the summer, has a large membership—just plenty of people who are of the finest type. We had a great meeting, with some old-time conversions and eleven additions. I forgot to say that there were five additions at Ebenezer. I never have been more cordially received than at these two churches. The people in the rural districts are hungry for the gospel, and the way they listen makes a preacher feel like he is doing some good in the world. . . . We have had a great year in Pontotoc. These people attempted almost the impossible, when as a comparatively small band, with members of other Churches as thick as hops all about, they built a church that would be a credit to any appointment in the Conference. You have heard of the Holcomb meeting. We have had for the whole year forty additions here, and at all of the churches fifty-six. These liberal, aggressive people have paid on their church debt $1400, and will pay two or three hundred more by Conference. Of course, all the other claims will be met in full: so says the official board. We are seeking to project a tithing system which would wipe out all financial trouble now and henceforth. The board has endorsed the movement. If you want to know of the plan, write to Layman, 143 North Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. . . . The pastor has tried to do his work as always, "In his great Taskmaster's eye"—a loving eye that overlooks inherent faults and forgives when he sees the glistening tear of penitence in the heart, whether it gets to the eye or not. Oh, how the godly servant of God loves his people! His greatest remuneration is the peace afforded by the divine approval; the next is the real, genuine love of the people. My fellow workers in the pulpit and out of it, let us be true to God and to each other, and all will be well.

INFORMATION WANTED.

To the Pastors and Epworth League Presidents of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: An effort is being made to get out a complete directory of the Senior League chapters, officers and Junior Superintendents in the Mississippi Conference. Let every charge where Epworth Leagues exist report to me at once, giving this information, if it has not already been sent. If you have not at present an organization but have the prospect of one, organize at once and let me have a report of same before November 1st.

We wish to have this Directory in print not later than January 1, 1913, in order that we may do some effective work before June, 1913, at which time our Annual Conference will be held in Laurel, Miss.

Many of the pastors have a blank return-postal card, which we ask them to have filled out and mailed to me at once.

Asking your co-operation and awaiting your favor, I am,

Yours in League work.

SCIENCE UNDERSTANDS THE STOMACH.

Treating Indigestion with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is an Exact Science.

They Give Quick Relief.

Medical men have learned more about the stomach than perhaps any other vital organ. They have discovered why the stomach rebels at certain conditions—what causes the formation of gases—what causes flatulency, heartburn, dyspepsia, burning sensation, brash, and all the other disorders of the stomach.

They have gone further. They have found remedies for all these afflictions, these results of improper digestion. They have learned that pepsin, hydrochloric acid and fruit salts are powerful digestants that relieve quickly and surely all the troubles to which the stomach is subject. They have discovered that one grain of these properties will digest 3,000 grains of food.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not a medicine. They are a scientific compound that supplies the stomach with the digestive agents which it is itself unable to provide. When your stomach is sick and not working right—when it fails to give out enough of the digestive juices to properly take care of the food you eat, these tablets will make up the deficiency. You will have no indigestion. Your food will digest thoroughly.

You never can tell just when your stomach is going back on you. It gives no warning. If you eat a big meal, if you eat hurriedly, take one of these little tablets. You will avoid a lot of pain and misery.

Some of the most prominent men carry these tablets in their vest pockets when they attend banquets, etc., and never fail to take them.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by all druggists, at 50c a box.

Observe what direction your thoughts and feelings most readily take when you are alone, and you will then form a tolerably correct opinion of yourself.—Bengel.

THE VICK TREATMENT.

as practiced in the use of Vick's Croup and Pneumonia Salve, commends itself to discriminating people because of its perfect accord with the best modern practice in treatment of coughs, colds, catarrh, croup and other similar diseases of the organs of respiration. Applied to throat and chest, it gives local stimulation over the parts affected, while the body heat vaporizes the antiseptic and volatile oils contained in the salve, such as Eucalyptus, Thymol, Menthol, Camphor, Pinus-Sylvestris, etc. These are inhaled together with plenty of fresh air and thus act directly upon the inflamed membranes, inducing the expulsion of phlegm and healing the inflamed surfaces. Easier breathing and reduced fever result, leading to speedy recovery.

Vick's Croup and Pneumonia Salve is sold in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1, by druggists, or direct from the manufacturer, The Vick Chemical Company, 24 Milton Avenue, Greensboro, N. C. A full sized jar of Vicks Salve will be sent free to any physician who is not now using Vick's Salve, and who desires to test its efficiency in his practice. Sample free to anyone on request.

The idea of task and burden is eliminated from the life where loyalty holds sway.—Rev. James McCord.

Study Circle at Water Valley.

The Study Circle at First Church, Water Valley, met on the third Monday to study "What to do for the Immigrant." About twelve members were present, also two visitors. The chapter was read and questions asked, the answers all showing careful study. One of the visitors, the State Secretary of the Christian Board of Missions, talked on the Home Mission Week of Prayer. As previously arranged between her and the leader of the Study Circle, it was agreed to hold denominational meetings once a month, and to invite the Woman's Societies of the other churches to unite with them; thus adapting themselves to the trend of the times, and bringing the churches closer together. The Study Circle has a membership of twenty-four, and is studying, "The Conservation of National Ideals," and are much interested in it. A. C. Y.

Union Meeting in Collins, Miss.

The missionary societies of Collins held a union meeting Monday afternoon, Sept. 9, at the Baptist church. The societies of Ora and Williamsburg were also represented by their Presidents and one other member from the former's auxiliary. This meeting was largely attended and the strict attention given attested the appreciation of the audience. We wished while listening to those excellent talks, papers given, and almost astounding statistics brought forth, that the laymen could have heard them too, in order to have gotten a real insight into the woman's work at home and abroad. We feel that a great number, both men and women, are ignorant concerning the pressing need right around them as well as in other lands, for knowing these needs would drive those who have a spark of love toward God and his creatures in them, to work in every cause that would advance his kingdom. Oh, that every woman in Collins might realize the importance of this work and come to the very altar of service and lay herself there a living sacrifice which would be acceptable unto God and a benefit to humanity! We must as individuals give an account to our Creator of the deeds we commit or omit here on earth. May we examine ourselves and see whether we "be in the faith" (2 Cor. 13:5). The following was the program used, and was prepared by the several Presidents. Each number was a volume within itself, explaining the work, the need, and the opportunity, of today in the mission fields:

Opening Song—"Work for the Night is Coming;" Prayer by Mrs. Allen (President Presbyterian Society); Scripture Reading, Mrs. Dan McIntosh (President Methodist Society); Song, "Higher Ground;" Sketch of Mountain Work, and Home Work in General, shown by chart, Mrs. Hugh McIntosh; "City Missionary and Deaconess Work," Mrs. Ralph Napier; "Harmonizing or Uniting the Home and Foreign Work," Mrs. Dan McIntosh; "Foreign Missions," Mrs. Allen; "Home Work," Mrs. Coulter; Missionary Quiz," Mrs. Allen; "Who and What is a Missionary?" Mrs. Eitel, Ora, Miss.; "Policy of the Baptist W. M. U., Mrs. T. J. Thames; "Personal Service," Mrs. E. V. Martin; "Talk on the General Work of the B. W. M. U.," Mrs. Kervin; Song, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds;" Benediction, with the Lord's Prayer in Concert.—Mrs. Ralph Napier.

Items from Scarritt.

In a recent issue of the Alabama Advocate we notice a letter from Miss M. L. Gibson, telling of some of the great things which have come to Scarritt. The first half of the $5,000 promised by the South Georgia Conference has been received; South Carolina has promised $3,000; the Southwest Mission has installed electricity. The next item, while not a gift, proved a blessing in disguise. A tornado swept over Kansas City and damaged our building to quite an extent; the insurance companies paid $500 which went a long way toward restoring the building to its former state. The Foreign Department made an appropriation for "pressing necessities" and this relieved the school of all financial embarrassment on this line.

White Slave Legislation in England.

The Sunday School Chronicle, London, has this pertinent comment on current white-slave legislation: "We note with pleasure the decision of the Government to make Mr. Lee's White Slave Traffic Bill a 'starred' measure, thus giving it a chance to become a law. All parties are agreed that the infamous traffic should be suppressed, if that be possible, or at any rate made more dangerous for those carrying it on. Few realize its extent and true character. Hundreds of English girls are trapped and sold into American or Continental brothels every year, and ruined in body and soul. A correspondent of The Times, on the authority of the head of the New York police, says that at least 15,000 fresh girls were brought into that city from Europe in 1907 for immoral purposes, some of them only 14 years of age. The syndicate engaged in the awful trade made a profit of 40,000 pounds in a single year. In the burial lots of one of these organizations were found 451 nameless graves of girls. In South America, Argentina and elsewhere the situation is even worse. The bill will make the procuring and selling of these girls a felony instead of a misdemeanor, and thus increase the perils of the business. No wonder that the womanhood of England is pressing for more stringent legislation. It is the duty of every patriot to lend his support and strengthen the defense of ignorance and innocence against the procurers of hell."

A LOVELY PIANO.

You ought to see the letters we are receiving from the enthusiastic members of the Advocate Piano Club. Here is a sample from a South Carolina lady: "The lovely piano came yesterday. Am just delighted with it; so are my musical friends. The tone is so full and sweet, and the case is lovely."

Another member of the club, a gentleman from Florida, writes: "The piano is simply a marvel of beauty and tone, as also action. We are all delighted with it."

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Rev. P. M. Brown interested himself in the observance of Children's Day in the Sunday schools of his District to the extent of writing personal letters to the superintendents in its behalf. It is needless to say this thoughtful and faithful service has borne fruit, the contributions being something like five times as much as last year.

In many of our Sunday schools the leaders have never been awakened to the possibilities of giving due consideration to the social life. Since they have become "old" they have "put away childish things" and don't care for "parties" any more. They are alive to the spiritual needs of the pupils, but in too many instances the social life is found under the auspices of the world. The Adult class' social committee should be encouraged to magnify its work, and to have at least one Sunday school social a month.

Would it not be well for our Adult devotional committees to conduct a monthly consecration meeting after some program of their own devising. It could come either before or after the lesson study on a certain Sunday, and might enquire into the members' habits of prayer, Bible reading, church attendance, and also into their habits of Christian service and good works. Since our Bible classes have no regular devotional program, as does the Epworth League, it seems that some such monthly program as that herein suggested would be of inestimable value in developing the spiritual life of their members.

Miss Lucie Walker, of Winnsboro, has one of the best Cradle Roll Departments that we know of in the State, having twenty-eight on the roll. Not only does she send out birthday cards regularly, but she also visits all her members and keeps the pastor and the Sunday school in touch with them, and is making her department more than self-supporting. Her Cradle Roll members have not only given four kindergarten chairs to the Beginners' Department, but have paid the postage on several lots of "waste material" the Winnsboro school has sent to Korea, under the direction of Miss Ethel Birken, teacher of the Beginners' class. The secret of this is, "she loves little ones and never passes one without stopping to speak to him."

In endeavoring to provide for the more essential needs of the Wesley Adult classes, Dr. Bulla, the superintendent, has selected a reading course of three volumes, and our Louisiana classes should be among the first to avail themselves of this new source of piety and spiritual growth. The course for 1912 is composed of the following books: "The Life of Christ," by James Stalker, price 60 cents; "The Principles of Jesus," by Robert E. Speer, price 60 cents; "Social Creed of the Churches," by Harry F. Ward, price 50 cents. Many an ordinary man has become a man of vision, and changed an aimless life to one of purpose because of a good book. Let us encourage our people to read, and direct them to the best books, and have the courses for our own classes read as they come out, year after year, without a break.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The Leland Sunday school is doing good work with that progressive young layman, Mr. I. R. Matthews, as superintendent.

Mrs. R. P. Neblett's class, at Houston, sent out attractive invitations for the installation of officers, on Sept.

29, and it goes without saying that an interesting program was rendered.

A man said to Bishop Wilberforce: "Pray, sir, can you tell plainly in a single sentence the way to heaven?" "Certainly," was the instant reply. "Turn to the right and go straight ahead."

One Adult class calls itself "The Every-day Good Samaritan" and they really study a book called "First Aid to the Injured" along with their Bibles, and the world is a better place for their having lived and loved and worked.

Another big men's class sends out on its circulars: "We're looking for trouble! Are you in any? Let us help you." And how many burdens they have lightened only the last great day will tell.

The Sunday school in Indianola is doing good work. Mr. J. D. Smith has a Men's class that is growing, and the superintendent reports an increase in attendance every Sunday. Brother Shipman is doing a fine work there, which is much appreciated.

The prayer that precedes the study of the lesson in an Adult class should not be a haphazard utterance from some one, or just any one, called upon suddenly to lead the devotions. Nothing so determines the results of the class hour as the spirit, tone and atmosphere of the class that is making the study. Then such a class should always have in mind something very, very definite for which to pray.

North Mississippi Sunday schools, and especially the Tupelo First Church school, have suffered a great loss in the "passing over the river" of Mr. R. A. Weaver, of Tupelo. He was a splendid man in every respect, and the teacher of a fine and progressive group of men. His place will be most difficult to fill. May many of our young men grow up in his likeness, to help fill his place. Many, many hearts sorrow with his loved ones.

Mrs. Nellie Nugent Samerville, of the Greenville First Church, has a fine class of thoughtful women studying the Old Testament sages and prophets, and they are doing an unusual type of work. Mrs. E. Taylor has an interesting class of 10 or 20 little girls and great things are expected from her understanding and skilled leadership. Mr. Kretshmar has an unusual class of bright boys and is well up on the "boy problem" and how to meet it. Mrs. W. W. Woollard presides over a class of small boys with loving understanding. These four teachers all belong to Mr. Lagrone's progressive Sunday school and are materially assisting the great cause in Greenville. Mr. R. P. Dunn, the up-to-date superintendent, is doing a great work.

A Distinction With a Difference

YOU may not always get what you pay for. It takes a good judge of values to do that, but if there is one sure rule in business it is—you pay for all you get. You may not be able to see the difference between engines of similar appearance at different prices, but if you buy from a reputable firm you may be sure the difference in quality is there.

I H C Oil and Gas Engines

cost more than some others because they are more carefully made, and more thoroughly tested. Skillful designing, better material, better workmanship, more careful assembling, and more thorough testing, tell in the long run. Given equal care an I H C engine costs less per year of service than any other engine you can buy. If an I H C engine is given all the work it will do, pumping, sawing wood, running the grindstone, feed grinder, hay press, silage cutter, repair shop machines, cream separator, churn, washing machine, etc., etc., it will pay for itself in a very short time in money and labor saved.

I H C engines are made in every style—horizontal and vertical, air and water-cooled, stationary, portable, and mounted on skids, to operate on gas, gasoline, kerosene, naphtha, distillate or alcohol, in sizes from 1 to 50-H.P. Kerosene tractors, 12, 15, 20, 25 and 45-H.P.

A LETTER FROM OKLAHOMA.

Dear Brother Week: A few notes from Muskogee, Oklahoma, may be of interest to your Mississippi readers and others.

Leaving Starkville, Miss., on Tuesday, September 16, we arrived at Muskogee in the afternoon of the next day. We were met at the station by my son-in-law, Dr. A. E. Bonnell, with one or more of the little folks, and Maude, a lively trotter, and the surly, and were soon at the home of my daughter, Beulah Lipscomb Bonnell. My traveling companion on this trip was Mrs. M. A. Reynolds, my sister-in-law. She expects to remain with Mrs. Bonnell until next spring. My visit will be limited to a few weeks, during which time I expect to visit other children, living west of the Mississippi River. I will go first to the home of Mrs. Gertrude Rowe, our "baby child," who lives in Broken Arrow, Okla., while my return trip will take in Fort Smith, Ark., the home of my sons, Howard B., and T. C. Wier, Jr., and Little Rock, the home of my son, W. E. Wier. The latter part of October, or the early days of November may find me home again at Starkville.

Brother Joe Ramsey has been holding a meeting in Muskogee since Sunday, Sept. 15. It has been a great pleasure to meet again this consecrated evangelist, with whom I have taken sweet counsel in the past. He is the same genial spirit and earnest, effective preacher as in other days. The meeting is under the auspices of our two Southern Methodist churches here—First Church and St. Paul's. The services have been held mostly under a large tent. These services this week, however, on account of inclement weather, were held in the near-by Christian Church. But last night the congregation was again under the tent, and "Brother Joe" seemed more at home on his own ground, and made a strong and earnest appeal to the church. His preaching has been mostly to the church. Congregations at night sometimes have been large. Last Sunday night the audience was estimated at twelve or fifteen hundred people, while many, it was said, were turned away for lack of seats. A leading Methodist, speaking to me of Brother Ramsey's preaching that night, said: "It was a great sermon." The singing is led by Brother Clark, a young man from Kentucky. He is a good leader and is aided by a large choir.

A great and gracious revival is hoped for and prayed for as a result of this meeting before it shall come to a close—a revival that shall mightily uplift and establish the Church, and bring many souls to Christ. Such a revival is very greatly needed in Muskogee, as in many other places.

T. C. WIER,

Muskogee, Oklahoma,
September 27, 1912.

A GOOD MEETING AT TERRY, MISS.

On September 18, at our mid-week prayer meeting, the thought was suggested to hold evening services from day to day with special prayers for divine leadership and help in a series of special revival meetings. The attendance from the beginning was good and increased daily till the meeting closed on Sunday, October 6.

On Tuesday, Sept. 24, we added a 10 a. m. service, which was well attended, the business houses closing that those employed in them might attend. The spirit of unity and Christian fellowship among the leading members of all the churches was most delightful. With one mind and heart all seemed to join in an effort to reclaim the erring and save the lost. The result cannot be tabulated by us; God kept the record. As most of our people are in some one of the Churches, the meeting lacked the delightful feature of having many additions to the membership. The churches were drawn into a closer fellowship in Christ. Many members rejoice in a better Christian experience and promise greater activity and faithfulness in the Lord's work. The good people of Terry have long suffered from the whiskey demon. They now rejoice in better conditions on these lines, and have organized for aggressive temperance work. Our prayer meetings show a large increase in interest and numbers. We believe the end is not yet, but that fruit will be gathered many days hence.

We are under special obligation to Brother R. W. Thurman, who was with us from September 22 to the close, rendering efficient service in faithful sermons, songs and prayers. Rev. J. R. Jones, our efficient presiding elder, preached an excellent and telling sermon. Rev. J. W. Chism, of Galloway Chapel, Jackson, preached an instructive and helpful sermon on "The Personality and Work of the Holy Spirit." Preceding this service on Oct. 4, at 11 a. m., Mr. S. C. Milton, of Camden, Miss., and his wife, Mrs. Maude Ellis Milton, presented their first born, Carabel Ellis, for baptism. Brother Chism assisted the pastor in this delightful and impressive service. His wife, Mrs. Maude Ellis Chism, joined in the presentation.

Miss Belle Roberts, of Franklin, La., spent a few days with us in the interest of the Advocate contest. Her presence and services will bear fruit for good. She is working to win and hopes to gain the coveted prize—the trip to Switzerland.

God bless all who so nobly aided in our gracious and never-to-be forgotten campaign for the upbuilding and extension of the kingdom of our Lord.
C. H. ELLIS.

DO THE BAPTIST CLAIM TO BE THE ONLY CHURCH?

All my life I have been closely associated with the Baptist people, yet I must acknowledge that I do not understand them in the question of the Church. Is it their faith that the Baptist is the only Church? This is the question I would like to have answered. Let the Baptists secure themselves on this question.

The Baptist Board, missionary or evangelist, Rev. Mr. Durbin, does claim the Baptist to be the only Church, at least I have the word of the pastor of a State Bank and others considered perfectly reliable on this subject. His relation to the Baptist Church of this State makes him a representative man, and he holds on this may be taken to be the faith of the Baptists and will be interpreted that way. A number of Baptists do not believe the Baptist to be the only Church of Jesus Christ.

I am not attacking their faith in this article. I am not calling them to an argument or a defense. I am simply wanting to know whether they claim to be the only Church of Jesus Christ. I am willing to interpret to any one the claim of the Methodist Church. Why should not the Baptists frankly answer me? Come out in the light on this question, brethren. If the Baptists do not claim to be the only Church, then Brother Durbin is spreading ignorance and prejudice among the people.

Yours for a direct and authoritative answer, H. W. LEDBETTER,

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM.

There has lately been quite a flutter of excitement caused by the assertion that the scientists are about to develop life from inorganic matter. When they show conclusively that they have done this, we shall believe it, but not before. This is not the first time that a loud cackle has been raised over such an alleged discovery. This claim was made years ago with much insistence, but the researches of Tyndall and Pasteur proved it to be utterly groundless. Biogenesis—life from life—seems to be the universal law of creation, and we are disposed to think that the fiat of the Almighty is behind it and that it will stand until the end of time. But even if life should be produced by artificial means, in our opinion, it would not necessarily discredit the teachings of Christianity, though it would probably tend, for a while at least, to boost the cause of evolution.

THE GOOD USUAL—THE BAD EXCEPTIONAL.

We take the following from the New York World: "For fifteen years past Congressman McKinley, of Illinois, has been lending money to students at the State University upon no other security than their character and habits. During all this time he has not lost one cent of principal or interest. Having his faith in young manhood thus confirmed, he has now presented the University with the sum of $13,000 to be used as a nucleus for a permanent loan for deserving students."

Commenting upon Mr. McKinley's experience, The World says: "This is one of the illustrations of human honesty sufficiently notable to command wide attention. As a rule, the honest debtor is not noted, while every absconder or swindler gets plenty of advertising. The unreflecting are thus betrayed into forming harsher judgments of mankind than are justified by the truth."

We think our contemporary is undoubtedly right in the view expressed. It is the unusual that finds its way under glaring headlines into the secular papers. The ordinary and commonplace are ignored by them. The sterling virtues so generally prevalent among the people are taken as a matter of course; exhibitions of them, if set forth in the public prints, would command little or no attention. It is because the departures from the accepted standards of society are the exceptions, and not the general rule, that they so startle us and that the news of them is published far and near.

The truth is, the world, though there is still an appalling amount of wickedness in it, is constantly growing better. There is less of evil and more of good in it to-day than at any former time. Despite the aspersions of them, which unhappily at present are far too common, there are more good men in public life now than in any preceding period of the nation's history. It is true that many things occur that are shocking, but this has always been the case; and they were more frequent in the past. We believe that the great body of the American people are sound in morals and are gaining in all the essential qualities of noble manhood and womanhood. Let us not make the mistake of gazing at the leprous spots of society until, blind to its beauties and excellences, we imagine that we can see corruption everywhere. Few things are more misleading than a "jaundiced" eye.

A DEPLORABLE TRAGEDY.

A few days ago it was rumored that in this city a little girl eight years of age, whose parents were Christian Scientists, had been allowed to suffer and die with diphtheria, treated only by a healer of that cult and having no proper medical attention. The body of the child was exhumed and an examination made, which showed that the report was all too true. Now the father is under indictment for manslaughter; the healer has been charged with violating the law of the State in undertaking to treat diseases without proper license and placed under bond, and the infant brother of the first little victim has caught the dread malady.

Such are some of the logical fruits of the teachings of Christian Science, which not a few people are disposed to regard as a sort of amusing and harmless delusion. But in reality it lacks much of being that. It is fraught with grave possibilities for evil both to the body and soul, and it ought to be more vigorously combated. Entirely too much toleration is shown it. If grown-up people are foolish enough to afflict themselves in cases of illness by refusing to use the tested remedies which common sense and science have provided, and suffer in consequence, we may pity and regretfully let them alone; but in the case of innocent children, unable to care for themselves, it is clearly the duty of the State to interfere. And if the laws of the land are not adequate to hold those responsible for such neglect accountable in the courts, they should be made so at the earliest possible moment.

PAY THE PREACHER IN FULL.

With the utmost emphasis at our command, we wish to stress the importance of every pastoral charge paying its preacher in full. The salaries which our ministers receive are, with few exceptions, small, and in many cases they are forced to wait until the close of the year for a large part of what was promised them. On this account, they have perhaps been forced to buy on a credit, or to borrow money to meet their current expenses. What they owe will have to be paid or they will be injured in their standing and influence. And how are they to meet their outstanding obligations if they are deprived of what is due them? It is easy for an entire congregation to make up a deficit of $75 or $100 on a pastor's salary; but if it is allowed to stand unmet, it is a heavy loss for him to sustain. And where several churches are grouped together, as soon as one has raised its apportionment it should not cease to be interested in paying the preacher the whole of the assessment made for him. The amounts assigned the different congregations may not have been exactly equitable, since that it is a mere matter of judgment. Moreover, the charge is the unit, and a shortage at any one point affects adversely the entire work. For this reason (as well as others), the stewards of no church should rest until every dollar due the pastor has been raised.

A writer in the Western Methodist states that ninety-three out of a hundred and forty-two charges in the Oklahoma Conference failed to pay their pastors in full last year, and that these deficits foot up the sum of $13,529, an average of more than $145 for each delinquent charge. What the figures would show in the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, we have not taken the time to ascertain; but we do not doubt that an examination of the Minutes of these bodies would prove that the shortages were regrettably large.

It is high time that we were doing better in the management of our church finances. The cost of living is higher now than ever before. Under our way of doing things, a pastor cannot press his claims upon the people without detriment to himself and the Church. His interests are in the hands of his official board. These brethren should recognize this fact and faithfully discharge the duty imposed upon them. Negligence upon their part is most reprehensible. It entails hardships upon those who, even under the most favorable conditions, have privations enough. If need be, a congregation should be willing to sacrifice rather than to see a needy servant of the Master, who has been unselfishly spending his strength of mind and body and heart for them, go unpaid. But it is very rarely necessary to do this. If every church member would give in a reasonable proportion to his ability, in most cases there would be ample funds to meet all proper demands. It is not our poverty, but a lack of systematic liberality, that keeps our church treasuries empty.

DOING BETTER THAN TALKING.

Once we had the day of speculative Christianity. That has largely passed, and now we have a doing Christianity. Never before were so many agencies at work for the industrial, social, and moral betterment of mankind. Streams of philanthropy now flow around the world; millions of arms are reaching out to help the needy. And we think this change is undoubtedly for the better. Surely there is more merit in serving than in theorizing.

AN AUTUMN CALL

There are great and pressing tasks that await the renewed energies and refreshed spirits of the men and women of the churches these bright and beautiful fall days. We ought to be eager and responsive and alert to the call that comes to us to serve the cause of the Church and humanity. What would really happen if you and I and all the men and women in our Church should become enthusiastic for the doing of the Church's work and may persistently enthusiastic until vacation time next summer? Wonderful things would happen we are persuaded, things quite past our present calculation. Why not let us, in so far as we are concerned, decide to make the experiment?—The Christian Guardian.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN IN INDUSTRY.

By Rev. Charles Stetzie.

Whether or not it is better for a woman to work in her home in occupations which are related to industrial life or whether such work should be done in the factory itself is a question which most students have decided in favor of the factory, and this for various reasons.

In the first place, when such work is done in the factory there is a legal number of hours during which the woman may be employed, and the wages which she should receive have been fairly well standardized. Women in industry ordinarily work too many hours per day, and they do not receive as high a wage as they earn, as compared with that received by men, but undoubtedly the conditions in the factory are much better than they can possibly be in the home. Aside from other considerations, the home should rarely, if ever, be turned into a workshop, for this involves not only the work of the women, but that of little children. Whatever else may be said against the factory system, it has been beneficial in a purely economic sense. The factory has undoubtedly raised moral and ethical standards.

The history of woman in industry in the United States is a story of great industrial readjustment. Not only has women's work been carried from the home to the factory, but the kind of work which they have been doing has been greatly changed, and at the same time their monopoly of traditional occupations has been destroyed. As in the case with men, their labor has been systematized and specialized so that an individual woman no longer finishes an entire product. She has become part of a great machine. Also, what was formerly regarded as women's work exclusively is now being performed by men, and what was formerly considered men's work is often performed by women. Under the old domestic system the work of the women was to spin, to do a large part of the weaving, to sew, to knit, and in general to make most of the clothing worn by the family, to cook, to brew ale, to clean, and to perform the other duties of the domestic servant; but machines have now come in to aid in all these industries—machines which in some cases have brought in their train men operatives, and in other cases have enormously increased the productive power in the individual, making it necessary for many women to hunt other work. One kind of spinning is now done by men alone. Men tailors make thousands of women's suits. Men dressmakers, and often milliners, are common. Men make bread and brew ale, and do much of the work in the steam laundry where our clothes are washed. Men, too, have learned to clean our houses by the vacuum process, so that it is not altogether fair to insist that women have been crowding men out of industrial life. Men have also crowded women out of their former occupations.

The wages of women in industry are almost scandalously low. According to the "Report on Woman and Child Wage Earners in the United States," gotten out by the Department of Commerce and Labor, investigations were made of wages paid to women in department and other retail stores in Boston, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Paul, New York, Philadelphia and St. Louis. The living conditions of 108,516 women were investigated. Those living at home averaged 22.5 years of age, while those not living at home averaged 21.2 years of age. The average weekly earnings of those living at home were $5.35; those not living at home $7.19. Those living at home paid an average weekly amount to their families of $5.23; while those not living at home paid an average weekly amount of $1.43 for food, shelter, heat, light and laundry. In addition to this, in the latter group about 21.4 per cent contributed to needy relatives. Those working in factories, mills and miscellaneous establishments were even worse off. The total number of this class investigated in the same cities was 294,506. The average age of those living at home was 21.1; those not living at home 20.7. The average weekly earnings of those living at home were $5.40; those not living at home $6.75. Those living at home paid weekly to their families $5.45; while those not living at home spent $3.50 per week for food, shelter, heat, light and laundry. Of the latter group, nearly 21.4 per cent contributed to needy relatives.

Any one who is familiar with living conditions in our great cities can see at a glance, that the earnings of women in industry are totally inadequate to maintain a decent standard of living, and when they do so it proves the unusual strength of character of the women engaged in industrial life. The State of Massachusetts has just adopted a minimum wage for women in industry. Half a dozen other States are seriously considering this question. Women will unquestionably remain in industrial life. Large numbers of them should do so. Most of them will be compelled to, but it might as well be recognized that when women become competitors of men in industrial life they always suffer directly or indirectly; and when women, and especially mothers, desert the home for the factory the nation suffers.

According to the Special Census Bulletin of 1907, there were 1,750,175 child workers in the continental United States, of whom 69.2 per cent were on the farm. Four-fifths of these youthful agricultural laborers were reported as assisting their parents. The question is, to what extent is such labor injurious? It will not hurt the average child between the ages of ten and fourteen to do a reasonable amount of work on the farm, but many country boys are over-strained—according to those who are in a position to judge. But probably the greatest evil attendant on rural child-labor appears in the form of arrested educational development. In many a country school the percentage of girls to boys is six to one. The real curse of child-labor is not in the fact that children are compelled to work. It is the continuous toil for long hours under unsanitary conditions, with improper or insufficient food, that stunts the body and the mind, so that when the child arrives at the years when he should be giving expression to his best self it is impossible for him to appreciate the best values of life. The pathetic thing about the whole situation is that there comes no realization of that which is missing. Life has lost its largest and fullest meaning.

LAYING OF THE CORNER STONE OF THE BARNES HOSPITAL.

On Friday, October 11, the corner stone of Barnes Hospital was laid by Bishop E. R. Hendrix in St. Louis, Mo. The Barnes Hospital, when completed, will be the largest hospital under the control of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the largest Protestant hospital in America, and one of the largest sanitariums in the world. The building will cost a million dollars, and will have an endowment of a million dollars more. Besides this, it will be alongside of the new building of the Medical Department of Washington University, and the medical experts of that school will be connected with the new hospital, and Washington University has contracted to pay any deficiency that may occur in the running expenses of the institution above the income from the million dollar endowment.

The building of the Barnes Hospital was made possible by a bequest made by Mr. Robert A. Barnes—himself an Episcopalian and his wife a Roman Catholic—who died in 1892. At that time the bequest amounted to $340,000.00, which was placed in the hands of trustees, who wisely invested the same and waited until the income from it was sufficient to build the present structure without touching the original gift. The credit for the wise management of this fund is due to Messrs. S. P. Gault, R. M. Scruggs and S. P. Cupples, deceased, and Mr. S. P. Kennard, the only one of the original four trustees now alive.

The Southern Methodist Church has every reason to be proud of this noble institution, and especially of the fact that the great philanthropist, who was not of our faith, saw in our denomination what he thought to be the proper spirit to administer wisely this great trust. The arrangement which the trustees have made with Washington University will practically place the Medical Department of that industrial school under the direction of our Church.

AGAINST THE PROPOSED NEW NAME.

In an editorial reference to Dr. Du Bose's pamphlet, "Shall the Name be Restored?" the North Carolina Christian Advocate says:

"The object of the author is to show why the various Annual Conferences should vote to change the name of our Church to that of The Methodist Episcopal Church in America. There is no questioning the fact that Dr. Du Bose has made out a clear case, so far as the proof of the fact goes, that the original name of our Church in this country was The Methodist Episcopal Church in America. However, we fail to see why this should have any bearing upon the question as to what name we shall assume for the future. It is generally understood that the demand for a change is based upon the fact that our name at present is sectional, by reason of the suffix, South. This being the case, the editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate is unalterably opposed to swapping one sectional suffix for another, the suffix, 'in America,' being sectional only in a wider sphere. When a change is made, we are in favor of the original proposition which was submitted to our last General Conference, namely, that we adopt the name, 'The Methodist Church.' This is a name as wide as the world in its fitness and is in harmony with the ideal of Mr. Wesley; for he said, 'the world is my parish.'"

CHURCH ATTENDANCE AS A PATRIOTIC DUTY.

The Public Ledger of Philadelphia has entered on a campaign to promote church attendance avowedly from patriotic motives, holding that apart from any purely religious motive church attendance is beneficial to the community. It says:

There has been more or less inclination to criticize the Church, pick flaws in its administration and charge it with insincerity; but the fact remains that the aim of every body of worshipers, whether in humble chapel of stately temple, is the promotion of a social ideal—a kingdom of God in which equity and universal brotherhood shall be dominant. And whatever seeks to bring in such a consummation is of manifest benefit to the community, the State and the nation. Nor can this be styled a mere creed of religious congregations—the world-wide ministration among the poor, the afflicted, the sick and bereaved is palpable evidence of the fulfillment in large part of their mission.

Mere attendance upon a religious service may count for little in molding character, yet it is undeniable that regularity in church duties is a wholesome practice. The churches stand for sobriety, good order and the reign of law. They promote stable government and security of life; their services to the republic in these respects are a matter of history; and such organizations should have the moral support of all good citizens.

Without question every community would be benefited if the practice of devoting a few hours one day in seven to moral themes were general; while a different conception of the aims of religious workers would doubtless be obtained if non-churchgoers became attendants upon church services.—The New York Weekly Witness.

BISHOP McTYEIRE ON THE SUBJECT.

Dear Brother Meek: I noticed in the Advocate of October 17, a short editorial under the caption: "An interesting Historical Fact," in which it was stated that it has been generally overlooked, at least within recent years, that the Northern branch of Episcopal Methodism permitted slavery among its members as well as the Southern branch, until it was abolished after the outbreak of the Civil War.

This fact, which is news to many, would be a matter of common knowledge were all familiar with Bishop McTyre's History of Methodism, which gives in detail, pp. 660-663, the manner in which slaveholders were sought after by the Northern Church. And on page 672 we find that the President's Emancipation Proclamation of Jan. 1, 1863, anticipated the action of the Northern Church in making slaveholding a bar to membership therein, by about two years.

These facts have been before the public, in print, since this excellent work was first published in 1884, and I am glad that it has been included in the course of study for Conference undergraduates.

JAS. S. DUKE.

Nettleton, Miss.

ROBERT A. WEAVER—AN APPRECIATION.

By Hon. W. M. Cox.

R. A. Weaver, after a long illness and much suffering patiently endured, departed this life at his home in Tupelo, Miss., on October 1, 1912, in the fortieth year of his age. A prince and a great man has fallen in Israel, and with his passing, a life has been lost to the world that was remarkably rich and helpful in all its influences.

He was fortunate in his birth and upbringing. He came of gentle blood and lineage. His father was a soldier of the Confederacy, who received in battle wounds which shortened his life. His mother, who survives him, an inmate of his home, is a typical woman of the Old South, gentle, refined, gracious, yet earnest, capable and strong both to suffer and to do.

Nature did much for him. He had a well-knit frame, developed by manly sport and exercise, a winning smile, lustrous eyes, an open brow, a profusion of dark hair, and an air of distinction and refinement. He had a strong intellect, a cheery temper, a firm, resolute and disciplined will. He received Christian training in a Christian home. He was brought into the Kingdom of Grace in his thirteenth year, and united with the Methodist Church. He was educated in the city of Memphis, finishing at the Preparatory School of Werts and Rhea. He entered Vanderbilt University in his eighteenth year, and prosecuted successfully the course for the Bachelor's Degree, until his father's death, at the end of his Junior year, made it necessary for him to leave the University in order that he might take charge of his father's business. This he did, taking his father's place as head of the family, becoming his mother's chief stay and support, and both father and elder brother to his brothers and sister, as well as to some orphaned cousins, all of whom he loved with a great fervor of affection. Though prevented from completing his university course, he maintained through life the habits of a student. He was widely read in the best literature, and had the tastes and culture of a scholar. He was fond of music, and found great delight in the masterpieces of classical composition, as well as in the songs of Zion.

He was for a number of years a member of the First Methodist Church of Memphis, and was thereby brought much in contact with that eminent man of God, Mr. John R. Pepper, through whom his spiritual life was greatly deepened and enriched.

A little more than fifteen years ago he was most happily married to Miss Georgia May Allen, daughter of Hon. J. M. and Mrs. Georgia Taylor Allen, a superior woman whose spirit fully matched his own. Whatever may be true of others, this marriage was one that might well have been made in heaven. It was ideal in its sweetness and harmony. It was the blending into one of two richly dowered lives, neither of which had ever known another love. It was never for a moment marred by any disloyalty, or suspicion of it, by any coldness, contention or bitterness. As the days went by each grew more and more into the life of the other, until the twain did verily become one, in thought, in purpose, in ideals, in aspirations. As the responsibilities of life multiplied and its burdens grew heavier, their love ripened into a joy which the dark waters of affliction could not chill, nor even death itself altogether extinguish in the widowed heart that survives.

This union was blessed with six children—two sons and four daughters—each of whom they welcomed as a gift from God, to be nourished and trained and kept for him. The proper rearing of these children was to them always their highest concern and most important duty in life. They made for them a home splendid in all its appointments, and rich in all the means of culture and of grace. The library was filled with well chosen books. Music, pictures and innocent games were employed to entertain and charm. God was honored in the home, and each day, as priest of the family, he presented them all in prayer at the throne of grace. He was comrade to each of his children, from the eldest son to the baby daughter. He entered into their sports with the enthusiasm of a boy. He read much to them from the best books, and worked with his two sons, training them in habits of industry. His days he gave to business, his evenings to his family. He sang often with them the great songs of the Church, which have in them the very essence of the Gospel, and made them familiar with those parts of the Scriptures suitable to the youthful understanding. In all this he wrought well with them, and his labor, we trust, will not go without its reward.

He had lived for five years in the town of Tupelo, and had become identified with every interest of that great and progressive community. He was recognized as one of its most sagacious and successful business men. He was interested in everything that made for its material and civic advancement. But his most valuable service was rendered in the promotion of education and morality, and the quickening and deepening of its spiritual life. For he was a man of faith. The Scriptures were to him the very word of God, the world's one indispensable book, its great storehouse of wisdom and integrity. He believed with Peter that "the prophecy came not in the olden time by the will of man, but that holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." He believed with Paul that "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners, spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed Heir of all things, by whom, also, he made the worlds." And he believed that in the Son all who believe in him have eternal life. And so believing, he wrought diligently, redeeming the time, doing with his might whatsoever his hands found to do. He interested himself in whatever concerned the kingdom. He gave himself freely to every work of the Church. He was regular in attendance upon and participated actively in its services. He was teacher of the Baraca Class in the Sunday school. He was especially interested in the boys and young men of the congregation and community, and won many of them for Christ and the Church. His influence for good over the young within its reach has scarcely, if ever, been surpassed. He was chiefly instrumental in organizing the Y. M. C. A. of Tupelo, and in procuring the erection of its magnificent building. And so he had won the confidence and love of every boy and girl, and man and woman, in Tupelo. And so it is said of him that while others may have surpassed him as an influence for the material upbuilding and civic betterment of his community, he was its greatest influence for righteousness.

He grew daily in grace as the end drew near. Wishing to live, yet willing to die, if God saw best, he was to the last calm, serene, and unafraid. We sorrow for him, but not as those who have no hope. We grieve for him, but our grief is mixed with joy. His life was hid with Christ in God, and can never be lost. "We know he lives in Him and there we find him worthier to be loved."

A multitude testified their affection and sorrow by attending his funeral; and they buried him beneath a mound of flowers. He awaits the resurrection of the just. We indulge in no vain speculations as to why God took him ere yet his life had reached high noon. He knew best and has done best. It may be well that our dear friend, though his work on earth seems all unfinished and his place impossible to be filled, has served God, and those who loved him, better in his death than in his life. His memory shall be to us an everlasting possession.

Baldwyn, Miss.

AN EVERY-DAY RESOLVE.

I will this day try to live a simple, sincere and serene life; repelling promptly every thought of discontent, anxiety, discouragement, impurity and self-seeking, cultivating cheerfulness, magnanimity, charity, and the habit of holy silence; exercising economy in expenditure, carefulness in conversation, diligence in appointed service, fidelity to every trust, and a childlike trust in God.

—Bishop J. H. Vincent.

EPWORTH LEAGUE MEETING.

The joint Epworth League Meeting of the Alexandria and Monroe districts will be held in Alexandria, October 25-27. We hope a large number of leaguers from these districts will be present, and that many of the ministers will attend. Their presence is encouraging, and we are made to feel that they believe in this branch of the church work, and approve the effort that is being made to hold the young people to the Church, and use their gifts and talents in the Master's service.

Every department of the work will be fully explained, and we hope this Conference will result in the complete organization of these districts, and the establishment of the League work in other churches.

Rev. E. B. Troy, of West Monroe, will preach the opening sermon Friday evening. During his pastorate of a few months at West Monroe, he has organized four Epworth Leagues, the Missionary Societies have taken on new life, and the church, as a whole, we are informed, is moving forward in the Master's work.

Dr. Werlein will preach on Sunday morning a sermon to "Young People," and Rev. C. D. Atkinson, of Crowley, will preach Sunday evening. Mrs. S. J. Lingle, of Shreveport, Mr. S. A. Mayo and Mr. J. A. Stockwell, of Lake Charles, Mrs. S. H. Werlein, of Alexandria, and others will speak during the Conference.

Church News

Bishop E. E. Hendrix is slated to deliver an address at the University of Georgia this month.

There are reported to be one hundred and sixty-two students from Methodist families at the University of Arkansas.

Miss Helen Gould has pledged $10,000 toward the erection of a hundred thousand dollar Y. M. C. A. building at Portsmouth, Va.

The Union Theological Seminary (Presbyterian), at Richmond, Va., celebrated its one-hundredth anniversary on October 14.

Dr. Gilby C. Kelly, the pastor of First M. E. Church, South, of Charlottesville, Va., is in feeble health. He has lately been spending some time recuperating at Afton.

Bishop A. W. Wilson is down for a sermon at the mid-year meeting of the Board of Missions of the Baltimore Conference, which is to be held at Front Royal, Va., this week.

The Travelers' Aid Society of New Orleans has been complimented by a request from the New York Society for information as to its methods of work. The Crescent City chapter of this organization is one of the liveliest and most successful in existence.

Henderson-Brown College, at Arkadelphia, Ark., announces an attendance of 166 boys and 33 girls, a gain of 25 over last year. This is another of our Southern Methodist schools which has established a chair of Biblical Literature and given the Word of God a place in the college curriculum.

The Midland Methodist speaks in high praise of the service rendered by Bishop Kilgo at the recent session (the 89th) of the Holston Conference, especially of his pulpit and platform work. Dr. E. G. B. Mann, the editor of the Central Methodist Advocate, who was a visitor, is also said to have delivered a sermon of extraordinary power.

How mightily has Southern Methodism grown within the last hundred years! The Minutes of the Tennessee Conference of 1912 show in the list of appointments, New Orleans, with Rev. Miles Harper as pastor. Now we have a Louisiana Conference, and between it and the Old Jerusalem Conference of Tennessee lie the Mississippi, North Mississippi, and Memphis Conferences.

It is announced that Dr. Frank P. Culver, formerly one of the leading ministers of the North Alabama Conference, but now the president of the Polytechnic College at Fort Worth, Texas, will re-enter the pastorate this fall. Dr. Culver received a large vote for the episcopacy at the last General Conference, and is considered one of the strong and growing men of his denomination.

Bishop and Mrs. H. C. Morrison, according to the Florida Christian Advocate, have recently been visiting in Kentucky, where they are much at home, the Bishop having served with unsurpassed acceptability as a pastor in Louisville many years ago. We trust that the bracing air of the Blue Grass State has proven beneficial to both this beloved chief pastor and his accomplished helpmeet.

The Methodist Episcopal Church will establish a College in Washington, North Carolina. The plan is to begin erecting a main building to cost $30,000 or $35,000 and a Domestic Science Hall to cost $15,000. The citizens of Washington gave 20 acres of land and $5,000 in cash to secure the institution. This is another evidence that the Northern Methodists are in for aggressive work in the Southern States.

The World in Baltimore, which is intended to set forth before the very eyes of visiting Americans the conditions existing in the various mission fields, will open on October 25, and continue through the month of November. It is stated that the cost of the exhibition will be approximately $75,000. This scheme for imparting missionary information is said to have been a marked success in the places where it has been tried.

Dr. H. B. Johnston, of the Jackson (Tenn.) District, who easily ranks as one of the first presiding elders of Southern Methodism, was a visitor at the late centennial session of the Tennessee Conference, held in McKendree Church, Nashville. Dr. Johnston, by special request of the Editor of the Midland Methodist, is preparing a historical sketch of Methodism in the Memphis Conference which will soon be published in that wide-awake journal.

Bishop Smith, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is represented by the Central Christian Advocate as saying on the first day of the recent session of the Southern Illinois Conference: "On Friday every preacher will be notified as to his probable appointment for the next year. There will be no surprises, at least to the party concerned." The Central praises this action of the Bishop. The expediency of the plan, however, remains to be proven.

The corner stone of the first building of the Southern Methodist University at Dallas, Texas, was laid on October 16, with appropriate addresses by Bishops Atkins and Mouzon and the mayor of the city. This structure, which has been named "Dallas Hall," will be 263 feet in length and 135 feet in width, and four stories high. Its architectural plan is a work of masters, and the site is one of the most beautiful to be found on the one hundred and thirty-three acre campus.

Rev. George R. Stuart, the noted evangelist, has returned to the pastorate, having been assigned to the Church Street congregation of Knoxville, Tenn., a most excellent charge. We venture the prediction that there will be no standing still in church work upon the part of this flock while under the direction of this tireless toiler. Two other appointments of special interest made at the late meeting of the Holston Conference were those of Rev. R. M. Standifer to Morristown, Tenn., and Rev. J. W. Perry to Centenary, Chattanooga.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie has promised to give Emory and Henry College $25,000, and the General Board of Education (Rockefeller) $50,000, on the condition that the friends of the institution raise $70,000 by June, 1913. An aggressive campaign to secure the amount necessary to obtain these outside donations will be launched at an early day. We trust that the movement will succeed. The splendid service that Emory and Henry has rendered in the past justly entitles it to this recognition and assistance. It takes more equipment for a college to maintain its rank now than in former decades.

"A GUDE WORD" FOR JESUS CHRIST.

One recalls that message of Ian Maclaren, in "His Mother's Sermon," where he sketches a young man about to preach his first sermon in his own church. All the results of his few years of study are found in the manuscript which contains the sermon he expects to preach. Friday night comes, and he is reminded of the time, five years before, when he stood beside his dying mother and she asked if God called him to the ministry he would not refuse. Continuing, the mother said: "An' the first day ye preach in yer ain kirk, speak a gude word for Jesus Christ, an', John, I'll hear ye that day, though ye'll no see me, and I'll be satisfied."

The memory of his mother is rich in his heart, and he cannot be untrue to her wish. His sermon was placed in the fire; "it was his best and he gave it for love's sake." The next day is given to the preparation of a new sermon, the subject of which is Jesus Christ. Sunday morning, when the young man preached, the women were weeping quietly, and the rugged faces of the men were subdued and softened, as when the evening sun plays on the granite stone.

Lord Guthrie recently recalled that he, many years ago, heard an open-air preacher tell the people that he had never been to college; "but," said he, "I have been to Calvary." The earnest words had never been forgotten by Lord Guthrie. —William J. Hart, in Zion's Herald.

SHE MADE HOME HAPPY.

She never went to cooking school
Yet somehow, minus book or rule,
She dainty, wholesome bread could make,
And most delicious tempting cake.

A trained nurse she was not, indeed,
Yet one and all the folks agreed
(The white-haired doctor said so, too),
She knew exactly what to do.

To quickly hush the ache or pain,
Relieve the smarting bruise or sprain,
To drive dismay and needless gloom
At once from out the darkened room.

Her singing master ne'er said she
A wondrous lyric star would be,
Yet on her tender, loving breast,
She nightly sang wee ones to rest.

She was no great philosopher,
Yet men and women turned to her
For sympathy and earnest cheer
When dawning skies seemed dark and drear.

She never claimed to be devout,
Just unobtrusively about
She gently moved a-dofing good,
When e'er and how the best she could.

She had no wealth of higher knowledge,
Led not a single class in college,
Without a mission, aim or call,—
She made home happy, that was all.

—Kathleen Kavanagh, in the Times-Democrat.

INVITED TO CHINA.

The World's Sunday School Convention, which will assemble in Zurich, Switzerland, next year, will be the seventh of these great gatherings. It has been announced that the next one, which will be held two years later, will be invited to meet in China. The mere issuance of such an invitation, whether it is accepted or not, would be a remarkable occurrence. That such a thing should even be thought of is an attestation of the strong foothold which Christianity has gained in the Orient.

A DISTINGUISHED METHODIST.

The Rev. George Jackson, formerly of Edinburgh, and well known in this country as teacher and preacher in Toronto, has been honored by the English Wesleyan Church by an election to the corporate body known as the Legal Hundred. In acknowledging the distinction he thanked his brethren for their expression of confidence in his loyalty to evangelical truth. He declared that "all that is central in Methodism and Christianity was never so certain and luminous to him as to-day." He was also elected resident tutor in Didsbury Theological College. As the Fernley lecturer at Liverpool this year his theme was "The Preacher and the Modern Mind." Professor Jackson will return to Canada in September and will continue to teach at Victoria College until the close of the next college year. His work in Didsbury will be in pastoral theology and it is expected that he will also be resident dean of the institution.—New York Christian Advocate.

Miss Helen Gould is said to be writing a book of memoirs in which she will tell her impressions of the great men she has met and give her views of the relations of capital and labor. Miss Gould is one woman of wealth who has resisted the temptation to give her life over to the follies of the idle rich, and has spent her life in doing good. Doubtless she will write a very interesting book.

Guglielmo Marconi underwent an operation in Rome, Italy, on October 18, in which his right eye was removed. The operation was made necessary by bruises received in an automobile accident recently. The great inventor is reported as resting easily, and it is thought that he will recover and keep the use of the other eye. The whole world sympathizes with Mr. Marconi in his affliction.

The Nobel prize for medicine this year has been awarded to Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the Rockefeller Institute of New York City, in recognition of his achievements in making sutures of blood vessels and in the transplantation of organs. Dr. Carrel was born in France in 1873, and was formerly connected with the University of Lyon, coming to New York in 1905. The Noble prize is valued at $39,000.

For many years the Southern custom of interring the deceased in tombs above the ground has been criticized by the people of the North and East, but that day is over. A company has been formed in New York City for the purpose of building a ten-story mausoleum, which will be equipped with an elevator and sold to the custom at $2,250 for each vault with receptacles for eight corpses. This is a decided innovation, but it is said to be the most sanitary method of interment.

More homicides were committed in Memphis, Tenn., in proportion to population, during the last ten years, than any other city in the United States. New Orleans ranks fourth in the list, with Charleston, S. C., and Savannah, Ga., respectively, occupying the second and third places. It is notable that the eight most murderous cities are in the South. The reason of this is claimed to be because of the number of negroes in the South, and the common habit of "gun-toting" among all classes.

Mrs. Isabelle Worrell Ball, National Senior vice-President of the Woman's Relief Corps of the G. A. R., has made public her protest to returning the old Confederate flags that were captured during the Civil War. She claims that in the South the children are taught to reverence the old flags above the Bible. It is encouraging to know that the majority of the people of the North do not share her opinions, and doubtless a little more association with the people of the South and a little less prejudice on her part would cause her to change her views.

Ten thousand farmers are now in attendance at the National Dairy Show in Chicago. The object of offering special inducements in the way of cheap rates and board to get the dairy farmers to attend the show is said to be for the purpose of educating them as to the dangers that lurk in unclean or impure milk. The farmer furnishes most of the milk in this country, and it is eminently proper that he should know how to prepare it for the market. The recent diphtheria epidemic in New Orleans is thought to have had its origin in the milk supply received from farmers in the near-by country.

On October 14, in Milwaukee, Wis., ex-President Theodore Roosevelt was shot in the right breast by Nepomuk Schrank, a resident of New York, and a native of Germany. The wound was not a serious one, and the Progressive leader delivered an address of more than an hour's length after he was shot. A roll of manuscript, a spectacle case, and other things in his coat pocket broke the force of the bullet and doubtless saved his life. His would-be assassin, Mr. Schrank, was overpowered and placed under arrest, and is being held in jail, in default of a $15,000 bond. He claims that he committed the crime as the result of a vision, and this statement, together with the history of his family and many other things, has led many to believe him insane.

S. A. Baldus, editor of Extension Magazine, states that every American family pays annually $70 in dividends to the watered stock of corporations. This reaches the enormous sum of $1,400,000,000. He claims that the two greatest dangers to the future welfare of the country is race suicide and the employment of women outside of the home. There are, according to his figures, 30,000,000 working people in America, 7,000,000 of whom are women. Younger women are crowding out the older ones, and since the average working woman is single, and consequently homeless, he predicts that within a score of years the female tramp problem will be a more difficult one to solve than the one we now have. His figures and predictions are worth careful consideration.

Immigration to the United States is decreasing. According to the statistics recently published, 838,172 immigrants reached our shores during the twelve months ending on July 1, 1912. This was 40,000 less than the number that came during the preceding year, and 200,000 less than the number arriving in 1910, when the maximum of 1,041,570 was reached. Southern Italy contributed most largely to this incoming stream during the past year, sending over 153,830 of her population—the smallest number she has sent since 1908. Since 1908 Mexican immigration has increased from 5682 to 22,001. Jewish immigration, on the other hand, shows a remarkable decline of late, though it amounted last year to 80,595. The number of immigrants to the United States from September 20, 1819, to July 1, 1912, was 29,211,052, about half of whom came within the last twenty years.

Among the events in Louisiana and Mississippi during the past week that challenged our attention were the following: A record-breaking crowd attended at the Mississippi-Alabama State Fair that was held in Meridian, Miss.; De Ridder, La., was named last Tuesday as the parish seat of Beauregard Parish; reports show that 45,000 bushels of pickles have been received and cured by a company at Wiggins, Miss., and that the same company will pack 45,000 bushels of sweet potatoes; a thousand pupils are enrolled as students in the State Normal School at Natchitoches, La., and that city has voted to tax itself to pay for a new $65,000 model school building; the managers of the Mississippi State Normal School at Hattiesburg have perfected a plan whereby out-of-town pupils may secure their board at actual cost—the first month's board averaged but $7.05 per pupil.

CALLED TO HIS REWARD.

Dear Dr. Meek: Last Thursday morning, Oct. 17, 1912, our veteran pastor of the Mangham Charge, Rev. H. O. White, passed to his reward. For several months he had been in feeble health, suffering from a lesion of the heart. Patiently and in triumphant faith, he awaited the end. It was a benediction to be with the faithful soldier; for the certain hope and faith invincible that were his made it easier for others to put their trust in God.

At his request, Brother White's remains were buried near Union Church, where he had ministered last during his eventful service in the Church. For fifty-two years consecutively he had responded to the call of duty.

When the end came Brother White was surrounded by his loved ones and friends. No veteran ever was ministered unto with gentler sympathy by his parishioners than Brother White. They loved him and proved their love in very deed.

No doubt some comrade in his long service will give us a more extended account of him whom we now sadly miss.

To the bereaved family our hearts go out in sympathy. It was my sacred privilege to administer the last sad rites. WM. SCHUHLE.

Bonita, La., Oct. 21, 1912.

Every temptation is a chance for a victory. It is a signal to fly the flag of our Victor. It is a chance to make the tempter know anew that he is defeated. It is an opportunity to strike the note for a ringing song of victory. Steady, steady—there's a will within, and a Friend alongside, and a victory just ahead, with the flag high, and the music joyous.—S. D. Gordon.

No member of my body can be hurt without my feeling it and seeking to guard it. No temptation can touch me without Jesus feeling it at once, and giving succor. Is not the one thing we need, to know him better, in faith to realize his ever-present nearness, and to count on his help?—The Rev. Andrew Murray.

Mansfield Female College.

We believe that a woman's college of to-day must offer instruction in more of those things essential to the needs and welfare of women; and surely no one subject is more essential than that which has to do with the health and happiness of the home. The purchasing, preparing, cooking and serving of food is no menial's task; but is a service requiring fine judgment, scientific knowledge, expert skill and superior taste.

The ignorant, slovenly and often filthy servant has too long been our cook. Why not train every girl that she may at least be a capable and wise manager of her own home?

Our Domestic Science department has a fine new gas range and a first-class Singer sewing machine. We do things, not merely theorize about things.

It ought to be easy for a girl to pass from home life to College life and easier still to go from College to home life again.

A GOOD LESSON.

A good story was told me by a good old Methodist minister. He said that in one of his churches of the long ago, a good old man regularly gave every Sabbath five dollars for the support of the Church. Listen! A poor old widow was also a member of the same church, who supported herself and six little children by washing for the public. She was as regular as the rich man in making her offering of five cents a week, which was all she could spare from her scant earnings. One day the rich old man came to the minister and said the poor woman ought not to pay anything, that he would pay five cents for her every week. The pastor came to tell her of the offer, which he did in a considerate manner. Tears came to the woman's eyes as she replied: "Do they want to take from me the comfort I experience in giving to the Lord? Oh, just think how much I owe to him! My health is good, my children keep well, and I receive so many blessings that I feel that I could not live if I did not make my little offering to Jesus each week." As Wesley has exhorted us to do, let us make all we can, save all we can, and give all we can. For it is "more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts 20:35.)

MY LAST PASTORAL CHARGE AND ELSE.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis.

II.

When I served the Liberty charge the first time it embraced practically all of Amite County, with a part of Franklin County and one appointment, Adams, in Lincoln County. Adams was perhaps the oldest church on the work, and had the largest, and in some respects the most interesting congregation; but they had no Sunday school. On the fourth Sunday in March I made a Sunday school talk and urged the brethren to organize one. The superintendent, Brother Billie King, said he had declared he would never make another effort to organize, but that he would on condition that the people, the heads of families, would agree to stand by and help him. The brethren agreed and the Sunday school was organized with 20 or 25 members enrolled. Literature was ordered and everything moved off grandly. By June we had by far the largest Sunday school on the work, and in most respects the most interesting Sunday school I ever had anything to do with. "The people had a mind to work." Sing! Why, they beat a camp-meeting singing. They had no organ, didn't need one; so everybody felt free to sing, and they sang. This was thirty-four years ago, and there are many people living yet who remember that Sunday school.

The last of July we had a Sunday school picnic and a grand celebration. We had a band of music from Johnson Station. Dr. H. P. Johnson, President of Whitworth College, and Dr. Otkins, President of Lee College, of Summit, were present to talk to the children and others. There were between 1500 and 2000 people present. It was to serve as the beginning of our protracted meeting. It came near being the beginning and the end of the meeting. The good sisters and others had worked so hard to get things ready for the big occasion they were too tired to enter heartily into the revival meeting, so the thing fizzled out. I never began a meeting after that with a picnic. "We live and learn" and sometimes learn to live.

The year following, 1879, we held a meeting at Adams, which ran ten days, and resulted in one of the best revivals I was ever in. Sixty-six united with the Church, several of whom developed into good and useful members. Some three or four preachers went out from that meeting. Milton Ferrel, a Baptist brother, was happily converted during the meeting, joined our Church, was licensed to preach, and made a successful local preacher. He went home to Glory about four years ago.

I close with extracts from a letter received a short while ago from S. E. Carruth, son of one of the best friends I had in all that country. Sister Lizzie Carruth:

"Dear Uncle Henry: Doubtless there is no lack of expressions of appreciation from the multitudes who have been blessed through your ministry and labor of love, but I would like to add this little flower of mine while you are yet in the flesh to enjoy it. I want to say, as I have said before, that I recognize my debt of gratitude to you and I try to be duly appreciative of the good influences and gospel privileges which have in such large part emanated from your service for the Master. If our anticipated manner of welcome to our Eternal Home is realized, joyous indeed should your home-coming be. You have many friends and loved ones who have preceded you. Not only will your works follow you, but much has gone on before. After the flush and excitement of youth are past and I stop to take stock of the influences which have contributed to my well-being, I am inclined to give most credit to that which is being relegated to the past and sneeringly termed by some, 'old timey.' At this time I do not recall any of the splendid pulpit utterances of Uncle Bryant, but his calling me to his bedside early one morning when I was a young schoolboy in Jackson and earnestly talking with me about my soul's welfare will never be forgotten. I do not remember the text of that eminent divine, nor the outline of his scholarly discourses delivered a few weeks ago; but your visits to my childhood home, your stirring songs and prayers, your earnest manner, made an imprint that doesn't wear off."

MRS. LUCY GREEN EVANS.

At the Touros Infirmary, in New Orleans, in the early hours of September 22, Mrs. Lucy Green Evans died. Ten days earlier than this Dr. Matas had performed on her a surgical operation which was not considered serious, but which was followed by a blood-clot on the brain, and the consequent paralysis, from which she never rallied. In the afternoon of the day of her death we laid her body in the bosom of mother earth at Heidelberg, Miss., in the presence of a large company of those who loved her, and whom she loved.

She was born near Paulding, Miss., August 16th, forty-five years ago, and grew to young womanhood in the community of her nativity. On Nov. 18, 1884, she became the wife of Charles Clinton Evans, a young man whom she had known from her childhood. The crown of motherhood came to her six times, and five of her children remain, with the father, on this side, believing that the mother has gone to join the babe who went before.

During the year following their marriage she and her husband joined the Congregational Methodist Church, in the communion of which they lived until 1889, when they became members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In December, 1891, Sister Evans was brought into a new relation to the Church when her husband was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference. It was in this relation that the writer knew her, and esteemed her highly for her nobility of character.

Were the ability and inclination mine to pay a worthy tribute to some one of earth's heroines, I would ask for no subject more worthy and more inspiring than the wife of the pastor. The demands for her gifts and labors are without limit. She must show grace and graciousness in the midst of the culture of the college, and in the commonest of country life. In her modest reception room she often bridges the great social chasms which run through the membership of almost every church. With one hand she grasps the hand of her friend, the banker's wife, and with the other she grasps the hand of her friend the needy widow. The cross-current of social life, passing through her own body, reaches the hearts of her two friends, and awakes in them a feeling of sisterhood. She must never be too young for a companion for the old, and never too old for a companion for the young. Her breast becomes the safety-box for a thousand secrets, and her lips the guarding angels which protect the social life of the community. Truly, she must weep with those who weep, and rejoice with all who rejoice. In her poverty she must be magnanimously generous. Her hospitality must know no stint. The excellency of her family government must atone for the failures of many other households. The possession of a home, the desire and boon of every woman's life, is denied her. When she sweeps the floors, decorates the walls, or ornaments the yards, she is not able to say, "These are mine." The uncertain tenure of place frets away much of the smooth side of life. The strongest social attachments must be exchanged, with great frequency, for the possibilities of a new place. The pastor's salary is often fixed with the implied understanding that his one dollar must do the same service that the dollar and a quarter of his neighbor must do. This miracle of economy must be performed by the wife.

To meet the demands upon her the pastor's wife must encompass the extremes of social life, be a paragon of discretion and sympathy, incarnate the stoicism of the early Church, and touch the material provision of the household with the wand of a Susanna Wesley.

Into this delicate and responsible position Sister Evans was brought by the call of her husband into the itinerant ministry. Nature had endowed her with a great heart and a judicious mind. To these was added a culture which put her in easy touch with all. How well she graced her position, and how largely she contributed to the success of her husband's work, is attested by more than twenty years of success in the itinerant ministry.

She was modest without timidity, dignified without stiffness, courteous without flattery, and kind without fawning. The emotional was not conspicuous in her religious life, but she was ready always to avow her love for her Savior, and to tell of his conscious presence with her. That his grace could sustain in all life's trials she showed by an unwavering constancy in success and in adversity. Her faith in God was greater than all her trials. The honors and responsibilities of motherhood she accepted as a gift from God, and his power was invoked and expected in the training of her children. Her prayers and her aims laid up as a memorial before God for her children will be her richest legacy to them. They will bless her memory for the splendid ideals which she gave them. Her vision penetrated the veneer and tinsel of life and saw character. Beneath quaint fashions and rough garments she could see the gentleman or the lady. To her, character was more than place or power, and to be noble was life's good.

Her broad sympathies and earnest spirit kept her in touch with the community life wherever she lived, and her attachments were of the strongest kind. Perhaps she was never more loved and appreciated by the people of any pastorate which her husband has served than by the cultured community of Heidelberg. Here she and her husband labored through four successful years. It is fitting that her mortal remains should rest in the "city of the dead" which is cared for by those who loved her so well. Out of affection for my bereft friend, Charley Evans, and his motherless boys and girls, I offer this tribute to a noble woman.

FOUR MAGIC KEYS.

The proverb says, "With hat in hand,
A person may go through the land!"
But I know another way,
Which will take you any day,
Anywhere you want to go—
Try it, boys—see if 'tisn't so!
The keys you'll want to use are four,
And they'll unlock any door!
The bunch you'll want to use are these—
Yes, sir; no, sir; thank you; please!

COULD NOT LOOK FATHER IN THE EYES.

Disobedience to parents is the first step in the downward path. A circus was in the town and a little boy stood watching the great tent curiously. A neighbor coming up said: "Hello, Johnny! Are you going to the circus?"

"No, sir," answered Johnny. "Father don't like 'em."

"O, well, I'll give you the money to go," said the man.

"Father don't approve of them."

"Well, go in for once. I'll pay for you."

"No, sir. My father would give me the money if he thought it best. Besides, I've got twenty-five cents in my box, enough to go."

"I'd go, Johnny, for once. It's wonderful the way the horses do," said the man. "Your father needn't know it."

"I can't," said the boy.

"Now, why?" asked the man.

"Cause," said Johnny, "after I'd been there I could not look father in the eyes, but I can now."

WHEN JANEY AND JIMMY KEPT STORE.

Emily S. Windsor.

Janey and Jimmy had been blackberry-picking. They were on their way home, each with a large tin bucket filled to the brim with the biggest, fattest and juiciest berries. They were so sweet, too.

"They're the splendoriest berries ever," exclaimed Janey, as for the hundredth time she stopped and lifted the covering of green leaves to peep at the fruit.

"I guess mother will think so, too," said Jimmy, and he also stopped and peeped at his berries. "Won't they make a splendid cobbler!" And his mouth watered as he thought of it—Jimmy was very fond of blackberry cobbler.

"Say, let's go home by the Branch road—it's shorter."

"Well, let's sit down a while and rest." So in turns walking a while and resting a while in the shade, they finally came to the main street of the village.

"Let's cross over and look in Granny Miles's window and see if she has any of those chocolate stars. If she has, we'll come this afternoon, and buy some; I have the nickel grandpa gave me the other day."

Just as they reached the shop window Granny Miles came to the door. "Oh!" she cried. "I am so glad to see you children! I've just got to go to the station to see about some goods that's come for me. I don't like to leave the shop alone. Could you little people keep it for me a while?"

"Oh, yes," said Janey eagerly; for like all the children of the village, she was very fond of Granny.

"Yes," added Jimmy, "we'll take care of it."

"Just tell any one that comes that I'll be gone for an hour. If they want lettuce or blackberries they can measure for themselves. The lettuce is five cents a measure, and the berries five cents a quart."

"All right," said Janey, "we'll take good care of everything; we'll just sit right by the door."

"I'll hurry, children, all that I can."

Granny had been gone but a short time when a woman came in to buy lettuce. When she had measured it and put the money on the counter, she looked at the blackberries. "They're too small," she said, and did not buy any.

Presently another woman came in. She, too, bought lettuce, and looked at the berries, but she also found them too small. Then there were several other customers. They all looked at the berries, but said they were too small.

"I guess poor Granny won't sell those berries."

"Well, they are dreadful small," said Jimmy.

"But they are sweet," said Janey, as she tasted one of the berries. "But you see folks want big ones."

No more customers came in for a while. Suddenly Janey said: "Let's sell our berries to the next person that comes."

"Why, Janey Morris!"

"Oh, I mean instead of Granny's; we'll give her the money, of course, and we can take her's instead."

"But we want a cobbler!" objected Jimmy.

"Granny's berries are just as good for a cobbler—they are sweet."

Jimmy remembered how good Granny always was to the children. She always put in extra pieces when they bought candy. So he said: "All right. There is a lady coming now."

The lady wanted blackberries. "We have some here," said Janey, uncovering the two pails. "They were gathered this morning," she said in quite a businesslike manner.

"Why, how fine they are—and so sweet! I'll take them all. Here, I can put them in this basket I have. Just put a few sheets of paper in the bottom."

She measured the berries, and there was just nine quarts. She put forty-five cents on the counter, and left. The children filled their buckets with Granny's berries. This left but a quart or two of hers.

In a short time after Granny returned. "I am sure I am much obliged to you," she said. Then, as she glanced around, "You sold nearly all the berries. I am glad of that. I was afraid, after I'd taken them this morning from Joe Wilson that they were too small to sell well, and I hadn't the time to preserve them for myself."

She went behind the counter, and from the glass case took out several chocolate stars. "Eat these on the way home," she said. "You are fine storekeepers."

When the children got home and told their mother all about it, she said: "I am glad you did it. Granny is always so good to you children, you ought to do something for her. And these berries will make a fine cobbler."

And when the cobbler was made Jimmy thought he had never tasted a better one, and he felt glad to think that Granny had not on hand a lot of berries she could not sell.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

MRS. JULIA KENDALL—A TRIBUTE.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." (Rev. 14:13).

This declaration of the "voice from heaven" is truly applicable to one who recently passed from the walks of life on earth to the home in heaven where the faithful meet to part no more.

Mrs. Julia Kendall, widow of Rev. Amos Kendall, a long honored member of the North Mississippi Conference, departed this life in her 80th year, in the home of her good friends, Mr. S. B. White and family, of West Point, Miss. Her maiden name was Rozzell. Her father lived in Texas, where she was reared and was first married to Mr. Hancock. Some years after his death she was married (in 1869) in Hernando, Miss., to Rev. Amos Kendall, who was the station preacher in that town. This proved to be one of the most congenial and happy marital unions ever known by this writer. For forty years they were true and devoted companions in all the toils and vicissitudes of the Methodist Itinerancy, until the husband was called home on April 12, 1909. She was a wife and helpmate in the fullest sense of the terms.

Brother Kendall was a presiding elder for twenty years consecutively, during which time she, having no children nor other earthly care excepting her husband and the high calling in which he was engaged, traveled with him almost all the time when the weather and roads were favorable. Such were her lovely Christian character, kindly nature, and friendly disposition that there was everywhere a welcome for her with the husband. Many homes have been brightened and many hearts cheered by her kind words and generous deeds, as myself and family with numerous others can testify.

During the eleven years spent in the parsonages of the West Point, Aberdeen and Sardis stations her domestic life shone most beautifully. There was nothing wanting on her part in the way of neatness and comfort. The cordial welcome extended and the incessant care for the welfare of her guests made it always a pleasure to be in her home. After the death of her husband, Sister Kendall made her home with her three sisters in Texas, but her heart clung to Mississippi's soil, where her companion is buried and where are living many loved and loving friends. Twice she returned on visits; the last time a few months ago when she came among us in great feebleness of body, but with her characteristic joyous spirit. She was met wherever she went with hearty greetings and an earnest welcome. This writer and his family will ever cherish the memory of her stay in their home for ten days, only a few weeks before her departure to the eternal rest.

Her body rests beside that of her husband in the cemetery at Aberdeen, while her noble soul has gone to join his in the life beyond, and to be forever with the Lord.

"Friend after friend departs—

Who hath not lost a friend?

There is no union here of hearts

That finds not here an end:

Thus star by star declines,

Till all are passed away;

As morning high and higher shines

To pure and perfect day;

Nor sink those stars in empty night,

But hide themselves in heaven's own light."

A Roman Catholic journal is quoted as saying: "When Methodism dies from sheer inanition one of these days, its epitaph will be that, for a pestilent and blatant little heresy, it fooled a good many people for a long time." With the sound of the hammers upon its upgoing buildings ringing around the world, many moons will wax and wane before the Romanists will have the pleasure of singing a doxology above the grave of Methodism.

The noted gambler, Rosenthal, who recently was murdered in New York City, is said to have been the possessor of a magnificent art collection. Yet there are those who write of the purifying and ennobling influence of this branch of study. But the truth is, there is no power that makes for righteousness in any kind of culture, apart from Christianity. Vice flourishes alike in the palace and in the hovel, and among the learned and illiterate. The notion that any amount of secular education can make people virtuous is "an iridescent dream."

It is the very essence of selfishness where all have equal rights for a person to demand more than is his due. Yet this is done by some who make claim to high attainments in grace. They want the appointing power, the church paper, and other agencies which are designed to serve all alike to show them special favors, and are offended if they do not. No matter what their professions may be, such people are many leagues distant from the goal of Christian perfection. Even a sense of fairness and justice, to say nothing of religion, requires that an individual shall be as mindful of the rights of others as his own. God has no favorites; neither should the State nor Church have any.

THE VANDERBILT LAWSUIT.

The following is a dispatch from Nashville to the Memphis Commercial Appeal, sent on Oct. 17: "The case of the State of Tennessee ex rel. vs. the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University et al. was called on the docket in the Chancery Court this morning, with a full array of lawyers present. All of the Church's lawyers, with the exception of Mr. A. W. Biggs of Memphis, were present, the other lawyers on this side being Mr. G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis; Judge E. C. O'Rear, of the Supreme Court of Kentucky; Col. Harris, of Georgia, and Mr. Percy D. Madden, of Nashville. On the other side were Mr. J. J. Vertrees, Mr. C. C. Trabue, and John B. Keeble, all of Nashville. The lawyers for the Church announced that they were ready for trial, but the lawyers for the Trustees objected to proceeding with the trial, or to the setting of a date for the calling on a date being set for the trial, and after considerable argument the date was fixed for November 18."

This dispatch shows clearly where the responsibility for the delay in this important litigation rests. For some time an effort was made to create the impression that the Church was hesitant and afraid of the issue, and that this was the cause of the slow procedure in the adjudication of the case. This misrepresentation has time and again been corrected, but, notwithstanding, it has prevailed to some extent. But surely since this latest denouement everybody except the wilfully blind ought to be undeceived. That the Trustees seem disposed to dilly-dally and to take advantage of every possible legal technicality is far from creditable to them. A body of Christian gentlemen ought, it seems to us, to desire a settlement of this disturbing issue at the earliest practicable date. Legal cunning and trickery should have no place in this suit. It ought to be tried upon its real merits, according to the law, the equity, and the evidence. For our part, we had rather see the Church lose, as strongly as we believe that the property is rightfully hers, than to see her attorneys win by a resort to chicanery. Surely there has now been delay enough for the litigants on each side to prepare fully for the contest in the courts. It certainly is to be hoped that when the eighteenth of November comes the machinery of justice will not slip another cog, but that it will go steadily forward, regardless of what the outcome may be.

A VICE COMMISSION SUGGESTED.

Dr. J. W. Moore, the pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of New Orleans, has recently been delivering at night a series of sermons specially designed for business men. These discourses have been thought-provoking and in every respect of a high order. The series was brought to a close last Sunday evening, with an unusually forceful and effective utterance, from which we take the following extract that strikes straight at one of the greatest evils prevalent in this city:

"The greatest curse to New Orleans is the social evil. In no city in the United States of which the speaker has knowledge is this evil half so bold or shown half the toleration that it has here. Chicago is fighting it, Atlanta is fighting it, Seattle is fighting it. Our last Legislature recognized it and legalized it, when it prescribed its limits under the guise of restraining it. Governor Colquitt declared that such legislation violated the Constitution of Texas, as it violates the sense of decency of every good citizen. The Mayor of our city would do well to appoint a vice commission to study this problem and suggest a solution. In these reform movements the business element has taken the initiative in many sections of our country."

ONLY A SURFACE ASPECT OF THE REAL QUESTION.

While in session in this city last week the New Orleans Presbytery of the Southern Presbyterian Church had under consideration the question of changing the statement in their Confession of Faith concerning the salvation of infants, which at present reads as follows: "Elect infants dying in infancy, and other elect persons who are incapable of the outward call, are nevertheless regenerated and saved by Christ through the Spirit, who worketh when, where, and how he pleaseth." The change proposed is to substitute for the first part of this declaration the following pronouncement: "Being elect, all infants dying in infancy are regenerated and saved," leaving the latter part of it as it now appears. After an animated and somewhat extended discussion, the suggested alteration was rejected by a large majority.

Possibly we do not view the matter in the right light, but it seems to us that so long as the Southern Presbyterian Church holds to the doctrine of unconditional election and reprobation all this ado about the question of infant salvation is out of place and wholly unnecessary. If a man before his birth is foreordained to be lost, is he not doomed as much when he is a babe in the cradle as at any other time? Is it any less horrible to send those who live to become adults to perdition, without their ever having had any real chance to be saved, than it is to send infants there? If the reprobation of any individual has been determined before hand, independent of him, and he can do nothing to change it, what difference does it make, so far as the justice of the matter is concerned, whether the decree is executed when he is five days or fifty years old? As we see it, to cling to the dogma of predestination and quibble at that of the damnation of some infants, is to "strain out a gnat and swallow a camel." And if we mistake not the theology of most of the Calvinistic Churches embraces the doctrine of wholesale heathen damnation, than which nothing could be more horrifying. The question concerning infants is only a minor feature of the great issue as to the extent of the atonement. The proposal to mend the Presbyterian creed at this point is merely an attempt to plaster over the outward surface of a radical defect that extends to the very center of the theological system of which that creed is an expression.

We write this in no captious or hostile spirit. We have great respect for the Southern Presbyterian Church, and are bound to it by many tender ties. Next to our own denomination we prefer it to any other. We do not for one moment believe that its members hold the view that any infants are lost; nor do we think that a majority of them really subscribe to the teaching that vast multitudes of the human race are unconditionally predestined to eternal punishment. On the contrary, we think that they have largely outgrown the rigid Calvinism of the books, and we sincerely wish that like some of the other Presbyterian bodies, they would become courageous and outspoken enough to say so; that they would unequivocally declare it to be their conviction, as did Dr. Cornelison (who now occupies the pulpit made forever famous by the brilliant ministry of the great Dr. B. M. Palmer) when this question was up last week: "The Bible is saturated with the idea of God as the author and source of all love, and with the desire of God that no one shall perish." Splendid as has been the history of this great Church in the past, we do not doubt that, with such a theology, its achievements for the Master would in the future be still larger and more glorious.

TWO VETERANS CALLED HOME.

On Thursday, October 17, after last week's issue of the Advocate had been mailed out, we received a telegram from Rev. C. M. Noble announcing the death of Rev. H. O. White, which occurred that day at Charleville, La. The next day the press dispatches announced that Rev. Thomas J. Upton had passed away at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. W. T. Burnett, at Minden, La. Both of these brethren were known in every part of the Louisiana Conference, and the news of their departure will touch with sadness many hearts and homes.

Brother White was admitted into the traveling connection in this State in 1865, and had long been one of the most useful Methodist ministers in this section. His character and service commanded universal respect, and his name is as "ointment poured forth" in many communities. It is stated that he was seventy-two years of age. He leaves a wife and a number of children to mourn his decease and cherish his memory.

Brother Upton entered the itinerancy in 1858, and had been connected with it for more than half a century. He was a man of strong faith and earnest zeal, and sought to do his duty in every field to which he was assigned. His record was a worthy one, and he lived to the ripe old age of 83. His remains were carried to Gibbsland for interment.

We extend sympathy to those who have been bereaved by the home-going of these honored brethren, and pray that the Heavenly Father may graciously comfort and sustain them. We trust that suitable memoirs of both these deceased veterans will be furnished the Advocate at an early date.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

This is hustling time. The Annual Conferences are only a little over a month off.

The New Orleans pastors are planning to observe the Home Mission Week of Prayer by holding a series of union services.

Do you like the Advocate? If so, tell your neighbor about it. And be sure that your own subscription is promptly renewed. Sheer carelessness is responsible for a considerable portion of our delinquent list.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, the faithful colporteur for the two Mississippi Conferences, spent several days in Jackson recently attending the Andrews meeting in that city, and offering the people an opportunity to supply themselves with good literature.

A dispatch from Magnolia, Miss., to the Times-Democrat on October 14 stated that a revival was in progress at that place, and that the pastor, Rev. J. A. Moore, was being assisted by Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District.

Bishop E. D. Mouzon will reach New Orleans next Monday evening and spend all day Tuesday in the Crescent City. On Tuesday a luncheon will be served in his honor, to which a large number of the leading laymen and all the local pastors will be invited.

Rev. J. W. Moore, pastor of First Church, New Orleans, left Monday evening for Shreveport, to attend the fall meeting of the State Anti-Saloon League. Before returning to New Orleans he will go to Houston and Beaumont, Tex., to fill lecture engagements.

A union Thanksgiving service will be held this year in First Church, New Orleans, and Rev. H. R. Singleton will preach the sermon. The regular offering will be taken, and the proceeds equally divided between the Mary Werlein Mission and the Clinic Department of St. Mark's Hall.

We regret to learn that the health of Rev. H. F. Lewis, our pastor at Columbia, Miss., has not been robust of late. We trust that he will soon gain in strength and vigor. Brother Lewis gives us some interesting Sunday school notes from the Mississippi Conference in this issue of the Advocate.

Last Sunday was Sunday school "Rally Day" at our First Church, in Corinth, Miss. We are indebted to Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick for a copy of the excellent program arranged for the occasion. The pastor, Rev. J. H. Felts; Mr. Warriner, the superintendent, and Mr. R. M. Weaver were down for brief talks.

Rev. Elton Wilson recently conducted an interesting and helpful meeting at Hammond, La., in which he had the assistance of Rev. H. W. Bowman, of Amite City. Brother Bowman's preaching was much appreciated by the community. A Revival Bulletin was issued daily while the services were in progress.

The North Carolinians are keeping Dr. F. N. Parker busy. He recently dedicated a church at Ayden, and he spent Sunday, October 13, at Charlotte in the interest of the six-million-dollar endowment campaign for Trinity College. Evidently the Methodists of the old North State know a capable man when they get hold of him.

Rev. J. C. Holt is closing his fourth year as pastor at Jeanerette, La., and the Jeanerette church is loathe to see him leave. He has accomplished much for the Master during his ministry there. The Jeanerette people are planning to make some much needed improvements upon their church property in the near future.

There has been great progress made during the year in the Oaknolia (La.) Charge, where Rev. J. W. Faulk is closing a very satisfactory year's work. He has received 60 into the Church, baptized 25 adults and 26 infants, and organized the churches into a strong working force. His young people recently gave him a nice new suit of clothes.

We acknowledge our indebtedness to Rev. P. H. Howse, of the Seminary charge (Mississippi Conference), for some valuable work recently done for the Conference organ. Referring to the conditions existing in his field, Brother Howse says: "Things are moving on nicely. We have had revival services at all our churches, with encouraging results."

A report of the Methodist Sunday school at Ruston, La., for October 13, signed by Mr. W. P. Upchurch, secretary and treasurer, lies before us. It shows an enrollment of 34 officers and teachers, with 29 present, and of 435 scholars, with 289 in attendance. There were 7 new pupils, 8 visitors, and the collection taken for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage amounted to $158.12.

Writing from Lafayette, La., on October 15, Mrs. Crow Girard, who is one of the most energetic missionary and Epworth League workers in the State, expressed appreciation of our "Woman's Work Department," and the interesting manner in which it is edited by Mrs. R. F. Harrell. We have no hesitancy in saying that we think the compliment paid our Editress is well merited.

The Rev. Mr. Lichenstein, a Jewish missionary of St. Louis, Mo., occupied the pulpit of Carrollton Avenue Church last Sunday morning, and preached to a fair-sized audience at First Church in the afternoon. He is here for the purpose of founding a Jewish Protestant Mission, if he thinks that the field will justify the attempt. Mr. Lichenstein is a member of the Baptist Church.

Rev. D. Scarborough, of McComb City, Miss., has been transferred to California. A brother minister of the Mississippi Conference, in writing of his removal to another field, says: "Hundreds of friends will miss this successful pastor and devout Christian." We commend Brother Scarborough to the brethren on the Pacific Coast as one in every way worthy of their confidence and high esteem.

We were favored on Tuesday, October 15, with an appreciated visit from Dr. A. F. Smith, the pastor of our First Church at Jackson, Miss., who was in the city assisting in a meeting at Parker Memorial Church. Dr. Smith is doing a great work at Jackson, and the plans for the splendid Galloway Memorial Church which he and his congregation have in contemplation are going steadily forward.

Rev. H. T. Carley, in a personal note to the Editor, speaks encouragingly of the situation at Centenary College in which he is teaching English, History, and the Bible. He is kept quite busy, but is pleased with his present work. Brother Carley is a capable instructor, and one of the most brilliant young ministers in the Church. We are fortunate in having his services at Centenary.

Rev. W. M. Langley, of Coffeeville, Miss., sends us a list of five subscribers from his charge. Modest almost to a fault, he makes no mention of his work, but it goes without saying that it has been faithfully and well done, and that if a good report is not made at Conference he will not be to blame. Everywhere that he has wrought since he has been in the itinerancy, he has left substantial achievements for the Church.

We take off our hat to Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, who forwarded us on the 15th inst. a list of sixteen subscribers from the historic town of Brandon, Miss. He states that 24 copies of the Advocate are taken by his flock, which numerically is not strong. This community is made up of a reading people, who have given to Mississippi many of her first citizens. We are grateful to Brother Lewis for this kindly service.

Rev. W. A. Bowlin, of North Carrollton, Miss., is pleased with the outlook in his charge. He states that things are in fine shape, and feels confident of reporting all claims "paid in full" at the Annual Conference. It is not unusual for this faithful toiler to make a good record. And in the present instance he has the co-operation of an excellent people in taking care of the various interests of the Church committed to his hands.

From Sun, La., a few days since, Evangelist E. D. Whiddon sent us the following note: "During our meeting here 43 joined the Methodist Church and 10 the Baptist Church. A house of worship will be erected at this place at once. I go from here to Brookhaven, Miss., to see a son four weeks old that I have never seen; thence I shall proceed to Anguilla, Miss., where I have an engagement to assist in a series of revival services."

Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, has recently undergone an operation at the Jackson (Miss.) Sanitarium. His many friends will be delighted to know that he is rapidly improving. Brother Leggett is pronounced by men of good judgment who have had an opportunity to observe his work to be one of the best presiding elders in the entire Church. We trust that he will soon be thoroughly well and able to resume his labors for the Master.

The Epworth League Union of New Orleans will organize a new Sunday school at 3658 Ursuline Street, at the corner of Broad, next Sunday. Mr. Harry Jamieson has been elected superintendent and Rev. W. W. Holmes will assume pastoral oversight over the new work. It will be remembered that it was the City Epworth League Union that led in the founding of the Epworth Mission a few years ago, where there is now a strong church, with one of the best Sunday schools in the city.

month an attendance of 56 pupils. Prof. H. O. Price, an A.B. and A.M. graduate of Roanoke, College (Virginia), has been chosen assistant, and was due to arrive and take up his work on October 10. The trustees are planning to lay off an athletic field at an early date, and to give Epworth Hall a complete renovation. President Van Hook is reported as much encouraged by the beginning made and the general outlook for the school.

A prominent layman of Louisiana sent in a club of five subscribers recently and said that it is his purpose to keep up with each of them and send in the renewals annually. He says: "I am in a better position than the pastor to do this, as we have a new preacher every year or two." If a layman in each charge would assume the responsibility of seeing that five people regularly subscribe for the Advocate, it would mean untold good to Methodism in our territory. One brother of the Franklinton (La.) Church has been sending in a large list of renewals for many years.

In a business communication to our office, Rev. Thos. J. Martin, Sr., of Ringgold, La., adds: "The Wesley charge is not thoroughly organized. When I took control three of the churches were without a prayer meeting or Sunday school. We now have two prayer meetings in operation and are starting two Sunday schools; but much yet remains to be done. We are at present receiving on the work some 17 copies of the Conference organ." We are grateful to Brother Martin both for the good work done for the Advocate and his kindly words of appreciation concerning it.

We are glad to have our pastors send in reports from their charges, which we feel sure the people read with interest; but in view of the pressure upon us for space, we suggest that unimportant details be omitted. Results are what we want. It is the brief contributor who is appreciated and read in this day. This suggestion also applies with equal force to those who write articles for the Advocate. It is better to send in three or four communications at different times than one voluminous one that will fill nearly a page. There are not many people who in this busy day will take time to wade through a long drawn-out discussion.

Dr. S. A. Steel, the Chrysostom of Southern Methodism and one of the most gifted platform speakers in the United States, delivered a series of lectures at Shreveport, La., last week, under the auspices of the Queensborough Methodist Church, of which Rev. H. W. Jamieson is pastor. A correspondent states that these lectures were highly entertaining and that they made a profound impression. Dr. Steel will be in New Orleans next week, and will lecture at the Parker Memorial Church on October 31 and November 1 and 2. The Methodists of this city should avail themselves of the opportunity to hear this brilliant series of discussions. They will miss a rare treat, if they do not.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, writes as follows: "The conditions at Whitworth are now more satisfactory than they have been at any time during the eleven years of my administration. There are more than 130 music pupils and the other departments are well patronized. Miss Sarah Smith, a graduate of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College, and Prof. Petard have been added to the faculty." We are pleased to hear of the prosperity of this historic institution, though we cannot say that it at all surprises us. Capable, energetic, and possessed of the elements of leadership, Dr. Cooper has long been in the habit of succeeding in what he undertakes. He is doing a great work for the Church.

From the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News of last Monday, Oct. 21, we take the following: "The Andrews meeting, which has been in progress here for several weeks, closed last night. This has indeed been a notably successful revival. There have been nearly four hundred conversions, a hundred of which took place yesterday morning and night. On the previous Sunday there were 150 conversions. The pastor of the church, Rev. J. M. Morse, is very highly pleased with the results of the meeting, and on last night he took occasion to express his appreciation to Mr. Andrews and to Mr. Smith, who has conducted the singing." During the Sabbath day Mr. Andrews received news that his mother was at the point of death in Birmingham, Ala., and after the night service left for that city.

Hold on, my heart, in thy believing!

The steadfast only wear the crown;
He who, when stormy waves are heaving,
Parts with his anchor, shall go down;
But he who Jesus holds through all
Shall stand, though earth and heaven fall.
Hold out! There comes an end to sorrow;
Hope from the dust shall conquering rise;
The storm foretells a sunnier morrow;
The cross points on to Paradise.
The Father reigneth, cease all doubt;
Hold on, my heart, hold on, hold out.

It pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst, on October 10, 1912, dear SISTER HARLEM, wife of Brother Todd Harlem. Sister Harlem was born August 17th, 1859. She had been a member of the Methodist Church almost since her girlhood. She had dispensed kindly hospitality to many of our pastors for the past twenty years. After intense suffering for a week or more, the sun of her earthly life set to rise again in the world to come in greater effulgence, never to set again. The writer will ever cherish her sweet memory. The deceased was laid to rest in St. Maurice Cemetery.

A FRIEND AND BROTHER
Lafayette, La.

On September 25, 1912, the precious soul of the little son of Brother and Sister HOPKINS, of Brownsfield, Miss., took its flight from this world of care to the dearless mansions above. He was permitted to bless the home of his fond parents only nine months, but his earthly ministry was well done, for the rose does its work as grandly by blossom as does the vine with its fruit. After having helped to sanctify and lift heavenward the very hearts that break at his farewell, he went from this troublesome sphere, leaving the world he blessed and the skies through which he passed still sweet with lingering fragrance. He has entered into his glory land to be an ever-unfolding flower in the blessed garden of God.

R. C. KENNEDY, P. C.

On August 22, 1912, it pleased God in his infinite wisdom to permit death to visit the home of Dr. Hardy, and remove from our midst our beloved co-worker and sister, MRS. LULA HARDY. For many years she had been a faithful, sincere and appreciated member of our church and Sunday school, ever ready to lend a helping hand for the advancement of both our church and community. She suffered long but patiently. All that loving hands could do for her was done, but nothing could relieve her—nothing could stay the cold hand of death. Her life was full of sunshine—filled with kind deeds and loving words for all. It is hard to give her up, but we feel confident that our heavenly Father makes no mistakes. We know that our loss is her eternal gain. Her home was at Garlandville, Miss. She leaves an aged father, a husband, six children and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her death. She was laid to rest in the Garlandville Cemetery.

BROTHER A. J. CHAPMAN, a good, sanctified man, suddenly passed from this stage of action on the evening of October 7, 1912, at his son's home in Waynesboro, Miss. The day previous to his soul's flight from the body, he attended service at the church which he loved, and where he held his membership nearly all of his life (Hebron), and he listened very attentively to his pastor's sermon on sin and gave a very bright testimony. Any one could tell from the ring of his utterance that day that his spiritual sky was clear. The preacher on the Waynesboro Circuit has lost a true friend, for he was a friend to his pastor. The funeral service was conducted at 2 p. m., on October 8, in the Hebron Church. As his pastor was on the indisposed list, Rev. W. H. Lewis, the presiding elder, was sent for to conduct the burial service. A large concourse of relatives and friends gathered to pay tribute to the memory of this good man. After the consecration the form of "Uncle James" was laid to rest in the Hebron Cemetery. May the comforting Spirit of God overshadow his dear wife and children. Weep not, dear friends, for one day you will meet him again, robed in the garments of white.

His Pastor,
HILARY WESTBROOK.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Forasmuch as it has pleased our Heavenly Father to take from us our sister, Mrs. A. A. SIMMS, be it resolved:

1. That we extend to Brother Simms our hearty sympathy in this sore trial, and assurance that he has our love and prayers, and commend to him the faith which made beautiful and strong the character of our deceased friend.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be published in our country paper, and The Christian Advocate, a copy be spread on the minutes of our League and a copy be sent to the bereaved family.

Rev. G. H. Galloway, Miss Stella McLaurin, Miss Julia Kennedy, Committee.

A CAPITAL IDEA.

Speaking of the Advocate Piano Club, here is a letter from one of our Club members, a Georgia lady, which is a fair sample of the letters we are receiving every day. She writes: "I think it a capital idea. I know we would not have had our piano if we had waited to have gotten the whole amount. I find no fault with the Club plan so far, and as for the Club piano, we are just delighted with it. All our friends say they would like to have one just like it. It is just a beauty, and we value it more than anything else in the house."

Let us send you your copy of the beautiful new club catalog to-day. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

(Unanimously adopted by the Methodist Sunday school at Wesson, Miss., on Sunday, October 13).

It is with hearts full of sorrow that we have learned that our beloved Superintendent, Mr. J. P. Rembert, is to leave us this week for Texas, and since we realize that a great measure of our success has been due to his untiring efforts in our behalf for these many years, be it resolved:

(1.) That we, as teachers and pupils of the Methodist Sunday school, tender our sincere thanks to him for his faithful service, knowing that we have reached our present high grade by his unflinching leadership at all times, and assure him of our appreciation of his work.

(2.) That we will follow him to his new home with our love, our sympathy and our prayers.

(3.) That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Sunday school secretary's record book, a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, one to the Texas Christian Advocate, and a copy presented to him as a token of our love and esteem.

Signed by: Mrs. M. M. Lyell, V. D. Youngblood, C. C. Thompson, Committee.

The thoughts of the coming of the Lord are most sweet and joyful to me. It is the work of faith and character of his saints to love his appearing and look for that blessed hope.

Tidings From the Field

South Side, Meridian.

We have just closed a very fine meeting at South Side. It is said by the old members to be the best revival that this church has had for many years. The preaching was done by Rev. C. M. Dunaway, of Atlanta, Ga., who is a fearless and sweet-spirited minister. His sermons on Sin, Repentance, The Judgment, and Individual Responsibility to God produced profound conviction. He followed these with a series of discourses on The Atonement—Its Nature and Extent. As a result of these services there were more than 100 conversions, a number of professions of sanctification, and 24 additions to the Church. The singing was led by Brother Hamp Sewell, of Atlanta.—C. M. Crossley.

New Salem Circuit, North Miss. Conf.

I wish to tell you of my work. This is my first charge. It was given me on account of the illness of its former pastor, Bro. Houston. I began work in January when the ground was frozen hard. I went to many of my appointments on foot, because it was impossible for my horse to travel. I have held four meetings this summer in my own charge. At New Salem and Faisonla I had with me Mrs. S. C. Taylor, of Cleveland, and two of her little girls. Mrs. Taylor led the prayer meetings and great results were had from her interpretations of the Holy Scriptures. She was also mighty in prayer. The two little girls did efficient service in singing duets, which the people appreciated very much. We had some conversions and a few accessions. I feel that most of the good was done in the church. We have organized two Sunday schools, and I think that the churches are in a much better condition than when I took the work. I am rather young—just twenty-one. I have been in the Methodist Church a few months. My wife has been a great help to me. She plays the organ in the church and visits the sick; also testifies. We have lived among our people, not having any parsonage. We feel that God has a work for us to do, and we want to be co-laborers with him in bringing the lost to Jesus.—Oscar Wynn.

Hickory Charge, Mississippi Conf.

Dear Brother Meek: We began our revival campaign for this charge at Garlandville, on Saturday night, July 27, and closed at Hickory on Tuesday morning, Oct. 8. In this campaign the pastor was ably assisted by the following brethren: Revs. H. W. Featherston, G. H. Galloway, J. H. Jolly, I. L. Peebles, T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder, and D. E. Kelley, Conference Evangelist. One result of this revival campaign was the addition of 55 names to our membership. The campaign reached its climax in the last meeting held at Hickory, which was more than a protracted meeting; it was a revival in every sense of the word. During this meeting 20 sermons were delivered; 1 by the pastor, 5 by the presiding elder, and 14 by Brother Kelley. It is but proper to add that our faithful presiding elder did the best preaching I ever heard him do. The people of Hickory, who have been hearing him for the past four years, tell me that he preached the best and strongest sermons that they had heard from him during the entire four years. As to Brother Kelley, I desire to say that no pastor will make a mistake in securing Dan Kelley to hold a revival, provided the pastor will co-operate with him. He does not resort to any clap-trap methods, not even to sending Christians out into the congregation to talk with sinners and get them to the altar. He relies upon the Holy Spirit to do the work, and the Holy Spirit did work in the meeting just closed at Hickory. The entire pastoral charge was affected. Some of my people from each appointment attended and pledged themselves to live a better life. The congregations were large and increased at each service, overflowing our large church. Even at the last service, which was held at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning, the Church could not hold all who attended. The closing service was very impressive, something over 125 professing either conversion or reclamation. Following this was the baptismal service, at which time it was my pleasure to baptize and receive into the Church the largest class I ever saw received at one time. Twenty-five were baptized, and 48 added to our membership. On Sunday afternoon at a special service for children I also baptized four infants and two others had been baptized privately during the meeting. To God be all the praise, glory, and honor for the great revival in Hickory!—F. B. Ormond, Pastor.

Philadelphia, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: I am coming with my final report—the winding up of my twelfth year on the Neshoba charge. I am gratified to say that I have never wound up a year with greater joy than this, the fourth year of my third quadrennium. I am just home from my appointment at Hester's Chapel, where I received eleven into the Church, 6 by baptism and 5 by certificate. I am glad to state that I have never seen the work in better condition than it is now. My beloved presiding elder, T. J. O'Neil, has rendered me great service by helping me all along the line. I have received into the Church during the year 74 members—66 by baptism and 8 by vows and certificates—twenty-six infants have been baptized, and there are more to follow. I was assisted in all my meetings excepting one (Coy) by Rev. Edgar Hillman, who is now a student in Millsaps College. He is a bright and promising young man—one who some day will make his mark in our Conference. God bless him!.....At Coy I was assisted by my beloved presiding elder, who did me great service. He is the right man in the right work, and I pray that he may be continued in this official work.....When I closed my meeting at Sandtown, we raised $400 to be used in the building of a new church. This work has been for twelve years without a parsonage, but we have now purchased a parsonage in East Philadelphia, one-half mile from the court-house square. It is a beautiful home for the next preacher. It has five acres of land, a good well, a good garden and a nice little pasture, and is a desirable home for any preacher who may supply this work. I have furnished this people with a parsonage for twelve years, and I am glad to state that they now have a parsonage. I am gratified with the outlook. I think now that all the collections will be paid in full, and that I can go to Conference with a clean sheet. If my successor will come here in the spirit of Christ he will have a good time with these good people. They are loyal, kind and obedient. They love their preacher and stand by him. I predict that this will be one of the best circuits in this district in the near future. I have done my best. Some one, possibly, could have done better; I could not. I expect to be able to send you a nice list of new subscribers in a few days.—J. C. Long.

The Sunday School.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

Our Field Secretary has been doing faithful and effective work since entering upon the work on September 1st. His slate is full into November and it is a little questionable whether he can clear it by Conference. We are very glad of this and hope the brethren will keep him busy. It will please him and us.

During the month of September the Field Secretary traveled nearly one thousand miles visiting schools, organizing adult Bible classes, Teachers Training Courses, and assisting in the organization and readjustment of Sunday school work. The reports which have come from the work are very gratifying.

It is too late in the Conference year to do much by way of Sunday school extension, but we trust next year to go largely into the destitute sections of the Conference and assist the pastors in organizing Sunday schools where there are none. This was one of the purposes in electing a Field Secretary.

Approaching a pastor a few weeks ago we asked how a certain Sunday school on his work was getting along. He replied "Dead. I am discouraged about that school. Three times it has been organized, and each time died." "Why not get our Field Secretary, then?"

"What's the use? He can't do anything."

The brother should have considered that this is the very place for a Field Secretary. Well organized, live schools do not need him, but struggling, dying, dead and buried ones do. This is where we wish to place him.

The Conference year is drawing to a close. Only about six weeks remain. If any brother has not sent his Children's Day money to our Treasurer, we trust he will do so at once. It is a great aid in making up our reports, and relieves the Treasurer of some embarrassment at Conference. The Sunday school anniversary will be duly held, and Dr. Chappell will address us. We are looking for an interesting and profitable time.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The good teacher will be unfailingly present and unfailingly prompt. One of the principal causes of distraction to the pastor, and superintendent as well, is the irregularity and irresponsibility of Sunday school teachers.

Our Publishing House, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., is getting out new and attractive as well as greatly helpful material for Sunday school departments and classes. No Sunday school can keep to its best work unless use is made of these helps prepared by skilled and thoughtful workers.

There are so many objections to the Graded Lessons, and yet they are so helpful and so needed. As a clever Sunday school worker has said, "When a person is not up on anything, he is usually down on it." Try the Graded Lessons, with a full determination to see their good points, as well as to magnify the bad ones as so many prejudiced good people do. When scholars do not like these lessons it is because the teacher is too indolent or careless to prepare and teach them properly. October is the month to begin these lessons.

Superintendent S. B. White, West Point, writes enthusiastically of his Rally Day, Oct. 6. There were 278 present, not counting tardy members and the Home Department. Mr. R. M. Weaver made a fine talk and all the exercises were most interesting. Rev. E. S. Lewis commenced a protracted meeting the same Sunday night and the following Sabbath, Oct. 13th, fifteen boys and girls came up and joined the Church at the Sunday school hour, and more will follow next Sunday. Mr. White's last sentence is too thought-provoking to omit, so here it is: "Does not this answer the question, 'Is it worth while?'"

"Gray skies, gray streets, and dreariness—
A tired woman and a fretful child;
A crimson leaf whirled by a vagrant breeze,
A breath of something fresh and sweet and wild.
A woman smiling through her weariness,
A little child with happy laughing eyes;
How close is heaven when a crimson leaf
Can open thus the gates of paradise!"

A smile, a kind, cheery word, an autumn rose-bud are similar "open sesame" to the desired "gates of paradise."

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The Adult Bible Class at Pine Grove, on the Wilson charge, has been organized with Mr. T. S. Riley, as president, and Mrs. H. B. Thompson, secretary-treasurer. It has all of the regular committees. At Willson a forward movement has been inaugurated in the Sunday school, and Mrs. J. R. Smith has been elected elementary superintendent; Mrs. J. S. Sineletary, missionary superintendent, and Mrs. Allie Chisom, home department superintendent.

Professor R. L. Himes, of the State University, is teaching the Advanced Teacher-training Class in the Baton Rouge First Church Sunday school, and Miss Julia Harlessen is teaching the first year class which was to begin this month. Brother Himes is carrying out the idea that each Sunday school should have a teacher training department, and have classes succeed each other in regular order; and while some are graduating, to have others beginning. This is the method of the State in conducting its teacher training work at the Normal. Are the children of this generation still wiser than the children of light?

Second Church, Baton Rouge, has just completed its contest for new scholars, and now has one hundred and fifty in regular attendance. The pressing need being for room, a plan is on foot to build an addition for the Elementary Department, thus giving room for expansion. The energetic superintendent, Mr. O. H. Cline, has no idea of standing still. Soon he expects to have a social meeting, at which he will have an address on "A trip to Palestine," by some one who has been there.

Brother F. H. Holden, our Sunday school superintendent at Willson, has the very exceptional record of having not missed a session of his school since he became its superintendent twenty years ago, when Rev. C. C. Miller preached his first sermon at that place. (Brother Miller had just graduated from Centenary College.) If fidelity is the test of the measure of reward, at the day of final reckoning Brother Holden should be made "ruler over much." To have such a record of service where remuneration was received would of itself be worthy of mention, but to have done it as a matter of loving service, is by no means a common record. Or if there be many others, it is at least a worthy one.

Mr. Van Carter and Miss Susie M. Juden, acting secretary and elementary superintendent of the Louisiana Sunday School Association, have recently made a tour through North Louisiana, holding Convention Institutes in many of the towns and Sunday school communities. Miss Juden's work is a part of almost every well conducted Elementary Sunday school class in the State; and Mr. Carter is proving himself to be a strong speaker and capable leader in his line. Since there are more Methodist Sunday schools than any other that give cordial co-operation in this interdenominational work (as would be expected), we are among the largest gainers, as well as the largest contributors, to its support. The International Sunday School Association, of which the Louisiana Sunday School Association is a part, has an honorable record of most efficient service rendered the Sunday school cause, and either in the present or in some other form will, no doubt, continue to shape the policy of our Sunday school work. These Sunday school workers are a blessing to any Sunday school community.

The Lake Providence Sunday school has begun a Home Department, with Mrs. W. N. White as Superintendent, and a Cradle Roll department, with Mrs. Nimmo White as superintendent. Miss Murphy, one of the public school teachers, has been given the Elementary Department, and Mrs. A. S. Hill has been elected Missionary superintendent.

A generation ago the burden of much of the preaching was to get people saved that they might get to heaven when they died, and but little was said or thought about their education and training. Now the burden is to get them saved for this life. Hence, emphasis is being placed on teaching and training. Formerly the annual camp or revival meeting was supposed to meet the essential needs of ordinary Christians, but now we know that the art for Christians must have not only a better distributed, but a different variety of diet. The first aim of the revival is to make disciples, and it is the business of the Sunday school to teach them, and the Epworth League to train them. The question of being ready to live is of more importance than that of being ready to die.

SHUQUALAK NOTES.

Dear Dr. Meek: The Shuqualak churches are gaining, and we were fortunate during the revival meetings just finished. Six weeks make no great while, but two services daily and much in visitations, with Sunday incidentals and near 500 miles of going, keep you enlisted and busy. Even on one Sunday, somewhat under protest, 36 miles were conveniently measured to meet a morning service, and in passing a rain storm to perform a 5 p. m. ceremony, which involved the happiness of two important young people.

The report to date of this year is 45 additions to the Church in this pastoral charge, the greater number of these being received during the recent special services. Fifty-three added last year, make 98 as our latest gains. At the Ridgway Church some fine improvements had been put on, and also at Shuqualak, with more or less "touching up" at all points in view of the coming services. Our congregations sang well, and no little in earnest prayer and in personal work was performed by the membership of the churches. And God came very near to them, and to the men of the ministry, many times, as the meetings went forward.

At the Salem Church, Rev. J. C. Park, of Macon, was exceedingly helpful at two services, as a true and tried Christian worker, and top man of the Methodist ministry; and Rev. W. E. M. Brogan, of Starkville, entered a royal record of splendid pulpit work and useful effort at Cooksville. Twenty-four were added to the Church at these two places.

At Shuqualak, Rev. E. S. Lewis, of West Point, was principal preacher for four days. His methods of procedure and evident fitness were up to the demands, and fully in keeping with his fine reputation as station man and district presiding elder. The meeting assumed all the features of a real revival, greatly to the help of the Shuqualak congregation. Rev. J. Mark Guinn, of Crawford, was also present as choir leader, and he delivered two much appreciated sermons, and later at the Ridgway meeting he appeared as a good contributor in valiant pulpit service, which was a benediction to the occasion, and to that audience of most worthy people.

Of the 28 sermons by these visiting ministers, all of them were entirely above ordinary, and no few of them classed with the finest in Mississippi pulpit deliverances. Every church is better, and the entire charge stronger as a consequence of these special meetings. May grace now also abound as we proceed to secure "the collections."

A. H. WILLIAMS.

A LETTER FROM BROTHER WIER.

Dear Advocate: I came to this place, Broken Arrow, Oklahoma, on Thursday of last week, from Muskogee. It is thirty-seven miles north of Muskogee, and is a much smaller town. But it seems to be a place of considerable business, and to have much of the life and spirit of this southwestern country.

I was met at the train by my daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Semmes Rowe, and have been enjoying a pleasant visit in the home of herself and husband, Mr. K. M. Rowe, who is a member of the Southern Methodist Church and cashier of the Arkansas Valley State Bank.

The M. E. Church, South, here has a nice house of worship and a membership of perhaps 150 or 200. Rev. W. E. Chambers is the pastor. This is his first year in the Conference. He and his young wife occupy a comfortable parsonage near the church. The Northern Methodists were here before us and have a good house of worship. The Presbyterian, Baptist, and Christian or Campbellite Churches have also each a house of worship at this place.

A pentecostal preacher who has been holding a meeting here wanted Brother Chambers to give him the chapter and verse in the Bible for five churches in this town. Brother Chambers replied: "I want you to give me the chapters and verse for trying to establish the sixth church in the town."

The pentecostal brethren have been very earnest and zealous, and have made quite an impression on many. Large congregations attended their services. They claim that miracle-working power, with the gift of tongues, is still in the Church. They claim to be the Church of Christ, while other churches are man-made. They press their claims with much earnestness and zeal, and have unsettled the faith of some members of the other churches. Some from our own church have gone over to them.

The Delaware Baptist Association held its session in Broken Arrow this week. It was preceded by the Woman's Missionary Society of the Association. A goodly number of delegates seemed to be present at the Missionary meeting, and the good women appeared to be well up in their methods of work.

The Delaware Association embraces a large scope of territory, and is supposed to take its name from the Delaware Indians, some of whom are members of the association. Large congregations attended the meetings of the association. The preaching was good, the singing was spirited and lively, and the interest in all the exercises was sustained up to the close.

Broken Arrow is the seat of one of six secondary agricultural schools in Oklahoma, and there is a large central Agricultural or Industrial College at Stillwater. These schools are co-educational. President Connell, a graduate of the Mississippi A. & M. College, is at the head of the central or larger school in Oklahoma. Last year this college enrolled fourteen hundred or more students. In the six secondary agricultural schools last year, four of the teachers were educated at the A. and M. College of Mississippi. The graduates of this institution seem to be in demand. George Stuart, the evangelist, recently closed a meeting at Tulsa, Okla., with very fine results. I enjoyed the privilege of preaching to our congregation in Broken Arrow last Sunday morning. Oklahoma presents a promising and inviting field for the earnest and consecrated efforts of the Church. May the followers of our blessed Lord occupy and possess all this goodly land.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate comes to this far-away home, and has greeted me since my coming with its familiar face and form.

ST. NICHOLAS NEWS NOTES.

A notable feature of the new volume of St. Nicholas will be a number of drawings in color, illustrating Mother Goose characters and verse, by Arthur Rackham, the famous English artist.

"More Than Conquerors" is to be the title of a series of biographical articles by Miss Ariadne Gilbert, to run through St. Nicholas during the coming year. These sketches will deal with the lives of Phillips Brooks, Emerson, Lincoln, and other famous men, mainly from the standpoint of the obstacles or handicaps which they overcame.

Charles G. D. Roberts has written a series of his delightful animal stories for the new volume of St. Nicholas. Some of the interest-provoking titles are: "Teddy Bear's Bee Tree," "The Little Furry Ones That Slide Down Hill," etc.

Woman's Missionary Work

From Mt. Olive, Miss.

The Woman's Missionary Society at Mt. Olive is a united one, with one set of officers. Our work is progressing nicely under the leadership of our president, Mrs. J. R. Ellis. We have four regular meetings each month and find that we cannot get along with any less. We have a Mission Study class composed of 17 members. We have about completed the study of two books: "Western Women in Eastern Lands," and "Conservation of National Ideals." The books are very fine, and the study of them has been quite profitable. The leader of the class, Mrs. A. W. Evans, is thoroughly interested. In so far as we can, some of us have endeavored to respond to the bugle call, "Double our Membership, Double our Offerings." The first we could not do, as nearly all the women of our church belong to the society. In response to the latter, nine of our women have adopted the 15 cents per week plan, setting apart that much for the missionary cause. The number of subscribers to "The Missionary Voice" is not nearly as large at present as it has been, there being only nine. We hope soon to increase the number. Our society has recently taken up work among the negroes of our town. They are appreciative and seem eager for help. We are hoping and praying that great good may be accomplished along this line. This is a great work and one that lies right at our doors, and we go about our Master's business blindly if we do not grasp the opportunity to help these people.

A Story for Auxiliaries.

Once a great king wanted a new picture for his art gallery. He gave the commission to the most celebrated artist in his realm. The artist decided that it should be done in mosaic. He called a number of the best of his fellow artists together, and gave to each one a part to do. To one he gave such a small part that it did not seem worthy of his notice, so he forgot it. At last the time came to complete the picture, and the head artist called each one to bring his part. All came but the one who had thought his part too small to be worthy of notice; but it was the key to the whole color scheme of the picture, without which it could not be completed.

Auxiliary Corresponding Secretaries and Press Superintendents apply the moral of this story to your work.—N. M. Bulletin.

Louisiana Conference.

The District Institutes will be held at the following points: New Orleans, Hammond, Alexandria, Mansfield, Ruston, Rayville, Lafayette, representing a District meeting in every Presiding Elder's district.

The Council Committee on Itineration has been unable to give us any more definite information than that Miss Davies will come to us after November 15th. As soon as the dates are determined, we will publish them.

The Week of Prayer for the Home Department will be held November 17-24. The programs are not yet out, but we have the promise of them soon.

We trust the auxiliaries are making good use of the series of Home Mission charts that were put in the hands of every Protestant minister. Has your pastor called attention to the pertinent facts contained in them, and are these charts being displayed in some prominent part of the church?

The Home Department Secretary reports the following new auxiliaries this quarter: Adult—Robeline, Zona, Dubach, Queensboro, Angie, Gueydan, Oakdale; Junior—Robeline, Mansfield, and Lafayette.

Shares in Home Mission Schools.

At the recent session of the Woman's Missionary Council it was decided to adopt the share plan. This method works admirably in the business world—why not in our mission work? Owning a share in any enterprise creates interest in it. Realizing this fundamental truth, the women of the Council were wise in adopting this method to promote the work. It will stimulate our women to investigate the social and religious conditions demanding these schools and will lead them to follow closely the growth and development of the same. These shares may be taken by persons or by auxiliaries; they are listed for all the schools, and you are privileged to take the one which most strongly appeals to your members. The children have the choice between work for the Japanese in California, or Cuban work at Key West. The Girls' dormitory at Sue Bennett makes a strong appeal to the young people. For the adults there is a new building at Brevard, the support of a deaconess at Wolff Mission School, the scholarships in our Industrial Schools (Vashti and Virginia Johnson), and the strengthening of our work on the Pacific coast. These are by no means all of the needs, only a few of them. If you want a comprehensive knowledge of this new plan read the leaflet "Finances of the Home Department," published by the Board of Missions.

A Good Pledge for Auxiliary Members.

1. I will attend every meeting of my auxiliary unless providentially hindered.
2. I will be an active member of the Mission Study Class.
3. I will speak to uninterested women, telling them of the good and helpful things that have come to me through these meetings.
4. I will invite some one who is not a member to go with me to every meeting.
5. I will pray daily for the work at large and for my own Auxiliary. President, and will co-operate with her in her efforts to advance the work and arouse the uninterested.

Third Vice Presidents, Attention!

The first week of October was Campaign Week for Mission Study. It is our aim to have a mission study class in every auxiliary in the Church. If you have not already organized your class, do so now. Do not let October pass without accomplishing this much for the work. The books for the coming year are "Mormonism, the Islam of America," and "China's New Day," both dealing with subjects of vital interest to all Christian people. Do not fail to report your organization.

On One Ranch

The A. H. Pierce Estate, Pierce, Texas, uses 8 Hart-Parr Oil Tractors on that vast ranch.

Their first tractor, purchased in August, 1909, did such excellent work in threshing rice and breaking black, waxy sod land, they bought 7 more in less than three years' time.

They depend on these 8 tractors to do all their important farm work—plowing, seeding, harvesting, threshing and hauling. Their experience has proven to their entire satisfaction that Hart-Parr Oil Tractors are a big paying investment. That's strong evidence of Hart-Parr Tractor efficiency, reliability and economy.

A. P. Borden, executor of the estate, says: "Hart-Parr Engines are the best on the market today and I recommend them to anyone wanting an Oil Tractor for farm work."

What Hart-Parr Oil Tractors are doing on the great Pierce ranch in Texas, they will do on your ranch. No matter if you farm 160 acres or 1000 acres, a Hart-Parr Oil Tractor furnishes you big, reliable power for every kind of work, both traction and belt. Dependable power that enables you to get your work done on time. Power that saves you money every day. This MODERN FARM HORSE uses cheapest KEROSENE for fuel, takes the place of 15 to 30 horses or mules and is easily operated by one man. You owe it to yourself to investigate.

The Very Last Chance

Is now offered you to win that Grand European Prize Trip which we will give away on November 1.

There are only a few more days, and our great contest will close. Some one will win a free trip to the World's Sunday School Convention, which will meet at Zurich, Switzerland, next summer. Who will it be? Several have sent in large numbers of subscriptions and more are coming in. The leader has less than 200 subscriptions to her credit. Take a suggestion: Ten of your friends might volunteer to spend some of their time from now until sundown October 31 in your behalf. Take the advice of one who has had experience in such contests. It is not a difficult matter for a man or a woman to get $1.50 for such a paper as the Advocate is, if they just try. Interview your friends, and organize for a whirlwind finish. Right now is the time—TO-DAY.

This contest closes at midnight, October 31. Any letter containing subscriptions mailed bearing the postmark of October 31 will be credited. Remember that it takes $1.50 cash with every subscription in order to count in this contest. This announcement has been made time and again. The club rate, when used, destroys the voting power of the subscription. Ministers may vote 100 votes for each year's subscription paid. Be the winner.

A NOBLE SUPERANNUATE REMEMBERED.

Some time ago during our revival meeting, it was conceived in the heart of a "select" woman of God that it would be a beautiful thing to do, to allow all the people of the town to express in a tangible way their deep love and appreciation of Brother Thos. Cameron, his noble character, his sweet, genial spirit, his Christlike life, his helpful influence in the town to everything that is good and righteous.

So, from the afternoon prayer meeting, where a great crowd had gathered to sing and pray and tell of God's love and goodness, they formed a line and marched in solid phalanx from the Presbyterian Church to the home of this good superannuate. Men, women, children, Baptists, Presbyterians, Christians, Methodists and people of no Church, all were in the line of march. We were really afraid Brother Cameron and his family might suspect trouble and flee to the woods, but Brother Cameron was too unwell to be up and consequently unable to run; so we found him in bed. None of his family had had the slightest intimation of what would occur. The long line of march, I suppose containing a hundred or more people, was led by the preachers, along with Dick Hall in his auto, carrying some of the goods.

They invaded the sacred precincts of the home first. Brother Cameron was warned to get out of bed at once and prepare to defend himself, for an army of invasion was coming. He dressed and was seated in a rocking chair on his front porch, and by that time the front of the army had arrived, and we took our places on the gallery, in the yard, and all about the premises. They continued to come until it looked like the whole town was coming. Then there drove up a wagon from the grocery stores laden with flour, sugar, coffee, rice, canned goods, meat, and lard; in fact, with nearly all varieties of edibles. We sang a good song; Brother Goad read the Twenty-third Psalm; Brother McDill, the Presbyterian pastor, led in a fervent, appropriate prayer, asking God's richest blessing upon the noble servant of God and men, and giving thanks for his life among us, for his influence which is always for the right. The writer had had turned over to him a handsome purse and been requested to make the presentation speech, which he could scarcely do for the melting waves of emotion that welled up in his soul and overturned his vocabulary and the power of speech. Brother Cameron rose from his chair to express to the crowd his joy and gratitude, but his voice readily succumbed to the higher mastery of his heart and he was able to speak only a few words. But the crowd did not need a speech—they had done the deed and they saw his face, and all left happy. Was this not a beautiful service? They said: "We wish to give expression to our love for Brother Cameron and his family and our deep appreciation of his noble life and godly influence, and its worth to our town."

Brother Cameron's life is a sermon wrought in the patience, pose, faith and majesty of a personality more eloquent and mighty than any rounded periods that ever fell from tongue of orator, philosopher, or poet. God bless him and all our dear, heroic veterans who have carried in their firm grasp the "white banner" of love and salvation and good will and peace on earth, until now the hands are weak and withered with age and almost ready to yield the pennant of the all-conquering forces to the advancing guard of younger recruits. May their last years be the sweet, happy years of heroes who have conquered the enemy, who on the threshold of the Holy Land are waiting for release to enter upon their glorious inheritance! New Albany knows how to do the fine thing. That purse, besides all the other good things, was $108.00.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER COGDELL.

Dear Brother Meek: I am sitting up after my third spell of sickness this year. I could not tell how much I have suffered. I have now gastritis, which I fear will trouble me for some time. Mrs. Cogdell has been sick most of the year; she had a spell last week, but is better now. This has been a hard year to us. We hope for a better day.

Brother Stormont is doing a good work here and is loved by his people. My brother, Rev. David Cogdell, passed away from us last month. My brothers-in-law, Rev. E. Babb, and William McLearn, have both gone to the other shore this year.

I have done some work for the Master since Conference. I love the Advocate; in my sickness I have read it and re-read it. Your brother,

D. L. COGDELL.

The power of self-management, and turning one's circumstances to the best account is the hardest power in the world to acquire; half of the wasted lives one sees are due to want of it.—Matthew Arnold.

"Many and many a time a good book, read by a boy, has been the direct source of all his future success, has inspired him to attain and deserve eminence, has sent him on the path of discovery, has been as a sheet-anchor to all that is noblest in his character, has contributed the predominant element to the usefulness and happiness of his whole life."—Farrar.

STOPS PAIN—HEALS WOUNDS.

ROYALINE OIL is a GOOD PAIN MEDICINE as well as a GOOD ANTISEPTIC. Its greater strength gives it GREATER POWER TO Ease Pain, inside or outside, man or beast; also makes it go further, and therefore give LARGER VALUE FOR THE MONEY. Medical Hints.

The best friend you have in the world is your stomach. It is to the body what the boilers are to an engine.

When the Stomach is disordered the whole body is starving.

It should be kept in the pink of condition to discharge its functions.

The function of the stomach is to digest food.

Don't expect it to saw wood.

Don't put anything into it, except food and drink if you can avoid it.

Don't treat any local diseases by interfering with digestion.

If some part of the engine is out of order don't try to mend it by injuring the boiler.

Coughs, colds, catarrh, croup and pneumonia are due to local infection.

They are all members of the same family of inflammatory diseases of the organs of respiration.

The small boy's sore toe is also inflammatory.

Would you treat it by dosing his stomach?

Then why treat nostrils, throat and lungs by applying medicine to the stomach?

When you are sick of cold, croup, catarrh or pneumonia let your stomach alone.

Go after the troubles at the point of infection.

This is possible only by inhalation.

Apply Vick's Croup and Pneumonia Salve to throat and chest.

The warmth of the body volatilizes the remedial agents.

These are taken into nostrils, throat and lungs by inhalation.

With these goes volumes of good, fresh air, a necessity in such cases.

The mucous surfaces are immediately stimulated.

The obstructing phlegm is loosened and ejected.

The vapors cleanse the air passages and allay the inflammation.

If the patient is feverish, the temperature is reduced.

This is due to restoration of normal conditions in the affected parts.

Vick's Salve should be used immediately on first appearance of croup or cold.

Quicker results are thus secured.

Its action is very prompt when directions are followed.

Price at drug-gists or by mail from the manufacturer 25c, 50c, $1.00.

Sample sent on your request addressed to The Vick Chemical Company, Manufacturers, 28 Milton Avenue, Greensboro, North Carolina.

THE GREATEST BATTLEFIELD.

What a battleground is the human heart! Within it the forces of light and darkness contend for the mastery, and the eternal destiny of an immortal being is staked upon the result. How they fight the troops of lust and passion, and selfish pride and ambition, led by Satan, and conscience and the better impulses of the moral nature, quickened and re-enforced by the Holy Spirit! As long as life the conflict lasts, and the choicer the man the fiercer seems to rage the struggle. The great Destroyer strikes harder at a shining mark, and exults most when he can lay low in the dust of defeat one dowered with unusual capacity for noble service. Not this side of the grave can the Christian afford to lay his armor off or cease to be watchful. It will require our own best efforts, supplemented by the mighty power of God, to enable us to come off conquerors at last. Most unwise teachers are they who minimize the weakness of human nature and the strength, malignancy, and resourcefulness of the Evil One.

PRESENT-DAY SERVICE OUR DUTY.

The Apostle Paul, in referring to King David, said: "After serving his own generation by the will of God, he fell on sleep." This is the duty of every man—to serve his own generation. We sometimes hear it remarked of men, that they are "born to rule," but in a far truer sense they are born to serve. The only really noble mission one can have is to help others, to contribute to the betterment of human society. No matter to what lofty heights it may rise, the life that comes short of this misses the highest aim of human existence and must have failure written upon it at last. Of all the things upon our planet human beings alone are great, and he who would make an enduring record must concern himself about his fellow-men. It was for them that Jesus came from the skies and suffered for three and thirty years; and it is ministering to them alone that can open for us the gates of Paradise. The connection is close between the memorable words, "Inasmuch as ye have done unto these my brethren," and "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

And the emphasis should be upon the word "HIS"—he "served his generation." So should we all. We are beneficiaries of the past—we owe it more than we can ever tell: we are under obligations to posterity, and our actions may powerfully affect the millions yet to be. But our duty is in the active present. In it alone can we prove ourselves worthy of those who have gone before us, and make richer the heritage of those who are to come after us. The tasks of this fast-fleeting age are ours to perform; its problems are ours to solve. Neither fossils nor dreamers nor ascetics are needed—the demand is for doers. We must keep in touch with current movements and the busy, struggling world about us, if we would live as God expects us to do. If we are ever to wear crowns, we must win them NOW. Well may we let the words of Methodism's sweet singer be the expression of our earnest purpose and our prayer—

"To serve the present age,
My Calling to fulfill;
O may it all my powers engage,
To do my Master's will."

GOOD NEWS FROM HOLSTON.

At the recent session of the Holston Conference it was announced that there had been during the year more than 10,000 conversions and about 6,000 accessions to the Church. This is, indeed, gratifying news. There is no other work that compares in importance with that of leading immortal souls to Christ and into connection with the Church which represents our ascended Lord upon earth. In fact, it is for this supreme task that all our ecclesiastical machinery and equipment exist. If they stop short of the achievement of this highest end, they are of little value. The best credential that any Church can have is an incoming stream of people that it has been instrumental in bringing to penitence and salvation. This attests, as nothing else can, that the power of God abides with it. It delights us to see Methodism blessed with such a manifestation of the Divine favor in any part of the land. Would that it might become universal! Such it would be, if our people everywhere would put away iniquity and worldliness, and call upon the Lord in righteousness and sincerity. A revival is quite as possible now as in any preceding period of the Church's history. When the conditions are fully met, it comes to-day, as it has always done, with unvarying certainty.

DEPARTMENT AT THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, of Kentucky, after attending several Annual Conferences, offered in a recent issue of the Central Methodist Advocate some suggestions as to how the sessions of these important bodies may be made more decorous and effective. Among the things that he thinks would contribute to their efficiency and profitability are the following:

1. Let all the members of the Conference, as far as possible, attend its sittings, keeping regularly in their places, so that they may be accessible at any moment, if needed. Particularly do the presiding elders need to do this, since there are many questions raised by the Bishop that it is incumbent upon them to answer.

2. Let the standing committees—those in charge of the various examinations and the one on Admissions—do their work in time, and the chairmen always be on hand when the proceedings are in progress to give such information as the chair and members of the Conference may desire.

3. Dr. Mann further says: "In some places we noticed a great lack of order and reverence in and around the house of God, and most of this careless conduct was on the part of preachers. If the people in the charges served by these same preachers should produce as much disorder and show as much indifference to the service as they do at Conference, they would be offended and would reprove the people severely. At two of the Conferences we noticed the preachers chewing and smoking tobacco in the churchyard and in the doors and vestibules of the churches. We have often been disgusted at young men bringing cigarettes into the doors and vestibules of the church, but how can anything else be expected as long as preachers smoke pipes and cigars on the very door-steps of the house of God? We saw absolutely nothing of the kind this year during the sessions of either the Louisville or the Kentucky Conference. At the risk of being called narrow, we write it down boldly that we believe God is displeased when ministers smoke and chew tobacco on premises dedicated to his holy worship."

To these suggestions of Dr. Mann, we give hearty endorsement. There is not one of them which is not wise and which would not help our Annual Conference sessions. We desire to add to them two other recommendations: (1) That our pastors fill out their report blanks and hand them to the Statistical Secretary on the first day of the Conference. Delay in doing this causes a vast deal of confusion and trouble. (2) That the moving around and talking while the proceedings of the Conference are in progress be reduced to a minimum. It is most difficult to transact business with some of the brethren in almost continuous motion and amid a hum of whispered conversation that can be heard all over the building. While holding the two Mississippi Conferences last year, Bishop Candier, though fond of the preachers in that State, was moved to rebuke them kindly more than once for their lack of order and attention to what was going on. Conference behavior is not a matter of small importance. In this, as well as in other things, preachers and Christian laymen should set a good example. To a far greater extent than many imagine, the keen eye of the world is focused upon us while we are in these annual gatherings; and it behooves us in all that we do or say to exhibit the spirit of Christ.

The best road-building is that which makes smoother and easier the way to the Celestial City. It is a noble thing to get out of it the obstructions and pitfalls, that more of the race may travel it successfully and reach the coveted goal in the years to come. Nor do we doubt that this will be done. The saved in the end will not be few, but many. It was a mighty host that no man could number that John, while on the dreary isle of Patmos, saw in the home of the redeemed.

Our Monthly Sermon

LIFE WORTH WHILE.

By Rev. O. W. Bradley.

Text: "For me to live is Christ." Philippians, 1:21.

For me to live is—what? This inquiry is of such import that it makes us serious. How soul-stirring and conscience-awakening it is! If the world in judgment on our lives, if a friend or a foe, if Omniscience were to answer it, what would it be? If each were to answer it for himself, what could he say? What is the meaning of arising at the early hour, the going and coming at the daily task, the days of toil, the years of endeavor along ways of difficulty and strife, ending in both victories and defeats? What is the meaning of this large expenditure of time and energy, this physical and mental and spiritual output? What is the meaning of unceasing indulgences, pleasures, luxuries, smiles, and laughter? What is the meaning of the tired bodies, the fading of life's glory, the care-worn face, wrinkled in the bearish machinery of experience? We wonder what life can mean to one who knows all the stings and pain of poverty, where hardest labor barely offers an existence, burdens are never lifted, and ignorance is slavery; or to the invalids and the aged from whose cheek the glow of strength has gone, and each breath is a sigh; or to the criminal behind the bars wearing his garb of guilt, deprived of his liberty, possessing but remnants of a wasted and misspent career. To them is life worth while? "To be or not to be is the question" that challenges an answer from the apostles of hope.

Men have different views of life's worth. To some life means much, if employment is agreeable, if ease, plenty and success come in an unbroken stream. To others life is full of friends, pleasures with no dull hours; beauty and fame are theirs. And there are still others whose lives are characterized by an unselfish service to humanity, consecration and devotion to duty, the cherishing and defending of an ideal; yet to them life is full of sacred joy and noble meaning. Mankind may be divided into three classes:

I. Those who live to escape. A large number of men and women, old and young, form this class. The loss sustained by the home, Church and State, because duty and responsibility have gone unheeded and unacknowledged cannot be estimated. The effort of many is to confront and bear only such responsibilities as will enable them to accomplish their selfish ends. They seek to escape life's obligations and duties, to evade the laws of man and God, the public eye and public opinion and criticism, truth and conscience. In the Church, we find those who seek to escape church discipline, pleading for a liberal construction to the end of liberal practice. Sometimes they undertake the substitution of gifts and creeds and forms for a Christian experience, and it is with satisfaction that they congratulate themselves that they have done proportionately well in life and maintained the decent respect of thoughtful people and escaped most of the drudgery of fulfilling their duty and obligation to God and man. Men actively and passively resist life's responsibilities and burdens. Some may not seek to oppose or remove these obligations in active warfare, but failing to recognize them, and indifferent toward them, they passively resist their call; while there are others who aggressively undertake to overthrow and forever silence the voice of the Church, home and State, calling them to life's great problems.

Particularly do we observe the tendency of youth to escape the serious things of life. These conditions, which we believe are true, are causes for much concern. Dante declared that Italy in his day had inherited all the excellence of Roman law since the days of Justinian; but that the country was going to the dogs because the people had lost a national ideal and the spirit of individual responsibility. How unfrequent it is that we find a young man or a young woman whose mind is lit by the visions of life's possibilities and whose very being quivers with an ambition and determination to enter into life's meaning, confront the real problems of a useful career and win out. From the pulpit, the school platform, and the home may we observe this lack of ambition, this desire for success by the easiest and shortest methods and contentment with a mere existence. Are we to confess that the American youth would exchange his birthright of a noble heritage for a mess of pottage? I believe there is a need of a gospel of personal responsibility. To open, or to leave open, the door of escape is to make cowards and criminals. We need to feel that we are responsible for the use of our time and opportunities, for our intellectual and soul growth, companions and friends, our influence and our destiny.

Some men look to the Church to save their souls and to see them through—the Church can only be a help. Some look to the State to educate them, cure their ills, and, if necessary, support them. Some look to the crowd for protection. They feel safe in a crowd. They substitute the crowd conscience for the individual conscience. The crowd always kills the sense of individual fears, weakness, and needs. Some drown life's possible futures in fatalism. No man is ever the victim of his conditions. If that were so, you would have to reverse history and rewrite the biographies of the great. Those whom we call earth's great men came to their achievements by overcoming the hardest circumstances. It is true that man's limitations become man's opportunities. O man, be a hero in the strife. No life is worth while that seeks the way of escape. Better to die a martyr than to escape duty; better to fail with a good conscience than succeed with a conscience that won't forget; better to die early, bruised upon the battlefield, than to die late in sensual ease with no great work undertaken. A life can be of no value which does not pay all its debts on every plane of existence. No character is a good investment which does not make a contribution to the intellectual, social, and religious life of its generation.

II. Those Who Live to Acquire. This is a much worthier purpose than that of escape. To acquire means to attain, the cost of time and energy and effort, a spirit of endeavor. There is a hopeful outlook for one who seeks to acquire. Standing still is always more critical than moving when intentions are good. Shakespeare says—

"Assume a virtue, if you have it not,

For use can change the stamp of nature."

To acquire is always laudable. Intellectual acquirement is a good thing. The student acquiring a knowledge of mathematics, history, and science is laying a foundation and supplying himself with tools for a mighty structure. To acquire a knowledge of the world's history, to live in many centuries, and to be familiar with races and changes of the past, makes one's thought and sympathy worldwide. To acquire a knowledge of philosophy, the best literature, and poetry vastly enriches a life. To know something of the stars and the earth is "to think God's thoughts after Him." The acquirement of wealth is not to be discredited. Wealth is never a curse if honestly acquired and rightly used. The achievement of success and fame may be worthy. A noble ambition has brought many a genius from obscurity to fame. One who selfishly seeks fame never finds it; he may get position, but not fame. The famous of earth are those who forget themselves into immortality.

But spiritual acquirements are the highest achievements of man. Greatness of mind is good, but greatness of heart and conscience are more. Spiritual attainments are never to be considered second place. "Whatsoever is pure and honorable and of good report, etc., think on these things." The Christian's privilege is the "fullness of the stature in Christ Jesus." The courage of a Daniel, the vision of an Isaiah, the aspirations of a Jacob, the optimism of a Joseph, the patience of a Job, the generosity of a Jonathan, the devotion of a Paul, the tenderness of a John, the boldness of a Peter, the assurance of a Thomas, the joy of a Mary, are the possible achievements of all. "Giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness love."

III. Those who live to Manifest. To escape is cowardice; to acquire is worthy; to manifest is man's highest privilege. For some to live is pleasure, or money, or self, or nothing in particular. For some to live is an opinion, an idea, the defense of a cause, or a profession. For Newton or Darwin to live was science; for Raphael to live was art; for Wagner and Beethoven to live was music; for Tennyson and Lanier to live was poetry; for Wesley and Brooks to live was to preach; but for Paul to live was Christ. "To me life is Christ," says Paul. Does it mean for you to live that Christ is manifested? To manifest is to make clear and evident, to lay open to view what is hidden, to display, to exhibit or to reflect the Christly character. The leaf of the branch is a manifestation of the tree. The star manifests the glory of a sun. Words make clear our thoughts, and deeds our motives. "Ye are the light of the world." Can that be literally true? The Christian is the only light in the world of morals. The best exposition of the Beatitudes is a life; the best sermon on love is a loving deed; the best way to preach forgiveness is to forgive.

To manifest Christ is to make evident the power of his redeeming love, to have an experience of sins forgiven, to know the transforming powers of the heavenly Alchemist. We have seen the physician and have been healed, and are ready to tell the world what the Lord hath done. Such an experience makes all of us heralds of an optimistic gospel, a mighty passion, and a victorious faith. To manifest Christ is to serve. I like the gospel I have heard more often than I do now: "We know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren."

No Christian liveth unto himself; selfishness never manifests a Christ. Our service often begins and ends in self; our consideration of others is dragged at the chariot wheels of self, and never extends beyond the circumference of our own interests. To serve often means a sacrifice, and the service that is done without complaint is a manifestation of our Lord's suffering. Service often means to suffer the loneliness of the few in the ranks, inconvenience, opposition, and self-denial. But by service many have believed in Christianity before they have believed in Christ. To manifest Christ he must abide within. Religion is both exclusive and inclusive. We may exclude much that is evil and abstain from things that the world would call unprofessional, yet include so little of his grace, peace, purity and tenderness as to fail to manifest the Christ. The Christ abiding within enables us to manifest a courage, a faith, a peaceful assurance that the world cannot possess. John Wesley on board a vessel in a storm at sea, when all were in confusion and in hysteric fear, noticed a few Moravians reading and praying apparently undisturbed by the storm without. He remarked that they had something he had not. May it always be true of Methodists and all the professed disciples of the Christ, that they have something that the world has not.

The lives that have made the greatest contributions have been those that have manifested the highest elements of Christly living. Returning from an auditorium the other day, where I had listened to one of America's great men, I heard a gentleman remark to his companion: "He is just a man, like you and me. There is no difference in men. He has had chances that you and I have not." "No difference in men! Just a man!" Yes, just a man, but what a difference in men? Any difference in Paul and Felix, or John and Judas, Bob Ingersoll and Moody, the real statesman and a cheap politician, an unright citizen and a debauchee, the butterfly social debutante and cultured woman with common sense in her head and the grace of God in her heart? We are all "just men;" but what a difference in their characters, in the good they do, and the Christ-likeness their lives reflect. What a privilege it is for every Christian to manifest Christ in the home, in the shop, in public, and in private! How much easier it would be for the Church to do its work, if every Christian could say with Paul, "To me life is Christ!" For me to live is—What?—

"I live to learn their story
Who suffered for my sake,
To emulate their glory
And follow in their wake;
Bards, martyrs, patriots, and sages,
The noble of all the ages,
Whose deeds crown history's pages
And time's great volume make.

"I live to hold communion
With all that is divine,
To feel that there is union
'Twixt nature's heart and mine;
To profit by affliction,
Read truth from fields of fiction,
Grow wise from conviction,
Following God's design.

"I live for those who love me,
For those who know me true,
For the heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit, too;
For the wrongs that need resistance,
For the cause that needs assistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I can do."

PACIFIC CONFERENCE.

The Pacific Conference met in its 62nd session in Bakersfield, Cal., Wednesday morning, Oct. 9th, and adjourned with the reading of the appointments on Sunday evening, the 13th. Bishop Waterhouse presided. Wm. Acton, the very efficient Secretary for a number of years, declined re-election, and L. S. Shearer was chosen to succeed him, but Brother Acton was pressed into service as one of the assistant Secretaries.

Bakersfield is at the extreme southern end of the Conference. Some of the members had to travel more than 500 miles, a round trip of 1000 miles, yet absentees were but little more numerous than usual, especially clerical members. Somehow our preachers will contrive to get to Conference, a number of them accompanied by their wives, no matter how hard they may have fared during the year.

This did not break the line of really "pacific" Conferences, which has already extended over a number of years, dating back to the time when the evangelist and holiness question (it was one question with us) was agitated in an unholy manner. Good feeling prevails among all the preachers. This should not be wondered at. How can it be otherwise among the children of the God of peace and love!

This was Bishop Waterhouse's third term as president of this Conference. No objections are offered to "third-termers" among us. We rather like the idea of a third term, and even a fourth, when the "termers" are as brotherly as is Bishop Waterhouse and some of his predecessors. The longer they stay with us, the more fully do they become one of us. They invariably fall in love with this great section, and appreciate the importance of our work here. It is only the single-termers who speak disparagingly of us.

Upon the whole, "We had a good year, Bishop." The net gain in membership was about 300. Finances were practically as a year ago. Several glorious revivals were reported. The preachers were all found "blameless in life and official administration," save N. F. Hoffpauer, who declined to go to his work. His name was referred to a committee. It was found that he had joined the M. E. Church, and his name was merely stricken from the roll, though not without censure.

Our big Church Extension Society Secretary, Dr. W. F. McMurry, Dr. John M. Moore, Missionary Secretary, Dr. Gross Alexander, our great Review editor, and W. C. Everett, of the Dallas Publishing House, were in attendance, and contributed not a little to the interest of the Conference by their sermons and addresses. Dr. Alexander was especially in favor, and was drawn upon liberally. He gave Bible studies daily, and even twice a day, besides preaching some splendid gospel sermons. He succeeded in enrolling all the preachers as subscribers to the Review.

No changes were made in the leading appointments, save that S. W. Walker, D. D., succeeds Mark Hodgson as presiding elder of the San Francisco District, and is succeeded by him as pastor at San Jose, each having completed his term of four years. Under missionary rule, J. A. B. Fry goes to Berkeley for the seventh year.

The next session of the Conference is to be held at Hollister.

DR. STEEL ON THE WOMAN'S RIGHTS QUESTION.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D. D.

Dr. S. A. Steel denounces Woman's Suffrage as a "pestilent heresy," and again as "an abomination of abominations;" and declares it to be "the greatest menace to what is left us of our Protestant home." As there is no logic in invective, I seek in vain for some sane reason for these strong words of the Doctor's and about the only argument I see is really no argument at all. He tells us that Henry Ward Beecher believed in it. "What proves too much proves nothing." Dr. Steel ought to know this axiom of logic. Henry Ward believed in the Divinity of Christ; did that fact discount the grand truth? Saloon-keepers often accept every doctrine of Christianity as true; does their testimony to its truth discount Christianity?

The Doctor connects Woman's Suffrage with Negro Suffrage; I thought we opposed Negro Suffrage because of the Negro's ignorance. Is Woman Suffrage to be opposed for the same reason? What relation can the Doctor find between them? Once in a springtime a comet appeared and the corn grew very high. Ignorant farmers said that the comet made the corn grow high; did it indeed? Beecher favored Woman Suffrage and Negro equality; therefore the Doctor infers that they are related. The Doctor's inferences are as far afield as his sneer about "The Reign of the Petticoat" is uncalled for. The Doctor's fiery invective and ribald rhetoric will not decide this question.

The Doctor does not say but intimates that suffrage will unsex or de-womanize our wives and daughters. Such declarations are the trite old objections against it which I first heard forty years ago. It is time that somebody was trying to prove it. Statement is not proof. I deny the statement and demand proof. Some of the most unwomanly women I ever saw were not suffragists. A gentler, lovelier, more womanly woman never graced an American home than Frances Willard, an arch-suffragist of America; and Dr. Steel can name no living women more truly womanly than a long list of living suffragists that I can give him.

I have heard these prophecies of ill to come with Woman Suffrage; but I have never heard one word of proof to support the lugubrious forecasts. I am anxiously waiting to hear some proof.

Dr. Steel has lost sight of the fact that Prof. Arch Trawick and Sister Arch Trawick have just as much right to their opinions about Woman's Suffrage as has Dr. S. A. Steel; and have also as much right to send out from their home or office tracts in favor of it as has Dr. Steele to deliver his lecture entitled "The Reign of the Petticoat," or his threatened sermon against Woman Suffrage. If Brother and Sister Trawick are at fault, Dr. Steel is more at fault, for he delivers his sermon, if not his lecture, in Methodist churches. If the propaganda from our Nashville friends is a political impropriety, so also, and more so, is Dr. Steel's campaign against it. Strange, the Doctor did not see this!

If Dr. Steel wishes to stomp Southern Methodism in his hope to kill suffrage sentiment, let him do it. I do not think that any of the Woman Suffrage advocates will think of forbidding him. It is to be hoped that his sermon and lecture will contain a little logic—his article under review has none. Sometimes a great and noble cause like this gains largely by the opposition of inconsiderate foes. Let the Doctor preach his anti-suffrage politics if he wishes, and sneer in his lecture at women's apparel and ambitions, woman's love of humanity and her efforts to help—and let him write. So will we write and speak for the cause he foresees will win.

A MOST IMPORTANT MATTER.

To the Methodists of Louisiana and Friends of Mansfield Female College Generally:

Our church in Mansfield still owns the old church house and the lot upon which it stands, and by which it is surrounded. The old house of worship could be utilized by Mansfield College to good advantage, but the lot is almost absolutely necessary to the institution for a campus. If this old church property went into private hands for residence or business purposes it would do incalculable damage to our Conference school.

The old church property is valued at $2500 or $3000. At the dedication of the new church five years ago it was valued at $1500, which was considered a low valuation even at that time. The local church, rather than alienate the property and damage the College, is willing to accept $1000 for it and thus make a donation of $1500 or $2000, and I feel safe in saying that if our church were out of debt the members would be willing to give the property to the College outright. The church has raised nearly $3000 on its indebtedness in cash this year and still owes about $4000.

On the other hand, while the College to-day has the brightest outlook it has ever had, it has not a dollar it can put into this almost indispensable property. If it should continue to prosper as we hope and believe it will, all of its possible resources, and more, will be needed to make absolutely necessary improvements.

In view of these circumstances, it seemed to me that I ought easily to find one hundred Methodists and friends of Mansfield College who would give $10 or more each to meet the liberal offer of our local church, and thus forever secure the property in question for the College.

Will the reader not be one of these? Write me that you will and that you will remit the amount whenever you are notified that a sufficient amount has been subscribed. You will render a distinct service to the cause of Christian education by so doing.

THOMAS H. MORRIS,
Pastor, First Methodist of Mansfield, La.

THE SUGGESTION ENDORSED.

We heartily endorse the appeal of Brother Morris made above. We believe that the church at Mansfield has done all that can reasonably be expected of it under all of the circumstances, and we hope that Methodists of Louisiana, generally, and the friends of Mansfield College, particularly, will respond to this appeal, and be as liberal as possible.

Signed by: J. L. P. Sheppard, Paul M. Brown, presiding elder; R. E. Bobbitt, president, Mansfield College; D. G. Petty, president, Board of Trustees of Mansfield College.

Southern Methodism is making phenomenal progress in and around Birmingham, Ala. Four new churches are nearing completion, the combined cost of which will be $200,000. They are as follows: East Lake, $15,000; Woodlawn, $50,000; Ensley, $60,000; Bessemer, $100,000.

Church News

Bishop D. H. Moore, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, attended the recent session of the Tennessee Conference of the Church, South, and made an interesting address.

The pastors of our three leading churches in Nashville have been returned for another year, viz: Dr. J. S. French to McKendree, Dr. G. H. Detwiler to West End, and Dr. W. B. Ricks to Tulip Street.

The gifts of the women of the M. E. Church to foreign missions for their last fiscal year footed up the sum of $837,224. The annual meeting of the Foreign Department was held in Baltimore, Md., last week.

Governor Woodrow Wilson delivered the principal address at the two-hundredth anniversary of the First Presbyterian Church, of Trenton, N. J., on October 23. He spoke on the value of the Church to society.

It is stated that ten preachers have died in the North Georgia Conference this year. But this is probably not a larger mortality rate than that of some of the other Conferences, since this body has more than 117,000 members.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America will hold its second quadrennial session in Chicago, December 4-10, 1912. Thirty-two denominations are represented in this organization. Its president is Bishop E. R. Hendrix, of Kansas City, Mo.

Zion's Herald says: "Hon. Eugene W. Chafin, the nominee for President on the Prohibition ticket, is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and has been president of the Wisconsin State Epworth League. He is a man of fine personal traits of character."

A contemporary calls attention to the fact that next Easter will be the earliest that we have had in many years, and the earliest that we will have for several decades. It will be on March 23. "Easter is always the first Sunday after the full moon upon, or next after, March 21."

Bethel Church, of Charleston, S. C., of which Dr. Watson B. Duncan is pastor, has begun the erection of a Sunday school building to cost $23,000. It said that when this structure is finished the facilities afforded for Sunday school work will scarcely be surpassed anywhere in the South.

It is said that Dr. R. N. Price and Dr. David Sulins have both been members of the Holston Conference for sixty-two years, and that both were present at the late session of that body at Abingdon, Va. The Holston country has long seemed to possess more than its share of grand old men.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate states that Dr. Julius Magath, who is maintained in the field by our Church as a missionary to the Hebrews, has been working in the city of Baltimore during the month of October. Dr. Magath's headquarters are in Atlanta, where he is most highly esteemed. He represents a great cause, and should be remembered by our people in their prayers.

Dr. W. E. Thompson, who formerly served the First Methodist Churches of Little Rock and Memphis, and who last year was stationed at Centenary Church, Chattanooga, has been transferred to the South Carolina Conference. Dr. Thompson is one of the most brilliant and forceful speakers in the connection. The "grape-vine news" is that he will probably be stationed in Charleston.

The New Mexico Conference of our Church reported at its recent session a net gain of 677 members. The numerical strength of the Church within its bounds is 7198. We notice in the list of appointments the name of E. D. Lewis, who was assigned to Sierra Blanca and Clint, in the El Paso District. Brother Lewis was formerly a member of the North Mississippi Conference and later of the Tennessee Conference. He is a graduate of Millsaps College.

The movement to increase the endowment of Chattanooga University (Methodist Episcopal) by a half-million dollars seems to be progressing favorably. Dr. J. H. Race, the president, announced a few days since that $200,000 had been raised locally, and that prior to that $204,000 had been secured. The General Board of Education (Rockefeller) has promised $150,000 to this institution on certain terms, which apparently will be promptly met.

According to report, Dr. George S. Sexton lacks but little of having secured in cash and pledges the amount necessary to insure the construction of the Representative Southern Methodist Church in Washington City, for which he has been so industriously working for the past two or three years. Let our laymen generously lend him a helping hand, now that the end of this enterprise is in sight, and make the close of the campaign easy for him. This movement is one of great importance, and its successful culmination will mean much to our Church in the future. Persons desiring to contribute may remit to Dr. W. F. McMurry, Louisville, Ky.

Rev. R. A. Burroughs, at present the presiding elder of the Brenham District of the Texas Conference, has been elected superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage at Waco, to succeed Dr. J. H. McLean, and will take charge on December 1. This is a great institution, and the position to which Brother Burroughs has been called is one of large responsibility. Referring to his election, the Texas Christian Advocate says: "He is one of the strong and successful men of his Conference, and he has the qualifications for the new field assigned him. He is full of energy, has a clear head, a kind heart, and is a patient master of details. We bespeak for him a wide-open door, and we have no doubt but that he will meet with a hearty welcome and prove a competent man for this responsible place."

THE MISSISSIPPI PROHIBITION CONFERENCE

The State Prohibition Conference was held, as advertised, in a tent within the Fair Grounds at Jackson, on October 24th. Captain W. T. Ratliff, the chairman of the Anti-Saloon League Board, called the convention to order. Rev. Wm. King, of Jackson, led in prayer. Captain Ratliff was asked to furnish the press with a copy of his address by the unanimous vote of the conference. Hon. T. H. Barrett, Circuit Judge, Gulfport, delivered a stirring address lasting one hour. The conference asked that his address be printed by the League. Hon. Hooper Alexander, of Atlanta, made an address on Law Enforcement. Hon. T. M. Evans, Rev. W. H. Saunders and others spoke.

The Conference appointed the following committee on resolutions:

T. M. Evans, Chairman; R. A. Cody, James Hand, J. O. Askew, C. M. O'Neal, J. C. Ballinger, W. D. Hawkins, L. A. Duncan, D. G. McLaurin, T. J. Shipman, H. Lipscomb, W. H. Laprade.

The committee made a strong report which was adopted with enthusiasm. It recommended that the rural districts be organized and that speakers visit the country churches for the benefit of the young as well as the old; that the book, "Destroying the Destroyer" be commended to the public and its circulation as rapidly as possible pushed by prohibitionists over the State; that the Board of Supervisors and City Alderman be requested to appropriate funds from liquor fines to convict illegal liquor sellers; that citizens living in communities where officers connive, or are in league, with liquor sellers be urged to organize and compel the enforcement of law, or compel those officers to vacate their offices; newspapers in Mississippi were praised for refusing liquor advertisements, and good prohibitionists were asked to consider the advisability of refusing to permit to come into their homes papers published in this State carrying liquor advertisements, and thereby counteracting the teachings of the home. Gov. Brewer was praised for his stand in ordering certain officers to close places selling liquor of any sort, upon penalty of removal if he has the power.

At 8 p. m. Hon. Hooper Alexander and Rev. Dr. G. W. Young of Atlanta spoke an hour each. The large audience in the tent and those outside enjoyed these speeches immensely. They were immense. The superintendent of the League stated that he was highly pleased with the day's conference. The men and women who attended from over the State were as brave, he said, as ever drove an enemy from the field. Great results will come from the conference. It was made clear that it is the duty of committees appointed to aid in every way possible in the enforcement of the law, and urge Boards of Aldermen and Supervisors to act. The Conference was a great success.

RECEIPTS FROM WORK DAY.

Dear Dr. Meek: Will you kindly mention that our receipts from "Work Day" amount to $2,000 to date, and the receipts are still coming in. We hope that the amount will reach $5,000 by the close of the Conference year. Please urge the preachers and other parties who have funds for the Orphanage to send them in as soon as possible, as we desire to settle one of the notes which will fall due soon. Let those who have not taken the collection yet, please do so at once, so that our cause may not suffer from lack of funds this year. Thanking you, I am cordially yours,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Superintendent.

There are now 1,742,487 Italians in the United States, and more than 2,000,000 in South America. It is claimed that they send to Italy out of this country and South America more than $100,000,000 annually.

French, next to English, is the most popular language in the world. It has gained over English in Germany, but has lost in Italy, where the German language is becoming quite popular. The French language is yet the most popular language of so-called society.

Jennings, La., was recently chosen as the parish seat of Jefferson Davis Parish. The citizens of Jennings were most active in the fight to make four parishes out of Calcasieu Parish, and it seems only proper that that town should reap some of the benefits of the division.

Dr. Robert Ellis Thompson, president of the Boys' Central High School of Philadelphia, has started a crusade in favor of a federal law requiring all marriage licences to be issued six months in advance of marriage. He believes that this plan would put an end to hasty marriages.

Booker T. Washington has recently published a book entitled "The Man Farthest Down; The Struggle of the European Tollers." In this book he states that he has been through the slums of many large cities of both America and Europe and finds that the Negro is better off than the races of Europe occupying similar social standing.

The object of the Institute is to codify international laws and to secure the enactment of proper laws to govern the relations of the Pan-American Union with the United States.

It is now thought by leading doctors that infantile paralysis is a disease of the upper part of the lungs, and that its spread is caused by bacteria leaving the upper respiratory passage of the victim and being carried in the air to others. This theory has not been accepted as final, but has received favorable consideration by leading specialists the world over.

An inventor in England has devised a bank-note that speaks. One end of the note is so stamped as to give utterance to a key phrase when placed in a phonograph. It is the opinion of the inventor that his device will lessen the annual loss caused by counterfeiters. It seems to us that it will be just as easy for the counterfeiters to meet the new requirement as it is to imitate the present form of bank-notes.

There is a famine camp near Dresden, Germany, where stout people are made thin. The diet prescribed there is composed mostly of cherries, grapes, coffee, bread, lemonade, two small slices of meat daily, lettuce, and fruit marmalade. Milk and nuts are rarely ever allowed to be eaten. News reports claim that the "camp" is very successful in its method of treatment, and strictly enforces absolute temperance upon all its patients.

Liverpool, England, has, for the last ten years, demolished every dwelling house that its health authorities declared unsanitary and dangerous to the welfare of the town. It has, out of the public funds, rebuilt each house according to the latest sanitary patterns, and the death rate has fallen off by more than half and there is an average of but 1.9 cases of consumption annually to every 1000 population. Such a course would be expensive for most cities, but Liverpool is rated as the richest municipality in the world.

Recent investigations by some of the most eminent etiological experts of the world have gone a long way towards proving that the use of corn meal has nothing to do with causing pellagra. The disease is now thought to be due to the bite of a certain kind of small fly which is found along water courses and in the marshes. A recent report to the effect that cotton seed oil is a pellagra medium has been authoritatively denied by Dr. Harvey N. Wiley, who is among the greatest pure food authorities in America.

At Jeannette, Pa., the School Board has forbidden the teachers to dance on any night during the school week, and has attempted to make it very difficult for them to dance at all. The secular press generally has condemned the school board. We are not surprised at this. But in view of the fact that a recent report stated that detectives who have been investigating the methods of white slave traffickers found that dance halls, both public and private, are infested by these social leeches, it seems to us that the School Board has acted wisely.

THE SUPERANNUATES.

By Rev. K. W. Dodson.

The superannuate preacher is one who is worn-out in the itinerant service; in other words, he has worn out in the service of his Church.

There was once an active and strong young man who, with his wife and children, went into a new country and built there a new home, clearing the forest, tolling from daybreak till dark—sometimes rising a great while before day and toiling far into the night. At last there stood a beautiful home, surrounded with shady oaks and spreading elms. Rose bushes and other flowers bloomed about the yard and mingled their fragrance upon the still air of eventide. In the rear of the home was a barn, filled with grain and hay. Yonder to the left, on the hillside, was the orchard, where the peach and apple trees flowered and the plum and cherry trees promised abundance from branch and bow. On an arbor hard by stood a luxuriant vine, forecasting clusters of luscious purple fruit. To the right, in a fertile valley, were hundreds of acres under cultivation, growing corn, wheat, oats, potatoes, and hay. In fact, plenty was the promise on every hand. His herds of cattle and horses, sheep and hogs grazed upon verdant pastures. His children were now grown and seemingly happy.

But the once young man was now old. The once erect body was stooped. The elastic step, once quick and confident, had grown slow and uncertain. The cane became a necessity in giving confidence and preserving his equilibrium. His remaining joy and comfort was in his children—he loved them.

One day this venerable pioneer announced to those dear to him that it was his desire to turn over to them the material fruits of his life's work; whereupon a meeting was called, attended by all of his beneficiaries, who proceeded to reorganize the work for the future, with a view to carrying on the development of their great legacy. Among the resolutions they adopted was one which declared: "You must superannuate. The world is moving. The demand is for young men. We cannot longer abide your slow motion."

The old man wept, but he retired. The young men, his sons and sons-in-law, took charge. Of course it was agreed under the new conditions that the old man should be cared for; and accordingly he was given a cabin apart from the home he had built in which to spend the remaining days of his now weary life. A small allowance was made for his subsistence. Few callers knocked at the old man's door. He was soon forgotten. The callers rang the bell at the front door of the big house. In loneliness he spent his last years.

You may contend that this picture is overdrawn—and maybe it is—but whether it can be applied fully to our subject or not, I trust that it will make us think of these old men, these old "soldiers of the Cross." Those who are now on the superannuate list were once young men. Most of them were pioneer circuit riders with large circuits. Some of them can tell you how they threaded their way through dismal swamps and forests, their only guide being a deer trail, crossing swollen streams without boat or bridge, weary with hard travel, yet preaching in homes, brush arbors, schoolhouses, anywhere and everywhere they could gather a congregation. They had the one theme, "personal salvation." They had an object as well as a subject. That object was the salvation of souls. Each one of them seemed to feel, "woe is me if I preach not the gospel." They sang—

"O that the world might taste and see
The riches of his grace;
The arms of love that compass me
Would all mankind embrace."

Their sermons produced conviction. It is told that an old Scotch lady, going away from church met a late arrival who exclaimed: "What, is the sermon done? "Na, na," was the retiring lady's reply, "The sermon is said—it is yet to be done."

They prayed for each other, assisted each other in their revivals, and as they gathered at Annual Conference, they rejoiced to see each other and sang—

"And are we yet alive
And see each other's face?
Glory and praise to Jesus give
For his redeeming grace."

They did much to establish the family altars where you and I used to kneel with father and mother. They sowed the seeds which produced the present conditions, which gave us the churches now dotting our land, many of which are furnished with costly, comfortable pews, carpeted floors and pipe organs. They have turned things over to us. We voted for them to retire; they wept as they dropped out. But they are still praying for the Church they love and for us. What are we doing for them? We give them to live on, from $15 to $25 per month. They are compelled to go to the little house. Few knock at the door. A lawyer who has done work equal to theirs, at the age when most of them retire sits at the head of the firm, owning bank stock, houses and lands. The physician (as are most men in other callings) upon passing the zenith of life is honored for his knowledge and experience.

Brethren, I do not pose as one who has done his full duty by these heroes. No; I am as guilty as any of you. But let us think, pray, and work, that the collections may be in full.

TWO GREAT TENNESSEANS.

(One of the most brilliant addresses at the recent Centennial Celebration of the Tennessee Conference, held in McKendree Church, Nashville, was delivered by Judge J. M. Anderson, a leading lawyer of that city. In the course of his able utterance, Judge Anderson paid beautiful tributes to many of the distinguished Methodist ministers who figured in the history of our Church in Tennessee in the days ago. Two of these—Dr. J. D. Barbee and Dr. John B. McFerrin—were so well known in this section that we reproduce the passages relating to them, feeling assured that they will prove of interest to many of our readers. Dr. Anderson's address was published in full in the Nashville Banner of October 9.)

The peer of all the rest, there is another who has but recently been called from our midst. There is scarcely one of you present who did not know him personally. He was indeed a Prince of Israel. For four years I sat in those pews out there and heard him from this pulpit preach the gospel of Jesus Christ with a force and power and a grace I have never heard any man excel. His life was as pure as the religion he professed, an open book without a soiled page within its folds.

Why it was that in the evening of his life, after such a long and honorable career, he should have been made the victim of misunderstanding and of misrepresentations, unless it be that he like the prophets of old was required, for your benefit and mine, to make proof of his love and faith, I will never understand. In the darkest hours that gathered about his devoted head his faith never wavered, his love never waned, but sustained by the consciousness of his own integrity, he walked with uplifted head and unashamed in the presence of all mankind and humbled himself to none, save God. I never hear his name but I am reminded of those beautiful lines of Goldsmith:

"Like some tall cliff that lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale and midway leaves the storm,
Though round its breast the rolling clouds may spread

Eternal sunshine settles on its head."

Let no man who would be loyal to the truth of history undertake to list the heroes of Methodism and fail to write high among the rest the name of James D. Barbee.

Since I have stood in this holy place, recollections of yet another have crowded thick and fast upon me.

When I knew him he was an old man; his form, once straight, was bent; his step, once firm, was feeble, and his eyes, once bright, were dim; but that bent form was of heroic mold; in his shambling step I could catch the echo of a giant's tread, and in his dim eye I saw reflected the fire of an heroic spirit. When he was a boy eighteen years of age he dedicated himself and all he had and all he ever expected to acquire, to the service of his God. For sixty-two long years he kept his boyhood vow, and during all that time no duty that was placed upon him was too dangerous for him to undertake; no task too unpleasant for him to perform; no hardship too great for him to endure. No man was so humble as to be beyond the pale of his sympathy, or so exalted that he dare not maintain his integrity before him.

He was justly styled 'the Great Commoner.' The people believed in him, and where he led they followed. No man in the Church or out of it knew more people or was personally known to more people than he, and no man exerted a wider influence for good.

His life and his labors and the record that he made are familiar to you all. In this presence and on this occasion it would be strained and mocked modesty that would prompt me not to mention the name of John B. McFerrin among the heroes of Methodism. As in his life, so in his triumphant death, he made full proof of his ministry, and of his faith in the power and mercy of God; and Methodism has no richer legacy than the record of long and faithful service that he laid upon its altar.

A TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLAR MEMORIAL TO BISHOP CHARLES B. GALLOWAY.

The Board in charge of the Conference Endowment Fund and the Joint Board of Finance of the Mississippi Conference have joined hands to raise $25,000 as a memorial to the late Bishop Charles B. Galloway. The movement has been we are sure, when an appeal is made for our own people, and especially for the men who have every claim upon us which can be established by SERVICE, BY LABOR, AND BY LOVE, we shall get a hearty response.

inaugurated by the Joint Board of Finance preparing a program and contribution envelopes to be used on the first Sunday in November in memory of Mississippi's great Bishop. They ask the Sunday schools of the Conference this year for $1500 as the beginning of this fund.

The Mississippi Conference Sunday schools contributed a goodly sum for the purpose of endowing a chair in the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University. Then an appeal was made to our Sunday schools by a number of Methodist laymen and preachers in the interest of the Southern Assembly near Waynesville, N. C. This appeal for an institution which, though fostering the work of Methodism, is private property, was met by our Sunday schools with a liberal response. Now,

REV. THOMAS J. UPTON.

Rev. Thomas J. Upton, a superannuated member of the Louisiana Annual Conference, died at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. W. H. Burnett, at Minden, La., on Oct. 17, 1912. His funeral was conducted the following day by the writer, assisted by the Baptist and Presbyterian pastors at Minden. The remains were taken to Gibsland, where Rev. R. W. Tucker, Presiding Elder of the Ruston District, officiated at the interment.

Brother Upton was born in Marion County, Ga., in 1830. He joined the Church when very young; was called to preach the gospel and began active service in 1856; and served as an itinerant preacher until he was given the superannuate re-

An endowment of $25,000 would not only honor the greatest Southerner of the nineteenth century, but would help our superannuate preachers, bringing up the endowment fund almost to $50,000. Upon that six superannuate preachers could be kept at $500 annually. There are now fifteen superannuate preachers who receive from the Board $275 annually. The time is now upon us when we ought to make the retiring assessment $500. We can do it if we will. Now, let us all say WE WILL DO IT, FOR WE CAN!

In conclusion, we appeal for a great collection on the first Sunday in November.

Yours Faithfully,

J. M. MORSE, President.

lation at the Annual Conference held in Shreveport in 1893.

In 1849 he was married to Miss Elizabeth Wheelless, who preceded him to the grave a number of years. Since the death of his wife, Brother Upton had lived with his sons and daughters. He was visiting his daughter, Mrs. Burnett, when stricken with his last illness. Numbers of his friends called to see him, and all beheld a rare exhibition of unshaken faith in God. The presence of a friend seemed to rouse him from stupor, and he would begin at once to quote his favorite hymns, sometimes to sing them, and to pray and to testify to the goodness of God. He loved the members of the Louisiana Conference, and in his old age was often touched to tears by the evidences of their love and reverence for him.

LITTLE BROWN HANDS.

By Mary H. Krout.

(The following poem, written by Mary H. Krout, of Crawfordsville, Ind., a few years ago, when its author was in her thirteenth year, is one of the most beautiful and expressive ever penned in the English language, and should find a place throughout the length and breadth of America wherever the dignity of labor is recognized).

They drive home the cows from the pasture,
Up through the long, shady lane,
Where the quail whistles loud in the wheat field,
That is yellow with ripening grain.
They find, in the thick waving grasses,
Where the scarlet-lipped strawberry grows,
They gather the earliest snowdrops,
And the first crimson buds of the rose.

They toss the hay in the meadow,
They gather the elder bloom white,
They find where the dusky grapes purple
In the soft tinted October light.
They know where the apples hang ripest,
And are sweeter than Italy's wines;
They know where the fruit hangs the thickest,
On the long, thorny blackberry vines.

They gather the delicate seaweeds,
And build tiny castles of sand;
They pick up the beautiful sea shells—
Fairy barks that have drifted to land.
They wave from the tall, rocking tree tops,
Where the Oriole's hammock nest swings,
And at night time are folded in slumber
By a song that a fond mother sings.

Those who toil bravely are strongest;
The humble and poor become great:
And from those brown-handed children
Shall grow mighty rulers of state.
The pen of the author and statesman,
The noble and wise of the land,
The sword and chisel and palette
Shall be held in the little brown hand.

FRED'S WAY.

"Fred," said Aunt Julia, "how is it that you never quarrel, as many other boys do?"

"O, I don't talk back," answered Fred. "When a boy says a sharp thing to me I just keep still."

It is always a good plan to keep still when somebody else is angry. Next time anyone gets angry with you just try this plan. Many boys and girls are constantly getting into trouble because they use their tongues too freely.—Olive Plants.

THE STONE IN THE ROAD.

A long time ago there lived a king who took great delight in teaching his people good habits. "Bad luck comes only to the lazy and the careless," said he, "but to the busy workers God gives the good things of life."

One night he put a large stone in the middle of the road near his palace, and then watched to see what the people who passed that way would do.

Early in the morning a sturdy old farmer named Peter came along, with his heavy ox cart loaded with corn.

"Oh, these lazy people!" he cried, driving his oxen to one side of the road. "Here is this big stone right in the middle of the road, and nobody will take the trouble to move it."

And he went on his way, scolding about the laziness of other people, but never thinking of touching the stone himself.

Then came a young soldier, singing a merry song as he walked along. A gay feather was stuck in his hat, and a big sword hung at his side; and he was fond of telling great stories of what he had done in the war. He held his head so high that he did not see the stone, but stumbled over it, and fell flat into the dust.

This put an end to his merry song; and, as he rose to his feet, he began to storm at the country people.

"Silly drones!" he said, "to have no more sense than to leave a stone like that in the middle of the road!"

Then he passed on, but he did not sing any more.

An hour later there came down the road six merchants, with their goods on pack horses, going to the fair that was to be held near the village. When they reached the stone the road was so narrow that they could hardly drive their horses between it and the wall.

"Did any one ever see the like?" they said. "There is that big stone in the road, and not a man in all the country but that is too lazy to move it!"

And so the stone lay there for three weeks; it was in everybody's way, and yet everybody left it for somebody else to move.

Then the king sent word to all his people to meet together on a certain day near his palace, as he had something to tell them.

The day came, and a great crowd of men and women gathered in the road. Old Peter, the farmer, was there; and so were the merchants and the young soldier.

"I hope that the king will not find out what a lazy set of people he has around him," said Peter.

And then the sound of a horn was heard, and the king was seen coming toward them. He rode up to the stone, got down from his horse and said:

"My friends, it was I who put this stone there, three weeks ago. It has been seen by every one of you; and yet every one has left it just where it was, and scolded his neighbor for not moving it out of the way."

Then he stooped down and rolled the stone over. Underneath the stone was a round, hollow place, in which was a small iron box. The king held up the box so that all the people might see what was written on a piece of paper fastened to it.

These were the words:

"For him who lifts the stone."

He opened the box, turned it upside down, and out of it fell a beautiful gold ring and twenty bright gold coins.

Then everyone wished he had only thought of moving the stone instead of going around it and finding fault with his neighbor.

There are many people still who lose prizes because they think it easier to find fault than to do the work which lies before them. Such people do not usually blame themselves, but think it is all on account of bad luck and hard times.—

GIPSY SMITH'S HOME-COMING.

On the last evangelistic trip from England, Gipsy Smith traveled 25,000 miles in five months and a half, preaching 400 times, to a million and a quarter people, of whom between 30,000 and 40,000 declared their desire and purpose to live a Christian life. When they gave him a reception in Whitefield's Tabernacle in London on his return, thousands welcomed him. One of the English papers quotes him as saying:

"Starry crown? I do not think much of the starry crown and the golden streets. I am too busy. Let me have my Master's smile—and my mother. You can put me back again into my old gypsy tent then, and it will be heaven to me." A simple thing to say, but with the Gipsy's magic it brought down an intense silence. Then, as he proceeded, people cleared their throats and looked up again.

"Few can tell a story with a smile in it like Gipsy Smith. Probably no one can tell a story with a tremor in it quite so well. Those he told on Friday were of an April kind—with tears in them, and a smile shining out at the end. But here the medium is printer's ink, by which they lose in the repeating. Yet, though stripped of the teller's skill, it is still a good story to set down, of the man who, in the face of ten thousand people, and while the evangelist was still preaching, walked over to another man, handed him twenty dollars, and said: 'I stole this from you, and more. I want to do right. This is all I have now, but I will pay back the rest.' A wife, the husband she had divorced, and the woman who was the cause of the divorce, unknown to each other, went into the inquiry room at one of his services. They received forgiveness, and gave it; they were reconciled, to God and to each other.

"I have brought back with me two letters, one to the British government, the other to an insurance company. They are from a man who, ten years ago, cut out his eye in order to obtain two hundred pounds from his employers, the government, and he got it. Then he set fire to his house, and from the insurance company drew two hundred pounds. He went off to America, leaving his wife behind, and there he became a crook and a jailbird. Now his wife, and the child he has never seen, have gone out to him. He has written those two letters to offer, either to return for punishment or to pay back every cent.' And there was another story, of a society lady, anxious to live a Christian life, yet fettered by her social habits. At last she let the right prevail. It was on the eve of a dinner party, to which she had invited friends to play bridge. They had dinner, and the bridge party became a prayer meeting.

"Thus Gipsy Smith has been about his business—'Jesus Christ and him crucified.' Did commerce, or war, or travel, or invention, ever yield greater romance?"—New York Christian Advocate.

Editorial.

Elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate reference is made to an English bank-note which, when placed in a graphophone, is said to speak. Manifestly, this is a case where "money talks."

A Baptist contemporary published a few days since an article under the caption, "Predestination in a Storm." We should think that would be a good time to have it—provided it were of the right sort.

The most beautiful of all flowers are those which grow in the heart-garden—faith, peace, charity, hope, patience, kindness, and love. But they are not wild flowers, springing up and coming to maturity of their own accord. It requires assiduous cultivation to produce them.

Repress and hide out of sight your sorrows; but talk of your joys and share them with those about you. The hurdened millions of mankind need to have sunshine scattered among them, but not gloom. Men with radiant hearts and shining faces are among the world's greatest benefactors.

We have hurled many an editorial shaft that seemed to miss the mark and to accomplish nothing. But our recent paragraph of pleasantry in which we referred to Dr. Palmore's inclusion of New Orleans in a group of small municipalities which he thinks will become important in consequence of the construction of the Panama Canal, has yielded rich results. It evoked from our gifted confrere a charming editorial in the Saint Louis Christian Advocate, in which he tells of a delightful visit to the Crescent City many years ago. We may let our readers see it next week. Brother Palmore is all right, even though he is a bit awry on the woman question—due, no doubt, to the spirit of gallantry which he has long cultivated. Dr. J. D. Barbee, whose theological learning was beyond question, was wont to insist that it was out of pure chivalry and love that Adam involved himself in the transaction that took him and Eve out of Paradise. Undoubtedly, such a feeling can wonderfully becloud a judgment that in other matters is usually clear.

QUADRENNIAL PUBLISHING BOARDS NEEDED.

In order for an Annual Conference Committee or Board to become an effective working agency it must continue for a longer time than a single year. It was formerly the law to appoint the Joint Board of Finance annually, and usually it was announced at the close of the Conference session, so that no organization was effected until the next meeting of the Conference. Thus no definite plan of work could be formulated and carried out, because the membership of the Board was almost certain to be changed at an early date. The continuity of administration necessary for the accomplishment of anything substantial and permanent was lacking; so about all the body could do was to receive and disburse the moneys which the pastors had raised during the year and levy assessments for the year succeeding. Discerning this weakness, the General Conference made these Boards quadrennial in their tenure, and since that time they have made their influence appreciably felt in behalf of the movement to provide better for our superannuated preachers and in the interest of the other important causes committed to their management.

It seems to us that there is at least one other Conference Committee now appointed annually that might be transformed into a quadrennial Board to great advantage—that on Publishing Interests. Certainly we have no more important work than this, and as this Committee is at present constituted, it cannot take hold of it and handle it intelligently and vigorously. If organized for four years of service, could not such a Board do much toward the creation and circulation of a tract literature and our books and periodicals in general? Could it not, in co-operation with our Publishing Agents at Nashville, assist in instituting and maintaining an effective colportage system, if none exists in the Conference with which it is connected? And could it not render a needed and helpful service in studying the problem of the church paper and in aiding in getting it into the homes of our people? It appears to us that there is here a field of work that we can not afford to neglect longer. Would it not be a good idea for some one of our Annual Conferences to lead the way in this matter and set the others an example?

There is no doubt that we need to wake up to the fact that the people about us are being poisoned with the vicious literature that is flooding the country and that something imperatively needs to be done to counteract this blighting influence. The Methodist Episcopal Church is now offering a number of its best papers—The Pittsburgh, The Western, The Central, and the Northwestern—at $1 a year. She is standing behind them—making good any deficits that may accrue. Unlike our Sister Church, we require our Conference organs to serve free all our other interests, and leave them to scuffle as best they can for an existence. Such a policy cannot be continued much longer. It is high time that our Annual Conferences were seriously concerning themselves about this question. The loss that we have already sustained as a result of our inattention to it is very great. If Southern Methodism is to achieve what she ought for the Master in the coming years, she must have a periodical literature second to none, and as cheap as any offered to the public. If we trail at this point, we are apt to trail at all others.

END OF THE TURKISH-ITALIAN WAR.

After a war lasting slightly more than a year, representatives of Italy and Turkey have signed a peace treaty which has terminated the contest. The negotiations were conducted at the Hotel Beau Rivage at Ouchy, Switzerland, and were of comparatively brief duration. Doubtless the Balkan situation had much to do with effecting so promptly a settlement of the points at issue between the two hostile countries. The new instrument of agreement will be known as the Treaty of Lausanne. As briefly stated in The Outlook, the peace terms accepted are as follows:

1. The absolute sovereignty of Italy in Libya, but without formal recognition thereof by Italy by Turkey.
2. A continuance of the free exercise of religious authority throughout Libya by the Khalif (the Sultan of Turkey).
3. The withdrawal by Turkey of her regular troops from Libya.
4. The payment to Turkey of an indemnity equal to Libya's contribution to the Turkish treasury.
5. The restoration of the captured Sporades—the Aegean Islands—to Turkey, but only with guarantees from Turkey for the well-being of the Christian populations there.
6. An agreement that no indemnity shall be paid by either side toward the cost of the war.

7. The re-establishment of the former diplomatic and commercial relations.

Italy's acquisition of Tripoli, hereafter to be known by its former Roman name of Libya, is the most significant result of the conflict. It is a country whose area is about five-hundred thousand square miles, and which has a coast line of approximately eleven hundred miles and some fairly good harbors. It is close to other Italian possessions in and near the Mediterranean Sea, and will give Italy a naval base such as she has long coveted, perhaps making her in these waters a power equal to France. This transfer of territory will also make for the extension of civilization, since it is now under the sway of an enlightened nation. The more the dominions of the "unspeakable Turk" are circumscribed the better it is for the cause of humanity and the happiness of mankind.

INCONSISTENT ACTION.

The Alabama Christian Advocate quotes the Central Christian Advocate, of Kansas City, as follows: "The last General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church passed a resolution declaring that under no circumstances are women to be licensed to preach?" Wherefore such a restriction? Has it not been the boast of the Northern Methodists that in their denomination there is no discrimination on account of sex? Let the champions of woman's rights rally and renew the fight. Surely they will not tamely submit to any such proscription as this. Cannot a woman expound the Word, or fill a station, or travel a circuit as well as a man? According to the theory of those who hold the view that neither the State nor the Church should make any distinction between the two sexes in its legislation and government, this enactment is clearly without the slightest semblance of justification. All the rights of laymen, which some of the brethren insist that the sisters must have, logically include an open door to the pulpit, to connectional position, and to the Bishopric. Let those who enter into this league with them not seek to wriggle away from it and defraud them in the end of an important part of what it legitimately involves. You should stand squarely by your agreement, gentlemen.

REV. O. W. BRADLEY.

We give our readers this week our monthly sermon, which is a most interesting and helpful message. Rev. O. W. Bradley, who furnished it, is the popular and much loved pastor of our church at Winona, Miss. He is a son of the Rev. Ralph and Mrs. Emma Walker Bradley (worthy itinerants in the Mississippi Conference), and was born at Benton, Yazoo County, Miss., on April 21, 1881. From 1899 to 1905—six years—Brother Bradley was a student at Millsaps College, where he won several prizes for oratory, and from which institution he was graduated. He attended Vanderbilt University for two years—1905 and 1906, and in the fall of the latter year joined the North Mississippi Conference. Before his assignment to his present field, he served with great acceptability at Hernando, Rosedale, and Holly Springs. Attractive in person, with a clear and well furnished mind, and unusual gifts as a public speaker, he invariably wins and holds the people and carries forward the work of the Church wherever he labors. Not the least of his admirable equipment for the itinerancy is his gifted helpmeet, who is a graduate of the University of Mississippi and an accomplished stenographer. She is at present the brilliant editress of the Woman's Missionary Bulletin of the North Mississippi Conference. Brother Bradley also has a brother who belongs to the same Conference that he does—Rev. T. M. Bradley, who is now stationed at Rosedale, Miss. North Mississippi Methodism has a right to expect much from this trio of capable young workers in the future.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. C. A. Battle, pastor of the Felicity Church of New Orleans, has been in Georgia for the past ten days visiting relatives.

Rev. Brisco Carter, the Alexandria District "presiding elder at large," spent Monday and Tuesday of this week in New Orleans.

The autumn days have come, but they need not to be "the saddest of the year." To the faithful toiler, the harvest season should be a joyous one.

The Meridian Male and Female Colleges, under the administration of Presidents M. A. and J. W. Beeson, are reported to be having prosperous sessions.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey, the ever-active Sunday school missionary of the Louisiana Conference, was a visitor at the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting last Monday.

President A. F. Watkins, of Millsaps College, preached at the First Presbyterian Church of Jackson, Miss., last Sunday, in the absence of the pastor, Dr. J. B. Hutton.

The press dispatches report that a great meeting is in progress at the Methodist Church in Bogalusa, La. Rev. L. I. McCain, the pastor, has with him Dr. A. C. Holder, of Shreveport.

Rev. A. H. Williams, of Shuqualak, Miss., writes: "In the Shuqualak notes which appeared in the Advocate last week it should have been 'sundry incidentals,' rather than 'Sunday,' etc., as printed."

Bishop E. D. Mouzon spent last Monday night and Tuesday in New Orleans. He was in fine health and spirits, and the brethren gave him a cordial greeting. He is a great favorite in the Crescent City.

Rev. D. Scarborough, who has been serving the Fernwood and South McComb charge, Mississippi Conference, left for his new appointment, Santa Ana, Cal., on Saturday, Oct. 26. A host of friends will follow him to his far-western home with their love and prayers.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, presiding elder of the Meridian District, will dedicate the Poplar Springs Methodist Church, Meridian, on the afternoon of November 3. This congregation enjoys the services of two efficient pastors—Rev. John Paul and Rev. R. S. Stewart.

Rev. W. F. McCrory, our enterprising pastor at Rocky Springs, Miss., continues to press the claims of the Advocate in his rounds, with good success. He is now laying himself out to wind up the year's work, and hopes to make a good showing at Hazlehurst in December.

Bishop James Atkins passed through New Orleans last Tuesday and stopped long enough to attend the luncheon given by the Methodist ministers of the city at the Monteleone Hotel in honor of Bishop E. D. Mouzon. He was en route home from Texas, where he had gone to meet episcopal engagements.

Rev. S. A. Brown, of Booneville, Miss., has again brought us under obligations to him for a number of subscriptions, sent in a few days since. The work is progressing favorably in his present delightful charge. Both as a preacher and pastor, Brother Brown has a habit of giving a good account of himself wherever he labors.

After an absence of about a year in Africa and South America, Bishop Lambuth has returned to the United States. He has already begun to talk publicly upon the subject of missions, and is reported to have thrilled the audiences that have been so fortunate as to hear him. Bishop Lambuth easily takes rank with the world's foremost missionaries.

Rev. T. B. Clifford, our pastor at Yazoo City, Miss., has lately been engaged in a meeting at that place, in which he has had the assistance of Dr. J. L. Weber, of Jackson, Tenn. This is Dr. Weber's second visit to this progressive municipality in the capacity of a revivalist. The results of these evangelistic services are not known to us at this writing.

Rev. L. E. Alford forwarded us four subscriptions from Sumrall, Miss., on October 21, for which he has our hearty thanks. Referring to his people, he says: "They are kind and thoughtful of the needs of the preacher and his family, both in sickness and in health." Brother Alford reports the arrival of a fine baby-girl at the parsonage on October 4.

How about the circulation of the Advocate in your charge? Is it finding its way into the homes of the people? If not, why not exhort some on the subject? A few well-spoken words, followed by a little personal work, might place it in a number of families. Mr. "Never-Try" was never known to accomplish much for the Conference organ or anything else.

A new inmate found her way into the parsonage at Wilson, La., on the morning of October 26, in the person of a baby daughter, born to Brother and Sister F. N. Sweeney. This is the eleventh child with which the Heavenly Father has blessed their home. We extend congratulations, and pray that a kindly Providence may watch over both the mother and the little one.

There have been 350 accessions to the Church since Conference as the result of revival meetings held in Louisiana by the Conference Evangelist, Rev. A. W. Turner. There have been many more professed conversions and much spiritual benefit to the churches where he has wrought, and the general opinion of those who have had his assistance is that he has done a fine year's work.

Rev. L. W. Cain, of Baldwin, Miss., who during the past year has been doing the work of an evangelist in his Conference (North Mississippi), will re-enter the pastorate this fall. Brother Cain has unusual gifts as a revivalist, and much success has crowned his efforts at holding meetings; but he loves the regular work and deems it wisest to take it up again. The charge that secures his services will be fortunate.

At the recent session of the Kentucky Conference, Dr. Charles F. Evans, who is well known in Louisiana and Mississippi, was continued in the supernumerary relation. It is probable that he will devote at least a part of his time to literary work and writing for current periodicals—a service for which he is most admirably fitted. We once heard the lamented Bishop Charles B. Galloway say that Dr. Evans had one of the choicest vocabularies of any one that he knew.

In a business note to our office, Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of Myrtle, Miss., adds: "Everything is going on well in this charge. I have received about 60 members into the Church; we have 'live-wire' Sunday schools; our Epworth Leagues are prospering, and we have found two young men for the itinerancy, both of whom give promise of making their mark some day. This is a loyal, appreciative, and kind people." Evidently, the Master's work is going forward under the leadership of this energetic young pastor.

In a personal note to the editor, Rev. T. W. Dye, of Como, Miss., states that Rev. J. B. Randolph, our pastor in that little city, who for so long has been seriously ill with typhoid fever, is now convalescing, and that the indications are that he will soon be quite himself again. This is, indeed, gratifying news. North Mississippi has no worthier young minister than Brother Randolph, and none who is more generally appreciated and loved. The Church can ill afford to spare such a worker as he is even temporarily from the white harvest field.

The New Albany (Miss.) Gazette of last week contained the following reference to a sermon preached in the city in which it is issued by our pastor, Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, on Sunday, October 27: "We wish to commend the Rev. Mr. Lipscomb for the sermon which he delivered at the Methodist Church last Sunday morning. It was worth hearing—interesting and forceful. We feel like taking off our hat to a minister who has the courage to preach what he thinks. When the pulpit leaves off generalizing and begins to discuss modern problems, the preachers will no longer address half-filled pews."

We are very frequently asked to carry a long obituary of some good man or woman free because of what they were to the Church. This we positively cannot do, much as we should like to oblige our friends. There are thousands of as good people in our patronizing territory as can be found anywhere, and if we were to adopt this rule, the Advocate from beginning to end would be little else than a memorial sheet. We cannot afford to be partial in dealing with the patrons of our paper. The negative side of the Golden Rule is, Do not ask for yourself any more than can be done for others whose claims are equal to yours.

Rev. P. H. Howse, of Hattiesburg, Miss., reports the death of Rev. J. O. Winburn, which occurred on September 24. He says: "He had been away from home about four weeks, and was near Bay Springs, in Jasper County, when the summons came to him. He had gone there to assist Rev. H. C. Norsworthy in a meeting, but, poor fellow, he was unable to preach. He died of ptomaine poisoning. He was a faithful local preacher, who was ever ready to assist his pastor in any way possible. How we miss him! May God bless the bereaved family!" We regret to hear of the decease of this faithful man, and we extend sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones left behind.

Rev. W. W. Hopper, the pastor, has just closed a very successful meeting at Woodville, Miss., in which he had the assistance of Rev. C. W. Crisler, of Vicksburg. There were a large number of conversions and 17 accessions to the Church by profession of faith. It was said to be the best meeting that has been held in Woodville for many years.

From Songdo, Korea, on September 13th, Mrs. W. B. Murrah sends us a post card which reads as follows: "Greetings from Songdo, where our Conference is being held, and where we have the finest mission plant in the East. The other side of this card shows a picture of one of them—Holston Institute. They are all of stone and beautiful." Most welcome is this message from across the seas. In company with a host of others, we have greatly missed Bishop and Mrs. Murrah since they left for the Orient, and information concerning them and their movements is to us of great interest. We pray that a kindly Providence may continue to watch over them, and when their mission in the East is fulfilled, bring them back to us speedily and in the best of health.

Rev. H. W. Bowman closed a very successful meeting at Amite, La., last Sunday, in which he was assisted by Conference Evangelist A. W. Turner. In speaking of the meeting while in New Orleans last Monday, Brother Turner said: "I arrived at Amite on Oct. 18, and found that Brother Bowman had started the meeting on the 13th and had done the preparatory work well. I had nothing to do but step right in and maintain the snap and vim that had characterized the meeting from the beginning. Brother Bowman has the Amite work well in hand. He has handled a delicate situation with great skill, and many of his people are hoping that he will return and complete his quadrennium." There were 35 accessions to the Church as a result of the meeting.

Rev. J. H. Rogers, who formerly was a member of the North Mississippi Conference, but who is now stationed at Boswell, Oklahoma, writes that he is closing the most successful year of his ministry. He recently conducted a tent meeting, in which he had the assistance of Rev. M. A. Cassidy, of Ada, and which resulted in 150 conversions and 98 accessions to the various churches, 61 of them connecting themselves with ours. Brother Rogers' two churches—Ada and Soper—have had 174 additions during the year, a gain of more than 100 per cent; and it is stated that the financial report will be more than double that of any preceding year. The many friends of Brother Rogers in Mississippi will be greatly pleased to learn that the work of the Church is so greatly prospering in his hands.

Sunday, November 3, has been named as Education Day in Mansfield, La., and the pastor, Rev. T. H. Morris, has arranged an excellent program for the occasion. At 11 a.m. Brother Morris will deliver a sermon on "Christian Education," and at the evening hour a number of brief addresses will be made, the general theme of which will be "Mansfield College." The following are some phases of the subjects that will be discussed: What has the College Meant to Mansfield—(1) Socially and Religiously, Mrs. W. A. Nabors, (2) Financially, Mr. W. P. Head; Has the Influence of the College Been Confined to Mansfield, Mrs. M. S. Scales; What Can We Do for the College Now, Mr. R. T. Moore; The Work of the College League, Mrs. George Wilson; The Future of the College, President R. E. Bobbitt, and Rev. Paul M. Brown, President of the Conference Board of Education. The night meeting will be presided over by Mr. D. G. Petty, President of the Mansfield Board of Trust; the offering taken during the day will be for the Educational Assessment of the Mansfield Church.

Mrs. T. M. Clark, of Verona, and Miss Louise Dunstan, of Winona, respectively secretaries of the Foreign and Home Departments of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, have announced the following schedule for the Fall Institutes and District Meetings soon to be held in their territory: "Columbus District, at Starkville, Nov. 4-5; Aberdeen District, Okolona, Nov. 6; Corinth District, New Albany, Nov. 8; Sardis District, Senatobia, Nov. 10-11; Holly Springs District, at Holly Springs, Nov. 12-13; Winona District, Eupora, Nov. 14-15; Durant District, Lexington, Nov. 16-17; Greenville District, Cleveland, Nov. 19-20. Miss Daves will represent the Council at Senatobia, Holly Springs, Eupora, Lexington, and Cleveland. At Starkville, Okolona, and New Albany, Miss Knapp, the deaconess lately appointed to Corinth, will be present. At all places one or more officers of the Conference will be in attendance. Auxiliaries are urged to send good delegations to their respective District Meetings. Matters of interest and importance will be discussed and difficult problems solved. These are opportunities that should not be missed."

WM. H. SCRUGGS was born Oct. 28, 1837, and died at the home of his nephew, Mr. A. Y. Sively, in Olive Branch, Miss., Sept. 1, 1912. Brother Scruggs professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and lived a consistent, Christian life to the last. He served four years in the Confederate Army, and a braver, truer soldier never wore the gray. Brother Scruggs was never married, and after the war he lived in the home of his sister, Mrs. M. E. Sively, until May, 1911, when upon the death of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. A. Y. Sively, he and his sister went into the home of her son, where Brother Scruggs died. He was stricken with paralysis in November, 1911, and was never able to be out any more. He was resigned and patient in all his affliction. He had another stroke the latter part of August, and it was then plain to him and his loved ones that the end was near. He was conscious to the end, and testified to the most gracious experiences of the Divine presence. He gently fell on sleep on the first day of September and his spirit went home to the reward of the faithful. To the sorrowing loved ones I would say, "Trust in the Lord and wait patiently for him, and he shall give thee the desires of thy heart," by bringing you all to a blessed reunion "in the land that is fairer than day."

R. W. EVANS.

LITTLE ELANOR MONTGOMERY died Sept. 24, 1912, at 5 o'clock p. m.

"In the cold, moist earth we laid her, when the forest cast the leaf, And we wept that one so lovely should have a life so brief: Yet not unmeet it was that one like that young friend of ours, So gentle and so beautiful should perish with the flowers."

Ah, surely 'twas not unmeet that with the summer flowers should go one of God's pure flowerets—wafted by the angel's vesper song at the close of seven short summers into the beautiful garden of Paradise, there to shed the fragrance of the days that were to be.

In the quiet autumn evening, as we sat without the chamber that held the flower-covered bier in which lay the little dreamless sleeper, and listened to the blending of the soft, sad voices into melody that lifted our hearts to spheres celestial, we could but fancy that we felt the invisible Seraph's touch upon our tear-stained eyes and heard him sympathetically whisper: "Weep not! My Lord hath need of these flowerets gay; dear tokens of the earth are they, where he was once a child."

Bid us not to weep for we loved Elanor. She was a bright, beautiful child, possessing a quiet, winning way, and now we recall her sweet features, radiant with childish joy and happiness, and look into her innocent, blue eyes that sparkled with a light not of earth; see the beautiful smile—type of heaven it was—that played over her rosy cheeks. We cannot but wonder why we did not know that "she was too pure for earth."

Elanor, from earliest childhood, loved the things that pertained to the glory of God. From the time that her little feet could toddle unattended and her little tongue lip the name of Jesus, she was found in her class at the Methodist Sunday school until a few weeks prior to her death. She loved her Sunday school and loved to be there on time. Her vacant seat touches us most deeply, but our tears are restrained with the comforting thought that "she hath gone unto that school, where she no longer needs our poor protection, and Christ himself doth rule." Tenderly we'll cherish her memory and be happy in the assurance that the little voice hath joined the sweeter melodies of heaven and the little feet patter its golden streets. No, ah, no; 'twill not be for thy little heart to know temptation, or sin's pollution; nor thy little eyes to be wet with sorrow's tears; nor thy little brain to be weary with labor or faint with pain; nor thy little feet to press the shadowed paths which future years may have cast. Elanor leaves a devoted father, step-mother, baby sister, Lucerne, a grandmother and grandfather, with other dear relatives, who have our deepest sympathy. May the bitter tears which flow because of the little vacant rocker, or the dollie left carelessly, be brushed aside as you look across into the beautiful "heavenly harbor" in which she is safely anchored with dear mother and sister, Christine, who set sail two years ago. With them she will watch over the waves for your coming, where you shall "Not as a child again behold her;

But a fair maiden in her Father's mansion,
Clothed with celestial grace,
And beautiful with all the soul's expansion Shall you behold her face."

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dicey Busby, nee Lawrence, was born near Charleston, South Carolina, November 26, 1833, and died, after a long and painful illness, in Cold Water, Miss., August 27, 1912.

These dates of birth and death mark the opening and closing of the earth life of one of the gentlest, tenderest, choicest spirits that ever adorned and beautified the walks of home and social life—a soul indeed, so tender and loving in its nature that heaven designed it, as it seems an object lesson sent to earth, to show us how Christly humanity can be made. What a tragedy of life is it to lose our earthly image of the heavenly, and behold, with tear-dimmed eyes, the broken arcs and separated segments of life's circle! The going away of our best, our dearest love, our mother, breaks our hearts, and without her, we mourn life's incompleteness. But this is our weakness. Our earth-bound vision sweeps a limited horizon, a horizon limited to the point of view, where earth and sky meet. The finite view has no range along the infinite heights. What a vision of that perfect day, with its glories so bright, must have greeted the dying saint as her latest sun was sinking low! She dwelt on life in its fullness and requested each of the loved ones to meet her in the home where no sorrow, no pain, no death, can enter to disturb the joy and peace of the eternal years.

Mother Busby's home life was beautiful. She fitted into the framework of the ideal woman, whose portrait is so beautifully drawn by the pen of inspiration in the Thirty-first chapter of Proverbs. The 26th verse to the close should be her epitaph. She was the mother of ten children; nine are living to bless her memory—one died in early girlhood. God gave her to bless and be a blessing to the sad and troubled hearts of earth's children. The orphan's cry and the widowed life of want, met with loving sympathy and help in her. Earth is poorer today—our loss in great. Heaven is richer, and her gain is infinite. After 79 years of battle and final victory, our little mother sleeps well in the grave by the side of her noble husband, who for many years had been expecting her home. May the home circle, some sweet day, be complete! Mother, we'll meet you.

HER CHILDREN.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, on August 20, 1912, our beloved friend and companion, Claude Arthur Comeaux, passed from this life to his home, the Beautiful City Beyond, therefore he it resolved:

(1.) That, though we are grieved by the loss of one so dear to us, we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father.

(2.) That in the loss of this young Christian our League Chapter, the Sunday school and the whole Church have lost one who was ever ready and willing to do his duty, never mindful of himself, but ever thoughtful of others.

(3.) That we shall miss his interest and willing help in all our plans, but rejoice in having known one who through his many ways and Christian character had endeared himself to all who knew him.

(4.) That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family and direct them to the All-Wise Father, who hath the power to heal the broken-hearted and "who doeth all things well."

(4.) That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, a copy to the Epworth Era, and a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that the Secretary of the League be instructed to place a copy on the minutes of the Chapter.

Signed by: Geo. P. White, Pastor; O. H. Cline, superintendent of S. S.; A. S. Paine, leader of Y. M. B. C.; Georgia White, first vice-president of the League.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, it has pleased God to take from our midst one of our beloved members, Mrs. Victoria E. Hilliard, whose life before us was an inspiration, and of whose Christian character much could be said; therefore, be it resolved:

(1.) That we, the members of the Woman's Home Mission Society of Monticello, Miss., mourn the loss of such a Christian character and deeply sympathize with the bereaved ones.

(2.) That we pray that the God of all love and mercy may grant the comfort of his love and grace to all upon whom the shadow of this great sorrow has fallen.

(3.) That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this society and that copies be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and to the town paper for publication.

Signed by: Mrs. R. L. Bedwell, Mrs. H. E. Carter, Mrs. W. W. Williams, Mrs. C. E. Watts, Miss Fannie Larkin, Committee.

IN MEMORY OF W. R. BROOM.

(Adopted on October 19, 1912, by the fourth quarterly conference of the Ebenezer Mission, Durant District, North Mississippi Conference).

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst, Brother W. R. Broom, a consecrated Christian man, who for a number of years was a steward of the Liberty Chapel Church, and who was our worthy recording steward at the time of his decease, be it resolved:

(1.) That while we bow in submission to Him who doeth all things well, we feel keenly the loss of this faithful brother; that the Church has lost one of its most useful and consecrated members, the State an honored and loyal citizen, and his family a devoted and loving husband and father.

(2.) That we extend to his loved ones our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of sad bereavement, and point them to Him who is able to sustain them, assuring them that we shall remember them in our prayers.

(3.) That these resolutions be spread upon the Quarterly Conference Record; that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, and also one sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Tidings From the Field

Harmony Chapel, Lisbon (La.) Charge

Dear Brother Meek: If you will allow me a little space in the Advocate I will tell what the Harmony Chapel Sunday school did for the Louisiana Orphan's Home on October 12. Early Saturday morning men, women and children, together with our beloved pastor, Rev. J. B. Williams, went out into the cotton field, and when the sun sank behind the western hills we had earned $22.85—a nice sum for a school of about 45 regular pupils.... Brother Williams is winding up his fourth year on this charge and we certainly do hate for him to leave us, but such are the ways of Methodists. The place that gets him will be greatly blessed, for he is a man after God's own heart and a preacher that is hard to surpass. This is the second quadrennium that he has served this charge within the last twelve years. May the blessings of heaven go with him.—A Layman.

Homewood, Miss.

I have just closed out my round of revival meetings for the summer, and it was a continual feast of good things from the singing of the opening song till the last amen was pronounced. It ought to be a great inspiration to any preacher to see the Lord manifest his great power in gloriously saving his people from all sin, and to hear the shouts of the saints who are living shouting lives every day in the year. It is truly glorious. And yet, it is just like our Lord to do such things. Our last meeting was held at Homewood, where Brother I. L. Peebles did the preaching, which is evidence that it was well and effectively done. Brother Peebles is, without doubt, one of the ablest doctrinal preachers in our connection. While all of his sermons were good, two or three of them are worthy of special mention. His sermon on the General Judgment is a soul-stirring masterpiece, especially so when the gas lights go out, as ours did, just at a time which made it doubly impressive. It made us all feel like the time was actually upon us, and when the call for penitents was made it looked like the whole audience was moving forward. His sermons on Water Baptism and on Falling from Grace made impressions in this community that will never be forgotten. Brother Peebles left us all feeling glad that we are Methodists and the children of a King. To God be all the glory! Amen. W. W. Graves, P. C.

Baker, La.

At Deerford and Baker I held my own meetings. At the former place we had quite a revival; at the latter we had a good spiritual meeting. At Bethel I was assisted by Rev. H. C. Murphy, of Tickfaw. He did good preaching, though he was very unwell. We had a good meeting just the same. I assisted Rev. S. L. Riggs in a revival meeting at Star Hill, embracing the second Sunday in this month; but on account of the bad weather and a great deal of sickness, we were unable to do much. We closed out on Thursday night and I reached home early Friday morning and began to get ready for my fourth quarterly conference, which was to meet the next day at Blackwater. Brother Miller came up and spent Friday night with us and we left Saturday morning for Blackwater, getting there just a little late; however, not too late for Brother Miller to preach a great sermon. After the sermon, which all enjoyed, the ladies spread a most bountiful dinner, which was fine in every sense of the word; we have many good cooks on the Baker charge. After dinner we held the quarterly conference, which was harmonious and pleasant. The finances are behind, but I believe the assessment for the pastor and presiding elder will be paid if a proper effort is made. The stewards, assisted by a band of good women, are at work to raise it. Saturday night Brother Miller preached another splendid sermon, and another one on Sunday at 11 a. m., after which we had the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. This is Brother Miller's fourth year as presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District and he is loved and esteemed by all in this charge. He has wrought well and the people are sorry to see him leave. That the Lord may bless him is the prayer of all.—S. D. Howard.

Waynesboro Circuit, Miss. Conf.

I began my meeting at Fedora on Friday evening, Aug. 9. I did my own preaching the first two days. Brother S. N. Young, of the Bucatunna charge, then came and assisted me from Sunday until the following Thursday. He did some excellent preaching. We had ten accessions to the Church by vows. Both the Methodists and Baptists say that this series of meetings was a spiritual uplift to the entire community. At Clara, on Aug. 16, I joined Brother C. W. Walley, the Methodist Protestant pastor at that place, in a union revival meeting. There was a fine interest manifested from the first service to the closing one on Thursday evening, August 22. There were several conversions, and we had fifteen accessions to the Church—three for the M. E. Church, South, and twelve for the Methodist Protestant Church. (The M. P. Church is very strong in this section.) Brother Walley and I did our own preaching. We had the best meeting that I have been in in recent years.... From Clara I went to Pleasant Grove, on Saturday morning, August 25. Dr. B. F. Jones, of Shubuta, Miss., assisted me in this meeting. He did all of the preaching for us. All who know Brother Jones know that he is fine help in a meeting. His sermons from day to day were orthodox, clear, and forceful; I found him to be a friend of young preachers. May he be spared many days to preach the gospel of Jesus. We had five accessions to the Church by vows, and baptized one infant. My wife and I went out to Frost Bridge on Monday, Sept. 2, to attend the Holiness Camp Meeting. The preaching was done by a Kentuckian, Will J. Harney. He did not leave a stone unturned. I learned to love Harney, for I found him to be a faithful dispenser of the Word of God, and Methodist in all of his discourses. There were a number who were converted and sanctified in this camp meeting. The camp meeting closed out on Sunday, September 8, with a shout of victory.... I then went to Winchester on Thursday evening, September 12, to begin my revival meeting there. I did most of the preaching. Brother Young came up from Bucatunna, Miss., and preached three soul-stirring sermons. Sickness in his home prevented his being with us throughout the entire meeting, but in spite of the hindrances we had a good meeting. I am proud to say that things are moving along smoothly with us on the Waynesboro Circuit. My people are cheerful and I am happy.—Hillary Westbrook, Pastor.

AN ARTICLE OF VALUE FREE.

Readers of this paper who are troubled with burns, bruises, boils, carbuncles, old sores, ulcers, feline, poisonous bites or from skin diseases of any nature, will welcome the following news. Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 806 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., manufacturers of the celebrated Gray's Ointment, will be pleased to send a free sample of this preparation to anyone who will write, in order that those suffering may test personally and without cost the great value of the ointment in relieving such troubles. Mr. G. S. Byrd of Williamsburg, Ky., says this of Gray's Ointment: "My wife suffered for more than three years with chronic sores on her lower limbs. She tried a number of doctors without benefit. One advised scraping the bone as the only cure. We purchased and used one box of Gray's Ointment and the one box cured the sores entirely." This is strong evidence, but more convincing proof is an actual trial, so send for free sample. Regular size 25c at druggists or by mail from the above company.

The Sunday School.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney writes that his work is making great progress. It could not be otherwise with such a pastor to lead, and with Mr. Carlton as superintendent.

Miss Elie Willingham, as well as all of Superintendent Cooper's fine and progressive teachers, is arranging for a Rally Day soon; and it will be a good one, for Eupora stands high in Sunday-school progress.

The presiding elder, Rev. N. G. Augustus, is busy along all lines of Sunday school work, and his interest and enthusiasm are fruitful of good results. Lists of new superintendents assist materially in preparing Year Books and in helping to get information to needy fields.

Mrs. R. K. Wier, Starkville, has a fine class of Cadets, now in its second year. The teacher is much interested and the class is doing good work. Mrs. Helen Porter Woodward has moved back to Starkville and taken her fine class of boys, sixteen in number, ranging in years from 16 to 20, and great things will be expected from them.

News comes from Sidon that Rev. O. P. Armour has organized a Men's Class with 20 members, and none of these had been in attendance upon the Sunday school before. Sidon numbers only 175 white people, and that is a fine per cent to secure for Christian service. This same school is planning to introduce the Graded Lessons and for the organization of a Mothers' Class and a Cradle Roll.

There were 27,000 men in an Adult Bible Class parade in Philadelphia last week, where a Sunday School Silver Jubilee was being held. Mr. Heinz and Mr. Wanamaker went shoulder to shoulder with day laborers, and all the world caught a vision of the new brotherhood patriotism which is to re-make the world after the pattern of Christian standards. Mr. R. M. Weaver, of the Young Men's Bible Class in Corinth, was present and his Methodist Class, way down South, was very much pleased to be so well represented in this great Sunday-school council and forward-flung battle line.

Hon. J. G. McGowan, who is chairman of the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference, has, at Water Valley, a really great Sunday school, finely organized and equipped with good music, an "on-time" emphasis, and a corps of fine teachers who give him hearty co-operation. His Rally Day service, on October 13, was peculiarly interesting. The church was beautifully decorated; the program consisted of music and the class songs were appropriate; and the attendance was so large that when the school opened it looked like a congregation ready for service. Mr. McGowan and his pastor, Rev. T. H. Dorsey, are to be heartily congratulated on this Sunday school. It gave the Field Secretary much pleasure to be one at the feast of good things.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

As a supplemental work in the junior and intermediate grades, the period when a child's memory is at its height of efficiency, the memorizing of our great hymns and the choicest psalms should be a part of every Sunday school teacher's assigned lesson. What treasures are here stored up for those pupils who are set to work to acquire them! And if not done in the period when the memory is best, the task will never be accomplished at all, or at the cost of many times the labor that would have been required at the opportune time. Many a child upon reaching maturity realizes his poverty in the memory of sacred poetry, and may often justly lay the blame on careless or incompetent Sunday school teachers.

The Lake Arthur Woman's class, taught by Mrs. R. P. Howell, and the Seth Ward class of young women, taught by Mrs. Buchanan, are using the duplex envelope in raising their finances, and their aim is to give as much aid to Miss Iles in her work as a deaconess at Houma as they spend in maintaining their own work. The object is worthy of the efforts of these classes and the method is Scriptural. This certainly beats the oyster stew and cheap entertainment way of financing the Lord's work. Miss Iles is one of the eleven deaconesses consecrated at the meeting of our Woman's Missionary Council this year by Bishop Hendrix, and is a native of Dry Creek, La. We are glad that she has been assigned work in her own State, and that our Lake Arthur classes are interesting themselves in her support.

A suggestion for the missionary program of the Sunday school is to tell the story of a foreign child's life from its birth until it is grown and led to Christ by a missionary. This may cover several months and be so divided as to make a complete biographical study of a real or an imaginary person, following him until he is a Christian and himself a missionary. Such a character as Prince Yun at this time would be fine for the purpose. At the conclusion of the part of the story told each Sunday, have the school make its missionary contribution by classes, and keep each class contribution in closed boxes, arranged for the purpose, until the whole series is given. Make the last day a missionary rally day and have it largely advertised. At the proper time have a black board placed in front of the school, and as the boxes are opened credit each class with its gifts, and thus show the proportionate liberality of each class. Have a sand table to represent America and a picture of palm trees or some other emblem off at another place to represent the foreign country to which the gifts are to be sent. Have a missionary ship on the home side (on the sand table) so arranged with a plate in the center as to make the money rattle when poured in. When it is all counted up pour into the ship in a lump, and have a suitable song or prayer as it starts on its seaward voyage to the foreign shore designated.

As an example of how necessary teaching is to the work of evangelizing, some years ago we pitched a tent in a Roman Catholic town, secured some good singers to furnish music, and succeeded in getting a fine hearing from the untaught people of the community. The evangelist who did the preaching had been urged not to come unless he could adapt his preaching to the peculiar needs of the people who knew nothing of the Bible, and but little of our Protestant religion. The brother being a successful evangelist, with a record of great meetings, "laughed us to scorn" at the idea of telling him how to conduct a revival meeting, and began to preach his regular series of sermons that had been preached in the leading churches over Mississippi, Alabama, and other Southern States, where there were Sunday schools, home altars, and gospel preaching. Some of the misfits in this Catholic community were humorous, some greivous, some ridiculous. When Paul preached repentance and faith it was to people who had been taught the nature of sin and the sacrifices that typified the Messiah that was to die for the sins of the world; and before the preacher can appeal to the people to accept the Savior they must know who he is, what he proposes to do for them, and their need of him. The evangelist's message is an appeal to them to act on the knowledge that they have of their need of salvation, and it is the teacher's work to aid the pupil in gaining this knowledge. On the day of Pentecost it was three thousand taught Jews that believed Peter's evangelistic message. This was also the case with Paul in the homes and synagogues of the Jews who knew the Law and the Prophets. If he preached to the Gentiles such as Cornelius, they themselves knew the law and of the promised Messiah from associations with the Jews. Among people, like Timothy, who from their youth up "have known the holy Scriptures which are able to make wise unto salvation," the ingathering is an easy matter; but if we go into a Catholic or heathen community and try to evangelize without preaching, failure is inevitable. Here the Sunday school has an indispensable place in our work of saving the world.

SEVENTH STREET, MERIDIAN, MISS.

We have had a steady pull at Seventh Avenue (Meridian) all the year, but we have had (and are having) evidences of God's presence and power. We have had a few bright conversions, among them being that of a noted infidel, who had been a close student of Voltaire, Tom Paine, Bob Ingersoll, and "Pastor Russell" for at least thirty years prior to his conversion; but, by seeing God, as he called it, in the lives of a few Christians of our little church as they prayed for him, helped him in a temporal way, testified to God's saving and keeping power in their own lives, insisted on him seeking God by revelation, and not by reasoning—all this, he said, led him to know there was a God, and that he could save. Hence, he called upon God in penitence and godly sorrow, and was heard and saved, and united with the Church amid tears of joy among the saved and tears of conviction among the unsaved..... The Sunday school and Epworth Leagues have accomplished good during the year. They are officered by a true band of Christian workers, who go about their church work in earnestness and sincerity. No pastor has for his helpers, as a whole, more sincere and earnest workers than I have here..... On July 1-6, Rev. C. M. Crossley, of Southside, Meridian, helped us in a meeting. We were handicapped on account of too much rain, and the meeting was too short. However, good was accomplished in the strengthening of the true believers. Brother Crossley is a strong and convincing preacher..... From July 7 to Sept. 18, I was engaged in an evangelistic campaign, helping in twelve meetings, ten in the Mississippi Conference and two in the North Mississippi Conference. During this campaign I tried to preach 103 times; saw a few hundred souls bow at the altar, some of whom were blessed in pardon and holiness; I traveled 903 miles by rail, 160 by automobile, and 153 by private conveyance. The men I helped in these meetings treated me so well (as also did the people) that I was made to say more than once, "surely goodness and mercy are following me every day."... I am now among my own people, visiting, reading the Word, praying, exhorting and praising God, and I love my work—yes, I certainly do. Amen! As best I possibly can, I am trying to carry out the Golden Rule with reference to my successor another year—trying to close out the year's work in such a way that the new pastor may find the atmosphere conducive to a prosperous and happy year's work for 1913; and my heart is constantly encouraged as the days go by.

J. A. WELLS, P. C.

ADVANTAGES OF A TRACTOR FOR HAULING.

Did you ever spend a half day waiting for your turn to unload a load of cotton or other product? And then do the same thing the next day and the next? It is slow, discouraging, expensive work. With an oil tractor you can haul five to ten loaded wagons at one time all by yourself. You have to wait only once for the whole lot. Not a long wait with each wagon load.

Just think what all that means to you. You can do five or ten days work in one. You can rush your crop all to market just when the market is best. Thus you get the highest price for your crop. You save most of that lost time you have always wasted with the old method.

The cost of doing that hauling with a tractor is much less than it is of hauling it with horses. One man does the work of five or ten because the engineer tends to all the wagons beside driving his engine. The fuel and oil for that tractor does not cost as much as the feed of the horses or mules required to haul the same load.

Your hauling is done quickly so you can get right at the other important tasks that are waiting your attention. The tractor will also rush them through like it did the hauling. Thus you are able to do all your important tasks quickly and at the most opportune time.

If you will write the Hart-Parr Company, 324R Lawler Street, Charles City, Iowa, they will be glad to tell you many other good things about the Oil Tractors and their use on your farm.

HARRISVILLE, MISS.

We have held six revival meetings on the Harrisville charge this year, and all of them were good. I was assisted in the first five of them by the following ministers: W. E. Dickens, B. E. Meigs, J. W. Chisolm, and T. A. Lane (L. P.) The preaching done by these brethren was spiritual, forceful, and edifying. Sin was condemned, Christ was uplifted, and the churches were revived. We feel that seed were sown that will produce a rich harvest in the coming years. Our sixth and last meeting was in the town of Braxton, and was conducted by Rev. D. E. Kelley. To say that the preaching was well done but half expresses it. The oldest citizens say that it was the best revival ever held in Braxton. Brother Kelly won the friendship of all the churches. There is now prevailing in the town a spirit of unity never known before. The visible results were a number of conversions, fifteen accessions to our Church, and three each to the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches. Men and women were heard in prayer who were never known to pray before. May the Lord keep them praying! To God we give all the praise.

W. H. LANE, P. C.

HAYNESVILLE, LA.

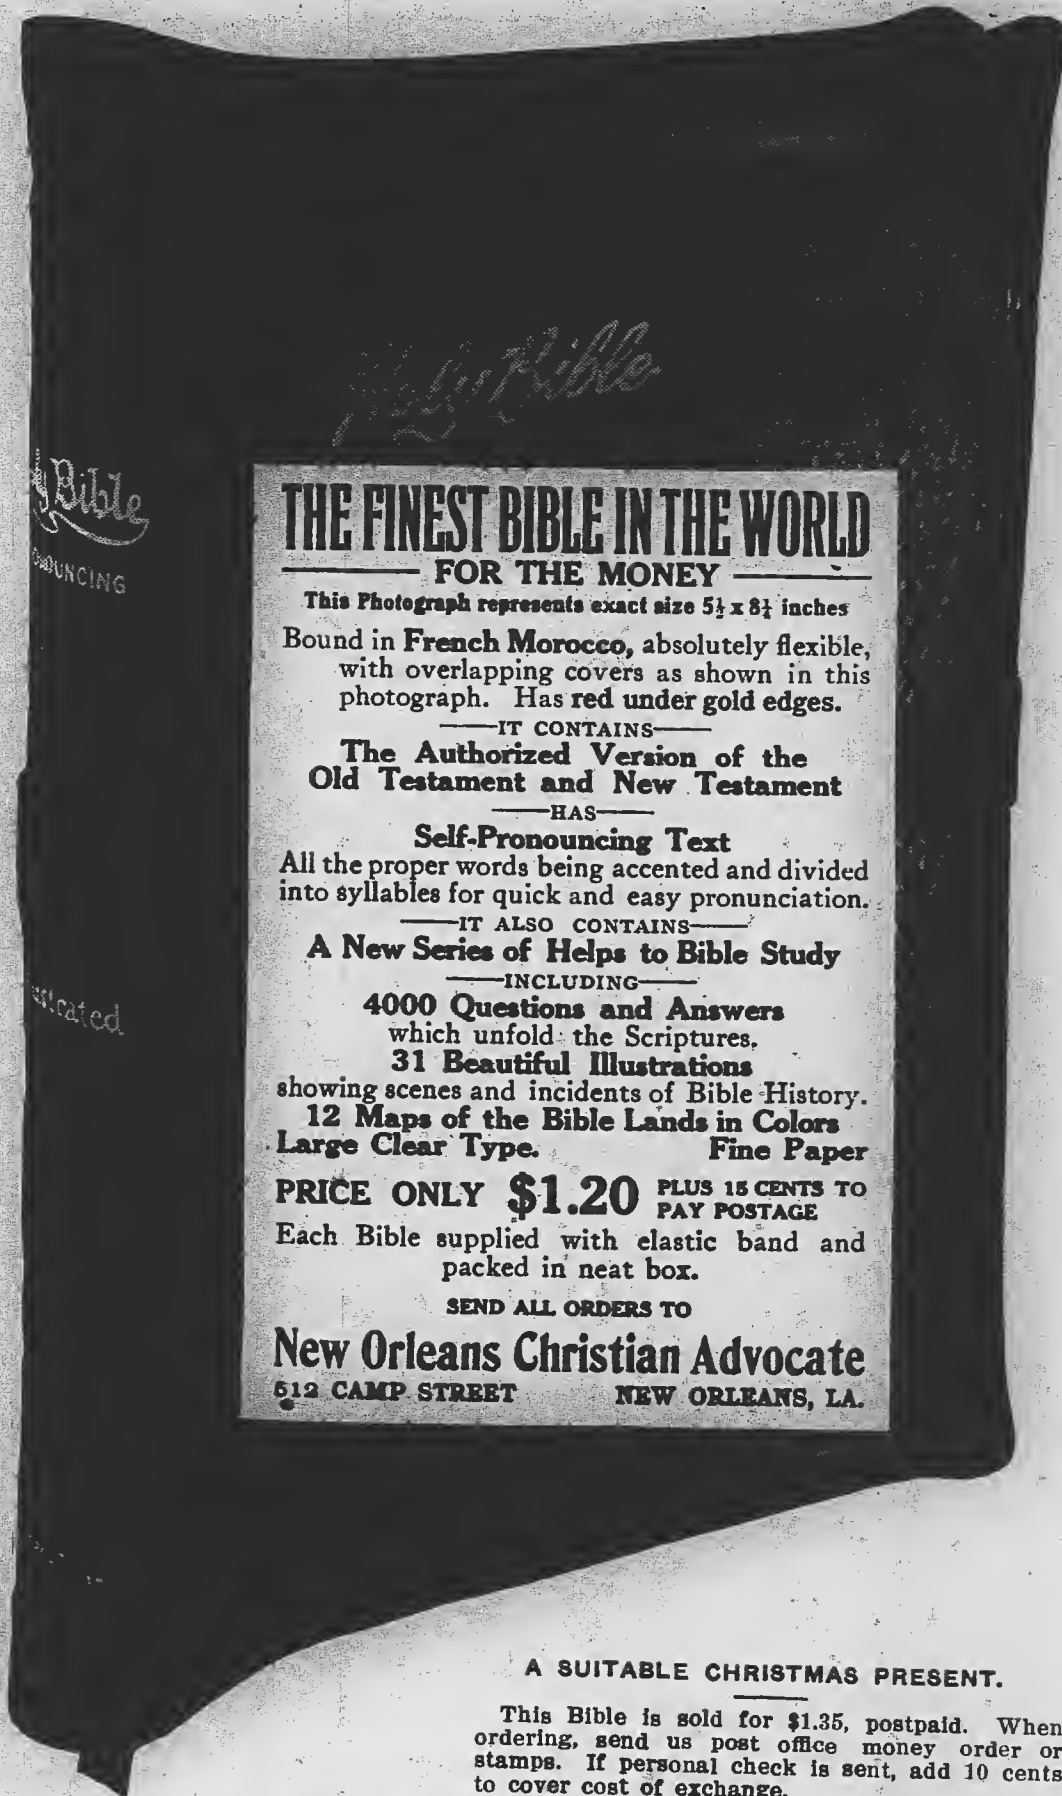

My second meeting was held at the Athens Church. We ran the meeting for twelve days. The pastor preached the first three days, and Rev. R. W. Tucker, our presiding elder, preached for us nine days. To say that the people were pleased with him is putting it mildly. His sermons were of a high type—practical and first-class revival discourses. The Athens people were deeply stirred. There were sixteen accessions to the Church, and some of these were strong young men. As a token of their appreciation the congregation paid Brother Tucker $90. We are building a nice Church at Athens.—G. D. Anders.

A CAPITAL IDEA.

Speaking of the Advocate Piano Club, here is a letter from one of our Club members, a Georgia lady, which is a fair sample of the letters we are receiving every day. She writes: "I think it a capital idea. I know we would not have had our piano if we had waited to have gotten the whole amount. I find no fault with the Club plan so far, and as for the Club piano, we are just delighted with it. All our friends say they would like to have one just like it. It is just a beauty, and we value it more than anything else in the house."

Let us send you your copy of the beautiful new club catalog to-day. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

DR. GEO. H. MEANS ON UNION.

Rev. Geo. H. Means, D.D., in a paper recently read before the preachers' meeting in Birmingham, Ala., said:

"In the conduct of our missionary interests there is nothing to be deplored more than a disposition in our missionary societies, home and foreign, to regard each other as antagonists instead of co-workers. How can the Foreign Society obey the divine command to preach the gospel to every creature, if it makes an invidious distinction between the benighted at home and abroad—it will not do to claim that either is the more important, for the logic of it is, if the home base dies the work abroad perishes with it; and if the foreign is abandoned, the home has no mission. So the contention is about nothing. As a matter of fact, there ought never to have been but

"One Body."

"Working separately has left the false impression that their interests were not in common. In some instances they have not heeded the recommendation of the General Conference to unite their forces. Members have been alienated, the societies have sometimes been disrupted, and both interests have suffered irreparable loss. The cause is a unit, the purpose is one, to 'preach the gospel to every creature.' Many have united—now let them forget that they were ever separated, and not tamper with the union and dispute about precedent. . . . It is said of two preachers in the Kentucky Conference who were close and life-long friends—a duplication of David and Jonathan—that they never had but one quarrel, and that was on the subject of perfect love. Let us hope that these earnest workers will no longer mar their usefulness by doing the very thing that they propose to deplore. If it is pleasant for brothers to dwell together in unity, it can't be very disagreeable for the opposite sex to follow their example.

Home Mission Week.

"And now if what has been said is true, or only partly true, it emphasizes the importance of Home Mission Week. Some do not know the facts, while others ignore them. It is ours to make them plain and impress them. This can and should be done without offense to any one. . . . We must either moderate our zeal or increase our friends; curtail our enterprises or strengthen our resources."

ANOTHER VIEW.

M. T. Plyler, in an article on the last Council meeting, says:

"Some friction remains in the effort to unite the Home and Foreign Societies. This is inevitable, but all will be well after a time when the machinery becomes perfectly adjusted. This agitation over union may disclose to the enthusiastic devotees of both Home and Foreign Societies the danger of becoming more devoted to an organization than to the Christ whom they represent. Human nature is so prone to be lost in institutional life rather than to be led on by personal loyalty, that Jesus is ever more being bound about by the grave-clothes of dead ecclesiasticisms. Naturally, then, some little friction will come, even in adjusting two missionary societies, but the loyalty of these good women to their Lord is such as to guarantee that all will be well in the end."

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT MEETING

The District Meeting for Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, met at Taylorsville on October 8, and held a most profitable session of three days. The District Secretary, Mrs. J. R. Ellis, of Mt. Olive, presided; seventeen delegates and two Conference officers, Messrs. Johnson and LaPrade, were present, besides many visitors from the town and adjoining neighborhoods. Full and satisfactory reports were made, showing an increase in interest. A deep spirituality pervaded the entire meeting. Every phase of the work was brought out by talks, papers and general discussions. Everybody worked for the success of the meeting, "even father." A pleasing occurrence was the presence of so many men and young people. Attractive programs were freely distributed, and beautiful badges were furnished the delegates and other officials. Rev. W. M. Williams, the superintendent of the orphanage, at Jackson, was a visitor and gave an interesting talk about his boys and girls. A committee of one woman from each auxiliary in the district was appointed to raise funds to repair and buy furniture for the district parsonage. A consecration service with Bible searching and prayers, and personal unburdening of hearts, brought all in closer contact with the Master, and a clearer vision of duty was caught which gave a greater determination to press forward in the work. The auxiliaries had been praying for the success of this meeting for two months. They were not disappointed, for the Father was true to his promises.

(Mrs. J. R. Ellis, District Secretary, and Mrs. Emma McGregor, Secretary of the Conference, both sent reports of this meeting. It was not possible to publish both of them; so we combined the two reports.)

The following resolutions were drawn up at this District meeting:

Resolved—First, That we, the District Conference of the Hattiesburg District, in session at Taylorsville, October 8-10, 1912, desire to express to Sister J. R. Ellis, our beloved District Secretary, our heartfelt appreciation of her faithful labors among us, and especially for her untiring efforts to make this meeting a success.

Second, That we pledge to her our hearty support and co-operation in her work in the future, and that we pray God's richest blessings upon her.

Third, That we have heard with profit and pleasure our Conference officers, Mrs. W. H. LaPrade of Meridian, and Mrs. R. E. Johnson, of Gulfport. We hereby express to them our appreciation of their visit to us, at this time we pledge to them also the co-operation of our various auxiliaries in making every part of the women's organized work a success.

Signed: Mrs. K. T. Moore, Mrs. R. L. Nelson, Mrs. E. L. Walker

News from China.

"The work has grown so rapidly in the past six months that those of us who are used to slow China can hardly get our breath." The missionary who wrote these lines further states that the developments for the next six months are beyond contention. The present conditions are demanding all the workers, money strength and faith available. We stop and ask ourselves the question: "If this is true, how can we meet the increasing demands?" With man, it seems an impossibility, but with God "all things are possible." He is depending upon us to help carry forward the work in this rapidly developing field. If we fail him now, our opportunity may be lost forever.

The woman's work in West Sococho is encouraging. The meetings are well attended, and the women listen carefully to the expounding of the gospel.

In June eight Bible women received certificates from the Hayes Wilkins School.

The Kindergarten Training School at Sococho held its first Commencement exercises on June 28. Three young girls received their diplomas. One goes to open work in Shanghai, one to introduce this department in the Susan B. Wilson school, while the third goes to assist Mrs. and Miss Polk in Sococho.

Ivy Home, Hoochow, connected with our Virginia school, is completed and occupied. It is hoped that this home will be the means of getting in closer touch with the patrons of the school. Two of the girls from this school (from heathen families) have recently joined the Church. Being from influential families, it is impossible to estimate the far-reaching effect of this step.

A LOVELY PIANO.

You ought to see the letters we are receiving from the enthusiastic members of the Advocate Piano Club. Here is a sample from a South Carolina lady: "The lovely piano came yesterday. Am just delighted with it; so are my musical friends. The tone is so full and sweet, and the case is lovely."

Another member of the club, a gentleman from Florida, writes: "The piano is simply a marvel of beauty and tone, as also action. We are all delighted with it."

Write for your copy of the beautifully illustrated new club catalog. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

How to Make Better Cough Syrup than You Can Buy

A Family Supply, Saving $2 and Fully Guaranteed.

A full pint of cough syrup—as much as you could buy for $2.50—can easily be made at home. You will find nothing that takes hold of an obstinate cough more quickly, usually ending it inside of 24 hours. Excellent, too, for croup, whooping cough, sore lungs, asthma, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, then add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

This is just laxative enough to help cure a cough. Also stimulates the appetite, which is usually upset by a cough. The taste is pleasant.

The effect of pine and sugar syrup on the inflamed membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe is now used by thousands of housewives throughout the United States and Canada. The plan has been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Stole 1,000 Church Members and Got "Skinned Alive."

"My Dear Brother: We have here a Campbellite preacher, the greatest proselyter I ever met. He robbed other churches of 1,000 members and now has 2,200. They built a church costing $75,000.00, seating 2,500, and it seemed all other ministers were afraid of him. A little Lutheran preacher came along and I loaned him a copy of The Bible Mode of Baptism. In about two weeks he met the Campbellite in public debate before 4500 people in the auditorium, and he skinned the Campbellite alive and routed him on every point. The vast audience arose and cheered the victor round after round and since then they are as still as an oyster."

The above is one out of hundreds of letters showing how great the need is, and how effectively Mahaffey's book on Baptism does the work where ever given a chance. The price is 16c a copy, but just now you can get 15 copies for $1. The last big edition is nearly gone and the next will cost more. Send orders direct to Rev. J. E. Mahaffey, Box C, Clinton, S. C., as no one else can fill them at this price.

Royal Baking Powder

Absolutely Pure

The Woman Makes the Home

She makes it best who, looking after the culinary department, turns her back resolutely upon unhealthful, or even suspicious, food accessories. She is economical; she knows that true economy does not consist in the use of inferior meat, flour, or baking powder. She is an earnest advocate of home made, home baked food, and has proved the truth of the statements of the experts that the best cooking in the world today is done with Royal Baking Powder.

FROM THE COLPORTER.

It was my pleasure to be two weeks in the great meeting at Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., reports of which have already been published in the Advocate. For sound gospel preaching, hearty singing and praying, zealous working of the laity, spiritual power, and far reaching influence, it will long be a memorable event in that church and throughout the city, and by visitors who were present from time to time. Rev. J. B. Andrews, Evangelist, who did the preaching, is a man of great gifts and ability. He is well endowed spiritually, mentally and physically, for the great work in which he is engaged. He "proves himself a man of God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Rev. Mr. Smith, who led the singing, has superior gifts for this service. They both won the hearts of both the old and young, and their names and deeds will long be held in affectionate memory.

The meeting was a blessing to me, spiritually and otherwise. The pastors and people conspired to make my stay among them pleasant and profitable. With their co-operation many good books, as well as other literature, were circulated, which will abide to conserve the fruits of the meeting in the edification of believers and the conversion of sinners.

During my stay in Jackson I frequently visited Millsaps College and our Orphanage, both of which are in good condition and doing excellent work. President Watkins and the faculty and student body of the College are laboring harmoniously together to make that institution all that it stands for, and the outlook is propitious for a most successful year. Brother Williams and his helpers in the Home are united in heart and effort for the best interests and welfare of the children committed to their care. Both of these institutions well deserve the liberal support of the Methodists of Mississippi.

By invitation of the pastor, Rev. L. L. Roberts, I gave the third Sunday and day following to Flora, where I had good entertainment at the parsonage, the privilege of preaching to an attentive congregation, and of leaving with the good people a goodly number of choice books. Thanks to all in every place who have been kind and helpful to us in the Lord's business.

I am truly grateful to all who have so promptly responded to the mild request a few weeks ago for the "little balance due." Now, if the others will do likewise, we will all rejoice together.

Our Publishing Agents are advertising and sending to all the preachers circulars of books, new and old, with expectation that all orders be sent to them and your Colporter. Let all take due notice and act accordingly. All orders from this date may be settled for at Conference.

Undergraduates and others will please notify me in due time of the books wanted at the Conferences—North Mississippi and Mississippi—so that I may have them on hand and thereby save postage and more. During November I will fill orders for "The Methodist Hymnal," "Revival Praises" or "Songs for Praise and Service," in lots of a dozen or more at the lowest wholesale prices, and prepay transportation charges. A limited lot of each is in stock at this special offer. Who will be the first?

G. W. BACHMAN,

Winona, Miss., Oct. 25, 1912.

REVIVAL AT FIRST CHURCH, BATON ROUGE.

We closed last night a meeting of unusual interest here, which had been in progress for three weeks. Beginning on Sunday, September 29, the attendance grew steadily, in spite of such competition as the meeting of the Confederate Veterans of the State, until last night at the closing service there was a congregation estimated by careful observers at between 700 and 800, besides the scores who were turned away for lack of room. More than 100 persons came forward during the meeting in response to a definite, clear-cut proposition to surrender to Christ, and practically all professed to have found peace. About fifty persons will come into our Church, and a number of names were turned over to other pastors. About fifteen families promised to begin family prayers. The life of the church seems to be quickened noticeably by these services.

The meeting was conducted by Rev. Thompson B. Price, of Sylvan Springs, Ark., and his singer, Rev. Walter M. Harrison, who came at the invitation of the pastor and Board of Stewards. Mr. Price is a close student of the Bible, a thoughtful preacher, a vivid illustrator, and so free from sensationalism and other objectionable features, as to disarm the prejudice existing in many of our city churches against revivals. One of the most notable features of his preaching is his effective and convincing treatment of the question of prevalent worldly amusements. He avoids hurtful extremes. He insists upon the necessity for vital Christian experience, and his propositions are definite and clear-cut. He is loyal to the Church, and insists upon loyalty to its regular activities. He is ably assisted by Mr. Harrison, who is a solist of fine ability and a successful director of the choir.

We hope for permanent results from their work.

Fraternally,

W. WINANS DRAKE.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER BINGHAM.

Dear Brother Meek: The following notice is from the current issue of our city paper:

"Two years ago Rev. J. R. Countiss preached in Carrollton. The pleasing and profound impression made by him on that occasion was evident from the large congregation that came last Sunday to hear him. He preached on the Will of God, a sermon that evidenced wide reading, accurate scholarship, deep, careful and original thinking. Many went forward to thank the preacher for his stimulating and helpful discourse. The music by the choir and congregation was a pleasing and helpful part of the service. The solos by Miss Moore, Voice teacher in Grenada College, were very superior productions sung with a power and sweetness that greatly pleased the congregation. At the evening service Mr. Thames preached a searching sermon on The Judgment. Both services were pleasing and helpful."

Since Carrollton is accustomed to hear better preaching than any city in Mississippi, the above judgment is indeed high praise, but not more than the facts warrant. Possessing unusual musical talent and having been blessed with the very best soloists, Carrollton's exalted opinion of Miss Moore's art means a great deal. Her class in Grenada College numbers twenty-five.

Your readers will be gratified to know that Grenada is having the best year of its remarkable history. Greater things are being planned for its future.

Editorial

FATE OF THE REPUBLIC NOT INVOLVED.

By the time this issue of the Advocate is in the hands of our readers, the outcome of the national election will be known, and unless the results are such as to leave the contest to Congress for final settlement, a new President will have been chosen. In common with the thousands of our fellow-citizens, we have our convictions as to what governmental policies are wisest and as to who would make the best Chief Executive. But we do not for one moment believe that this struggle has imperiled to the slightest extent the safety of the nation. No matter what party succeeds, our country will in all likelihood continue to prosper and move forward on its widening career among the great powers of the globe. So long as our people are moral, intelligent, and patriotic the American Republic will survive, and when they have ceased to be such nothing can save it. The pillars that really sustain the national fabric are not the army, or the navy, or legislatures, or courts, or executives, but the home, the church, and the school. He who does most to make the masses beneath our flag high-minded, virtuous, and industrious contributes most largely to the stability of the government and renders his country the most important and valuable service. As factors in determining America's future, the teacher outweighs the soldier, the preacher outweighs the legislator, and the influences of our family life outweigh all else.

Should the verdict of our widely extended electorate be disappointing to you, do not become depressed. Even if your views are correct and go down in defeat, there is little occasion for despondency. The truth can stand to be repulsed and rejected. It is immortal—it never dies; though it may seem to be buried, there is in it a mighty resurrection power. It will rise again and renew the combat. There never was a more misleading doctrine than that of vox populi, vox Dei. Though it is right that the majority of the people should rule, it must be admitted that they make many mistakes; that, for a period at least, they are often in the wrong. In the fierce struggles of the centuries gone truth has frequently been in the keeping of minorities, of those who outdistanced their slower-moving comrades in the grand march of intellectual progress. But for this, the pages of history would have never been illumined with the thrilling stories of heroic martyrs. He is poorly educated who has not learned the lessons, that worldly success is not the true measure of greatness, and that the correctness of principles is not determined by their temporary triumph or defeat. Time is the test of all things; and though right is now often on the scaffold, it will finally be enthroned amid the acclamations of an assembled universe.

WORTH THINKING ABOUT.

We do not think there is any doubt that the mightiest force in the world to-day is the Christian Church, but the question of its efficiency is one which we may well consider. That the Church does not always measure up to its opportunities, that it does not always bring into requisition and harness the tremendous powers within its reach, all familiar with its history must admit. It is not expected to achieve its great mission by human agencies alone—divine power is pledged to aid in carrying forward its work; but that power operates chiefly through men and women. It may be hindered, if not defeated, by a lack of proper human co-operation. It is on our side that the obstructions to the progress of our Lord's kingdom must be sought. God is ever ready to do his part.

In the November number of The Century Magazine Mr. William Lyon Phelps of Yale University, in an article entitled, "The Hungry Sheep," among other things, discusses the question as to why the hold of the Church upon the masses of the people is not stronger. Like many others, he puts the blame chiefly upon the preachers, and we think strongly overstates the case against them; but, notwithstanding this, what he says is most suggestive and may, we think, be reflected upon with profit. We quote him, in part, as follows:

"The main trouble with the Church to-day is not in the pews; it is in the pulpit. There is more Christian faith in the average congregation than there is in the average preacher. During the short period of Emerson's pastorate, he was obliged to call on an old man who was dying. The young minister murmured apologetically a number of confused and clumsy commonplaces, and finally his aged client cried sharply, 'Young man, if you don't know your business, you had better go home.' Emerson, who came to give advice, took it, like the honest and sincere man that he was; and he had no peace until he left the Church for good and all. He was totally unfitted to be a minister because he had no Christian faith, and as soon as he realized his unfitness, he sought another occupation, and became enormously useful to humanity in other ways.

"A United States Senator met three clergymen in three different parts of the country, and each complained that he could not get a large audience. The Senator asked the first man if he believed that the Bible was the word of God; the cleric smiled pityingly, and said that of course he did not in the crude and ordinary sense, and then he launched a mass of vague metaphysical phrases. The Senator asked the second man if he believed in the future life, and the reverend gentleman said that he did not believe in personal immortality, but that the essence of life was indestructible, or some such notion. The Senator asked the third man, a pastor of an orthodox evangelical Church, if he believed in the divinity of Jesus Christ; the shepherd of souls replied that all men were divine. The three clergymen had themselves supplied abundant reasons why their audiences were small. They had nothing to offer them but wind. The hungry sheep looked up, and were not fed.

"A vital Christian faith is the prime essential for a man who wishes to succeed in the ministry. It is worth more to him than all the learning in the world. If an honest man cannot believe, we surely ought not to blame him or quarrel with him; but he has no business in the pulpit. Christian faith is just as necessary a prerequisite for a clergyman as a knowledge of mathematics is for a civil engineer. Without it, he is not merely ineffective; he is futile and absurd. I remember being present once in a vast audience where Mr. Moody was talking, and at the end of his remarks he said that he would be glad to answer any questions. Some one asked, 'What, in your judgment, is the best work a modern minister can do?' Before Mr. Moody had time to reply, there was a voice from the throng, which cried out, 'This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom He hath sent.' The great evangelist hesitated a moment, and then said that he had nothing to add."

ALL NEW MOVEMENTS NOT PROGRESSIVE.

Some seem to think that to chase after every new thing suggested is the way to be progressive. They forget that for every invention patented that succeeds, hundreds fail. What would become of the farmer if he should undertake to carry out all the schemes proposed to him for getting rid of pests and increasing his crop yield? He would make a spectacle of himself and go broke. The same thing is true in our religious work. To attempt to put into operation every new expedient conjured up is a waste of one's time and strength. We do not believe in being an unreasoning "stand-patter," but even that might be preferable to being a run-away experimenter, ever ready to follow

"Some ignis fatuus, that bewitches,
And leads men into pools and ditches."

AGAINST CHANGING THE NAME.

We are much pleased at the manner in which our church press seems to be lining up against the proposal to change the name of our denomination. The latest member of the Advocate family to speak out against this unwise movement is the organ of our Alabama Conferences. In referring to the matter in its issue of October 31, this safe and judicious journal makes the following pertinent comment:

"We are aware of the reasons urged for the change of name, but frankly we do not think such a change would bring about the end hoped for and popularize our work in the West and in the border States. People who did not like us before, would still know it was the same old Church, under a different name. There is far more in the principles than in the name, and unless we change these we would subject ourselves to ridicule by such action. Then the name proposed is too nearly the same as that of the other great Methodist body. Its official name is The M. E. Church in the United States of America, and ours would be the M. E. Church in America.

"We believe there is one solution of this name question, and kindred problems, and only one, and that is along the lines suggested by the Joint Commission on Methodist Federation. If our brethren in the West and along the border want to change conditions let them concentrate their forces and urge the adoption of a system of which that report presents the germ, and not from quadrennium to quadrennium continue to urge a change of name that in itself would keep us forever explaining, and which explanations, in our judgment, would add nothing to our own self-respect, or to the esteem in which we are held abroad."

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT. THE ANNUAL TUG.

By C. F. Reed.

We are now approaching the Conference season and the time for The Annual Tug in order to pay the preacher, square with the presiding elder and get up our Conference collections, so that we can make a decent report at Conference, save our face, and get a good preacher next year. Of course, we cannot be expected to give much attention to anything else while this tug is on and the chances are we shall have to rest at least a month or six weeks after it is over before we can begin to feel normal and look around for something to do for the Lord.

I have often wondered who invented this method of providing for the maintenance of God's Church. It was not Mr. Wesley, for his plan was "a penny a week and a shilling a quarter." It was not Paul, for his plan is plainly stated in I. Cor. 16:2. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." It was not Christ's plan, for he insisted that in order to be his disciple a man must take up his cross daily, and from the strenuousness of the annual tug, I judge this part of most men's Christian duty must be quite a cross.

Now, in casting about for some one who would be benefited by such a method, I can think only of the devil. Of course, it is his special business to obstruct every advance movement of the kingdom of God, and if he can insinuate a financial method into the Church that will keep the preacher half-starved and in financial straits three-fourths of the year, he has the preacher handicapped. Then if he can persuade the preacher to go pretty heavily in debt in order to feed and clothe his family, he gives the tradespeople of the town a chance to sneer at the preacher and the Church and thus puts a stout stumbling-block in the way of the tradespeople and all their sympathizers.

Another advantage the annual tug method gives to the devil is that it affords him an excellent opportunity to strike a deadly blow at the missionary, church extension, and educational departments of the Church. By keeping the Church financially inactive a large portion of the year, those having charge of these great arms of service are kept busy with pad and pencil, figuring out small economies—how to make tongue and buckle meet and prevent the large leakage that comes from paying interest on borrowed moneys. Their nights are made restless by the necessity of inventing plausible excuses by which to turn away the clamor for help that comes up from all our mission fields, from the destitute places in the homeland, and from the children of the Church crying for a chance to keep educationally abreast with the rest of the world.

Then, too, as a man at any one time can only give what he can afford to spare at that one time, if only one appeal is made in a year, his ability to give is limited, and so by the annual tug plan the sum total of gifts to these great connectional interests is kept at a figure that most effectively avoids the danger of doing anything large in the way of sending more missionaries, building more churches, or keeping abreast with the State in the education of our children. I can see where this would suit the devil very well, indeed.

Also, I can see that when these vital interests are put off till the last moment, how that in the hurry and worry not more than half the members will be seen and that there will be no chance to educate and inform those who are seen, so that at last, the whole burden will fall upon a faithful few. Of course, these few cannot avoid feeling it is unjust and unfair that they should bear the burdens of others. They naturally become dissatisfied. Giving ceases to be a joyous religious sacrament and comes to be a reluctant paying of other people's debts to save the Church from disgrace and to keep things going. At the District Stewards' meeting in the beginning of the next year, you will naturally find them or their representatives set like a rock against any increase of assessment, or trying to make some new adjustment by which their share may be reduced. Thus the mutual confidence and fraternal fellowship of congregations are broken up and this can but be pleasing to the devil. Pondering over these thoughts, I have become convinced that as the devil seems to be the one chiefly helped by the annual tug method, he must be the inventor of the same.

After inventing a plan of this kind, it is not to be expected that he would spring it on the Church, cut and dried and all ready for use and ask the General Conference to accept it by a unanimous vote. That would not be in accordance with his usual way of procedure. We would rather expect him to lie in wait, to take advantage of a sleepy preacher here, an indifferent layman there, and the general disposition to say: "Are there not yet four months and then cometh—Conference?" and thus, little by little, make people forget the example of Mr. Wesley, the exhortation of Paul and even the downright statements of the Master, until general use and the sanction of old custom fasten the plan upon the Church with bands of steel.

Now, being opposed to the devil and all his works and especially that one of his works represented by the annual tug for local expenses and the annual collection, and like devices for financing the great ongoing enterprises of the Church of God, I rise to make a motion. It is: That at the beginning of the new Conference year, we return as a Church to the Scriptural method laid down by St. Paul in I. Cor. 16:2, and that in every station within our border we adopt the weekly offering and the Duplex envelope for both local and general interests, and that in every circuit we just as religiously lay by in store "on the first day of the week" and by the use of the monthly Duplex envelope or some similar device, replenish the Lord's treasury whenever we come together to worship him.

We have already made a good start with this plan. Hundreds of our churches are now using the Duplex envelope and other hundreds have declared their intention to do so next at the Conference year. By making the vote unanimous, I am sure we shall secure a decisive victory over the adversary and put ourselves in shape to win others, until victory shall acquire the steady habit of perching on our banners as the one place where she feels perfectly at home.

THE PROBLEM OF IMMORALITY.

The Atlanta Constitution takes occasion of an anti-vice crusade in Atlanta to say some very wise words on the subject of immorality, which should be carefully pondered by parents generally. Here they are:

"The houses in our midst, outward and visible signs of vice, have been closed. The inmates, pathetic in the last analysis, have been scattered right and left. Regardless of the wisdom or unwisdom of the plan, it need not be thought that the moral obliquity these fleeing creatures typify has been more than scotched.

"As the Constitution pointed out several days ago, and without reference to Chief Beavers' edict, the permanent remedy is deeper-lying. Let us be frank, if we would genuinely progress. The instinct of the hunter that runs in the blood of many men has been fed, century after century, generation after generation. By what means, and at what terrible heart-breaking penalty, is another matter. The stubborn fact remains.

"One cannot enduringly subdue a fire without searching also for the cause that may start another blaze. Look at our literature. Is it not possible to find in that a feeding source of immorality? Are not hundreds of books, each year, turned from presses and allowed to drift into the hands of immature children carrying the most salacious suggestions?

"Look at the stage. It is said that there are many beautiful and uplifting theatrical productions. If this be admitted, it is equally true that they are probably outnumbered by others, bristling with 'double entendre' motives, so-called 'problem plays,' or extravaganzas, witnessed mutually by mother and daughter, father and son. Many of them, to use a line from Longfellow, 'thriving with dances calculated to fire the blood of inconsiderate youth.'

"Look at our magazines. They carry stories and pictures the underlying motive of which is the sex-problem in its most false and alluring details.

"So far as that is concerned—and admittedly the subject is a delicate one—think of the street and house costumes of the day. In many cases they are of such mold and manner as, twenty years ago, would have caused wholesale prosecutions.

"These are issues that lie deeply imbedded in the social fabric. How they are to be handled, we do not assume to say. We do know that they offer food for thought to men and women really in earnest in fighting immorality in all of its forms—and they are all more or less mute witnesses to the fact that the evil we all agree should be eliminated must be cast out by patient, intelligent and searching education. The problem is not one that can be settled in a single day. The Bible speaks of some sort of devils that come out 'only by prayer and fasting.'

"Atlanta is tolerably agitated at present over the social evil. There is a wave of proper revulsion against girls in their teens displaying themselves in cheap theaters or incurring, on the streets or public places generally, those incitements to temptation that lead toward the primrose path and that, in turn, to the brothel or perhaps to an early end the sickening details of which we do not discuss in polite society.

"The problem is not a new one. The Bible speaks vividly of the 'scarlet woman.' And the student knows that prostitution has existed throughout history, as the problems of drunkenness, the horse thief, the murderer and the firebug troubled the Pharaohs and the criminologists of the Tartar era of Genghis Khan and farther back into the mists of antiquity. For, from the start, human nature has varied little, though its manners and customs have done so.

"All of which is preliminary to the assertion that we of the twentieth century are better equipped to combat these evils than any of our forebears. The difficulty is, we lack the candor and courage to grapple with them. A few days ago the Constitution remarked that temperance had made vaster strides through education and from economic forces than through flat legislation and violent denunciation and sentimentality—though it is not to be denied that all these influences have contributed to the ultimate result.

"It is hardly open to challenge that were fathers and mothers more frank with boys and girls, the social evil would be dealt a body-blow at the source it is born. We know what havoc vice works with civilization, what toll is taken of society. Yet we falter, stammer, blush and often turn away from the task of warning the child approaching maturity. We leave him or her to find out the primary facts of life from evil-minded companions. In the plastic years of life we practice prudery instead of candor with children. We see to it scrupulously that our duty is discharged in the matter of reading, writing, arithmetic, the higher branches and technical training. Upon those facts that touch the thrusting forward of the race, we allow them to achieve the most false, artificial and prurient viewpoints.

"Is it, then, any wonder that when the rising generation acquires such knowledge in an atmosphere that glorifies vice and makes a joke of the most sacred things in existence, the social evil flourishes, girls go wrong, boys are blighted in their careers, and municipalities find 'regulation,' so-called, their most serious problem? Necessarily, we must practice restriction and the enforcement of statutes. But education—patient, intelligent, unremitting—is the permanent solution. The twentieth century has more facilities at its command for applying this method than any previous era in history.”—New York Weekly Witness.

“TIS A TIME FOR MEMORY AND FOR TEARS.”

Seven preachers have fallen on sleep within the last decade of months, in the Louisiana Annual Conference. Each of these princes of the household of God had his personal traits and gifts that distinguished him from his comrades and gave a marked personality to his ministry. Each wrought faithfully for righteousness and truth in the place his Lord and the Church chose, from time to time, for his going. No doubt the torch of life eternal, lighted from the divine altar of the earthly temple, now glows with a brighter radiance in the house not made with hands.

For more than thirty years J. M. Johnston, with his flowing silver beard and benign countenance, has been reckoned a patriarch among us. A man of unflinching courage, strong physique, and sturdy convictions, he never faltered in the face of a foe, but rather rejoiced in the turmoil of a battle for righteousness. He never sought trouble, was preferably a man of peace, but by nature and grace belonged to the Church Militant. He was never a great, but ever a faithful preacher. Many loved him, for he taught them the love that is the greatest. He and his faithful wife are well known in the remote circuits and missions of our Conference and their memories are blessed.

There is room for some man to write a book on “The Englishman in America.” George Jackson was an Englishman and throughout his life maintained many of the quaint, attractive characteristics of that race. To his mind the Church was one, an united household of common interests. He was at home in any part of Louisiana and traveled to the last, ever busy until his call came. He was as simple as a child in his faith in God and man, and as guiltless as Nathaniel. He counted it the greatest honor of life to preach the gospel, and for one of his early disadvantages did remarkably well. His pilgrim sash and staff were dropped in our city, and he took the unseen chariot to the city above. I think he could better describe it to us now, were he permitted to return.

Samuel S. Keener was a man who in many things bore the impress of his father, the Bishop. He loved righteousness and hated iniquity with an intensity that sometimes seemingly verged on harshness. No man that I have known could wage a more unrelenting war on what he knew to be false and untrue, and yet none was more quick to forgive and palliate. His great brotherly heart embraced all the interests of our Church and no chivalric knight of “ye olden tyme” showed more devotion to his cause, than did he to the welfare and defense of Zion. He was a preacher of unusual ability and power. I have seen a camp-meeting congregation moved and swayed under the effect of his masterful diction and earnest appeal, even as a mighty wind sweeps through the forest. I have heard him exhort to repentance and surrender, with heart-stirring entreaty that was well nigh resistless. His sermons were delivered in strong, chaste English, and bore the hall-mark of close study. He was thoroughly evangelical. No strange fire burned on the altar, no unbeaten oil illumined the sanctuary, when he ministered in holy things. We are told that he passed into the larger life breathing a benediction upon the receding world. It was well.

Jno. A. Miller was another prince of this imperial household. His was a loving, tender, compassionate spirit, like unto his who leaned on the Master's bosom. Throughout Louisiana, wherever Methodism is known, the name of John Miller is held in love's richest chalice, for in his life was seen the beauty of holiness. Possessing a voice of marvelous tone and melody, in the active years of his ministry he led many to his Master—willing captives for the joy of service. Hundreds of men and women in Northern Louisiana claim him as leader and father in spirit and truth. “To know him was to love him.”

N. S. Cornell, too, has joined the Conference above. A man of classical attainments, profound thought and quiet spirit, he was scarcely known for his real worth. Trained to think under the fostering tutelage of a great mathematician, who would have his students demonstrate propositions without help of blackboard or crayon, his mind reveled in the sublime mysteries and dogmas of theology. For years he held positions on the committees of examination in the Conference, and if by chance or otherwise, any truant young preacher departed from the standard channel, the sure hand of this skilled pilot guided him back to the well-known buoys and markings. His preaching was sane, strong, and helpful. His son stated to me, that after his mental powers began to weaken under the stress and toil of years, when the season for the Annual Conference arrived, the old man would wander down the road, and say upon being recalled: “They need me, I must go.” He has found most of his old Conference. They meet in Zion and the Chief Bishop and Shepherd presides.

H. O. White has joined the innumerable company. He was the last of a trio of useful and effective preachers, sons of one family. Perhaps in real eloquence and in the power of preaching, Henry White was the greatest of the three. He possessed the full round-toned voice of an orator, and was mighty in prayer. His seemed the philosophic cast of mind. Events that moved others apparently had little effect upon him, for he judged that God ruled despite the polemical storms that raged. He died without ever being placed on the list of superannuates, and this he deserved. He was a faithful servant of the Church, and the people revere his memory.

Thos. J. Upton is the last of this mystic seven of whom I write. Loved of many for his exquisite wit and quick repartee, one can scarcely think of him as dead. He loved the doctrines of the Church devotedly and rejoiced to proclaim them in the face of opposition. Of a keen and analytical cast of mind, and having command of a full vocabulary of good, strong English, he was at home in a polemic struggle of any kind. He would be sure to find an opening in the armor of his opponent. Energy and industry were dominant traits of his character. For idlers he had little use. Under it all was a tender heart and a tolerant spirit. He is held in honor among the brethren and we shall miss him.

How are the mighty fallen! Who is worthy to wear the mantle of these ascended prophets? I have only tried, as best I could, to mention some of the salient points of character of these worthy men and offer this tribute to their memory. For it is better to toil through life's brief day for things of worth and weight, than to stand with empty hands at last, barred from the golden gate. Thank God these all died in the faith having received the promises.

S. J. DAVIES.

Shreveport, Oct. 21, 1912.

NEW ORLEANS.

Doctor Meek, the bright editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, says:

“Dr. W. B. Palmore, in a recent article, includes New Orleans in a list of small cities which he said would become important as a result of the construction of the Panama Canal. Where has Brother Palmore been all these years that he has not learned that for three-quarters of a century New Orleans has been one of the leading cities of the United States? Can it be that in touring other countries he has neglected to inform himself concerning his own?”

We can assure Brother Meek that we have seen New Orleans and have a very vivid remembrance of our last visit. It was in the spring of the year, and we had been for some time in the West Indies, where it was hot, and where we wore linen suits, about as white as snow.

Between there and Kingston, Jamaica, the distance was greater than we had supposed and the season was much later at New Orleans, where we landed in the early gloaming of a Sunday morning. After breakfast at the St. Charles, we walked rather leisurely to a Methodist Sunday school, feeling quite comfortable and unconcerned as to dress or appearance, being a total stranger and not expecting to be recognized by any body. As we entered the school, the superintendent announced: “We'll now have a closing speech from Doctor Palmore, of St. Louis!” Had he greeted us with a volley of artillery we might have been worse frightened, but not much more surprised.

With a glance over the school we suddenly realized our transition in climate, and that we were not in the West Indies but on the continent of North America. Some of the boys stood gazing as if they thought a white elephant from some far tropical clime had suddenly dropped down in their midst! Few of them doubtless had ever seen a man six feet two inches tall, weighing two hundred pounds, in a snow white suit of linen, and a short sack coat on, so early in the season. With eyes stretched they gazed and wondered much, and one of the boys was irreverent enough to think “that our coat left off exactly where it ought to have begun.” However, we never spoke to a much more appreciative and intensely attentive audience.

After our address the pastor came forward and insisted that we preach at eleven. In the olden time when people were too stingy to provide the preacher an ample support, they had old-fashioned box pulpits in which the pastor's threadbare or patched pantaloons were comfortably invisible. The New Orleans pulpit was not of this kind, but it was large enough to conceal our coat's lack of longitude. Standing behind it we felt much more comfortable than we did in the Sunday school. After the sermon we were introduced to many delightful people, including the bright boys and girls who had followed the “white elephant” out of the Sunday school into the main auditorium. We went home with the pastor and his charming wife to an elegant dinner, and all together we had a very enjoyable and memorable day.

We have often been embarrassed in sudden changes of countries, climes and clothes. On returning from a world-wide trip by way of London, we there had one of the finest suits of clothes made that the great world metropolis could produce, and also an up-to-date silk or dress hat, quite tall and stylish, made of cork. In London a man is about as conspicuous without such a hat as he is in Saint Louis with one. The Sunday after we reached home was one of those ideal and idyllic days that Longfellow once wrote about.

“With that nameless splendor everywhere,
That wild, exhilaration in the air
Which makes the passers in the city street, Congratulate each other as they meet.”

We had just enjoyed a sumptuous and magnificent dinner in a palatial and wealthy home in the West End of Saint Louis. On our return a handsome little boy and girl crossed the street on which we were walking, and feeling unusually self-complacent, if not “stuck up.” The two children stopped about fifty feet away and were gazing in mute amazement.

We would doubtless have passed them with out paying any especial attention to them had not our attention been arrested by the plaintive and earnest tones of the little fellow, saying: “Mister! Mister!” We stopped and asked: “What is it, little man?” In a touching tone of anxious bewilderment he asked, “Who are you?” We went home and laid aside that tall hat, and have seldom worn it since! And that snow white linen suit has had a long rest since our memorable day in New Orleans.

It is really no disparagement to Mont Everest to be mentioned in the same paragraph with Kinchinjunga and the smaller peaks and foothills of the Himalayan mountains. Neither should it be any embarrassment to New Orleans to be mentioned in the same paragraph with Galveston, Houston, Mobile, Pensacola and Tampa. We have known all our life that New Orleans was a great city, but we doubt whether Doctor Meek or the average citizens of any of these cities have any just conception of what these cities will be five decades after the opening of the Panama Canal. At the opening of the Twentieth Century it would have been difficult to have convinced any body in the Orient or Occident that the Manchu Dynasty could be overthrown and a great Chinese Republic established in less than a single decade, but such has been accomplished, led by one earnest Christian young man. We are living in a wonderful time in the history of the world.

"We are the heirs of all the ages, in the foremost files of time."—Dr. W. B. Palmore, in the St. Louis Christian Advocate.

Church News

The Atlanta (Ga.) District of the M. E. Church, South, which is practically within the corporate limits of that city, is said to contain 20,000 Methodists.

Bishop Collins Denny will be one of the preachers at Cornell University during the present session. That he will carry a worthy message to the students and faculty of that great institution, is a foregone conclusion.

Rev. A. E. Clement, agent of the Galloway Memorial Hospital of Nashville, Tenn., reports that more than $125,000 was raised for that institution during the Conference year just passed. Bids are now being received for laying the foundation of this structure.

Plans are under way for the establishment of a Methodist College in Southern Idaho. Ex-Governor F. R. Gooding has given for this purpose $25,000 in money and real estate valued at $125,000, and the citizens of the town in which it is to be located have subscribed $150,000.

The General Board of Education of New York (Rockefeller) has promised to give Mississippi College, at Clinton, $100,000 on the condition that the Baptists of the State will raise $200,000. A campaign to meet the prescribed condition will, it is announced, be inaugurated at an early date.

Bishop J. C. Kilgo was slated to participate in the exercises of the 146th anniversary of the old John Street Church of New York City on Sunday, October 27. He was expected to preach at 11 a.m., and to preside over a public meeting in the afternoon. Prior to the sermon in the morning an old-fashioned Love Feast was announced to be held.

Rev. R. F. Eakes, a member of the North Georgia Conference, has been elected business manager of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, in place of Rev. M. J. Cofer, deceased. He is a graduate of Emory College, has been in the ministry about twenty years, and is considered admirably qualified for the responsible position to which he has been chosen.

Prof. Rudolph Eucken, of Jena, expresses the fear that the emphasis being placed on the social side of Christianity may have a tendency to cause men to forget the necessity of cultivating a personal faith. Prof. Eucken is now in this country, and we trust that he will speak often and with emphasis at this point. It is one of the conspicuous dangers of modern-day Christianity.—Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

Dr. Ira Landrith, formerly president of Belmont College, of Nashville, Tenn., has become the president of Ward's Seminary for Young Ladies in the same city, his predecessor, Dr. J. D. Blanton, continuing his connection with the institution as vice-president and chairman of the faculty. It is announced that new buildings will be erected on an ample campus in the vicinity of Vanderbilt University and the Peabody College for Teachers.

Bishop Atkins' work is reported to have given great satisfaction at the West Texas Conference. This body has now over 35,000 members and has passed through a year of large prosperity. Dr. V. A. Godbey, by request, was relieved of the heavy pastorate at Travis Park, San Antonio, and was assigned to the presiding eldership of the Austin District; Rev. D. E. Hawk was sent to Travis Park, and Dr. W. D. Bradfield was returned to the Tenth Street Church of Austin. Rev. J. E. Buck was appointed to Goliad and Fannin, and Rev. C. W. Perkins was continued on the superannuate list. The two last named brethren formerly belonged to the North Mississippi Conference.

According to the decision of the New Hampshire Supreme Court, the $2,000,000 of property belonging to Mrs. Eddy in that State will be turned over to the Christian Scientists as her will directs. She also had holdings amounting to $155,000 in Massachusetts which the Court in that commonwealth declares the law will not allow to be turned over to the organization that she established, but which may be administered as a charitable trust by trustees appointed by the judicial authorities. We have scant patience with Christian Science, but we think Mrs. Eddy's money ought to be used as she prescribed. The disposition of Legislatures and Courts to prevent people from bequeathing money to religious denominations has, in our opinion, little to justify it. Indeed, we regard such a discrimination as a positive reproach to the citizenship that permits it.

We take the following from a recent editorial in the St. Louis Christian Advocate, which was penned by Dr. W. B. Palmore: "Two events of the present year will serve to make 1912 forever luminous in the history of world-wide Methodism. One is the opening in October of the $5,000,000 Wesley House just across the street from Westminster Abbey in London, and the other is the corner-stone laying exercises of the Barnes Hospital, on the King's Highway in St. Louis, the finest boulevard of the West. The Wesley House in London is the largest and richest expression that the Wesleyan Methodist Church has ever made of itself in England, and the Barnes Hospital is the most magnificent expression that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has ever made of itself in America. No institution with which Southern Methodism is connected ever started upon its career with so many millions of money to be used in the service of humanity as the Barnes Hospital."

The Los Angeles (Cal.) Daily Tribune recently carried an announcement that our Trinity Church in that city has contracted for the erection on its present site of a nine-story building to cost for the work immediately to be done $600,000, and possibly involving ultimately the expenditure of a sum double that amount. It is designed to use the first three stories for church work, and the six upper stories, which will contain 350 rooms, as a home for young men. The main auditorium will have a seating capacity of 3000, and besides there will be two smaller ones—one to seat 800 persons and the other 500. The basement will be used as a large banquet hall, and will be fitted up to accommodate 1500 people. A cafe will also be maintained in connection with the home for young men. It is stated that the new structure will probably be completed in fourteen months. The pastor of this enterprising congregation is the Rev. R. P. Howell.

FOR A BETTER THANKSGIVING OBSERVANCE

The National Reform Association, which has for its object the maintaining and promoting of the Christian usages, customs, laws and institutions in our national life, proposes to send free of charge to all pastors in the United States, who will on that day or the Lord's Day preceding or following Thanksgiving preach on national Christianity, a valuable historical twenty-page document, entitled "Our Annual Thanksgiving Festival," by R. C. Wylie, D.D., LL.D.; also a much larger document containing the decision in full of the United States Supreme Court by the late Chief Justice Brewer, entitled, "This is a Christian Nation." For these documents address the National Reform Association, 603-604 Publication Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa. This is the Association that is arranging for the Second World's Christian Citizenship Conference, Portland, Oregon, June 29 to July 6, 1913.

CORNER-STONE LAID AT ACKERMAN.

Dear Brother Meek: Last Sunday was a great day for us at Ackerman. Brother J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, was with us. He preached in the morning a strong, instructive, inspirational sermon, and in the afternoon made a timely and splendid address and assisted in laying the corner stone of our new church building. The excellent service he rendered, while in our midst, was truly enjoyable and beneficial. He is doing a great work at the head of our Conference Female College. Our Methodist people and their friends in North Mississippi should do heartily all in their power to promote the interest of this worthy and growing institution of learning.

We expect our new church building to be completed within two or three weeks. We have placed an order for nice pews and pulpit furniture. These are to be made; hence it will be about two months before they are installed. Our people here have proved themselves to be a heroic band of much faith, great zeal, and large liberality.

Yours fraternally,

J. M. WYATT.

Hon. James S. Sherman, Vice-President of the United States, died at his home in Utica, N. Y., Oct. 30, at the age of 57.

The total farm debt of the United States is said to be over six billion dollars, and that the annual interest paid thereon amounts to $510,000,000.

The parcels post will be installed the first of next week. It will require an expenditure of ten million dollars to put it in operation, and 100,000 new weighing scales will have to be purchased.

Promoters of the rubber industry in America are planning to erect a monument to the memory of Charles Goodyear, the inventor of the present rubber vulcanizing process.

That steel cross ties are to take the place of the wood ones that are now in use seems evident. Recent experiments have proven the steel ties to be more serviceable and durable, and but little more expensive.

Charles Becker was last week sentenced to death for the murder of the gambler, Rosenthal, in New York City, a few months ago. Becker did not commit the crime, but what amounts to the same thing, he is claimed to have ordered it done.

Conservative dealers say that $30,000 were spent on flowers in New Orleans for All Saints' Day. The habit of remembering the graves of loved ones and decorating them with flowers is a beautiful one, but the legend that the dead are any different on the 1st of November than on any other day is purely a superstition.

Illiteracy in the United States is being slowly but surely eradicated. Recent reports claim that at present but 7.7 per cent of our population are unable to read and write, and that the largest number of these are among the negroes, of whom 18.6 per cent are illiterates. In the North, less than 1 per cent of the population is illiterate, but the condition of the negro in the South makes its showing much poorer.

About a score of boys between the ages of 3 and 15 years were arrested in Jefferson Parish last week on the charge of gambling. The boys are alleged to have gambled with marbles and other common playthings. Such is the fruit of the influence of men over boys. Gambling is said to have been carried on with the sanction of those in authority in Jefferson Parish for many years. It has been truly said, "They that sow to the wind shall reap the whirlwind."

A statue in the form of an Egyptian sphinx has been unveiled over the tomb of Oscar Wilde, the famous author, in Paris, France. The monument has been complete for some time, but the curators of the cemetery refused to allow it to be unveiled because they said that a religious burial place was not the place for an undraped nude statue. The authorities of Paris declared differently, which is not surprising, since the decision was rendered in a city noted for its immodest practices.

Prof. W. B. Smith, of Tulane University, has recently announced over his signature his opinion that one of the great needs of the South is a literary and scientific magazine with sufficient financial backing to guarantee its success. His opinion has been endorsed by the daily press of the city, and we believe by all who have given the subject serious consideration. Such a magazine is not needed as a commercial asset, but in order that the South may have a convenient and friendly medium through which to declare its discoveries and opinions to the world.

It is said that Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany recently declared that he no longer considers himself an orthodox Christian. He says that to him creeds have very little meaning, and that he believes the Bible to be the supreme rule of faith and authority, and that outside of it there is very little of authority. In Germany, where the Lutheran and Romish Churches practice rigid intolerance, he may be considered heterodox, but if the Kaiser is sincere in his pronouncement of faith in the Word, he could come to America, join the Methodist Church, and be considered orthodox.

It is announced that permanent reform is impossible in Mexico because only fifteen per cent of its population over the age of 12 years can read and write. A leading paper of America suggests that what is needed is American intervention and the establishment of an American protectorate. America's guiding hand upon the helm might help, but what this benighted nation most needs is a liberal educational policy, and as long as its schools are dominated by the Roman Catholic Church there would be little hope of securing this, even if the United States were in control.

In New York City there exists a law that grants equal salaries to women and men school teachers. This result was obtained by lowering the salaries of the men and raising those of the women. As a result, of the 688 applications for places as teachers now in the hands of the New York School Board, there is not one from a man. Credit to whom credit is due. If a woman has the same earning capacity as a man, possibly she should have the place together with the salary, but the lowering of the salary of men because women have invaded the field of his profession does not augur well for the building of happy homes in the future.

Recently President Taft reviewed a portion of the American Navy in New York harbor. A line of fighting vessels fifteen miles long passed before him, and there were 23,000 officers and men behind the guns of that array of ships. Such a spectacle would stir the blood of any patriotic citizen, and his enthusiasm would only cool when he remembered that England, Germany, Japan and other nations have superior navies and have constructive policies that guarantee their maintenance. While we do not favor war, we do not favor the reckless exposure of our coasts to the guns of the enemy in case of war, and a great navy is about the only means of preventing such exposure.

ONE TENTH IS GOD'S.

I noticed in your paper recently an article on tithe paying, signed "A Christian." May a white-haired grandmother add a humble testimony?

In the early days of my married life I wished earnestly but vainly for means to contribute to the support of the gospel and to aid the needy. My husband was not like-minded and my perplexity was great. One of our preachers urged at all times the plain obligation to pay tithes. I commenced by giving a tenth of our groceries and dry goods, for I had not a dollar. I really enjoyed and had more benefit from our food and clothes after that.

My ability to pay increased every year. Great was my joy when I could send a whole barrel of flour to our preacher's house. More thankful yet was I when I could give my pastor's wife a ten dollar bill besides the groceries.

What a pleasure it is to help any one in need! How often did my glad heart say, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." After many years had passed, as I looked back, I did not seem to notice our decidedly increasing prosperity, but I greatly enjoyed it. We, who had lacked for conveyance, now had horses and carriage. We, who had known hard fare, now had a comfortable larder.

My children from tender years were made my assistants in taking baskets to the pastor's house and to the sick and needy just as they were taught to do so in the Scriptures. Now, in my declining years, to see my sons and daughters grown up God-fearing and liberal-hearted is worth more than all the dollars I could have withheld. The beauty of character shown in their lives is more than fine apparel. I could not in those early days see any way to educate my children; but a hundred times more than the few dollars that, with thankful heart, I contributed to the educational fund, the Almighty gave back to me in my children's education. It was indeed "good measure, pressed down, and running over."

I had often felt the words of the Psalmist: "I watch and am as a sparrow alone upon a house." As my sons and daughters grew up, the friends and associates they brought about me made me glad that they were brought up in the service of the Most High.

I hope this humble testimony as to the value of tithing may lead many to adopt the practice and not falter under difficulties or trying situations.

A GRANDMOTHER.

AN OLD BOOK.

Dear Dr. Meek: During the county fair in Laurel I found on exhibition "The First Five Disciplines of the Methodist Church," bound in one volume, and purchased it. They date from 1785 to 1789. I do not know how rare the book is. I had heard of the book, but had no hope of ever seeing a copy, and certainly none that I would ever possess one. I have read the first four Disciplines, with an interest hard to express. I find that such problems as church extension, missions, and the support of preachers and the care of worn-out preachers came into existence with the birth of Methodism.

Indeed, one can not read the book without being impressed with the correctness of Eccl. 1:9: "The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done; and there is no new thing under the sun." In reading the book I have felt this to be true both of the polity and the doctrines of the Church. Things that seem new to us are only the enlargement of the old things that confronted our fathers. CONTEST CLOSED

The contest that has been in progress since June 1 came to a close on November 1. Miss Belie M. Roberts, of Franklin, La., was fortunate in winning the first prize, which is a free trip from New Orleans to the World's Sunday School Convention, in Zurich, Switzerland, and return. The trip will be under the auspices of the Bureau of University Travel, of Boston, Mass., and its value from New York to Switzerland and return to New York, alone, is $265.

The three next highest in their order are Miss Emmie Peairs, of Slaughter, La.; Miss Ada Parker, of New Orleans; and Mrs. E. M. Henning, of Alexandria, La. The four mentioned include all who obtained the required number of 25 new subscriptions or over, which entitled them to a prize.

The Advocate offered as first prize to the Conferences which did not win the World's Sunday School Convention trip, a trip to Lake Chautauqua, N. Y., and several other American cities of interest. With the withdrawal of the Mississippi Conferences from the contest, we abandoned plans to purchase those trips. However, we are planning to give to the other three contestants trips of interest and value in proportion to their respective standings. What these are will be announced in the next issue of the Advocate. We are now making arrangements for the trips offered.

The standing of the four successful contestants is as follows:

	Votes.
Miss Belie M. Roberts.....	29,173
Miss Emmie Peairs.....	25,325
Miss Ada Parker.....	20,950
Mrs E. M. Henning.....	13,050

MEMORIAL TO THE DEAD.

(For All Saints Day).

By Davis H. Germany.

Sleep on, ye forms of silent clay,
For Mother-earth has claimed her own;
No more ye see the light of day
Unless in worlds to us unknown.

No more the struggling pangs of death
Shall taunt thee on thy homeward way,
For God has taken life and breath,
And laid thee on thy couch of clay.

Perhaps a wild-rose marks the place
So soon to vanish with the age,
While others leave behind no trace,
Or memory to life's hidden page.

But here and there some mottled stone
Reveals the genius sculptor's art,
And seals the life whose soul has gone
To live in worlds from this apart.

But be thy form beneath the sea
Where corals crown thy watery grave,
Or 'neath some sculptor's art should be Where memory's love to life is gave;

Or be it neath a briery hedge,
With naught to mark thy silent dust;
Thy Maker will thee rightly judge
For God is good and God is just.

AS A WOMAN SEES IT.

By Mrs. J. A. Thomas.

Various reasons have been given for this demand upon the church for the rights of the laity for women, among them that we are not getting "credit" for work done in the church—the fact "that other churches have granted it," and so on. Some good woman has suggested in a printed article we read: "That the men are not attending to their business and the women are needed to keep the church work from going to pieces." God pity our church if her pillars must be supported on such slender shoulders, because our men have proven so recreant to their duty!

Truly, a trying position is woman placed in when she must show the world by her incumbency in the office, the ideal steward, trustee and conference delegate, at the same time rock the cradle, and make for her husband a real home, such a home as will supply the church of the future with men ready to give a high and consecrated service to the church. Many women are yet unwilling to exchange these noble privileges of home, and a legitimate field of service in the church for even a seat in the General Conference, where they shall have opportunity to show the brethren "how to do things!"

Some one has asked: "But what of single women, who have no responsibilities of home?" Well, we still are unwilling to believe that the church has no work for women to do, except as she steps in and takes from man the official burdens that God intended for him to carry. As highly as we regard the spiritual and intellectual strength of many, many women, yet we do not feel that our church would exactly profit by this exchange of officials.

If the report is true that the men of our churches are not as faithful as they should be in matters of their religious duty, will it serve to make them more diligent when they see the women trying to assume the responsibilities put upon the men; when, long ago "seven men of good report" were called out to assume the official burdens of the church?

We hope the General Conference will consider a long time before they put upon women "rights" that they sincerely feel they do not need. Certainly it should come only after an overwhelming petition of the entire membership of the women of the church, which we are confident can never be secured.

A few words might be pertinent with reference to some recent measures launched in the effort to secure the passage of this "demand" or "petition," at the next General Conference. Recent circulars have carried the news that it is desired of each Annual Conference of preachers this year that they "appoint a committee to look into the question of laity rights, and report on same, the following year" (which is the year for election of delegates to the General Conference).

Somehow we can but feel if there is a preacher in Southern Methodism who doesn't know about this, after all that has been said or written on the subject for several years past, we had just as well let him alone. A Texas Conference of women passed a "resolution" last year, "that they pledge themselves to work for the election to the next General Conference, of such men as were known to favor granting to women the rights of the laity," and this "suggestion" was generously passed on to other conferences.

If we had not been convinced before, that this laity rights movement was wrong, we would have been convinced after seeing from our Texas sisters what it was leading to. Think of refined Christian womanhood endeavoring to force the carrying out of her desires by holding such a "whip" over the heads of the ministers of the church as well as laymen! The women of the Eastern Conferences are not yet charged with the selection of the delegates to any conference and if by any special privilege the sisters in Texas have acquired it, we did not know of it before. We have heard it whispered that those sturdy men of the Lone Star State are not "skeeered" easily, and we hardly think the passage of the above mentioned resolution is causing many sleepless nights to even those filled with the idea that they are fine "delegate timber," but we do know that many of our Georgia brethren are not, and we believe they will sit very "steady in the boat," and hold very calmly to their honest convictions, even though the church at some future time should be stormed during a session of the Annual Conference by these charming ecclesiastical lobbyists. We trust the recent plan of thrusting this matter upon the conferences will meet a speedy death, and while we would not seem harsh, yet we can but feel that we can hope for no better thing for the whole agitation for "laity rights," than that it should meet a death "that knows no resurrection," at the next session of our General Conference.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

A GREAT SUNDAY SCHOOL.

In keeping with its spirit of progress, our First Church of Shreveport had a rousing rally day in the Sunday school on Oct. 13, at 11 a. m. The Elementary department, under the leadership of Mrs. Cameron, furnished a most elaborate program, beginning with a cradle roll procession, the babies being rolled in their decorated buggies by the smaller children, who carried their dolls, and, when in position on the stage, surrounded the babies, in kneeling posture, while a member of the choir sang "My Baby." Then followed fine drills and pantomime exercises by the girls, marches and flag drills by the boys, special music by the choir, and a male quartette from the Queensboro Sunday school, reports from the large Bible classes and a collection for the orphanage. But before this a record was being made by the Bible classes at the teaching hour. The Baird class had present 234; Dr. Scales' Wesley class had 164; the Fulton class, 46; the Baraca class, 64; the Intermediate department, 88, and the Elementary department, 833. This, with the 174 visitors, made a grand total of 1605, a record-breaking attendance for this section of the country.

Superintendent McKennon and the pastor, Dr. Cameron, believe that since Jesus gathered great multitudes about him, and worked his miracles among them, they too should aim to reach not the few but the many, and undertook to have present on this occasion 1,500, and went beyond that mark by 105. For days they worked from house to house, at times having as many as 100 in the field, and used the mails and the press without stint, trying to reach the unreached, and a large increase in members was the result. The united and enthusiastic team work of this school is fine. The pastor, superintendent and leaders seem to have succeeded in putting their zeal and enthusiasm into the body of their official members, and all are working for an enrollment of 2,500 in all departments by Conference, and are entering into a friendly competition with the four largest schools of Southern Methodism, expecting to outstrip them all in making the Sunday school of First Church, Shreveport, the greatest in the Church. So may it be. We have other Sunday schools that should get in line, and not be satisfied with "a poor dying rate." What do our leaders say to following the example of this school in going from an attendance twenty months ago of some 175 to this record-breaking attendance of 1,605?

AN INTERESTING OCCASION

On the evening of Oct. 27, 1912, the Presidio Post Chapel, San Francisco, had a special Musicale devoted to the Hymns of Fanny J. Crosby, who was styled in the program "America's Greatest Hymn Writer." In the course of the exercises, which were under the direction of Chaplain J. A. Randolph and Chaplain Gavitt, the following telegram from Fanny J. Crosby was read:

"Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 22, 1912.

"John A. Randolph,

Chaplain, Presidio of San Francisco, Cal.:

To the men of our Army, greeting. May the God whose omnipotent will calms the winds and rules the waves so fill you with his Spirit that you may quell the storms within and live as worthy soldiers of the nation whose motto is, 'In God We Trust.'

Sincerely yours,

GREYHOUNDS THE OLDEST DOGS.

The greyhound of Altcar and the Waterloo Cup is the oldest domesticated dog, and can be traced back by sculptures and frescoes for thirteen centuries before the Christian era. A fine group of greyhounds fondling each other at the British Museum must be more than two thousand years old, and some of the dogs depicted in hunting scenes on the Egyptian monuments are of the greyhound type. Greyhounds have been popular in England since King Canute's time, but nobody but a "gentleman," or a freeholder, was allowed to keep them. Even so recently as 1853 a license to keep a greyhound cost $6.00, which was nearly treble the tax imposed by the State on other dogs.—From the London Chronicle.

MEASURING TIME BY MOONS.

The Indians measure time from one full moon to the next. For the year they count twelve moons, and then they add one more, which they call the "lost moon," thus making thirteen moons in all to a full year.

The Indians have a different name for each month. They call the month of January the "cold moon." February is the "snowy moon"; March, the "green moon"; April, the "moon of plants"; and May, the "moon of flowers." June is called the "hot moon"; July, the "moon of the deer"; August, the "sturgeon moon," and September, the "fruit moon." October is known as the "traveling moon"; November, the "beaver moon," and December is named the "hunting moon."—Apples of Gold.

IDA ROSS'S ESSAY.

The frown on Ida Ross's face deepened as she looked out of the window. Finally she turned to her aunt. "I never knew of anybody who had such bad luck," she complained. "Dr. Rice has just offered a prize for the best essay on some nature study, and I cannot compete. How could I study nature when I am tied to a chair by a broken limb?"

Mrs. Strong smiled at the gloomy figure in the rocking chair. "Where there is a will, there is a way," she quoted softly.

Ida looked positively vexed, for she had expected her aunt to sympathize with her very heartily. "Who could have the will or find the way to do a thing like that when they cannot walk?" she questioned. "My limb hurts, too, and nobody can work if they are in pain. I don't believe anybody ever had such a misfortune."

"How about Milton?" inquired her aunt. "He lost his eyesight, but he put aside the thoughts of his misfortune and wrote for the world his wonderful 'Paradise Lost.' Robert Louis Stevenson scarcely passed a day without pain. He lived half his life with only one lung, yet he wrote many books, and all of them are filled with a message of hope, courage and cheer. Sidney Lanier, ill and in poverty, gave us poems that are full of inspiration."

"Yes, but those were men. I never heard of women doing things like that when they were sick or could not get around," returned Ida.

"You have some interesting studies before you, then," remarked Mrs. Strong. "Mrs. Browning was an invalid, but she was also a very busy poet. Fanny Crosby, blind from a very little child, has written some of our most noted hymns. You told me something that you recently learned in school about Helen Keller; you remember that she is blind. From childhood these women were handicapped by ill health and misfortune, yet the world is richer and better for their work and the example of their great courage."

"Please don't tell me about any more people, auntie. I see what you mean: my misfortune is nothing compared to those you have mentioned, for my limb will soon be well again; yet these people didn't spend their time complaining." The frown had disappeared, and Ida looked very thoughtful as her aunt left the room.

"Ida is calling for something," Mrs. Ross said to her sister an hour later.

"Let me go," said Mrs. Strong. "If I cannot help you with your work, I can, at least, wait upon Ida. Perhaps it is a good thing that I came to visit you while she is laid up with this broken limb."

"Would you bring me a pencil and paper, please, auntie?" Ida requested with an eager note in her voice. "I see some squirrels out here, and I intend to watch them and see what I can learn about them."

"That is a good idea," said Mrs. Strong encouragingly, as she handed the articles to Ida.

During the next ten days Ida watched the squirrels every day. She noticed the home in the tree, their play, the stores they were hiding for winter. She wrote down the results of her observations, then she read and rewrote many times. Two days before the close of the contest Mrs. Strong carried an essay to school for her. It was called "The Squirrels in the Yard," and it was Ida's very best work, for she had watched the squirrels closely, and had taken great pains with every word and sentence that she wrote about them.

It was two weeks later that Mr. and Mrs. Ross and Mrs. Strong came into Ida's room one morning before she was up. Mr. Ross held the morning paper before her and pointed to a headline: "Ida Ross Wins First Prize for Essay," she read in astonishment. The article told of her accident, and mentioned that the essay was written from the knowledge she had gained while watching the squirrels from the window. Comment was made on the accuracy of all the facts, and the essay was published in full.

"It was all due to you, auntie, and you should have some of the credit," Ida exclaimed after she had read every word. "If you had sympathized with me that morning I talked about my accident, I would have done little else all these weeks but complain about my ill luck. Your words set me to work. I guess I watched the squirrels more closely than if I had been able to get out of doors. At least I won the prize."

"It wasn't all due to me," Mrs. Strong assured her. "I gave you the idea that you could do something even if you did have a broken limb; but you saw your opportunity, which was the squirrels in the yard, and made the most of it."—Herald and Presbyter.

Mansfield Female College.

Blessed indeed must it be, if it is more blessed to give than to receive. The College Improvement League has just presented us with one hundred and thirty-two pieces of silverware—Rogers 1847, and Mr. Tallafarro, our jeweler, had each piece engraved with the initials M. F. C. Alma mater! Our faith, our hopes, our love abide in thee.

The Methodist church owns its old church building and a strip of land directly across the front of the College campus which it proposes to sell to the College for $1000, about half of its worth. This land and house would be given the College were not the church in debt for the new house of worship. It would never do to let this property fall into private hands. Brother Morris, our pastor, is trying to find one hundred friends of the College who will give $10 or more in order to secure this valuable property for the institution. The College can use the house for a gymnasium or boarding hall.

Editorial.

"To one who owns a smile and song,
The skies are blue and bright;
The world can never seem all wrong,
If we ourselves are right."

The British Weekly says: "The Church must always teach that no material prosperity will be anything but failure if the spiritual element is absent. If all the physical wants of men were supplied, if plenty prevailed everywhere, if a socialistic union were perfected, no true happiness would ensue unless the pathway to and from the unseen world which surrounds us were kept open." This is only a forceful comment upon the memorable words of Scripture quoted by our Lord at the time of his temptation, "Man shall not live by bread alone." The requirements of a man's body lack much of being his greatest needs.

A writer in a current periodical remarks that "when the Bible was translated into the Japanese language an equivalent to the word 'baptize' could not be found, and the word 'soak' had to be used instead; so the Japanese Bible students are acquainted with a person named 'John the Soaker,' and with the doctrine of 'soaking for the remission of sins.'" We should think that this version would be popular with those who are disposed to stickle for "much water" as a necessary part of the plan of salvation.

There is much reckless writing as well as speaking. Amid the conflicting statements that one comes across in reading one scarcely knows what to believe. Never was there a time when the question, what is the truth? was more pertinent than now. The man who in this day escapes being confused and misled is most fortunate. Few things are more helpful to a person in life than a clear perception—the ability to detect the false and to discover the genuine. And we all need to select with care the books and periodicals that we peruse and to guard against an excessive amount of credulity. A bit of skepticism concerning matters that are unusual and startling is most wholesome.

Last week's issue of the Northwestern Christian Advocate (Chicago) contained the following statement: "Representative W. B. McKinley, of Champaign, Ill., presented the Presbyterians a $50,000 memorial church to be devoted to the spiritual interests of the students of the State University. This is a wise benefaction. Methodism should have such a church at the seat of every State University." Our distinguished contemporary is, we think, unquestionably right. The Protestant evangelical Churches need to make their religious influence strongly felt in all our higher public institutions of learning. In this connection, we desire to express our gratification at the announcement that the Southern Methodists will in the near future establish a church near Tulane University, in this city. This movement is most timely, and should be consummated with the least possible delay.

THE BALKAN WAR.

The war between the three Balkan States of Bulgaria, Serbia, and Montenegro, supplemented by Greece, on the one side, and Turkey on the other, has gone steadily and vigorously on ever since the announcement of its outbreak. And, to the surprise of the civilized world, the Turks seem to have been beaten everywhere, and the latest dispatches represent them as retreating toward Constantinople, leaving Adrianople, the strongest point of defense in the northern part of the empire, exposed to capture. There is also some expectation that Constantinople itself will soon be in a state of siege, and rumors have been afloat that the Porte has already appealed to the Powers to intervene and stop the conflict.

This is, indeed, good news. Hundreds of thousands of kinsmen of the people living in the Balkan States and in Greece reside in Turkish dominions, and they are generally Christians. They have been cruelly oppressed by Turkey for years, and many horrible massacres have been perpetrated among them. Though these foreign provinces under the sway of the Sultan were to be guaranteed local self-government according to the Treaty of Berlin, signed by the European Powers in 1878, Turkey has ignored that stipulation, and the great nations have seemed to care little about it. As a result, the fires of hatred have continued to smoulder in the nearby Balkan States, and the only reason that they have not flamed forth long before is because these countries themselves have not been altogether friendly. But lately they have sunk their differences out of sight, and have united to punish the oppressor of their suffering kinsmen.

It is to be hoped that success will continue to crown the efforts of the allies. They deserve to win. Their triumph would doubtless help the cause of humanity and be a victory for the Cross over the Crescent. There is now some talk to the effect that the confederacy which has been formed among these weak little States may become permanent, resulting in the development of a peninsula nation of considerable strength along the shores of the Mediterranean Sea. This would be a happy outcome from the bloody struggle, though it is doubtful whether it would please the selfish European Powers, whose course in the management of the Balkan and Turkish affairs has been far from creditable.

DR. STEEL IN NEW ORLEANS.

Dr. S. A. Steel spent last Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday in New Orleans, coming to fill an engagement that he had at Parker Memorial Church. He delivered three lectures on the succeeding week nights, preached a great sermon on "The Resurrection of Christ" at the morning hour on Sunday, and in the evening gave his famous address on "The Pioneers of Methodism." He was greeted by large audiences that in many ways manifested their high appreciation of the utterances of the gifted speaker. One only needs to see a man like Dr. Steel before a popular assemblage to be convinced that oratory has not lost its power to charm and enthuse the public. It is doubtful whether American Methodism has ever had a more eloquent preacher than this brilliant ex-Mississippian. Such rhetoric, such flights of the imagination, such high-class humor, such perfect modulation and clear enunciation, and a voice that so completely and easily responds to every demand made upon it, are indeed seldom heard. But Dr. Steel is more than a mere talking phenomenon. He is a man of wide reading, of classical culture, and of a genial and brotherly spirit. We always count it a privilege to be in his company, and to listen to him in the pulpit or on the platform is to us invariably a blessing and inspiration. Nothing in the world so fascinates us as to be where we can observe the coruscations of one dowered with genius. And undoubtedly this distinguished son of Methodism has been touched with the spark divine.

A REMARKABLE UTTERANCE.

The Baptist Record, of Jackson, Miss., in its issue of October 24, contained the following editorial observation:

"Those who change the form of baptism from a burial to anything else are desecrating the grave of our Lord. The so-called desecration of the tomb of Jesus by the Turks was the cause of the crusades, the protest and uprising of Christendom, but the symbol of his burial and resurrection was destroyed by many of these same crusaders. The despoiling of graves is one of the most heinous offenses against the most cherished sentiments of the heart. Why rob baptism of its wealth of meaning and substitute something that has no real significance?"

If this had emanated from some sources it would have occasioned us little surprise, but we can scarcely believe that it was written by a man of Brother Lipsey's intellectual reach. Surely he must have been away and some other man whose reason is all imagination must have been occupying the tripod, when this remarkable paragraph found its way into existence. We forbear to comment upon it—it is its own best answer.

WOULD BE UNNECESSARY.

A writer in a current religious journal discusses the question, "How to Lead the Children in Our Sunday Schools to Christ?" So far as the small ones are concerned, the brother, according to some of our present-day teaching, is misdirecting his efforts. Having been born regenerate, they do not need to be led to the Master, but merely kept from going astray. Queer teaching for the followers of John Wesley! We suppose that Adam Clarke was wrong in stating that he was converted at four years of age, and also many other shining lights in the Church who claim to have found the Savior between the ages of five and ten. Or possibly the explanation is that they had backslidden and did not know it; that in addition to the doctrine of infant regeneration, we are to have the doctrine of infant apostasy.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. S. Rutledge, of Indian Bayou, La., is pleased with the conditions and outlook in his charge. He is keeping busy, and expects to make a good report at Conference.

The revival meeting which has been in progress at Epworth Church, this city, for the last two weeks, has been fruitful of good results. Brother Doss, the pastor, is being assisted by Brother Singleton during the present week, and his sermons are reported to be reaching the hearts of his hearers.

The pulpit of the Methodist Church at Wesson, Miss., was filled last Sunday at 11 a.m. by Rev. R. H. Barr, of Beauregard, and at night by Rev. J. T. Leggett, the presiding elder of the Brookhaven District. As is stated elsewhere, the pastor, Rev. J. M. Corley, is ill at a hospital in Jackson, Miss.

Brother Thomas, the effective pastor of Second Church, New Orleans, has done a fine year's work. In addition to having received many new members into the Church, he has secured enough money to finish paying the indebtedness on his house of worship. The date of the dedication of the building will be announced in the near future.

Rev. J. L. Sutton has gone to Baltimore, Md., for the purpose of attending the Annual Convention of the National Prison Reform Association. He will be gone about ten days. Upon his return he will enter at once upon a revival campaign at the Louisiana Avenue Church, in which he will have the assistance of Rev. C. C. Sealeman, of Webb City, Mo.

Rev. J. W. Ramsay, of Utica, Miss., recently held a successful meeting for Rev. W. H. Young, at Roxie, Miss. Some of the good results were a revival in the church, several accessions to its membership, the organization of a Sunday school, and a resolution upon the part of leading men in the community to see that the pastor's salary is paid in full.

Rev. C. M. Crossley, of Meridian, Miss., writes as follows: "Please let me state in the Advocate that I have a set of the Modern World Dictionary, practically new, that I will sell for less than one-half of the original cost, with payments to suit the purchaser. Anyone desiring these volumes should write me at once at the address given above."

Mrs. J. D. Barbee, of Greenville, Miss., is visiting relatives in Memphis, Tenn., having been carried thither by the anticipated ringing of wedding bells.

The charge at Fernwood and South McComb (Mississippi) which has been left vacant by the transfer of Rev. D. Scarborough to California, will be served by Dr. I. W. Cooper until Conference.

The Methodist revival at Bogalusa, La., which is being conducted by Rev. L. I. McCain and Dr. A. C. Holder, is reported by the press dispatches to be growing in power and interest. It was stated last Saturday that there had been more than two hundred conversions.

We regretted to be informed last week that Major R. W. Millsaps, of Jackson, Miss., was indisposed with a severe cold. We trust that ere this he is well on the way toward a complete recovery. Southern Methodism has no layman who is more loyal to the Church or who has a wider outlook than this philanthropic Mississippian.

Dr. M. W. Swartz delivered an able address to the Millsaps Y. M. C. A. last Friday evening on the subject of "Environment," and Dr. J. M. Sullivan talked impressively to the Preachers' League of the College on the preceding night. Our Millsaps College professors are wide awake to the interests of the students in attendance upon that institution.

A movement was set on foot by the New Orleans pastors at their meeting a week ago to celebrate the centennial of Methodism in New Orleans next year. Dr. J. M. Henry, the presiding elder, and Revs. W. L. Doss and W. W. Holmes were named as a committee to gather historical data and put in shape a definite plan for the celebration.

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, who is well known in North Mississippi, is spending a few days with Rev. W. H. Saunders, the pastor of our Washington Street Church of Vicksburg. Taking advantage of Brother Kilgore's presence, Brother Saunders is having him to conduct a series of services for his people. As a result, there were four accessions to the Church last Sunday.

Dr. T. B. Holloman filled the pulpit of the Crawford Street Church of Vicksburg on Sunday, October 27, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. C. W. Crisler, who was engaged in a meeting at Woodville, Miss. Rev. C. M. Chapman, the president of Port Gibson College, preached to Dr. Holloman's congregation in Port Gibson both at 11 o'clock and at night.

Rev. L. P. Wasson writes encouragingly of his work at Tunica, Miss. It is the habit of this capable young pastor to succeed wherever he labors. There are quite a number of choice spirits in the congregation that he serves. The women workers of this church especially deserve to be commended for what they have accomplished within the past few years.

Rev. D. C. Bennett, of Merryville, La., has recently made a new record in church building. At his third quarterly conference he was not thinking of a new church. At his fourth quarterly conference a new church building was completed at Merryville, and the conference was held in it. The new structure will seat about 200 people, and was erected at a cost of more than a thousand dollars.

In a personal note to the Editor, Dr. Theo. Copeland, of St. Louis, states that their Conference being over, all of our pastors in the great Missouri metropolis have settled down to energetic work. He speaks in terms of high appreciation of the presidency of Bishop Denny, who presided over their late annual convocation in place of Bishop Hoss.

Rev. C. T. Barton, formerly of North Mississippi, has had a most successful year in his charge at Reedy, West Virginia. He reported in his summary of what was accomplished 80 conversions, 44 additions to the Church, and $2455 raised for all purposes. He also successfully completed his second-year course of study, and was voted into full connection by the Kentucky Annual Conference.

We regret to be informed that Sister Brogan, the wife of our pastor at Starkville, has lately had to undergo a serious operation; that Brother Brogan himself has not been well for some time, and that their little daughter has recently been confined to her bed. We sincerely hope that all of these stricken ones will soon fully recover, and we suggest that our people who pray would do well to remember them at the throne of grace.

The new parsonage at McDonoughville will have been completed before another issue of the Advocate is mailed out. It is a modern cottage, containing six rooms, a vestibule, hall and bathroom, and was built at a cost of between $2000 and $2500. Rev. A. J. Gearheard and his family will enjoy the privilege of living in it at least one month, and then comes the uncertainties of Conference.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of Arcadia, La., writes: "On October 31, we buried the Nestor of Arcadia Methodism, Mr. Wm. J. Leslie, who was 85 years old. His life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the world, 'This was a man.' Our work here was never in a better condition, and we hope to make a good showing at Conference."

Rev. W. L. Graves, our pastor at Iuka, Miss., reports the death and burial at that place on October 31, of Mrs. Beulah Campbell, a sister of Rev. John and Rev. Walter Mitchell. He also bears testimony to her noble Christian character and usefulness in life. We regret to chronicle this sad occurrence, and we pray that divine grace may comfort the hearts that it has left desolate and lonely.

Writing from Glenmora, La., on Nov. 2, Rev. W. J. Newsom says: "I have been very sick for three weeks and am still in bed; in consequence, my work has been much hindered. I ask the brethren of the Louisiana Conference to pray for my recovery." We are sorry to hear of the illness of this faithful worker, and we hope that he may soon find relief from the malady with which he is afflicted. Of course, his fellow-itinerants will comply with his request.

We are informed that Mr. Robert Somerville, Jr., of Cleveland, Miss., and Miss Annie Keith Frazier, the eldest daughter of ex-United States Senator Frazier of Tennessee, will be married at Chattanooga on November 20. Mr. Somerville is the eldest son of Mr. Robert Somerville and Mrs. Nellie Nugent Somerville, of Greenville, Miss., and is a young attorney of superior attainments and great promise. We extend in advance our heartiest congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin is carrying forward the interests of the Church grandly at McComb City, Miss. He recently paid a $4500 debt on our excellent house of worship there, which, considering the fact that this town is in the territory infested with the boll weevil and that only a few months ago it was in the throes of a long-continued strike, is a truly remarkable achievement. Brother Hardin is one of the most efficient and resourceful men in the Mississippi Conference.

Miss Fannie C. Moore, of Saucier, Miss., sends us the following sad announcement: "Mrs. Holland C. Moore, wife of Rev. Waldo W. Moore, went away to dwell in her Father's house on high on October 7, 1912. A more extended notice will be given later." We deeply regret to be informed of the death of this elect woman, and we extend the full measure of our sympathy to our stricken brother and all the others upon whom the shadow of this sore bereavement has fallen.

Rev. J. M. Corley, our pastor at Wesson, Miss., underwent an operation for gallstones and appendicitis at the Baptist Hospital at Jackson, Miss., on Tuesday, November 22. His condition was found to be quite serious, but he passed through the trying ordeal as well as could be expected, and our last information was that he was doing fairly well. We earnestly pray that no complications may arise, and that this useful minister may speedily recover and soon be able to take up again his "loved employ."

The Woman's Missionary Society of Homer, La., observed the week from October 20th to 27th as a season of prayer. An interesting program of evening services extending from one Sabbath through the succeeding one was arranged and carried out. The following brethren contributed to the success of this interesting occasion by delivering either a sermon or address: Rev. R. W. Tucker, Rev. W. H. Coleman, Rev. A. S. Lutz, and Dr. C. W. Carter. One of the most interesting features of the exercises was the unusually fine music and singing.

Rev. W. L. Graves, the faithful pastor, reports a gracious revival at Iuka, Miss. He says: "We have just closed a most helpful meeting in our church here. Rev. G. A. Klein did the preaching, and the singing was conducted by Mr. P. M. Boyd. The whole town was delighted with the labors of these brethren. Fifty names were received for membership in the various Churches, twenty-five uniting with our Church on Sunday, October 27. More than a hundred of our young people are now meeting weekly for prayer, song, and testimonies. This series of services did much for our community."

Rev. I. D. Borders, who has lately been transferred from the Pacific to the North Mississippi Conference, recently spent several days among his old parishioners at Holly Springs, Miss., being the guest of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Fant. He preached in the Methodist Church at 11 o'clock on Sunday, Oct. 27, to a large congregation, and at the evening hour delivered an interesting talk on California. Brother Borders was born, reared, and educated in North Mississippi, and he will be given a warm welcome back to the State of his nativity. He is a minister of unusual gifts and accomplishments.

A delightful luncheon was served in the private dining hall of the Monteleone Hotel in New Orleans on Oct. 29, in honor of Bishop E. D. Mouzon, who was passing through the city en route to the fall meeting of the College of Bishops. Forty-three plates were served, and there gathered around the table some of the leading laymen and all the preachers of our Church in New Orleans. Bishop James Atkins, Rev. C. W. Crisler of Vicksburg, Miss., Rev. Briscoe Carter of Alexandria, La., and Rev. W. W. Drake of Baton Rouge, La., were also in attendance. A number of brotherly addresses were delivered, all of which sounded words of praise for New Orleans Methodism, its past history, its present activities, and its future outlook.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, the presiding elder of the Meridian District, writes that a few days since Rev. A. S. Oliver, our pastor at Matherville, Miss., went to his appointment at Andrews Chapel, taking his family with him, and that while there his only son, De Witt, was stricken with illness and died on October 22. The distressed family had scarcely returned home from the funeral before Maggie Louise, their only remaining child, was taken critically sick, and for forty-eight hours their anxiety was most intense. We are glad to state, however, that she is now convalescing. Brother and Sister Oliver may feel fully assured that they have the sympathy and prayers of a host of friends in this trying time of sorrow and bereavement.

We are indebted to our gifted young friend, Rev. Claude M. Simpson, for a printed program of the Kansas City Preachers' Meeting for 1912 and 1913. It is far and away the most suggestive series of topics that we have ever seen arranged for an organization of this kind. Brother Simpson has been returned to the West Port Church in Kansas City for the fourth year, and his many friends in Mississippi will be pleased to learn that his labors as the shepherd of this flock have been crowned with much success. He has just finished raising a subscription of $5000 on a church debt, and during his three-years pastorate more than 200 names have been added to the membership roll. This is another instance of a Millsaps man showing the metal that is in him and reflecting credit upon his alma mater.

There are few more energetic workers in the Methodist itinerancy than Dr. I. W. Cooper, the beloved president of Whitworth College. He is continually stirring around among the brethren and allows no grass to grow under his feet. He recently made an automobile trip from Canton to Carthage, where he delivered an eloquent address on education to the public school and preached twice in our church at that place. He reports that our pastor there, Rev. R. T. Pickett, has recently had the parsonage dressed in a new coat of paint, and that he is doing a fine work. Dr. Cooper says that with the construction of the projected railway from Canton to Birmingham (a branch of the Illinois Central) Leake County will undoubtedly undergo a great development and that Carthage will become a place of considerable importance. He states that he was most favorably impressed by the people that he met on his interesting inland journey.

LIFE EVERLASTING.

Men hunger and thirst for life. Scant indeed is the life most men live. It is like trying to quench one's burning thirst from a shallow pool of dirty water in the middle of a field where cattle come down to drink and swine to wallow. What is a life worth which is measured by a few thousand dollars, or a little fading glory, or a flickering spark of worldly and sinful pleasure? Yet this is all some men have and all they hope for. They earnestly desire to live longer, but they are painfully conscious that the life they are now living is too shallow and wretched to last. It must go out and it ought to go out because it is not fit to go on. Much as they love life, they shrink from wishing that their life shall be everlasting.

What men need is a life so rich, so sweet, so deep, so beautiful, so full of meaning that it is fit to endure forever. Jesus has it, and he can give it. "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly," saith the Lord. "He that lives and believeth in me shall never die." They have eternal life in them. "If any man thirst, let him come to me and drink." "The water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up unto eternal life."—New York Christian Advocate.

On October 18 the angel of death claimed little MARY ELEANOR, the only daughter of Mr. W. G. and Mrs. Mabel Coker Barrow of Madison County, Miss. She was a beautiful, sweet little girl of only ten summers, and was taken away so suddenly that we can hardly realize that she is gone. May the parents and loved ones be comforted by the Spirit of God and consoled by the assurance that the little one is safe in the arms of Jesus; and may this sad bereavement ever draw them nearer to Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Her Pastor,
L. L. ROBERTS.

The subject of this sketch, JULIA GARTLEY NOLEN, was born in Yazoo County, near Benton, Miss., Jan. 4, 1881, and passed quietly away Sept. 12, 1912. All that was mortal of this once beautiful, tender and angelic girl was quietly and peacefully laid to rest by loving hands in the Nolan Cemetery, near Benton, Miss., where she will peacefully slumber until the morning of the resurrection. She was the eldest daughter of Captain James and Mrs. Florence Owens Nolen. She was a devoted member of the M. E. Church, South, and trusted with childish simplicity in that eternal salvation which has been promised to the good and pure from the foundation of the world. Dear ones, grieve not over her departure, for the parting will not be long. She will patiently wait and watch at the beautiful gate for your coming; she is not dead, but sleepeth. Her sufferings on earth may have been great, but she is now safe in that beautiful haven of rest, where there is no sickness, sorrow nor death, and where she can now truly exclaim: "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" Farewell, sweet girl; may the earth lie lightly upon thee, and the undying laurels of victory grow green over thy grave. A RELATIVE.

On July 8, 1912, death took from our midst MRS. ANNA SAUCIER, who was born November 15, 1846. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lasom Bullock. Sister Saucier joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of 17 years and remained a faithful member of the same until her death. She was married to Mr. G. E. Saucier May 31, 1866. There remained to mourn her going, two brothers, eight children and six grandchildren. She died in the faith. In less than a month after her demise there came to her sorrowing family another sore bereavement, when MRS. LIZZIE BERWICK, the youngest daughter of the departed, Mrs. Saucier, died on August 8 and was laid to rest by the side of her mother. She was born December 14, 1891, joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1900, and later became a very active worker in the Church. She was married to Mr. M. L. Berwick October 3, 1910. Mr. Berwick's sorrow was deepened on August 5, by the death of their only son, JOSEPH WINFIELD BERWICK, who after ten months of life followed his mother to the grave. Thus, there were laid to rest, side by side, Sister Saucier, her daughter and grandson. That the God of all grace may sustain and comfort the sorrowing ones is the prayer of their pastor.

C. C. GIBSON.

Biloxi, Miss.

MICHAEL BOLTZ, father of Rev. H. J. Boltz, was born Aug. 31, 1830, at Drusweiler, near Bergzabern, Bavaria, Germany, and departed this life at Grand Cane, La., March 7, 1912. He was in the 82d year of his age. He was married four times, and all of his wives were good, Christian women. His first wife, the mother of Rev. H. J. Boltz, died about 56 years ago in the town of Camden, Wilcox County, Ala. In 1870, about twelve years after his second marriage, he moved to Louisiana and settled near Many, Sabine parish, at which place he remained until four years ago. At this time he became so afflicted that he left his home and went to live with Rev. H. J. Boltz, his only child. He was one of the charter members of the old New Hope Church, located in Sabine parish, between Fort Jessup and Many. For some years he was not at all times as consistent as he should have been; but the last few years of his life he spent devotedly serving his Lord and Master. The writer was well acquainted with Brother Boltz, having been his pastor at different times. His house was the preacher's home. All of the preachers who preached on that charge knew Uncle Mike. He never owned a dollar that was too good to give to the cause of God. But he is gone. We may forget how he looked, but we will never forget his deeds of kindness and his love for the Church. S. S. HOLLADAY.

MRS. MARY L. ALLEN was born in Washington County, Ark., May 16, 1848, and at the age of eighteen years she was happily married to Mr. J. D. Allen at Arkadelphia, Clark County, Ark. She continued to reside there until about twenty years ago when they moved to Louisiana. She was living in the town of Alberta when she passed to her reward on June 21, 1912, surrounded by her entire family of devoted children. Sister Allen was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Parre Cliffe, Ark., at the age of fifteen years, and lived to the end a consistent Christian life. She was loyal to her Church and a liberal supporter of its institutions. She was stricken with paralysis about six years ago and her great suffering was patiently borne. All that medical skill and loving hearts and hands could do was done to heal and restore her, but God in his wisdom lifted her out of the pain and suffering of bodily affliction and took her to her beautiful home in heaven. A sweeter Christian, a more devoted mother, a more faithful wife, a better neighbor and a truer friend to all, this writer has never seen. To the aged husband, bereaved of a faithful companion, and to the sorrowing, broken-hearted children, God has given a rich heritage and a great treasure in this and the world to come, in this wife and mother who was so beautiful in character. May the comforting power of the Holy Ghost abide with the sorrowing ones until they all meet again beyond the river "where the surges cease to roll."

JOHN G. SLOANE.

MRS. MATTIE F. ESTES (nee Mayerhoff), was born in Clark County, Miss., June 3, 1843, and died October 4, 1912. Mrs. Estes was Christened when an infant and joined the M. E. Church, South, when a child, and was always a consistent member and loyal to her Church. Her father, Mr. C. F. Mayerhoff, was one of the pioneers of this place (Enterprise) and county. She and Mr. Estes were married November 18, 1863, by Rev. Thomas Ware. God blessed this union with six children, three girls and three boys. Little Annie was called to the home above when only eight years old, and Mrs. Mary Mathis died April 19, 1910. Sister Estes was prominent in all church work. For a number of years she was treasurer of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of this church. In her home she was always cheerful. Her delight was to have everything in its place. Her happiest moments were when ministering to loved ones. Her influence over her husband and children was of the highest order, and their devotion to her was beautiful. Two of her sons, Will and Charles, are prominent lawyers, the elder having been Sunday school superintendent and a steward for a number of years. The other son, Shelton, is a highly respected merchant of this place. Her daughter, Mrs. Toles, married a prominent planter of Kemper County, and is held in high esteem by all who know her. During her last illness, realizing that death would soon come, Sister Estes called all the family around her bedside, telling each one how she appreciated what they had done for her; that she was ready to go, only regretting to leave her loved ones. After this she never spoke of death any more. She passed away at her daughter's home at Daleville, Miss., and the remains were brought back to her own home, Enterprise, for interment. The pastor was assisted in the funeral obsequies by the Presbyterian minister, Brother Coit, and Dr. Hackett of the Baptist Church, both of whom were old acquaintances. B. W. LEWIS.

Tidings From the Field

Coalville, Miss.

We have had a busy year on the Coalville circuit. Beside the regular pastoral work, we have held four protracted meetings and one camp meeting, in which the following brethren assisted: Revs. W. M. Sullivan, J. M. Lewis, W. T. Griffin, H. Mellard and H. J. Moore, of the itinerant ranks, and J. L. Jordan, E. C. Cain and L. Fayard, local preachers. Our presiding elder, W. B. Jones, was with us for a while at the Palmer Creek Camp Meeting and preached several times. Brothers W. W. Moore and Geo. Guice preached one sermon each. All of these brethren did most earnest and acceptable work. Some of the visible results of the year's work are 28 members added to the Church, with 8 more applicants (I have referred two applicants to other charges); 18 infants baptized; Sunday schools and prayer meeting much improved; one new organ purchased; considerable work done on the parsonage, and the paying-off of a debt on it. We have one more meeting to hold before Conference. We serve, as a whole, a clever people, who have shown the pastor and his family many courtesies. We hope to carry a good report to Conference.—C. C. Gibson, P. C.

Anguilla, Miss.

I herin give a short report of the work in the Anguilla Charge. On account of the overflow, the ravages of the army worm and boll weevil, and the destruction of the business portions of our town by fire, our financial report will probably not be in full; but we are doing our best. We have held three very spiritual meetings and 14 have been added to the Church, which is a good report for this portion of the Delta where there are but few white people to join. I have just had Evangelist E. L. Whiddon in a protracted meeting with me at Anguilla, Miss., which is a very cultured place, and one that is very exacting in its demands for a certain class of preachers to hold its meetings. I wish to say that as an evangelist who draws crowds, we could not have gotten a better one than Brother Whiddon. He is a practical, fluent, earnest, Holy Ghost preacher, and handles the fundamental doctrines of our Church in a way that causes no other denomination to take offense. He is a fine mixer and as a preacher to children his equal is hard to find. We entertained him in our home and found him to be a very pleasant guest. Being one of the older members of our Conference, I feel that I am prepared to judge of the ability of an evangelist, and therefore can heartily recommend Brother Whiddon as one who is worthy of consideration as a man to be used in our revival meetings.

J. S. PARKER.

Hamburg, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am winding up my second year here on the Hamburg charge, and I would like to report my work for this year. In some respects we have had a good year. This charge is in the center of the boll weevil district, and as the crops are short, money is scarce; but the people have been good to us. When we returned from the Annual Conference last December they began to send in to us all kinds of good things, such as spare ribs, backbones, and hams. And, then, in April, all five of my churches pounded us with all kinds of good things, which in value amounted to more than $50; and since that time two of my churches have pounded us nicely again. We organized a new church at Oldenburg in July and proceeded to build, and we now have a nice house of worship up and nearly ready for use. We have had some very good meetings this year: the one at Roxie was the best that I have been in for several years. I began the meeting on Monday night, Oct. 21, and Brother J. W. Ramsey came to us Wednesday, the 23d, and did the preaching from then to the close of the meeting, which lasted for nine days. Brother Ramsey did some good pulpit work. His sermons were of the pure gospel type, and full of power. I think he is as good help as any one could get in revival services. We had a good number of conversions, and eight additions to the Church. The whole town was revived, and some of the older people said that we had the best meeting that Roxie has had for twenty years. All my meetings being out of the way now, I will spend the balance of the year in rounding up and getting ready for the Annual Conference. I hope to have a good report.—W. H. Young, P. C.

A SUNDAY IN BATON ROUGE.

Dear Dr. Meek: Kindly give me a little space to tell you about a recent trip to Baton Rouge, where I spent Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 26-27, in the hospitable home of Brother W. W. Drake, who is the pastor of the First Methodist Church, South, of that city. I boarded the train on the Y. & M. Valley Railroad, and somewhere on the way I inquired of the brakeman how far it was to "Red Stick?" "Red Stick," said he, "there is no such station on this road; you are on the wrong train, my friend." And I did not tell him any better, but I arrived there all the same, and was met at the depot by Brother Drake.

I had a fine time and a great opportunity to present the work of the American Bible Society, which I did. In the morning I talked before the Sunday School of the First Church and also the Sunday school of the Second Church, of which Brother G. P. White is the pastor. Both churches have fine, live Sunday schools, and they are great in numbers. Brother White being absent, I addressed his congregation at the morning hour, and his people took great interest in my work. Brother O. H. Cline, the Sunday school superintendent, is a live worker.

At night I presented my work to a very large congregation at the First Church, and I know that they were much interested. Of course, they have just gone through a great revival; but Mr. Editor, Christian workers are not made in a week, and Brother Drake has lots of them in his church, which shows that since Conference an earnest, guiding hand has taken charge of affairs at First Church. As a result I was able to dispose of over two hundred New Testaments in this church. I may add that the workers of Second Church also secured quite a number of Bibles and Testaments. For my first trip to "Red Stick" it was quite a success for God's Word.

were originated in 1895 by three of the most prominent physicians of the south, who had many years experience treating diseases depending on a torpid liver.

Grandly has this splendid combination of anti-bilious and anti-malarial agents sustained the reputations of its originators.

Bond's Liver Pills have long since proved to be a most effective remedy for the troubles arising from tropidity of the liver or the bowels.

The small dose—one little pill—and gentle action, make them almost invaluable.

Intelligent readers will not confound Bond's Liver Pills with the numerous so-called "wonderful" remedies that flood the country with reckless and misleading claims of astonishing merit.

When you require an honest and gentle liver or bowel stimulant, take one Bond's Liver Pill at bedtime. You will almost certainly wake up well.

A REVIVAL AT AMITE, LA.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed a gracious revival meeting here in Amite. It began October 13 and closed October 27th. The pastor began the meeting with his people on October 13th, and on the 19th Brother Turner, the Conference evangelist, accompanied by Brother R. N. Jeffery, as a singer, came. The meeting was ready for them.

Brother Turner grasped the situation, got a grip on the people from the start, and held it with accumulating interest to the close. He is a strong, earnest, gospel preacher. No sensationalism or methods of manipulations were used. The hearts and consciences of the people were deeply touched and their volitions were appealed to and influenced.

On the last night many were turned away from the doors because of no room. The preacher's message was one of depth, power and mighty persuasion. It made a profound impression on the vast audience. Brother Jeffery was at his best, and his leading of our splendid choir and the sweet solos that he rendered were highly appreciated by all. A competent singer, consecrated and full of the Spirit, is a large addition to the forces of a meeting. The results of the services, as far as statistics go, are as follows: twenty-four by baptism were received into the Church and eleven on profession of faith. The church was blessed with a deepening of religious life, and every department of the work was strengthened.

The work for the year will be in good condition, except the financial side. This is going to fall far below the usual amount. This is due to the financial condition that prevails in this immediate section. Money is not circulating here as heretofore. Our main crop was cut off in the spring, and as there is no cotton raised, we have been stricken on the financial side. We are going to do our best, and hope to come out better in the end than the present indicates.

H. W. BOWMAN, Pastor.

JOINT EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The Epworth League Conference of the Alexandria and Monroe Districts convened in Alexandria, Louisiana, October 25-27, 1912, in the First Methodist Church. The opening session, Friday evening, was well attended. The address of welcome was delivered by Mr. R. O. Coopender of Alexandria, and the response was given by Mr. Howard S. Galloway of Monroe. After a song service, words of greeting were given by Mrs. Sudie J. Lingle of Shreveport, acting for the State Secretary. A special musical number was given by Miss Montez Henning of Alexandria. Rev. E. B. Troy of Monroe was to have given an address on "The Value of the Epworth League," but was absent on account of sickness, and Mr. W. W. Williams of Alexandria was called upon to fill his place, which he did in a very able manner.

Saturday morning the devotional service was led by Mr. Coopender. Chapter reports were read by Mrs. Lingle, after which an inspiring talk was given by Rev. C. D. Atkinson on "The Aim and Purposes of the First Department." The Monroe District was organized with Rev. E. B. Troy as president; Mr. W. B. Shell of Mer Rouge, as vice president; Mr. Howard S. Galloway, secretary, and Miss Mae Edwards, treasurer.

The Alexandria District was organized with Mr. W. W. Williams, president, Alexandria, La.; Mr. L. I. Hoffpauir, vice president, Jena, La.; Mr. R. O. Coopender, secretary, Alexandria, La.; Miss Marguerite Cox, treasurer, Lecompte, La.

Mrs. Sudie J. Lingle and Mr. Howard S. Galloway were appointed on a Committee of Resolutions. The afternoon session was dispensed with.

In the evening the devotional services were opened by Mr. Howard S. Galloway. Mr. Stockwell, of Lake Charles, gave a splendid address on the "One-by-One Campaign." Mr. Seaman Mayo, of Lake Charles, talked on the work of the Third Department—Social and Literary Work. Mrs. S. H. Werlein, of Alexandria, spoke on the Fourth Department—Missionary Work. Mrs. Sudie J. Lingle spoke on the Second Department—Charity and Help or Social Service. The next State Convention will not be held in Alexandria, but probably in Shreveport. After the business was transacted, an informal reception was held and sandwiches, delicious fruit punch and cake were served.

Sunday morning Dr. Werlein preached on the "Model Epworth Leaguer" to a large congregation.

At 3 p. m. a Junior League was organized with Mr. and Mrs. Davenport and Miss Dorothy Stanley as superintendents. At 4 p. m. a League was organized in the Pineville Methodist Church, with Mr. W. W. Williams, president; Mr. Henry Atwood, first vice president; Miss Lucy McClendon, second vice president; Miss Mamie Alsop, third vice president; Miss Bessie McClendon, fourth vice president; Miss Annie Walker, secretary; Mr. Leo Alsop, treasurer; Miss Myrtice Coleman, organist, and Mr. Olive Fugler, Era Agent.

At 6:45 at the Methodist Church there was held a Model Chapter Meeting conducted by the Alexandria Chapter. The meeting was led by Miss Frances Brasher, the music by Miss Montez Henning, and a splendid short address was given by Mr. R. O. Coopender. The sermon on the program by Rev. C. D. Atkinson was not delivered, as he was called away Saturday. Dr. Werlein spoke on the hero who died for his convictions. This closed the session.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The Mansfield Sunday school has ordered two dozen additional kindergarten chairs for its primary class.

Mrs. L. B. Dean has been elected to take Mrs. J. L. Logan's place as Gracie Roll superintendent at Mansfield, Mrs. Logan having resigned to give her entire time to teaching her class of primary pupils. Mrs. T. M. Morris has been elected missionary superintendent, and is to furnish a program every fourth Sunday.

The Queensboro school, Shreveport, is common with the general Sunday school activity of the city, is taking on new life; and among other advances has installed a large Cradle Roll Department and an active Home Department. Rev. H. W. Jamieson, the pastor, expects to have the new and commodious brick church building going up ere long. The Sunday school will have convenient quarters when the new church is built.

Sometimes we see preachers pound on the Bible at a terrific rate as though they would mash it to pieces, and to a person who appreciates the reverence due it, the performance is very disagreeable. The Centenary College students of his day tell of how Dr. Hunnicutt would never allow another book or weight of any kind to be placed on the Bible, stating that it was God's Word and must be handled reverently. Such a handling of the Bible by such a teacher made an impression on his students that will never pass away. So it will likely be with our Sunday school teachers: the reverent touch and reverent voice in handling the "Book Divine" will make it a holy book to their pupils forever.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

The Sunday school at Red Bone has begun organizing and grading on the plan adopted by our Church. Mrs. Pugh is at the head of the movement. This step taken by this school is most gratifying, as it proves that the schools in our rural sections are capable of as thorough organization as those in the cities, barring the separate rooms. Even this is partially overcome by screens and curtains. We hope others will follow this good example.

At Silver Creek a Young Men's Bible Class has been organized with the full complement of officers and committees. Once a month the class has a social and business meeting. In the same Sunday school a Woman's Adult Bible Class has been organized; also a Mission Study Class. The superintendent of this school is Brother Ogilvie, who was ably assisted in these organizations by Miss Flora Ferrill, who for a year taught in the Columbia Sunday School and there received her training.

One of the Sunday schools of the Conference in one of our smaller cities has a fine class of boys in the Intermediate Department of the school, averaging in age from 14 to 16. The teacher, a young man, purposing to make this one of the best classes of its kind in his school, recently told his boys that as a recreation, if they would comply with certain conditions, he would, instead of a formal social meeting, take them "possum hunting." This teacher is going to be a boy again for the sake of his boys. He will succeed.

During the month of October seven new teacher-training classes, with sixty-three members, and nine Bible classes, were organized. In addition to this, several teachers have begun the teacher-training course as individual members, and those organized have added to the number taking the course. When our teachers train themselves for this work, such success will follow in our Sunday school efforts.

both in numerical attendance and loyalty to Christ, as has never before been seen. This era is not far in the future.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The Houston Sunday school sent out telegrams for Orphanage Day and received a fine collection for this good cause.

A class budget encourages systematic giving and places before all the members at the very beginning of the year all expenses. No other plan has proven so helpful in Adult Bible Classes in settling the vexed question of class finances. Do not fail to include missions in this budget.

Superintendent W. E. Stokes, of Macon, used post cards containing pictures of his commodious church as invitations for his Rally Day. The cards were dated October 20, 11 o'clock. On the correspondence space he had the words, What, When and Where written one above the other, and the three followed by a large black and aggressive looking interrogation point. With Mr. Stokes and Brother Park at the helm, surely all things were well with the Macon Sunday school folk on their Rally Day.

The First Methodist Church, of Corinth, enjoyed an interesting Rally Day on October 20. Superintendent Warriner had planned for big things and his expectations were fully realized in an increased attendance in every class, good music and a new clock to accentuate "on-time" virtues. Many classes made unusual averages, and withal a joyful, eventful and inspiring occasion was enjoyed. Mr. Felts has been a great inspiration to every department of the Sunday school, and Mr. Warriner is doing a fine work.

The following quite helpful on-time plan has been devised by the First Church of Water Valley: Several boys stand at the doors and hand attractively simple "on-time" cards to all who reach the Sunday school before the opening exercises. These are handed in to the secretary and an estimate of the number arriving on time can be readily made. When each class reports, not only does it state the number present and absent, etc., but each also announces how many will remain for the 11 o'clock service, thus emphasizing the attendance of all Sunday school pupils on the preaching service.

A self recording instrument, carefully sealed to prevent tampering, registers the load carried by the tractor, every second of the time it is on test. In the last hour of this long run, the tractor must carry a load considerably in excess of its guaranteed brake horse power, or—it doesn't pass inspection.

Four individual inspectors certify to the truth and accuracy of the test. But even then, the test record is first approved by the President of the Company, before the tractor is allowed to leave the factory.

Every purchaser of a Hart-Parr tractor gets a certified copy of the test record covering his individual engine. The original is filed with the rest of the records covering that particular engine.

We can afford this long, painstaking test. The current from the dynamos used for testing tractors, drives motors that operate the machinery thru our plant. No other tractor manufacturer uses power in this way. None can afford, therefore, to conduct so long and severe a test.

And a 20 to 40 hour test, with constant, searching inspection, means much more to you than the 1 or 2 hour's test that other tractors get. It means that a Hart-Parr Oil Tractor reaches you with bolts tight, bearings properly adjusted and engine perfectly timed. You don't have to waste a whole lot of valuable time in making adjustments that should have been made at the factory. Your tractor is ready for work the minute it reaches you.

LITERATURE.

There is an inundation of literature everywhere; even in organizations where it is necessary to exercise the greatest economy, the supply is largely in excess of the demand. It seems difficult to regulate the supply. There is great indifference in regard to reading the literature on the part of the rank and file. If leaflets, bulletins and reports are not read in the society meetings, they are never read at all. It is impossible in the time allowed to read all the good things provided for the delectation of members; so many of them calmly repose in waste baskets or perchance "light the kitchen fire," as one good sister said about the supply given her. When several articles on different subjects are read at one sitting they become a confused mass in the mind, or pass into one ear and out at the other.

A Faithful District Secretary

Lugged an armful of Annual Conference reports several squares to a meeting, called attention to them and requested every woman to take a copy. They were assessed to defray the expenses of publication and were entitled to them. Not a single one took a copy. This is but one instance. If all the literature which is printed could be properly distributed and would be faithfully read, there is sufficient to convert the world.

In China they are begging for picture lesson cards, illustrated posters and any overplus of Sunday school literature. Efforts might be made to collect such things and send them to "India's coral strand or where Africa's sunny fountains roll down their golden sand." Sometimes in sowing broadcast, so many seed fall into one place that is caused, and better results would be produced with more careful sowing. Perhaps this condition has never been intimated to our leaders. Their zeal extends to publications and distribution, leaving results in the hands of Him who said, "Blessed are they who sow beside all waters." No remedy suggests itself. When indifference is removed or replaced by enthusiasm, the solution of the problem will be found.—A. C. Y.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

New societies have been organized in the Meridian District, Mrs. R. M. Hand, district secretary; in the Hattiesburg District, Mrs. J. R. Ellis, secretary, and some societies in other districts have united within the last few weeks. Auxiliaries all over the Mississippi Conference are realizing the importance of a Press Superintendent, and notifications of elections to this office are being received by the Conference Press Superintendent. This is gratifying and we hope by the close of the year that there will be a superintendent in each auxiliary.

A unique birthday party was given at the home of Miss Bessie Kearney of Hazlehurst, Miss., last month, at which a free will offering was made for missions, and each member present was given a sample copy of "The Missionary Voice," and other interesting literature in the form of leaflets, etc. This society has a wide-awake press superintendent in Mrs. H. M. Featherston, who is constantly on the alert to make her department worth while.

The Hattiesburg Main Street Auxiliary is fortunate in having Mrs. Emma Mc-Gregor as its press superintendent. The local papers are kept supplied with notes from this society.

Mrs. H. M. McIntosh, corresponding secretary of the Collins Missionary Society, gives some interesting facts in connection with this work. They have a membership of 34, and hold union meetings with the other churches of the town; they also help the Ora Society by meeting with it twice a month. A full set of missionary charts, both home and foreign, are used in this society, and found very helpful in the work. This is a wide-awake society with women willing to work and liberal in donations. A number pay 25 cents per month on a "Parsonage List," this money being used to furnish not only necessities, but a few luxuries for the parsonage. The women have recently put in a new $60 stove with hot water connections and a bath tub. They are now working on the Sunday school rooms, and are planning "great things" for another year. This is a "live" society. How many others can show such a record?

THE WEEK OF PRAYER.

The week of prayer for the Home Department will be held November 17-24, in connection with the general agitation of Home Missions, known as "Home Mission Week." Collections this year are to be used in meeting the outstanding demand for finishing and equipping our buildings: the Ruth Hargrove Institute, Key West, Fla.; the Sue Bennett School, London, Ky.; the Virginia Johnson Home, Dallas, Texas, and the Vashu Industrial School, Thomasville, Ga.

Will you not pray definitely at each session and privately every day that $20,000 may come to us this year from Home Mission Week? The moneys thus collected cannot be used for pledges, previously assumed specials, or life membership. They must go specially directed to the Week of Prayer collection. Union meetings should be held with other denominational Home Mission auxiliaries, at least once during the week. Let us anticipate a great Home Mission awakening, and hope that the churches may be united in this effort to make "our country God's country."

REV. N. G. AUGUSTUS COM-MENDED.

(Resolutions adopted by the Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Ebenezer Mission, North Mississippi Annual Conference, on Oct. 19, 1912.)

Whereas, by the operation of the time limit of our Church, the present year will end the term of service of Rev. N. G. Augustus as presiding elder of the Durant District, of which this charge is a part; and whereas, this is the last time that he will visit us in an official capacity before the expiration of his quadrennium; therefore be it resolved:

(1.) That we, the representatives of the six churches constituting this work, hereby express our appreciation of his wise and able administration, his strong, orthodox, and edifying sermons, and his gracious and kindly hearing which have won the hearts of all.

(2.) That the spiritual and material prosperity of this charge and the notable advancement shown throughout the District has in no small measure been due to his untiring industry and splendid leadership.

(3.) That in this, our last official act, we assure Brother Augustus of our love, and of our abiding interest in his future welfare and happiness.

(4.) That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the local papers for publication.

HAUGHTON, LA.

Dear Dr. Meek: Being one of those who do not often fulminate through the press, I crave your patient indulgence for this one time in five years, as I am sure some of the former pastors will be glad to hear from this charge. I am now closing out my fourth year on the best circuit in the Louisiana Conference, and it gives me great pleasure to state that this is the best year of the four and the most successful year of my ministry. I have held four meetings on my charge this year, in three of which I was assisted by that prince of preachers and soul-winners, Rev. T. M. Finley, of Irondale, Mo., who had in former years assisted me in five successful meetings. In my fourth meeting this year I was assisted at Dayline by Rev. F. R. Power, our pastor at Mooringsport. These four meetings resulted in the conversion and reclamation of many souls, and in the addition of 125 members to the Church, 50 per cent of them being heads of families or matured men and women, of prominent professional and business characters and farmers of the successful type. During my four years pastorate, I have received 52 members by certificate, 47 by vows and 93 by baptism, aggregating 192 members on what was considered four years ago an old run-down piney woods circuit. Besides this, 21 infants were baptized. To God be all the glory for his wonderful work among us! He surely has visited us in much blessing and great reviving and soul-saving power.

This preacher is justly happy; but O how sad to have to part from so many warm-hearted friends that are as dear to me as my own life! May God continue to richly bless and reward them for their nobility, faithfulness and devotion to the cause of Christ. As to the material prosperity of the charge, I will say it has flourished. When I came to it they were finishing up a beautiful church at Alberta at a cost of $2500, the munificent gift of the Bienville Lumber Company and their employees. On May 11, 1910, we lost our parsonage by fire without a dollar of insurance; but out of the smoldering ruins God wrought a great blessing by opening up the springs of generosity among the people, and to-day we have as comfortable and convenient a parsonage as is in the Louisiana Conference worth $2000, and it is out of debt. At Castor Station we have finished a beautiful church and dedicated it, and we organized a church in February of this year, and have just closed a great meeting in it with 44 additions. The success of this enterprise is due to the indefatigable labors of that prince of laymen, Dr. J. N. Blume, who had associated with him, Messrs. John Campbell and John Huckaby, the first and last named of whom had the happy experience of being converted and joining the Church among the first in the new house. The former is now one of the stewards and the latter is the Sunday school superintendent. Brother Campbell was already a member and a steward. And last, but not least, we have completed and richly furnished the most beautiful and attractive church in Haughton that can be found in any country town of anything like its population and wealth. There is a small debt of $600 on this building, which we are striving to pay off and have it dedicated before Conference. This church cost us only $2300, and is constructed of the best material that can be manufactured. The little church at Dayline is composed of a little band of heroes who are growing in grace. They hope to remodel their already pretty little house next year.

The preacher who succeeds the writer as pastor here will be abundantly able to say, "The lines have fallen to me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly heritage." In all sincerity, these are among the best people this pastor ever served. They are ever ready to respond to the call of every need, and with unstinted hand they have lavished their kind hospitality upon this pastor and his family. The Alberta congregation, out of the abounding generosity of their hearts, have remembered in a specially helpful way the needs of their unworthy pastor, and language is insufficient to express the deep appreciation of my heart. It pains me so much to separate from those among whom I have gone these four years, enjoying so many happy seasons of personal and religious associations. That our Father in heaven may overshadow every one of them and keep them under the hollow of his hand, and bring all of us together in his house and our home in heaven, is the prayer of one whose very soul is knit to every one of them.

JOHN G. SLOANE.

O WHAT A HAPPY CHRISTMAS it will be for every member of your family if Santa Claus will only bring a beautiful, sweet toned Ludden & Bates piano or self-player piano. Think of the good times you will all have, not only during the holidays, but for years and years to come, in fact, for the remainder of your lives.

And yet it will cost you very little. As Mrs. Calhoun, one of our club members, expressed it, "I am perfectly satisfied, as I am paying for mine in a way I scarcely realize; and yet it is not only a pleasure to me but to my entire family. It is such an addition to my home that it will help me to keep home together, being a means of entertainment for each one. You all have been so kind to deal with that I always speak of it to others."

The club of one hundred buyers secures prices that are much lower than the average piano merchant would have to pay for an instrument of similar quality. Each club member therefore saves MORE than the dealer's profit. That is why the price is so low.

But the club doesn't stop there. It affords its members the most perfect system of convenient payments and gives them ABSOLUTE protection against EVERY FORM of dissatisfaction. You are to be the judge and the sole judge and you MUST be satisfied, otherwise WE will be dissatisfied.

The pianos are guaranteed for a life time, but in addition you have the free trial privilege and also the exchange privilege which insure the piano being entirely satisfactory.

The beautiful new catalog and club booklet, fully describing the elegant new styles and every feature of the club in detail, has just come from the press. We have a copy for every reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. "Prove All Things: Hold Fast That Which is Good."

WHOLE NO. 2960.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, NOV. 14, 1912.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

On the fourth of next March the schoolmaster will find his way into the White House. There are many lessons that it is to be hoped he will be able to teach the politicians and the people.

The Baptist Record (Jackson, Miss.) has styled the church paper "the family horse." This is a fitting designation. It serves all departments of the Church, and frequently all want to ride it at the same time. Moreover, the general demand is that the carriage shall be either free or meanly cheap.

The following from an unknown source is both true and pertinent: "People complain that the Church is always begging. If the world would pay up the back taxes that it owes the Church for making this old world fit to live in, we could run all the Church's activities from now until the Millennium without asking again for a single dollar."

"Look Ahead" was the central thought in a brilliant address recently delivered to the freshmen of Harvard University by the President Emeritus of that institution, Dr. Charles W. Eliott. This was, indeed, a suggestive theme. It is those who "look ahead" who generally go ahead to higher and better things. One of the secrets of Christianity's mighty power is that it turns the faces of men toward the future and makes them fore-lookers.

While Mr. Roosevelt was canvassing for the presidency, The Outlook, without his knowledge, took out in his interest a $25,000 accident policy. Upon being informed that this policy was in force when he was shot and that he was entitled to an indemnity therefrom, he declined to accept it. It will also be remembered that when the Nobel peace prize of $40,000 was awarded Mr. Roosevelt some years ago, he turned it over to persons connected with the Hague tribunal to be used in the promotion of the cause of international arbitration. Whatever may be the Colonel's faults, an "itching palm" does not seem to be one of them.

FAITH INDISPENSABLE.

The key that unlocks the doors to the choicest treasures in the Divine Kingdom is faith. A Christian is spiritually strong and rich, or weak and poor, according to the measure of his belief. Faith is the foundation virtue, and when it crumbles all else must fall with it. Peter on the water went down when his faith failed him; and so must every man go down when overtaken by a like calamity. The most majestic heroes of the Cross have been men who had unwavering confidence in God and to whom heaven was scarcely less real than earth. It was a fitting thing that Paul should have taken a part of his great Chapter on Faith

(the Eleventh of Hebrews) to catalogue some of Christianity's mightiest dead. It was through faith that they surmounted the obstacles in their way and ascended the imperishable heights, from which they shall forever shine.

FOOLISH PROPHESYING.

Every now and then some preacher comes along and excites the people with a discourse on when the world is coming to an end. He marshals his so-called facts and figures, and in frenzied phrases pictures the earth in the throes of dissolution. The hair of some persons is made to stand erect in fright, and the whole community is agog over his startling revelations of the future.

Some years ago one of these clerical prophets appeared in the town in which we were residing and conducted a series of services which were largely attended. He was an authority on eschatology, and had published a book on the subject. We had as our guest at the time the late Rev. J. W. Honnoll, who had a larger amount of sterling common sense than almost any other person that we have ever known. In the afternoon we called on a Methodist lady of more than average intelligence, and she was soon rattling away concerning the sermons of the remarkable minister whom she had been going daily to hear. But for some cause she had missed one of his discourses on the end of the world and expressed keen regret at having done so. Brother Honnoll said in reply to her: "My Sister, I feel sure that you have not lost anything by your absence. I am pretty certain that the earth will endure for some time yet. God doesn't make worlds like children do cob pens, just to knock them to pieces." We felt like clapping our hands in applause at this utterance which caused our talkative hostess quickly to change the subject. Bishop Marvin in one of his sermons argues that the fact that the earth, according to the teachings of geologists, was so long in the process of making, is indicative of its long continuance; just as a lengthy preface in a book is a prophecy of a large volume.

Quite a number of these diviners of the future have appeared upon the stage of action and blazoned abroad their predictions, only, of course, to be discredited at last. A writer in a recent issue of the Times-Democrat gives the following interesting account of some of them:

"Every one has read how, in 1843, the followers of William Miller sold all their possessions and, dressed in 'ascension' robes, waited for the end of the world. Time passed, and hunger pressed, and, finally, like the King of France, the 50,000 Adventists came marching back again. We don't know what happened next, but the world still stands. There have been many minor prophets to disturb the peace, but none who seemed to carry so much weight as 'Mother Shipton.' All her other prophecies, we were assured, had come true, so why should not the world come to an end in 1888, as she faithfully promised it would? We don't know why it shouldn't, but it didn't.

"In 1566 Nostradamus, the famous French astrologer, foretold that when Good Friday fell on April 23 (St. George's Day), and Easter on April 25 (St. Mark's Day), and Corpus Christi on June 24 (John the Baptist's Day), the world would come to an end. This coincidence of dates took place in 1886, to the great terror of those who knew the prophecy—but the world still stands. The same coincidence had occurred in 1734, 1666, 1546, 1451, 1421, 1204, 1109, 1014, 919, 672, 577, 482, 337, 140, and as early as the year 45. It will take place again in 1943, but whether that will be the last day or not, no man knoweth. And what if it should be? Why worry? Why not do our daily tasks as faithfully as we can? Then, if that great and awful day finds us still here we may, like good workmen whose toll is finished, lay down our tools and prepare to rest from our labors."

"ADVOCATE THE ADVOCATE."

Such were the words recently used by Bishop Robert McIntyre, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in an exhortation to circulate the church paper. We desire to echo them through our columns in behalf of our own Conference organ. As we have before stated, the year has been a most unfavorable one for the Advocate, as it has also been for our Orphanages and most of our other church institutions dependent upon the public for support. The severe winter and late spring, the overflow of the Mississippi River, and the depredations of the boll weevil and other pests have affected appreciably our circulation and the receipts of our office. Indeed, but for the Tour Contest which our Publisher instituted some months ago, and which was measurably successful, it would have not been possible for us to have gone through the year without borrowing money and seeing the Advocate go backward, instead of holding its own, which we have about done.

We urgently need the active assistance of our pastors in order to keep our subscription list from dwindling down. To have to resort to unusual methods to keep the paper going is regrettable. Such methods are expensive, and it takes time and space to operate them. It would be far more satisfactory if we could put the Advocate into the homes of our people through the regular agencies of the Church. Will you help us, brethren, in this great work? If you desire to do so, the opportunity is now at hand. In nearly every charge there are persons who are in arrears with us, and others who need to renew their subscriptions. WILL YOU NOT MAKE A FAITHFUL EFFORT TO COLLECT THESE ACCOUNTS AND SECURE THESE RENEWALS BETWEEN NOW AND CONFERENCE? You have a grip upon your people and can succeed in this undertaking as no one else can. They need the Advocate, but unless something is speedily done hundreds of names will have to be stricken from our files and hundreds of homes now receiving it will be without it. This will not only deplete the finances of the paper, but will also hurt every cause in Southern Methodism. This is a MOST URGENT AND IMPERATIVE CALL. Do not forget our claims, brethren, in these closing weeks of the Conference year. We hope to hear in a substantial way from every pastor in our territory at Greenwood, Monroe, or Hazlehurst. Much will depend upon the reports made to us at these places.

METHODISM AND THE CHANGING ORDER.

Rev. G. H. Treven, Ph.D., D.D., in the North-Western Christian Advocate.

One of the ablest London papers said some years ago, "The future of Russian orthodoxy and the future of American Methodism are probably of more importance to the interest of the human race than the future of either the Roman Catholic, or the Anglican, or the Lutheran Church." If there is any truth in that, every Methodist and everyone else may well pray that her future shall be worthy of her brilliant past. Here we are at the opening portals of another quadrennium. What of the future of American Methodism? What is to be her place in the changing order of to-day and to-morrow? Is she to be a decaying oak or a spreading banyan? It has often been said that her sun has passed its zenith. More than thirty years since, Dr. H. W. Bellows, after paying Methodism a noble tribute, said, "As we study the character and work of Methodism we are more and more convinced that the wave of inspiration in which it had its origin has well-nigh spent its force and will soon die altogether. . . . The institution has supplanted the inspiration, and the former stands still to tell how high the flood tide rose and what wonders it performed."

Is this true? Will this river of life that seemed to flow from forth the throne of God and the Lamb be like some streams of earth that leap in gladness to the light, dash in brightness, exultation, power, down the hillside, only by and by to creep sluggishly along in muddy courses, to stagnate at last in flat marshes or be absorbed in thirsty sands? Some savage tribes reverence great black, meteoric stones, not because of their present force or brilliancy, but because they once made a great noise in the world and shot with power from the sky, trailing a transient cloud of glory. Will something like this be the attitude of the future toward Methodism?

It is not altogether impossible. Again and again has the world seen great social, civil, religious movements, which in their day were alive with intense energies and mighty enthusiasms, become spent forces, either vanishing like a wave, or lingering in decrepitude with just enough life remaining to enable them to cumber the ground. Some have said that this will be the case with Methodism because it was a wave of emotion, and emotion is always subject to the law of reaction. The secret of stability, the principle of permanence, is truth. Only as a body has a firm grasp upon great principles of the spiritual order has it the keys of the Kingdom and the promise of the future.

Well, the Methodism of yesterday did deeply and mightily stir the hearts of men. She caused them to weep over their sins and tremble before the judgment throne. She filled their souls with celestial peace, thrilled them with holy joy, caused them to make city alleys, forests, hills, prairies ring with rapturous hallelujahs. Of course the frozen formalists of the time, and the hyperaesthetic, sneered at the emotional Methodists. But men with hearts have no reason to be ashamed of emotion. Truth that does not stir the feelings, but remains inert in the intellect is not religion but philosophy, no more religion than botany is the flower garden, astronomy the stars, or the skeleton in the museum the living man. To-day Methodism needs more emotion rather than less. The great word of the Bible is not head but heart. It never represents God as a steel logic machine simply grinding out thoughts. It can be, moreover, demonstrated that the main springs of civilization have not been in the intellect, but that for nations as for individuals out of the heart are the issues of life. If Methodism is to retain her power she must not lose the divine art of stirring the emotions of men. She cannot live "faultlessly, icily regular, splendidly null." She will die far more rapidly and certainly from excessive propriety than from a too-exuberant emotion. God save us from ever praying, either by word or by implication, "Lord, give us the Holy Ghost, but not too much, lest men should say we are full of new wine." Better, infinitely better, that the sanctuary should ring, even at the cost of some confusion, with the sob or cry of penitence, the eager prayer for pardon, the shout of deliverance, the rapturous song of the child new born into the Kingdom, than be the place for drowsy noddings, dull platitudes, thoughts of millinery, gowns, newest fashions, business, money, or the heartless gabble of mere ritual, aesthetic enjoyment of classical music, or gorgeous processional.

We admit also that Methodism did not come with some new system of doctrine, nor make it her main business to maintain orthodoxy of creed, to demonstrate with mathematical precision, to label correctly, and put nicely into a system a set of theological notions. She knew that the best way to maintain orthodoxy is by intense spiritual life, that the Holy Spirit is the great Conservator of evangelical doctrine. The heart is the best theologian, and, as flies never gather on red-hot stoves, fundamental heresies do not germinate in a Spirit-filled Church. Has not the history of Methodism been a standing evidence of this? Though at the outset she gathered her converts largely from the ignorant masses, though the vast majority of her ministers were untaught, no serious divergence from the great principles of evangelical orthodoxy has ever taken place within her. Yet she had and has more than emotion. Great truths were always at her core. The fires were kindled not by shavings of passing theological whimsies, but by the anthracite of a great faith. John Wesley is often quoted as saying that he would quarrel with no man about opinions, that he would think and let think, and the implication is sometimes left that he was indifferent as to what men believed. That was true only as to matters outside the great fundamentals of the evangelical faith. He himself said, "I am not afraid that the people called Methodists should ever cease to exist either in Europe or America. But I am afraid lest they should only exist as a dead sect, having the form of religion without the power." And this undoubtedly will be the case unless they hold fast both the doctrine, spirit, and discipline with which they first set out. What was their fundamental doctrine? That the Bible is the whole and sole rule both of Christian faith and practice. Hence they learned: (1) That religion is an inward principle; that it is no other than the mind that was in Christ; or, in other words, the renewal of the soul after the image of God, in righteousness and true holiness. (2) That this can never be wrought in us, but by the power of the Holy Ghost. (3) That we receive this, and every other blessing, merely for the sake of Christ; and (4) That whosoever hath the mind that was in Christ, the same is "our brother, and sister, and mother." If truth is the principle of permanence, there is her charter for the future.

But has not the environment so changed that the type of religion Methodism represents will not find a point of appeal to-morrow as yesterday in the general heart? When she appeared all the inward and outward circumstances were favorable for the spread of an intensely emotional religion. The masses, long neglected by the regular clergy, had become vicious and grossly ignorant of spiritual things. Yet they had deep yearnings of heart. Therefore, when Methodism brought a crucified and living Christ so near to them that they could feel his heart throbs they fell at his feet in penitence, faith, love, joy. The very novelty of the thing was a great source of its power. But now, as the physician by curing the disease cuts off his own practice, largely by means of Methodism herself these conditions have been changed.

Admit it. But does Methodism depend for her future upon living in an environment of frozen Churches and of ignorance, poverty, degradation in the masses? Well, if so, are such altogether wanting now? What degraded hordes huddle in our great cities and keep swarming through our Eastern portals! How sadly neglected many rural communities! How many self-styled Churches even to-day are little better than artistic sepulchers for encoffined souls tricked out with artificial flowers of ceremony! Certainly the changing order has not taken from Methodism the warrant for existence nor deprived her of material upon which to exercise her saving energies.

In essence not identical with mere orthodoxy of creed, with any stereotyped, inflexible methods of work, with any particular sort of ecclesiastical machinery or immutable Church order with any specific emotional phenomena, she may vary in these respects widely from her original type and gain by the change. She must learn, indeed, that new occasions teach new duties and that God fulfills himself, in many ways. But if she retain her essence as spiritual power, fusing the great truths of the creed into a living experience, as the breath of God blowing over the dry bones and raising up out of the abodes of spiritual death a host of living men organized into an aggressive army against every form of wrong, she will have a future. The work to be done will not be essentially changed. No more than the world will outgrow the need of food, drink, air, sunshine, will it outgrow the need of pentecostal power. Some of the methods once useful may be useless now; those useless then, necessary now or to-morrow; but the cultured in our palatial homes, the boys and girls in our Sunday schools, the youth in our colleges, the outcast masses, the poor but honest toilers, the swarms of foreigners, need to be awakened, converted, filled with the Spirit, as certainly as did the colliers and laborers to whom Wesley preached in England or the backwoodsmen to whom Methodist pioneers presented Christ in this Western world. The old-fashioned mourner's bench may go, but the need for repentance will abide. Let Methodism retain her holy art of leading men of every sort and age to the Christ of the cross and the throne, and no changing order can make her antiquated or cut off her opportunity.

Moreover, the Christian life is not only crisis—it is also a development. Methodism may have a future not only as a converting power. She has the millions to train to noble character and high service. It is her business to build up her converts in the holy faith; to quicken their intelligence and guide their culture; to develop in heart and home the most beautiful, robust piety free from cant, or affectation, or sentimentality, or shams; to send out great leaders and abundant soldiery in the war against Sabbath desecration, divorce, social impurity, industrial oppression, the craze for gold, commercial and political corruption, the slum, the liquor power, the demon of militarism, and every other enemy of man. When she confined her energies largely to saving the poor and illiterate she marched forward in victorious power. She ought still to do that, but having now the wealth, the numbers, the equipment, the ability, the organization that put her to the forefront of the militant Church, what a conquering future ought to be hers! Unless she become strangely unfaithful to her splendid history and sublime opportunity, her brilliant morning ought to be the harbinger of a resplendent day.

Once she was poor. Her hands were calloused, her garments were homespun, her face adrip with sweat, her meeting houses bumble, her services plain. Now she is rich. She has members in mansions as well as in cottages, in purple as well as in homespun; marble churches as well as sod meeting houses; merchant princes and rulers of the land, governors, senators, presidents, as well as bod carriers; social queens as well as washerwomen; men of high culture and broad scholarship as well as the untaught. Not depending upon these, but making the most of them, let her retain her ancient enthusiasm begotten of the baptism of fire and her future will be sure. No changing order then, whether she preserve her present name or form or not, will ever make her needless or deprive her of a place. But let her old-time spiritual fervor cool, her Spirit-born essence evaporate, and though she might still exist as a dead sect, she will forfeit all claim to a place in God's eternal order.

DR. TRAWICK.

I shall not answer Dr. Featherstun's attack in the Advocate of October 31st, on Woman's Suffrage. In my forth-coming tract on "The Reign of the Petticoat," I will give him all the "argument" he wants. And if his article is a sample of what he considers argument, it will be easy to expose its superficial sophistry. In the meantime, let me assure Dr. Featherstun that I do not take politics, anti-suffrage or any other, into the pulpit. That is exactly what I condemn in Dr. Trawick. He has a right to hold any political opinions he chooses; but he has no right to use the agencies of our Church to advocate partisan politics—especially opinions so offensive to thousands in our Church as the doctrine of female suffrage. Dr. Trawick, according to Dr. Featherstun's "argument," would be justified in using his official position to send out Republican campaign literature. There is absolutely no difference between that and what he is doing. It is an outrage on all the traditions of Southern Methodism. For seventy years it has stood firm for non-committal of the Church to political action. If a Roman Catholic priest interferes in politics, we are prompt and emphatic in our condemnation. How inconsistent in Methodists to set them an example of using the Church to advance political policies! Yet that is what Dr. Trawick is doing, and what Dr. Featherstun justifies.

There was recently held an election in Louisiana involving the taxation of Church benevolences, a subject on which it might be claimed that the Church had a right to speak, if on any. The Catholic Archbishop and the Bishop of Louisiana did speak, officially advising the members of that Church how to vote. It aroused a spirit of real protest among the intelligent Catholics against the intrusion of the Church into State affairs. I commend to Dr. Featherstun's consideration the following wise words from Hon. Walter J. Burke, of New Iberia, a prominent Catholic. In the Picayune of the 31st of October, the very date of Dr. Featherstun's defense of the circulation of partisan political campaign documents by a Methodist Church official, Mr. Burke published a criticism of the Archbishop's letter, in which he said: "One of the greatest inheritances of the American people is the separation of Church and State. Under this principle imbedded in our political life, Church and State have prospered in marvelous growth. Each has striven with the other for the advancement of the American people. Neither has sought to direct the internal affairs of the other. Who would assume responsibility for any other doctrine, spreading discord where peace has reigned, and wreckage where splendid achievement has attended the labor of each day?"

These are noble words, and I hope that coming as they do from a Catholic, that we Methodists will heed them. I cannot believe that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which had its origin in a firm stand on the Apostolic platform of non-interference with the State, is ready to depart from its traditional attitude to such questions. Whatever the merits of woman's suffrage, Dr. Featherstun's position is wrong and indefensible when he seeks to commit the Church to its advocacy. He forgets, too, that Trawick began it. I would probably never have thought of the matter if he had not pushed under my nose the Beecher tract. Trawick is perhaps excusable in a measure, for he was too young to know the mal-odorous reputation of Henry Ward Beecher with women. There is a fitness in things when Henry Ward Beecher is put forward as the patron saint of the Suffragette cult.

Now, don't confuse the issue between Dr. Featherstun and myself—he approves the sending out from our connectional offices political campaign literature, thus committing the Church to a political party; I condemn it, as contrary to the whole history of our Church and as sure to produce discord and disaster.

S. A. STEEL.

THE VANDERBILT LAWSUIT.

Dear Brother Meek: Permit me, in reply to your criticism of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust for delaying this litigation, to submit the following statement of facts.

The complaint of the College of Bishops asking an injunction against the Board of Trust was filed by their attorneys October 25, 1910, five months after the adjournment of the General Conference. The answer of the Board, prepared by its attorneys, was filed March 15, 1911, not quite five months later. The counsel of the Bishops then took till May 25, 1912—a year and two months—to prepare their proof. Early in July the lawyers of the Board finished preparing their proof, having taken one month as against fourteen consumed by the other side. They offered to turn over the case then if an agreement could be reached upon a time for concluding it. But two of the principal attorneys on the other side having left the country on vacation, no definite reply to the offer was received till the middle of September.

The counsel for both sides had agreed that the case should be made ready for trial in the October term of the Chancery Court. That term, however, lasts from October to March, and the agreement did not, of course, imply that the trial should take place in October. As a matter of fact, while counsel for the Bishops insisted on beginning the trial the middle of October, neither side was then ready. Voluminous documents had yet to be submitted for examination to the counsel for the Board, and both sides have been engaged, up to this writing (Oct. 25), in the further taking of proof.

The members of the Board of Trust have from the beginning urged on their counsel the importance of an early termination of the case. They are much hampered in the administration of their trust by the present state of affairs, and are as anxious as any others possibly can be to have the matter settled. Their counsel naturally think, however, that nine out of the thirty months that will have elapsed when the case comes to trial on November 18, is not a disproportionate share for them to have had the disposal of it, especially as three of these months it was left on their hands against their will.

G. B. WINTON.

FROM THE EDITOR.

We cannot accept the underlying premise of Dr. Winton's contention, that the parties to a lawsuit are each entitled to the same amount of time, and that if one side consumes more time than the other it is the more to be censured, if the case is not speedily adjudicated. The litigants on one side might have a hundred witnesses, while on the other side there might not be a dozen. It is well known that in this trial the Church has had the affirmative side—has had to blaze the way in the investigation of the matters in controversy, while the attorneys for the Trustees have had the smaller task of meeting specific issues clearly set forth. It requires less time to tear down than it does to build up. The lawyers for the Bishops in collecting their proof have had to take depositions not only in Nashville, but also in various parts of the country, even going to the State of New York. The defendant's proof, on the other hand, consists mainly of the depositions of Chancellor Kirkland, members of the Board of Trust, and a few citizens of Nashville, which were comparatively easy to obtain.

From first-hand information that has come to us, we do not think Dr. Winton gives a fair account of the progress of this litigation. For instance, he charges that the lawyers for the Church kept the case in their hands from March 15, 1911, to May 25, 1912—a year and two months. Technically, this statement may be correct, but the Doctor fails to tell that the Church's attorneys submitted to the counsel for the Trustees in February, 1912, a stipulation as to documentary proof, advising them at the same time that they were practically through taking evidence. To this the latter gentlemen replied on March 5, insisting that certain amendments to the stipulation should be made. This agreement was not signed until May 10. As to how much of this delay counsel for the Trustees were responsible, we are left completely in the dark. How careless Dr. Winton is in his computation of time is shown by the fact that the whole period from the adjournment of the General Conference on May 23, to October 25, 1910—five months—is charged up to the Church, when, as a matter of fact, for three full weeks of that time our Bishops were waiting to see what the Trustees would do concerning the action of the General Conference. The truth is, this litigation did not start until after the meeting of the Bishops on July 12 of that year.

Dr. Winton further says: "Early in July the lawyers of the Board finished preparing their proof, having taken one month as against fourteen by the other side. They offered to turn the case over to them if an agreement could be reached for concluding. But two of the principal attorneys on the other side having left the country on a vacation, no definite reply was received until the middle of September." The facts however, given by one in a position to know, are as follows: The attorneys for the Church turned the case over to the opposition on May 25. Early in July they wrote counsel for the Trustees, asking when they would close their proof. To this an answer came on August 5, asking how long the lawyers for the Church would be in taking rebuttal testimony. As both Messrs. Biggs and Fitzhugh were away, no reply was made to this inquiry until their return in September, when they promised to finish up their proof in fifteen days; and it was agreed that the case should go to trial at the October term of the Chancery Court.

And here the question naturally arises if counsel for the Trustees had their proof completed and in such admirable shape at the alleged time in July, why were they so unprepared in October? It could not have been due to any subsequent testimony taken for the Church, because its counsel since that time have taken only one deposition—that of Major Millsaps—and they plainly stated in doing this, that if it would interfere with the trial of the case, they would dispense with it, since it was merely cumulative of what had already been proven. It should be distinctly noted that Dr. Winton attempts no explanation of the report contained in the press dispatches that the lawyers for the Trustees not only fought for a postponement of the case, but also against setting any specific date for the trial. The Doctor's assurance that, though they so reported, the attorneys for the Church were really not ready to proceed, strikes us as rather presumptuous and queer. When did he acquire the right to speak for counsel for the Church? In a letter written to the Editor since this matter was up in court, one of the leading legal representatives of the Bishops says: "When we announced ready on October 17th, we were ready, and have not since taken any additional proof." So the voluminous proof-taking up to October 25th, of which the Doctor writes, must have been at the instance of the attorneys on his side of the case. And from this, it would seem that the one month's work of which the Doctor boasts was not so much to boast of, after all.

We assure Dr. Winton that we have no desire to do injustice to the Vanderbilt Board of Trust. As we see things, they have enough to answer for without manufacturing any additional charges against them. We have long hoped that the Doctor, who has constituted himself the apologist for them in their revolt against the authority of the Church, would tell us why, after leading members of the Board had publicly assured the Church that they had accepted the findings of the Vanderbilt Commission and intended in good faith to be bound by them (the others remaining silent and permitting this statement to go unchallenged) the Board now tells us that there was never any intention of accepting them. And we have also wished that he would explain why some of the most conspicuous members of that Board who repeatedly affirmed that the Church owned the University, have permitted their lawyers, above their signatures, to file in court a long brief which is, in effect, a complete denial of this claim? Do these gentlemen hold the view that it is allowable to make one statement under ordinary circumstances, and another that contradicts it, if necessary to gain an advantage in court? If Dr. Winton wants to do his fellow-trustees a real service, these are the questions that he should clear up. And when he gets ready to address himself to this task, he will find the needed space at his disposal in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

CHRIST'S WORDS.

You never get to the end of Christ's words. There is something in them always behind. They pass into proverbs, they pass into laws, they pass into doctrines, they pass into consolations, but they never pass away, and, after all the use that is made of them, they are still not exhausted.—Dean Stanley.

Church News

The State Convention of the Mississippi Baptists will be held in Jackson, Miss., November 12-15.

A report was recently circulated that Goucher College, now located at Baltimore, Md., is to be removed to Chicago and made a part of the Northwestern University.

It is stated that outside of the 150 largest cities in the United States, the average salary of ministers is $573. Still there are persons who are silly enough to accuse them of preaching for money.

Dr. S. A. Steel, the brilliant President of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, is soon to bring out in pamphlet form a discussion of the woman suffrage question.

Our new African mission, which Bishop Lambuth has been engaged for months in planning, will be located among the Batatala tribe in the southern portion of the Dark Continent.

Within the past few months four new Methodist church buildings, aggregating approximately $200,000 in value, have been opened in Atlanta, Ga. Southern Methodism is a mighty force in that enterprising and growing city.

The corner-stone of the new building of the Sibley Memorial Hospital was laid in Washington City on November 11. Bishop Earl Cranston took part in the exercises, and the principal address was delivered by the Hon. W. J. Bryan.

The Northern Presbyterian Church gave last year for benevolent purposes $6,798,319. The members of the New York Presbytery averaged $25 each, and those of the Fourth Church, Chicago, $254 each, the largest of any congregation connected with this denomination.

Bishop Thoburn, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will publish in book form his autobiographical sketches, which appeared some months ago in the Western and Northwestern Christian Advocates. It is stated that heavy demands are being made upon this distinguished minister and missionary for special articles for the press.

From the Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate, we take the following: "A proposition to open the theatres and music halls of England on Sunday met with strong opposition on the part of the actors themselves. A poll was made by a dramatic paper, which resulted in 2834 voting to close the theatres and music halls, and 128 for opening them."

Bishop Candler dedicated the new $25,000 Southern Methodist Church at Ozark, Ark., on November 10. The pastor of this congregation arranged for a series of sermons by leading Arkansas ministers the week preceding the dedication, and they were reported to be of a high order. One of these discourses was delivered by Rev. L. M. Broyles, of Fort Smith.

In a recent public utterance, Dr. M. A. Matthews, of Seattle, the present Moderator of the Northern Presbyterian General Assembly, estimated that not over eight per cent of the families of his denomination have family worship. He thinks that no small part of the decline in personal religion among the younger generation is to be attributed to the neglect of this most wholesome practice.

Dr. J. W. Lee, of St. Louis, recently visited Atlanta, Ga., to take part in the dedicatory exercises of Trinity Church. He preached an illuminating sermon at the evening hour, following Bishop Candler, who delivered a masterly discourse at 11 a. m. The Wesleyan Christian Advocate says that there is not another minister living who can call as many Atlanta people by name as can Dr. Lee.

At the request of the Greek Red Cross Society, the New Orleans chapter of the American branch of that organization has issued an appeal to the public for funds to aid in caring for the sick and wounded in the Balkan war. It is to be hoped that this call will meet with a generous response. If we must have war, its horrors should be mitigated as much as possible. Contributions to this cause should be sent to Mr. Albert Breton, New Orleans, in care of the German-American Bank.

Mrs. Elizabeth Ruff Mitchell, of Clayton County, Ga., who, it is claimed, was the oldest Methodist in the world, died on October 17, 1912. She celebrated her one-hundredth birthday on the 30th of last August, and had been a member of the Church since her thirteenth year. She had lived under the administrations of all the Presidents of the United States except three—Washington, the elder Adams, and Thomas Jefferson. Mrs. Mitchell was the mother of fifteen children, nine of whom survive her.

A commission, composed of representatives of the M. E. Church, the M. E. Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church, has been constituted to enquire into the controverted question as to whether Robert Strawbridge and the Maryland log meeting-house, or Philip Embury and the John Street Church of New York, are entitled to the claim of priority in the history of American Methodism. The following are our representatives on this commission: Bishop E. E. Hoss, Dr. W. F. Tillet, Dr. H. M. DuBose, Rev. E. V. Regester, Rev. John Paul Tyler, Mr. Arthur Pugh, and Mr. J. B. Myers.

"Line-up Week" was recently observed by the members of the First Methodist Church of Birmingham, of which Rev. L. C. Branscomb is pastor, and 250 names were added to the membership roll. It is said that quite a large number of persons connected with this congregation co-operated with Brother Branscomb in accomplishing this result, going into offices and homes and striving to reach persons who were uninterested and without any church affiliation. If this large number of accessions could be gained in a single week through the efforts of a portion of the membership of one congregation, what might not be done if the members of the Church generally would shake off their lethargy and go energetically to work for the Master for three hundred and sixty-five days in the year? The secret of the marvelous success of the early Church was that there were few idlers in it.

PROMISES TO BE A GREAT GATHERING.

(The following account of the coming Quadrennial Meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is by an accredited representative of that organization).

Signs multiply that the meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, in Chicago, Dec. 4-9, from the standpoint of Christian Unity, will be the most important meeting ever held on American soil. Delegates have been officially appointed by the highest judicatories and associations of thirty denominations, representing the larger part of the Protestant constituency of the United States.

The local arrangements at Chicago are in charge of a committee, of which Rev. John Balcom Shaw, D. D., is chairman, and a welcome worthy of that city is assured. The headquarters will be at the La Salle Hotel and the day sessions will be held in its spacious Assembly Room. The welcome session on Wednesday evening will be held in Fullerton Hall, connected with the Art Institute, the address being given by the President of the Council, Bishop E. R. Hendrix, D. D. Thursday evening in Orchestra Hall, Bishop William M. Bell, of the United Brethren Church, will preside, and Bishop Francis J. McConnell, D. D., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Dr. James A. MacDonald, of the Toronto Club, will speak. The theme of the evening will be "Forward Movements of the Churches."

On Friday evening, "The Relation of the Young People's Organizations to Christian Unity" will be the theme. Mr. Robert H. Gardiner, former President of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, will preside. Among the speakers are Governor Marshall, of Indiana, a delegate from the Presbyterian Church, Dr. William F. Sheridan, and others.

On Sunday afternoon there will be a mass meeting that will bring to the front especially the responsibility of the Churches in relation to social service. Rev. Walter Rauschenbusch, D. D., of Rochester, will make the opening address, and it is expected that the Hon. William J. Bryan will make the closing address. On Monday evening a banquet will be given by the social unions and church clubs of the city. This suggests that part of the program which refers more especially to the public meetings. At the day sessions reports will be received from the chairmen of the Committees on Foreign and Home Missions, Sabbath Observance, Temperance, Family Life, the Commissions on the Church and Social Service, Peace and Arbitration, and Evangelism. In connection with these reports, matters of vital importance related to the united life and the responsibility of the churches will be brought forward.

NOT IN HIS LINE.

The Pentecostal Herald says: "We would like to have pointed out one instance where Russellism has closed one saloon?" Russellism, neighbor, does not deal in that sort of work. "Pastor" Russell is entirely content with distributing what he calls literature to the "Lord's poor." His warfare is against the Churches. Sinners on the outside are not much the objects of his efforts or those of his followers. And that ought to make religious people let him and his severely alone.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

The recent general election was an unfortunate one for constitutional amendments. In Mississippi the amendments voted on were lost, and in Louisiana only nine out of the eighteen carried.

Experts representing the Kentucky State Board of Health, after examining 1200 patients, announced on Nov. 8, that pellagra and hookworm are kindred ailments, and that each should receive the same treatment.

Professor David Starr Jordan, of Stanford University, has announced that he will devote his life to the cause of universal peace after 1915. At that time he will be 65 years of age, and under the law of Stanford University will be automatically retired.

A noted philanthropist of Chicago has recently had the laws of that city simplified and condensed, and published in pamphlet form. He expects to present a copy of his little book to every school child in Chicago. He believes that if the children know the laws they will respect them.

Eminent authorities claim that ten per cent of America's population are totally inefficient as producers, and that 30 per cent more are partially so. If this is true, the greatest economic problem of the next decade will be how to reduce that percentage and rid the country of its parasitic population.

The National Congress of Farmers held its annual session in New Orleans last week. A large number of representative agriculturists were present, and many topics of vital interest to the farmers were considered. Among the many needs discussed were those of cheaper money and closer co-operation.

A Mississippian was honored on last Tuesday in the State of Nevada when Hon. Key Pittman was elected to the United States Senate. Mr. Pittman was born in Vicksburg, Miss., Sept. 19, 1872, and is a descendant of a long line of illustrious ancestors, including Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The oldest newspaper in the world has been suppressed by the President of the Chinese Republic. The King Bao was founded in the year 400 A. D., and had been published successively for more than 1500 years. It was first printed with metal type long before the art of printing was known in Europe.

Secretary MacVeigh, of the United States Treasury Department, issued an order on Oct. 31 abolishing the public drinking cup on all trains engaged in interstate traffic. Many States have statutes prohibiting the public drinking cup, but Mr. MacVeigh issued his order for the benefit of the traveling public in those States where such a law does not exist.

Promoters have announced that they have virtually secured enough financial backing to build a new railroad from Biloxi, Miss., to Joplin, Mo., if proper encouragement is given them by the towns along the proposed line. The new road, if built, will traverse Mississippi from the South to the North and will be a great benefit to that State.

A Berlin correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association has begun an active campaign against the habit of practicing physicians to write prescriptions in an awkward or illegible handwriting. He claims that the poor writing of prescriptions has been the cause of many deaths, because the pharmacist filling them either could not read them, or misunderstood some of the terms used, and filled the prescription incorrectly.

The Texas and Pacific Railroad Company is rigidly enforcing an order not only forbidding all men connected with the rolling stock department of its roads to get drunk, but forbidding them to so much as enter a saloon on any pretense whatever. An officer of that road recently said that there is absolutely no business connected with the transportation department of a railroad that necessitates an employee of the road entering a saloon.

A press dispatch states that Hon. W. J. Bryan may be the Secretary of State during the Wilson administration. Mr. Bryan may be appointed to that office, but in our opinion he is better suited for the wider sphere of an untrammelled publicist. Such men, whose vision sweeps the whole horizon of human affairs, and whose intellect comprehends the dawn of coming events, should not be confined to the narrow walls of any office. Their ministry belongs to the public, and not to political parties.

An effort is being made to arouse public sentiment in favor of increasing the pension of retired or worn-out school teachers in New Orleans. All charity is worthy, but all forms of philanthropy may not be wise. It has long been a question with the writer whether the pension policy so prevalent to-day really accomplishes the end for which it is designed. A man on a salary of $1500 a year for twenty years in succession has little reason for being in need if retired from his profession. Any man, for the want of thrift, or who is a spendthrift, may need a pension, no matter how well he is paid. The hope of an income after the working period of life, as we see it, is apt to produce a lack of thrift in school teachers or any other professional class.

MRS. AMOS KENDALL—AN APPRECIATION.

The solemn event which suggests these lines of appreciation brings to our minds some wholesome reflections, and practical and helpful lessons. Again the curtains have fallen upon the busy, yet quiet, scenes of a life's activity, and another noble actor and tireless toiler has answered the summons that, soon or late, will come to one and all, and has gone to join the great majority, for—

"All that tread the globe
Are but a handful to
The tribes that slumber in Its bosom."

A mother in Israel has passed from the stage of human affairs, and a true friend of God and humanity has entered upon that life more abundant in the triumphant home-going of Mrs. Amos Kendall, September 16th, 1912.

Mrs. Amos Kendall was born in the State of New York, February 6, 1833. Her parents, William and Eliza Roselle, moved to Texas in 1841. In 1854, their daughter, Julia A. Roselle, was married to the Hon. John A. Hancock, a gifted and brilliant young lawyer of Houston, Texas. In 1859, Mr. and Mrs. Hancock came to the State of Mississippi, and after the Civil War had closed, they settled in Hernando, where they resided until the death of Mr. Hancock, who, at the time of his death, was serving his State as Probate Judge. On December 9, 1863, Mrs. Hancock was united in marriage to the Rev. Amos Kendall, of precious memory, who preceded her to the better world on April 12, 1909.

Within these brief date-lines is incorporated the life-history of a truly great and good woman. If the statement be true that "an institution is but the lengthened shadow of earth's tireless toilers," and "all history easily resolves itself into the biographies of a few of earth's mighty spirits," then it is true that our militant Methodism in a large part of our North Mississippi Conference territory is but "the lengthened shadow" of her life, in common with that of her distinguished and now ascended husband. Hand in hand with her husband, she went in the work of the itinerancy, and with him she wrought into the finer textures of our Methodism those principles that have made it a conquering force in the Kingdom of God, and shall make it an abiding blessing to all the generations that shall come.

The task of portraying the beauty of her gentle and stainless life is an easy and pleasant one, for her virtues shone with all the resplendent glory of a noon-day sun. And yet so nearly did she attain to the statue of perfect Christian womanhood that the summing up of all her virtues is a task for which the most gifted is inadequate. Hers was a life lived among the radiant glories of the mountain peak, far above the mist and shadows of the valley.

Sister Kendall was a woman of simple, yet vigorous, faith in God. Hers was the faith that appropriated, upon the strength of the promises of God, all the blessings that heaven stood ready to supply. It was a full, rich, and joyous faith that looked into the face of God with the confidence of a child well beloved of its parents. Her faith linked her on to her Heavenly Father whose nature and whose name is love; hence through her life there flowed out the beneficent stream of love and helpfulness into the waiting and expectant heart of a needy world. Hers was the faith that wrought by love, and manifested itself in shining deeds. The poor and the needy felt the kindly hand of a friend on many occasions known only to God and to the great recording angel. The Old Ladies' Home in Jackson, Mississippi, the Methodist Orphanage in the same city, her husband's relatives in far-away England, and many others have known in her a love that gives and serves and expends itself in making others happy. Although possessing only moderate means, she was one of the largest contributors to the building of the new church just now completed in the city of Aberdeen.

Sister Kendall was an ardent and devoted Methodist, and for her Church she sacrificed and toiled, and gave to it the ardor and strength of her young womanhood, and the full measure of her declining years. She believed all the doctrines of her Church, and entered into the fullness and joy of those gracious and divine experiences for which these doctrines stand. With her, as she has often said to this writer, justification by faith and the witness of the Spirit to the fact of her adoption into the heavenly family, were not vague and uncertain things about which the theologians write and the preachers preach. They were great facts of personal experience around which her life centered, and from which her life out-flowed in helpfulness to others. On more than one occasion have I heard her testify to the fact of a conscious knowledge of God in the forgiveness of sin, and in the power of his saving grace to keep her unspotted from the world. With her, God was not a far-off king, but a near-by, loving Father with whom she communed day by day. Heaven was not a far-off foreign shore to her. It lay just "within the veil," and its glorified inhabitants came hourly to fan her brow and to whisper sweet words of comfort into her waiting and expectant soul.

Loving her Church as she did, and conforming her life to its doctrine and polity, it is easily understood how it was that she became an ideal itinerant Methodist preacher's wife. But we shall not attempt to speak of Sister Kendall in this sacred and holy relation. Here we draw back with uncovered head, knowing that we are treading upon hallowed ground. There were notes in the psalm of her life too sacred to fall upon the ears of a sordid world, and with reverent and uncovered head we draw back from the sacred home circle where she reigned the uncrowned queen of him to whom she had given her hand and heart. Here she gave and received that wealth of unfeigned devotion that made her home a fitting type of "our Father's house not made with hands." It was to her helpful advice and kindly sympathy that her husband's distinguished career and splendid success was largely due.

"Soon the Master called a woman, only known here in the strife,
By her quiet, gentle nature, though a famous preacher's wife.
Praised and blessed her for the harvest she had garnered in the sky,
But she meekly turned and answered: 'twas my husband, Lord, not I.'
'Yes,' the Master said, 'his talents were as stars that glow and shine,
But thy faith gave them their luster, and the glory, child, is thine.'"

Another marked characteristic of Sister Kendall was her deep and profound prayer-life. I have never known any one who more truly solved every problem on her knees. She truly availed herself of the privilege of taking "everything to God in prayer." The Christian has committed to him no mightier power than the ministry of intercession, and our dear ascended sister counted this her main reliance in every hour of test and trial. Armed with the mighty power of prayer, she was invincible in every conflict, and won daily victories over all the forces of evil that dared interpose a barrier to her progress in the upward way.

Sister Kendall's triumphant home-going was an event for which she had anxiously and eagerly awaited since the second period of her lonely widowhood began. Quoting from a letter written more than a year ago, she said: "My boy, I am getting mighty anxious to go. Most all of my loved ones are now on the other side; yet it seems that it is my Heavenly Father's will that I remain here a little while longer. Pray for me that I do not grieve my loving Heavenly Father through my impatience to be gone." And when the summons came, she was ready to go, and upon glad and willing feet she followed the angel messenger through the opening gates of the City of God. Say not, then, she died. The wicked die; but the righteous are had in everlasting remembrance.

In the hospitable home of her long-time friend, Mr. S. B. White, of West Point, where she was visiting, expecting shortly to go to Aberdeen to spend the winter, she sweetly breathed her last. In this Christian home, she was ministered to by kind and loving hands, and all things possible were done to make her last hours full of comfort and peace, and stay the oncoming of death whose near approach was evidenced to all by her rapidly failing strength. But the day of her coronation had come, and after giving specific directions as to the disposition of all her effects, with the eagerness of a child in quest of flowers, she slipped away and came "unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and Church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God, the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus, the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel."

In accordance with her request, this writer conducted her funeral service in the Methodist church of West Point, assisted by the pastor, Rev. E. S. Lewis, and Rev. J. E. Cunningham, the presiding elder of the Aberdeen District. Her remains were carried to Aberdeen and laid to rest beside the honored dust of her husband to wait the dawning of eternity's unending day.

"Say not:

She died! There is no death! When she went forth,

Her spirit, brave and strong, its outworn case Of prisoning clay broke grandly through, and rose,

On wings of joy, unto that life wherein No pain or grief or night can ever come. It was her birthday in a happier world."

PUT-OFF TOWN.

Did you ever go to Put-Off Town,
Where the houses are old and tumble-down,
And everything tarries and everything drags,
With dirty streets and people in rags?

On the street of Slow lives Old Man Wait,
And his two little boys, named Linger and Late,
With unclean hands, towied hair,
And a naughty little sister named Don't Care.

Grandmother Growl lives in this town,
With her two little daughters, called Fret and Frown.

And Old Man Lazy lives all alone
Around the corner on the street Postpone.

Did you ever go to Put-Off Town,
To play with the little girls, Fret and Frown,
Or go to the home of Old Man Wait,
And whistle for his boys to come to the gate?

To play all day in Tarry street,
Leaving your errands for other feet;
To stop, or shrink, or linger, or frown,
Is the nearest way to this old town.

KEEP GOOD COMPANY.

Did that boy say a bad word? Then I would not play with him if I were you. If he says bad words he may do other wrong things, and you might learn to do them.

Perhaps you may think you can make the boy better by being with him. But that is not likely.
If you put a clean stick and a muddy stick together it makes the clean stick muddy, but it will not make the muddy stick clean, will it?

Find the good boys to play with, leaving it to the older people to teach the other boy better.

THE BOY THAT DID NOT CARE.

"James, my son, you are wasting your time playing with that kitten when you ought to be studying your lesson. You will get a bad mark," said Mother Mason to her son.

"I don't care," said the boy, as he continued to amuse himself with the kitten.

"But you ought to care, my boy," rejoined the lady, with a sigh. "You will grow up an ignorant good-for-nothing man if you don't make use of your opportunities."

"I don't care," said James as he raced into the yard.

"Don't care will be the ruin of that child," said the mother, to herself; "I must teach him a lesson he will not easily forget."

Guided by this, the lady made no provision for dinner. When noon arrived, her idle boy rushed into the house, as usual, shouting, "Mother, I want my dinner!"

"I don't care," said his mother, very calmly, working with her needle without looking up.

"I'm hungry, mother," said the boy.

"I don't care," she repeated.

James was puzzled. His mother had never thus treated him before. They were strange words for her to use, and her manner was so cold that he could not understand it. He was silent for a while, then spoke again. "Mother, I want something to eat."

"I don't care," was the cool reply.

"But recess will soon be over, mother, and I shall starve if I do not get some dinner," urged James.

"I don't care."

This was too much for the boy to endure. He burst into tears. His mother, seeing him subdued, laid down her work, and, calling him to her side, stroked his hair very gently, and said:

"My son, I want to make you see the folly and sin of the habit you have of saying, 'I don't care.'
Suppose I did not care for you, what would you do for dinner, for clothing and for education? You see, I must either care for you, or you must suffer. And if you must suffer through my lack of care for you, don't you think you will also suffer if you don't care for yourself? And don't you see that I must suffer, too, if you don't care for my wishes?"

James had never looked on his evil habit in that light before. He promised to do better, and, after having his dinner, went to school a wiser boy.

A STAND THAT COUNTED.

The firm of E. D. Morgan & Company, whose founder was in later life the "war governor" of the State of New York, and a United States Senator, is still in business in the Wall Street section, New York City, under the immediate direction of the surviving junior partner, John T. Terry, now ninety years of age, says an exchange. Although so far advanced in years, Mr. Terry, who is an elder in the Presbyterian Church of Irvington,
New York, travels to the city in a motor car four days out of each week, and spends four hours at his desk.

It was in 1840 that Mr. Terry's father learned from Mr. Morgan, with whom he had a strong personal friendship, that the merchant would like to associate himself with a young man who could be trained up to carry on the business. The elder Terry proposed his 18-year-old son, and the young man was invited to call at the Morgan office.
When he entered the merchant's room, his eye noted a bottle of liquor standing on the mantlepiece. The conversation ran on to the satisfaction of both parties, and Mr. Morgan was offering his visitor employment when the latter interposed:

"Pardon me, Mr. Morgan, but I see a bottle of liquor here. Does your house sell liquor along with other merchandise?"

"Yes, that is one line of our trade," answered the merchant.

"In that case, sir," was the instant and sturdy response, "I shall have to decline your offer. I cannot be associated with any business where liquors are handled."

Mr. Morgan was doubtless surprised, but he showed no annoyance. He simply answered:

"Oh, well, I don't care anything about that part of the business. If you will come in with us, we won't sell any more liquors."

And no man ever bought intoxicants from E. D.
Morgan & Company from that day to this.—The

A STUDY OF OUR FOREIGN MISSION STATUS.

By Robert B. Eleazor.

In the M. E. Church, South, the per capita assessment for Foreign Missions has been increased only five cents during the last twenty years. The aggregate has been increased from time to time, but only in keeping with the increase in church membership. At present the assessment for Foreign Missions is only 21c per capita, less than 2c a month. The receipts for Foreign Missions last year from all sources—assessments, specials, bequests, Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, Woman's Missionary Societies, etc.—amount to only 46c per member, less than a penny a week.

During the last ten years the gifts of the Southern Presbyterian Church for the cause of Foreign Missions have increased from 75c to $1.70 per member. In the same period the gifts of our own members have increased only from 30c to 46c per capita.

The membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the beginning of 1912, was 1,927,309. The assessment for Foreign Missions made at the Board meeting in May, 1911, is $400,000. This, as indicated above, is but 21c per member.

The Annual Conferences which have had their sessions already, report total collected on assessment for Foreign Missions, as follows:

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

	Assessed	Paid	Paid on same acc't.
Conference—	—1912—		1911
Columbia	$ 550	$ 487	$ 441
Denver	500	370	432
East Columbia	650	459	618
Kentucky	7500	5608	6729
Louisville	11600	9072	9606
Missouri	12400	8782	13005
Montana	450	396	425
Southwest Missouri.	10200	7928	9623
Tennessee	14500	12890	15493
Western Virginia . .	2700	1857	1854

As any one can see, this is not a particularly encouraging report to date. The situation calls for concert of prayer and effort. The collections received during this year are not only essential to the work already enterprised, but will determine absolutely for 1913 whether we shall advance, mark time, or retreat.

The assessment is a minimum. If no church should exceed it, we would have to recall half our missionaries and discontinue half our work.

ORPHANAGE CAR TO BE RUN.

Dear Brother Meek: The General Freight Agent of the N. O., Mobile & Chicago R. R. has kindly agreed to run a car from Middleton to Jackson, via Newton, for the benefit of our Orphanage about Thanksgiving Day. He requests me to give him full instructions as to the points at which the car is to be stopped. The brethren along the line should let me know at once, so that he can issue instructions to the agents at the different stations to bill out the freight without any charges. Kindly put the matter in the paper so that they will not fail to answer. If the preachers will look after this at once, we can send a nice car of things to Brother Williams' large family.

REPORT OF PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate held its regular annual meeting in the office of the Advocate on Wednesday, October 30, at 11 o'clock a. m. All the members of the committee were present except two: Brother N. E. Joyner, of the Louisiana Conference, having been transferred to the Mexican Mission Conference, could not meet with the committee, and during the year, Brother J. T. Murrah was called to his reward. He was greatly missed in the deliberations of the body; having been the longest in the service on the committee, he was always a wise and safe adviser. Suitable resolutions were adopted attesting the esteem in which he was held by the members of the three Conferences.

The editorial policy of the Advocate was commended and the Editor thanked for giving to the Church a paper of such excellence. His strong stand against all wrong, his loyal support of our Methodist doctrines in their purity, and the other attractive features of the paper at once commend it to the public as safe and highly edifying.

The Publisher has shown himself loyal and untiring in his efforts to give to the Church the very best results at the lowest possible cost. Brother Chalmers is doing a great work at a sacrifice. His profits as publisher do not amount to a living for himself and family.

The Committee instructed the publisher to charge one cent a word for all obituaries containing more than two hundred words. In this matter he was allowed no discretion and could make no exceptions.

The matter of proper advertising was discussed and wise action was taken. The Editor and Publisher were authorized to carry out the will of the committee, being regarded as men who would jealously guard the highest and best interests of the Church.

The Committee recommended that the Editor publish the presiding elders' announcements once in full, and subsequently to keep their dates in the paper for a month in advance.

Each patronizing Conference was requested to consider the advisability of electing a layman who understands the printing business to membership on its Publishing Committee.

The Publisher reported that the year has presented unusual hindrances to the success of the paper. But in the face of the high water which flooded large portions of our territory, and the unusual depression throughout our entire farming section, the affairs of the paper have been closed up in fairly good condition. The average number of subscriptions remains about the same as last year. There are about 7500 subscribers, but 10,000 are necessary if the paper is to meet the demands now upon it.

CHAS. W. CRISLER, Secretary.

THE RESULTS OF THE ELECTION.

The general election which was held on November 5 resulted, as had been generally predicted, in a sweeping victory for the Democrats. Mr. Taft carried two States—Vermont and Utah—with eight electoral votes, and possibly Idaho, with four votes. Mr. Roosevelt carried five States—Michigan, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, South Dakota, and Washington—which together have 77 electoral votes. He also at this writing seems to have a shade the best of it in California, where the contest between him and the Democratic nominee is so close that it will probably take the official returns to determine the result. All the other States—39 in number—went into the Wilson column, giving him 429 electors, with a possibility that he may also gain those of Idaho and California. Accurate returns as to the popular vote are not yet available. The general impression, however, seems to be that the total vote cast was by no means a full one, and that Mr. Wilson has fallen considerably short of the combined vote of his two leading opponents. Certainly this is true in the Northern States, whether it is of the whole country or not. Mr. Roosevelt undoubtedly led Mr. Taft in the number of popular as well as electoral votes received. The Democrats will control both houses of Congress, the lower House by a large majority, and the Senate by a narrow margin. This is fortunate, since it will enable the party called to power to carry forward its announced policies and place the responsibility squarely upon it, in case its administration should prove unsatisfactory to the people.

As to the future of the two opposition parties, we will hazard no prediction. We regard the question as to which will hereafter be the stronger, as a most uncertain one. The Progressives have the prestige of having polled the larger vote, and in the person of Mr. Roosevelt they have a leader of immense popularity and unsurpassed ability. But they are weak in not having much anchorage either in the States or in Congress. Nearly all of their candidates for gubernatorial honors and seats in the National Legislature were defeated. The Republicans in this respect are much better off. If the progressive wing of the old party should gain the ascendancy under the leadership of such men as Senators Cummins, Borah, and La Follette, the new party is likely to have pretty rough sailing. At any rate, we regard the fight between the two as having in reality just begun, and the impending struggle will probably be one of the fiercest and most bitter in the history of American politics.

ANENT OBITUARIES.

In another column appears the Report of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, for which we ask a careful reading. Particularly do we request the patrons of our paper to note the instructions to the Publisher and Editor concerning obituaries. Somewhat more fully stated, the regulations prescribed for observance in the Advocate office are as follows: Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be printed free of charge. All words over that number must be paid for at the rate of one cent each. Quoted poetry will be admitted only when paid for at this rate; original poetry will not be admitted at all. Papers containing memoirs may be obtained at five cents per copy. In forwarding obituaries count the words and send the amount of money necessary. Those over the allowed length, for which no payment is made or pledged, will be abridged and printed without communicating with the sender. These rules also include "appreciations," whether in the form of memoirs or resolutions. There are positively no exceptions to them, except in the case of Methodist ministers and members of their immediate families. These regulations are absolutely necessary in view of the large constituency of our paper and the amount of this kind of matter we are asked to publish. No organ in the Church is more liberal in the amount of free space allowed for obituaries than the New Orleans Advocate.

HOME MISSION WEEK.

Next Sunday will mark the beginning of Home Mission Week, concerning which so much has appeared in the papers. It is to be hoped that it will be generally observed, and that the services held will be productive of much good. Though Christianity has played an important part in the making of our nation and there are none beneath our flag who are not the beneficiaries of its influence, it yet remains true that the great majority of the American people are not connected with any Church. We yet have mighty problems to solve here in the home land. The reign of the saloon, though checked in many of the States, is still far too widely extended; vice stalks abroad almost without apology in our cities; there are still many dark places within our broad dominions, and unevangelized thousands from over the seas are pouring upon our shores. By every token, if we would "make our country God's country," we should be up and doing. To direct the thought of the Christian people of the nation to our own crying needs cannot be otherwise than helpful. Nor is there any better way to promote the cause of foreign missions than to make this great Republic Christian in fact as well as name. The extent of the support it has behind it, always largely determines the strength and success of an army at the front.

OUR RELIANCE.

The Editor of the Pacific Methodist Advocate thinks that the rights of laymen will finally be given to the sisters because the women always get what they want. If the women of Southern Methodism ever desire seats in the General Conference, we have no doubt that they will obtain them. But that anything like a majority of them are behind this woman's rights agitation in the Church, we do not believe. Where is the evidence of it? Let our worthy conferees adduce it if he can. The lesson that many of these agitators seem unable to learn is that a few conspicuous generals are not the army. What we are most relying upon to defeat this unwise Northern-born movement is the sound judgment of the tens of thousands of splendid women in Southern Methodism whose ideals for their sex have not yet been lowered. Though not given to making much noise, we shall be surprised if they are not emphatically heard from "at Philippi."

TOO MUCH HOTCHPOTCH.

There is talk of introducing voting machines into the public schools of Chicago with a view to teaching the boys how to cast a ballot. A far better thing to do would be to stick to the task of getting something into their heads so that they will know for what and for whom to vote. Our public schools in many places already have such a hotchpotch of instruction that it is almost perilous to send a child to them. That scatteration is better than concentration, seems now to be the notion of the average teacher. And it is to be feared that we shall pay dearly for this mistaken policy in the near future.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

For the past few days, Mr. J. D. Barbee, of Greenville, Miss., has been visiting relatives in Memphis, Tenn. We regret to be informed that of late he has not been altogether well.

A revival meeting is in progress at First Church, New Orleans, in which Rev. J. W. Moore, the pastor, is doing the preaching. Large crowds are attending every night, and the interest is deepening.

Rev. J. W. Booth will begin a revival meeting in Algiers on the fourth Sunday of this month. Prof. R. N. Jeffrey will have charge of the music, and Brother Thomas, pastor of the Second Church of New Orleans, will assist in the preaching.

All notices pertaining to the approaching sessions of the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences may be found on Page 12.

The recent revival at Bogalusa, La., resulted in fifty accessions to our Church. Brother L. I. McCain, the pastor, will tell of this gracious awakening in the next issue of the Advocate.

Bishop Thirkield, of New Orleans, has been invited by the Southern Methodist pastors of the city to address a missionary mass meeting to be held in First Church, Friday evening, Nov. 22, on "What Shall We Do With the Negro?"

Rev. H. N. Brown, who is finishing his fourth year as pastor at Morgau City, La., was in New Orleans last Monday. He has almost completed a new parsonage which is a seven-room, modern building, located in one of the choicest residence sections of that city.

We were favored last Monday with a pleasant visit from Judge W. K. McLaurin, of Vicksburg, Miss. He is the State Senator from Warren County, an ardent Methodist, and a good friend of the Advocate. We were cheered by his genial presence and kindly words.

A new heating system is soon to be installed in the Rayne Memorial Church, of New Orleans, of which Rev. A. G. Shankle is the pastor. Brother Shankle also states that the organ will be repaired in the near future. These improvements will cost about $2000.

We are informed that Bishop E. E. Hoss, accompanied by his son, Dr. Sessier Hoss, left Tate Springs, Tenn., for Baltimore a few days since, for the purpose of consulting specialists at Johns Hopkins University. The Bishop's condition is represented as steadily improving.

On account of a prior engagement which necessitates Rev. H. R. Singleton being absent from New Orleans on Thanksgiving Day, he will not preach the annual sermon at the union Thanksgiving service at the First Church, as was previously announced. Rev. C. A. Battle has been invited to perform this service.

Dr. F. N. Parker, who is at the head of the Biblical Department of Trinity College (North Carolina), preached before the students of the University of Virginia on Sunday, October 27. This is Dr. Parker's second visit to this historic institution to render pulpit service. He was called there on a similar mission last year.

Dr. J. M. Henry, the presiding elder of the New Orleans District, preached at Covington, La., last Sunday, delivering a forceful and impressive sermon. Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, who is in charge of this work, spent a part of last week in the city and looked in on us at the Advocate office. He spoke hopefully of the outlook in his field of service, particularly at Slidell.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, the enterprising pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church of New Orleans, has issued a neat folder giving the program of his Sunday and mid-week services for the month of November. It is a most attractive schedule which he has arranged for his congregation, and shows that it is his purpose both to feed his people from the pulpit and keep them busy in the Master's service.

A brief communication from Rev. K. W. Dodson, of New Iberia, La., brings the sad news of the death of Mrs. A. M. Bernard, the mother of Rev. A. A. Bernard, which occurred in her home at that place on November 5. We deeply sympathize with our brother and the other bereaved ones in their great loss, and pray that the Heavenly Father may have them in his gracious keeping in this trying hour.

We are under obligations to Rev. S. S. Holladay, of Pelican, La., for some subscriptions sent in a few days since. Brother Holladay is one of the four-year men of the Louisiana Conference, and will soon have to betake himself to another field. He will go, leaving behind many friends and an impression for good that will long endure. The man who wears well is pretty certain to be one who does his work well.

On Sunday morning, November 3, the members of the First Methodist Church of Tupelo, Miss., unanimously voted to invite the North Mississippi Conference to hold its session in the fall of 1913 in that city. The Conference met there eleven years ago, and was never more royally entertained anywhere. The place that undertakes to compete with Tupelo for this honor will need to present a most alluring prospect to have any hope of winning.

Rev. W. F. Rogers is closing a successful year on the West (Miss.) charge. He has had good meetings at every point, and acknowledges himself indebted to Rev. J. J. Garner, Rev. C. W. Bailey, Rev. J. D. Simpson, and Rev. T. H. Dorsey for efficient assistance rendered in revival services. He reports 35 additions to the Church since the last Conference. In the discharge of his manifold duties, Brother Rogers also takes care of the interests of the Advocate, as the files in our office will attest.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. L. Sutton, Dr. J. T. Sawyer occupied the pulpit of the Louisiana Avenue Church of this city at both the morning and evening hour last Sunday, and was greeted by good congregations. In the afternoon he attended the dedicatory exercises of the Lake View Presbyterian Church (located near his residence), and delivered a brief address. The Doctor is an able expositor of the Scriptures, and is in much demand for pulpit service.

Dr. S. A. Steel, of Jackson, Tenn., is offering a course of sermons on the Bible, which he would be pleased to give where pastors desire them and will make satisfactory arrangements. The themes of the proposed series are most suggestive, and we do not doubt that in the hands of such a masterful pulpit and platform teacher they would prove highly interesting and instructive. Our preachers who desire to quicken the interest in Bible study among their people would do well to communicate with Dr. Steel.

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Dreher, at 827 St. Charles Street, New Orleans, on Thursday, November 7, at 6 p.m., Mr. John H. Lipscomb, of Bogalusa, La., and Miss Lella R. Lipscomb were united in marriage, the Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, of Slidell, La., officiating. The bride is a most superior young lady, and the groom, who is a conductor on the New Orleans Great Northern Railroad, is a young man of sterling character and much promise. We extend congratulations and best wishes to the happy couple.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, our capable pastor at McComb City, Miss., writes that we were not quite correct in stating in our "Personal Column" last week that he had entirely liquidated the debt on his attractive church at that place. A few hundred dollars yet remain to be paid, but it is thought that this balance will be wiped out before the 1st of December. Brother Hardin reports nearly a hundred accessions to the Church during the year, and states that he confidently expects to report everything in full at Conference.

Dr. T. C. Wier, the Secretary, sends us the following announcement: "The Veteran Ministers' Association of the North Mississippi Conference will hold its annual meeting at Greenwood, Miss., on the first day of the Conference at 3 o'clock p.m. The annual sermon will be preached by Rev. John Ritchey, and other exercises will immediately follow. It is earnestly desired that all our superannuate and supernumerary preachers shall be present on this occasion. Our meeting last year was an interesting and profitable one."

On Tuesday of last week, Mrs. M. E. Gilmore, of Columbus, Miss., and Mrs. J. A. Evans, of New Orleans, were pleasant callers at the Advocate office. Sister Gilmore's husband, now deceased, was formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference, and when she saw the name of the New Orleans Advocate on the door she felt that she could not pass without making us a brief visit. We are always delighted to see our friends, especially those who have read and loved the Advocate through succeeding administrations.

Mr. W. H. Patton, of Shubuta, Miss., in the interest of the Baptist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss., has arranged for an Orphanage car, which will pass from State Line to Waynesboro on Friday, Nov. 29, and from Waynesboro to Meridian on Saturday, Nov. 30, and from Meridian to Jackson on Monday, Dec. 2. Persons along the way are urged to have their donations ready to be taken on board without delay. The railroads will give free transportation. Brother Patton extends to the Methodists a cordial invitation to join in this movement and send their contributions to the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson.

Rev. W. Fred Long, Secretary of the International Sunday School Work in Mississippi, sends us a list of the Conferences and Institutes which he has arranged for the month of December. They are as follows: Tupelo, Dec. 1 and 2; West Point, Dec. 3 and 4; Meridian, Dec. 5 and 6; Hattiesburg, Dec. 7 and 8; Brookhaven, Dec. 9 and 10; Jackson, Dec. 11 and 12; Grenada, Dec. 13 and 14; Sardis, Dec. 15 and 16. Brother Long is a tireless toiler, and the cause committed to his hands is prospering under his leadership. He earnestly desires the attendance of all near-by workers of every denomination at the meetings announced above.

In a note received from Bishop H. C. Morrison a few days ago, he stated that he was about well, except for a lingering cough which was still annoying him. At the time that he wrote he was planning to take a sea trip to Key West, in the hope that the ocean breezes would effect the complete restoration of his health. We hope that he has continued to gain in strength and vigor, and that a favoring Providence will bring him to our Conferences in Mississippi in good shape for his work. It will be a great privilege to hear him again from the pulpit and in his talks to the brethren from the chair.

Mrs. C. Brandt, of Church Point, La., was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office last Monday. Sister Brandt is a member of the Church at Church Point, one of the appointments on the Prudhomme Circuit, of which Rev. H. B. Vandenburg is the pastor. We are always glad to have our subscribers call while visiting in the city.

We are pleased to know that the enrollment at Millsaps College has already reached 265, and that students are still coming in every day or two. There is a bright prospect of it reaching fully 300 by the opening of the second term, which would place the present ahead of any preceding session. The utmost harmony prevails on the campus and the outlook is most encouraging. We congratulate Dr. Watkins upon the success which he is achieving in administering the affairs of this splendid institution of learning. Sister Watkins' influence among the students is also reported to be most wholesome and helpful.

In a business letter to the Advocate office, Dr. J. W. Price, who is serving the Tutwiler (Miss.) charge, adds: "I have had a very pleasant and successful year. Every church has had a good revival, and our net gain in membership is about 56. We are enterprising two new churches; one at Tutwiler, and the other at Marks. Rev. B. P. Jacob, our presiding elder, is every inch a man. We like him in our part of the country." We are glad to have this encouraging note from our long-time friend, who is one of the veterans in the Mississippi Delta, and to whom the Methodism of that section owes much. It is nothing new for him to be establishing the Church of Wesley in that fruitful field.

We regret to be informed that Sister J. A. Bowen, who is well known and loved throughout North Mississippi, continues to be in feeble health. In a letter, written on November 8 from Birmingham, where the family now reside, Brother Bowen expresses solicitude for her condition and requests his friends to remember her at the throne of grace. Notwithstanding the fact that he has had many hindrances, Brother Bowen has done considerable revival work during the year, and has witnessed at least 900 conversions and 500 accessions to the Church. He states that if circumstances will permit, he will attend the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. H. S. Spragins, our pastor at Greenwood, Miss., in a note to the Editor, states that preparation for the entertainment of the North Mississippi Conference is going steadily and energetically on in that goodly city. Greenwood never does anything by halves, and her generous-hearted citizens know that Methodist preachers can stand a great deal of kind treatment. If the approaching session of this body is not a delightful one, we feel sure that it will not be the fault of our genial host or the splendid community in which it will assemble. The only fear that we have is that, as the Greenwood pulpit will be open by the operation of the time limit, all the preachers may fall so in love with the people and place that they will want to remain as pastor.

CONTEST AWARDS

Last week the names of the winners in our Tour Contest were published and the announcement made that we would publish a full list of the prizes awarded this week. The first prize, which was awarded to Miss Belle M. Roberts, is a trip from New Orleans, via New York City, to Zurich, Switzerland, and return. The details of this trip have been described many times, and Miss Roberts is to be congratulated on her good fortune in being the recipient of so valuable a prize.

There is no town in America that is more noted for its beauty, both of scenery and climate, than Asheville, N. C. Situated as it is in the mountains it offers attractions to the traveller not found in many cities. In the immediate vicinity of Asheville are located the great Methodist Chautauqua Grounds (at Waynesville), where there will be offered several charming attractions. We know of no place in America that would be a better place to send a young lady than to Asheville, and we will give to the next two contestants in their order the following: To Miss Emmie Peairs, Slaughter, La., a trip to Asheville, N. C., and return, with expense money for one week's stay in Asheville. To Miss Ada Parker, New Orleans, La., a trip to Asheville and return. To Mrs. E. M. Henning, Alexandria, La., a trip to Mineral Wells, Tex., and return. These trips may be taken at any time convenient to the winners during next year. All of them have a cash value, and the money may be accepted by the winners instead of the trips, if they should prefer.

The standing of the four winning contestants as announced last week is as follows:

Miss Belle M. Roberts	29,173
Miss Emmie Peairs	25,325
Miss Ada Parker	20,950

SORRY SHE DIDN'T JOIN THE ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB.

The following letter just received from Mrs. L. P. Coats, Plano, Texas, will be interesting to those readers who are thinking of joining the Advocate Piano Club.

Mrs. Coats writes:—

"I failed to get your book on prices and terms of payment. On last Monday my husband went to the County Seat, McKinney, and bought us a Weiler Piano, just shipped from Chicago, warranted for ten years. We had paid an agent $105 on a Kimball organ, and he came to allow us that much on our piano, leaving us owing $250. to be paid in monthly payments of $10.00 each. I am sure sorry, as I wanted to join the Piano Club so much. I would have felt I was getting the worth of my money."

Our club members get the best style of Weiler for only $173.00, whereas Mrs. Coats had to pay $250.00 plus her organ, the cost of which was $105.00. Assuming that she got the best style of Weiler made, she lost $77 in money and her organ, or $182.00 in all. Now the Club catalogue only claims to save its members $102.00 on the best Weiler piano, whereas it would really have saved Mrs. Coats $182.00.

This is only a sample of what is going on around you every day. The moral is "Investigate the Advocate Piano Club's splendid offers before you buy." We will gladly send you a free copy of the Club's beautifully illustrated catalogue on request. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. MARY VIRGINIA JONES (nee Brown) died at the home of her only child, Mrs. J. A. Mangham, in Ringgold, La., Nov. 26, 1912, aged 74 years. Sister Jones was born in Georgia, and was the widow of the late Dr. A. P. Jones. She leaves but few relatives to mourn her going. Her daughter and husband, Dr. J. A. Mangham, and their four children were with her when she died, and did all that loving hands could do to relieve her of suffering. She joined the Methodist Church about thirty years ago, and lived a good, humble, consistent Christian life. God's word, as read to her during her last hours, was of great comfort to her. The funeral service was conducted by the writer in the presence of a large number of friends, and the interment was made in the family cemetery. Sister Jones was a subscriber to the Advocate, and seemed to gain much strength from its columns. L. E. CROOKS, P. C.

A great sorrow has come to Brother and Sister A. S. Oliver, in the death of their only son, DEWITT. He was a bright boy and gave promise of developing into a noble Christian character, having, as he did, a special love for Bible stories and evidencing a strong faith in God. Gustavious DeWitt was born at Moscow, Miss., December 3, 1904, and after a brief illness died at the residence of T. F. Flemings, near Andrews Chapel, October 22, 1912. Revs. C. M. Crossley and J. A. Wells, of Meridian, and W. W. Nelson, of Moscow, assisted in the funeral service which was held in the Liberty Baptist Church near Moscow. His consecrated parents had dedicated him to the Lord and hoped to see him become a minister of the gospel. He often told them he was going to preach as soon as he was old enough, but God evidently had a higher mission for him. Amid the tears of relatives and friends we laid his little body in the grave to rest until the resurrection morning. Our hearts are comforted in the assurance that, while we cannot call him back, we can go to him. Some day we shall understand why God took him.

W. H. LEWIS.

JOHN B. SULLIVANT was born in Lawrence County, Tenn., June 18, 1822, and died in the home of his son, John H. Sullivan, Kosciusko, Miss., Oct. 8, 1912. He was married in 1843 to Mary M. Shuler, with whom he lived joyfully until she was taken to the heavenly home Oct. 16, 1906. To them were born one son and seven daughters, of whom the son and three daughters yet survive, together with twenty-eight grandchildren and thirty-three great grandchildren. Brother Sullivan joined the Methodist Church at the age of 16 and for 74 years was a loyal and faithful member, serving for many years in the offices of class-leader and steward. He was always a true friend of the preacher, and his home was one of the best resting places for the weary itinerant, as this writer can testify from an experience of three years as his pastor and thirty years' acquaintance and friendship with him. He was one of the oldest residents of Attala County, where he settled in 1844. He was known of all men as a patriotic citizen, a good neighbor and an obliging friend. Having lived the life of the righteous, his end was peace. May the sorrowing loved ones on earth prove faithful and all attain to the family reunion in the home above. G. W. BACHMAN.

The subject of this sketch, ELI W. O'NEAL, was born Nov. 27, 1813, and died Aug. 31, 1912. He was married to Miss Mary Ann Rouse Nov. 14, 1867. To them were born eleven children—seven sons and four daughters. There was also a niece adopted into the family, which made twelve children that he reared, all of whom remain, with the wife, to mourn his loss. In 1870 he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and until his death lived a consecrated, Christian life. Not only was Brother O'Neal interested in the Church, but his daily home life was very noticeable on account of his patience and gentleness. The relation between father and children was so tender as to call forth words of praise at his funeral. His home was a home for his preacher, he always gave his pastor such a cordial welcome that it was a pleasure to visit him, and his conversation was concerning things of importance. The writer, though having known him only a short time, had learned to admire his Christian character. On September 1 we laid his body to rest near Poplar Head Church. Many friends attended the funeral, and Rev. W. W. Moore assisted in the burial service. C. C. GIBSON, P. C.

MRS. MARY JANE FOSTER.

The subject of this sketch was born in Chicasaw County, Miss., Oct. 7, 1848. Her mother died when she was a mere child, and her father did not live to see her grown. Thus early in life she and several other children were thrown upon their own resources. She taught school some to help their income. About the time she was grown she was converted and joined the Soule Chapel Methodist Church, then on the Houston Circuit, and being served by Rev. J. P. Dancer. On Dec. 13, 1881, she was happily married to Rev. A. J. Foster, of the North Mississippi Conference. No preacher ever had a truer helpmeet. Wherever the Conference assigned them, they went without a murmur. She was a genuine home-maker. It was not her ambition to shine in social circles, but hers it was to make home happy, and to help her husband in his chosen work. She was in reality an itinerant. It was their custom to go in their buggy from house to house, and from church to church, singing and praying around the family altars. Sister Foster loved God and the Church very dearly, and by her beautiful spirit and quiet life testified most eloquently to the value of the Christian religion.

She had two children to come to bless her home, one of them dying in infancy. The other, a son, is teaching in the High School at Killeen, Texas. Though she never had robust health, still she did her work as best she could, glorifying God in her soul and body, which she regarded as belonging to him. She died in great peace and her mortal remains were laid to rest among her friends at Burnet, Texas, but her immortal spirit went to live with that of her ascended husband in the realms of eternal day. May God bless the only son.

LETTERS FROM CLUB MEMBERS.

One of the most delightful features connected with the operation of the Advocate Piano Club is the large number of appreciative letters which we receive from club members. The following letter from an Alabama lady is a sample of the kind that reach us almost every day. She writes: "The piano you shipped me on the 25th of last month arrived O. K. Monday, and is perfectly satisfactory in every way. I knew it would be, though, before I bought it, for being a Georgian myself, I know what Ludden & Bates stand for and that with the reputation they have they cannot afford to send out an inferior instrument."

Your copy of the handsomely illustrated new Club catalogue is waiting for you. Won't you let us send it to you to-day? Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

Tidings From the Field

Houma (La.) Mission.

Dear Dr. Meek: When I wrote to you two weeks ago, we had received 55 new members into the Church on the Houma Mission since the last Conference. Last week I went to a new place where Brothers Anatole and R. E. Martin had been working and took in 14 on profession of faith, who, together with 3 that I received at another place, make the total for the year, up to date, 77. We now have Brother Booth with us in a meeting at Houma, and expect 8 or 10 new members as a result of his efforts. Sixty-five of the 71 thus far received were on profession of faith, and 64 of these were formerly Romanists.—C. V. Breithaupt, P. C.

Montrose (Miss.) Circuit.

Our work has been gaining ground, both in the number of members and the number of organizations. We began the year with five organizations and one extra appointment, and now have six organizations and two extra appointments. We have held six protracted meetings and will hold two more. Our beloved presiding elder, Rev. T. J. O'Neil, assisted me in one meeting and will do the preaching in another, which will be held in connection with our 4th quarterly conference at Read's Chapel. Rev. H. F. Tolle, Rev. M. M. Black, Rev. J. H. Moore and Rev. L. J. Jones assisted me in one meeting each, and Brother Jones will help me in another meeting. The preaching done by these brethren was excellent, and gave new courage to the membership. May such men live long to serve the noble cause of Christ. H. C. Norsworthy, P. C.

Wolf River (Miss.) Mission.

Dear Brother Meek: As I am closing out the year on the Wolf River (Miss.) Mission, I will endeavor to give you some notes from this territory, which is so infested with Roman Catholic superstitions. This is a very hard work—hard because it has so long been under the Catholic yoke of ignorance and superstition. But by faithful work and earnest praying, the light of truth and righteousness will prevail. We have had three protracted meetings. I was assisted in one by Rev. J. R. Cruthirds, in which we had 4 accessions. In the second meeting, Rev. David Ulmer, of Hub, Miss., helped me. The people in this meeting were greatly benefited by Brother Ulmer's preaching. He is an excellent gospel preacher. We had one accession. In the third meeting, I was assisted by Rev. Paul Daniel, who is a young preacher, but who as a faithful doctrinal preacher, will make his mark in the world. In this meeting we had 8 additions to the Church. I have received, in all, 16 by vows, and 31 children have been baptized, up to date. We will be able to report all collections in full at Conference. Pray for us.

L. FAYARD, P. C.

Van Cleave (Miss.) Charge.

Our camp meeting, held at the New Prospect Camp Ground, Oct. 23-27, was pronounced by many to be the best that has been held there in several years. The singing was exceptionally good, and Brother John L. Carter, one of our young local preachers, deserves much credit for the assistance he gave in leading the choir. Brothers T. J. O'Neil, presiding elder of the Newton District, W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District, and W. M. Sullivan, of Moss Point, did the preaching. The Lord was with them in power, and their sermons were very effective. There was much deep conviction manifested in the congregation during the whole meeting. There were several bright conversions, and five accessions to the Church. We have one old soldier of the Cross in the local ranks (and a Confederate soldier, also, who served four years in the Civil War), who told me that when he receives his pension money he will give $5 of it to the Conference Claimants' Fund. He told me this in the presence of Bros. O'Neil and Jones, and said he wanted it mentioned in the Advocate and his name withheld. If every member on the Van Cleave charge had the interest of the Church at heart as has this grand old soldier of the Cross, we would have no trouble in bringing our collections up in full. I hope and pray that his fidelity to the Church may be a help to others.—Jas. M. Lewis, P. C.

WILL OVERPAY THE ASSESSMENT.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have just read what you said in the Advocate recently in regard to the necessity of paying our preachers in full, and I am glad to say we will pay more than our assessment on the Sidon charge. We had our last quarterly conference last Monday, and while this church was a few dollars short on pastor's salary, we have more than enough to cover the shortage in sight. The other churches paid out. Brother Armour has done a faithful year's work, and our church is on the upgrade. Since coming here Brother Armour has organized two Epworth leagues at this church—a junior and a senior. The young people seem to take a great deal of interest in the League work, and I am sure it will be of great benefit to them as well as the older people.

Although we suffered from the overflow, the crop in this section is good and the outlook is promising for another year.

I know it is gratifying to Brother Armour to see the improvement that has been made—still there is much to do, and we must all do everything in our power to help him. May God help us!

Yours very truly,
Oct. 27, 1912. W. S. S.

A RESOLUTION ADOPTED.

Resolved, That the Monroe and Alexandria Epworth League Conference hereby expresses its hearty thanks for the kind hospitality of the people of Alexandria, and thanks to Dr. and Mrs. S. H. Werlein for invaluable help; to those who assisted with the music and the most delightful reception; to the press for invaluable services rendered, and to others for unfailing attention.

We feel that we have been greatly blessed by your fellowship, and received inspiration and information from the Conference, that will result in better work in the chapters and districts.

LETTER FROM MEXICO:

The Managers of the Advocate Piano Club have just received a letter from Miss McClelland, Missionary, of Tamps, Mexico, speaking in terms of highest praise of the Club Piano which the young ladies of the Daniel Baker College, Brownwood, Texas, have presented to the Mission there. Miss McClelland is a graduate of the Daniel Baker College and the young ladies of that Institution have taken this means of expressing their interest in her mission work.

Miss McClelland writes: "The piano arrived Friday, Oct. 5th, and is all that a piano should be. We are charmed with it and feel that our cup of happiness is just about ready to run over."

Every reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is invited to join the Club. Write for your copy of the new Club catalogue to-day. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Doctor Meek: These lines are written that I may, through the Advocate, say to the brethren that we are, with much pleasure, arranging for their entertainment during the approaching session of our Conference, and will be pleased to have any brother, who has a request to make, write us about the matter, as it is our earnest wish to have every one so situated as to render his stay among us most pleasant. Therefore, let no one hesitate to write us. We are closing up the work of the year in good form and will have good reports to render to the Conference.

Of course, Mr. Editor, we shall expect to have you with us, for at least a part of the time, during our Conference session. The brethren will all be advised, in due time, as to their Conference homes. Will not every one whose eyes may rest on these lines, make special prayer, that God will make the Conference session a great blessing to Monroe Methodism?

With love for all the brethren and a warm welcome to Monroe, I am,
Sincerely,

THOS. J. NORSWORTHY.

Dear Brother Meek: Please let me say through the Advocate to the preachers and laymen who will attend the approaching session of the North Mississippi Conference at Greenwood, that they will greatly aid our Reception Committee if they will reply promptly to the cards which will soon be sent announcing where they will be entertained. Let every brother answer as soon as possible after hearing from us, and give clearly the information desired.

REV. T. J. O'NEIL COMMENDED.

(Resolutions adopted by the Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Homewood Charge, Mississippi Conference.)

Whereas, the time limit of our Church will not permit the return of Rev. T. J. O'Neil to the Newton District as presiding elder, and

Whereas, the note-worthy improvement of the Church in all its various departments in this territory during the past four years has been largely due to his wise and efficient leadership; therefore be it resolved by the officials of this charge in quarterly conference assembled:

(1.) That we hereby express our high appreciation of Brother O'Neil's life and labors among us, commending especially his gentle, Christian bearing at all times, his brotherly devotion to his fellow-laborers, his loyalty to the Church, and his self-sacrificing spirit to the cause of Christ.

(2.) That we pledge Brother O'Neil the full measure of our assistance in making this closing year of his quadrennium the best of the four; that we hereby assure him that our prayers shall follow him into whatever field of labor the Church may call him, and that we shall always hold him in loving remembrance as a Christian gentleman and a wise and efficient leader.

(3.) That these resolutions shall be spread upon the minutes of this quarterly conference, and a copy of them sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

IN MEMORIAM.

(Resolutions adopted by the Woman's Home Mission Society of Saucier, Miss.)

On Oct. 7, 1912, the death angel entered our midst and plucked one of our purest flowers, our beloved co-worker, Sister HOLLAND J. MOORE. She was a beautiful Christian character, whom but to know was to love. We are thankful for her gentle, sweet, Christian life. She was loyal and faithful to every good work her hands found to do; was a dutiful daughter, a wise and loving mother, a devoted wife and a true helpmeet. Hers was a character seldom met with. Gentle and patient under great affliction and pain, her life has left a sweet and holy impression on our hearts, which time can never efface. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That while we mourn our loss with the deepest sincerity, we rejoice in her gain, and bow in humble submission to the will of a loving Father, being comforted with the assurance that hers is a bright and shining crown.

2. That we extend to our bereaved pastor and family the deepest and sincerest sympathy of our hearts, in this sore trial, assuring them of our love and prayers, and commending them to Him who alone can heal our hearts and sanctify our afflictions to our good.

3. That these resolutions be spread on the minutes and be published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Signed by Mrs. Hopper and Mrs. Walden.

COSTS OF POWER FARMING.

A practical Texas farmer estimates the cost of plowing with an Oil Tractor as compared with an equivalent number of horses, as follows:

Tractor for ten hour day.
Fuel and Oil	$ 3.22
Labor, plowman and engineer ..	4.00
Board of two men	1.14
1-2 per cent of year's depreciation ..	1.15
1-2 per cent of year's interest ..	.69

Total cost for 25 acres $10.20
25 Horses for one day.

Feed for horses	$ 6.64
Labor of five men	7.50
Board for five men	2.55
1-3 per cent of years depreciation ..	1.66
1-3 per cent of year's interest ..	1.00

Total cost for 25 acres $19.65

This shows a saving of $7.35, almost one-half, in the cost of plowing each acre. And even then he has not considered the cost of the horse feed on those days they did not work. And one should remember that this saving in cost is not the only item in favor of the tractor. It does the work quicker and deeper than it is done with animal power. This means that the work is done better. The Tractor will do all other kinds of farm work correspondingly cheaper and better than it can be done with horses or mules.

The Hart-Parr Company, 330R Lawler Street, Charles City, Iowa, have prepared some very interesting comparisons of this kind, which are both instructive and of vital importance to the Southern farmer. We suggest that you write them and ask for their booklet: "Plowing and Tilling with the Modern Farm Horse."

This Wife and Mother Wishes to tell you FREE How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By all Means Write to Her and Learn how She did it.

For over 20 years James Anderson of 301 Elm Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a very hard drinker.

His case seemed a hopeless one, but 10 years ago his wife in their own little home, gave him a simple remedy which much to her delight stopped his drinking entirely.

To make sure that the remedy was responsible for this happy result she also tried it on her brother and several of her neighbors. It was successful in every case. None of them has touched a drop of intoxicating liquor since.

She now wishes everyone who has drunkenness in their homes to try this simple remedy for she feels sure that it will do as much for others as it has for her. It can be given secretly if desired, and without cost she will gladly and willingly tell you what it is. All you have to do is write her a letter asking her how she cured her husband of drinking and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope. As she has nothing to sell do not send her money. Simply send a letter with all confidence to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above, taking care to write your name and full address plainly. (We earnestly advise every one of our readers who wishes to cure a dear one of drunkenness to write to this lady today. Her offer is a sincere one.)

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

In planning their rally day the Mansfield Sunday school arranged to send its superintendent and some of its choicest workers to Shreveport to spend the Sunday previous in the various schools of that city, and report what they saw and learned as a part of the rally day program. This was a capital idea, and we commend it to others. The schools of Shreveport are in a friendly contest for excellence and are passing all previous records. Our central schools have drawn their workers from the choicest workers of our rural schools, and ought to be models for their weaker neighbors, and our workers, from time to time, should take a day off to visit and learn from them.

Brother Sanders, our superintendent at Farmersville, has the rule of not adjourning Sunday school, and only gives an intermission until preaching, thus endeavoring to teach the idea of unity in the preaching and teaching services of the Church. Whoever solves the problem of holding all the children that we reach in our Sunday schools for the preaching services and for the Church will justly be honored for a monumental work. Whatever else may be involved, the two questions of physical endurance and interest will have to be dealt with. Unreasonably long services coming together and sermons not suited to them will never hold children.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

It is just a few weeks until Conference, and every charge is requested to send in the Children's Day, and all Sunday school special collections to Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss., at once.

The Galloway Memorial Class of the First Methodist Church at Corinth had an enjoyable class social at the home of their president, Mrs. A. K. Weaver, on Oct. 25. Their quarterly report is most interesting. It is as follows: 65 members, 27 on the Home Department list, 5 teachers furnished the Sunday school, $25 contributed to foreign missions, over 200 visits made to sick and straglers, and two dozen little red chairs and other helpful necessities given to the city deaconess for a room in Southside, where she has organized a Story-Tellers' Hour. Other classes in the Sunday school will contribute and help to make this hour a success.

There are only 33 organized adult classes in the North Mississippi Conference registered with Dr. Bulla in Nashville. This is not as it should be, for there are many more such classes that are flourishing and helpful, but without name, plan or future, which need just those things to blossom them into splendid usefulness. Write the Field Secretary, or Dr. Bulla, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., for a leaflet giving full directions in regard to organization, etc. Several adult classes have been wanting an Adult Class Federation for our Conference, and this cannot be brought about unless 100 classes are registered from within our borders at the head office in Nashville. If all our classes would register at once, such an organization could be planned when Dr. Bulla visits the Conference, to be held in Greenwood.

Miss Duval, of Shelby, has a helpful Study Circle composed of the ladies of her Wesley Class, which is a mixed class. These meet on Thursday afternoons at the various homes for a study of the lesson. There are 15 ladies in this circle and the light refreshments and simple method of entertainment are never a burden, but add the fine zest of pleasant social contact to the study hour. Miss Duval says that in looking over the year's work, she finds her class to be more loyal to the Church and Sunday school, and each member to have a finer and more spiritual conception of the lesson. The class has generously helped in furnishing the new church, has also contributed to the Orphans' and Rally Day funds, and will do so again. Recently members of this class found a poor orphan in a negro road-camp where the laddie had found refuge after the death of his parents, secured a temporary home for him, and have now placed him in the Orphanage at Jackson, where he is doing finely. This Shelby class is only a year old, but every day seems to have been a red-letter day for it, and its example will mean much to the small classes in the small towns by showing the really magnificent possibilities before them.

"A true Thanksgiving should include not only gratitude for what we have received, but for what we have been able to bestow." Spurgeon said, "Thanksgiving is a good thing, thanksgiving is better. The one may die in words; the other lives in acts." No special festival of all the year appeals so much to people of every age and station as Thanksgiving Day. Rally Day has brought new members and renewed enthusiasm, and Thanksgiving Day should witness an overflowing gratitude for all these and many other temporal benefits. We have one day, by government regulation, for thanks, and well it would be if we could only have one day for murmurings, complainings and long pent-up annoyances—and this by government regulation as well. How great a year that would be, with just one such irritating day.

A NOTE FROM DR. J. Y. MURRY.

Dear Brother Meek: As superintendent of the Ripley (Miss.) Sunday school I feel authorized to speak for the school in regard to many things, and this one in particular: Brother Melville Johnson, son of our good pastor, Rev. Eugene Johnson, is now in Millsaps College pursuing a course of study. When he has finished his studies at Millsaps he expects to enter upon the work of an itinerant minister; as did his father when a very young man. He served in our Sunday school so well and so faithfully in each of the many places assigned to him, from time to time, that the school feels that his going away was a great loss; yet all feel that it was the right thing for him to do. When we recall the urgent need of the Church for trained and consecrated ministers to enter the ranks of the hosts who are now devoting their lives to the Master's cause, loyalty to our already great Southern Methodism demands that not only Ripley, but every other church, should take a broad view of this vital question and make local interests subservient to the general good.

We expect to hear, at no distant time, of our bright, sweet-spirited, young brother, Melville Johnson, pushing his way to the front in the ranks of the efficient ministerial servants of our Lord. I wish that the Advocate could reach every Methodist family in this broad land of ours.

JOHN Y. MURRY.

This Will Stop Your Cough in a Hurry

Save $2 by Making This Cough Syrup at Home.

This recipe makes a pint of better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. A few doses usually conquer the most obstinate cough—stops even whooping cough quickly. Simple as it is, no better remedy can be had at any price.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. It has a pleasant taste and lasts a family a long time. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Has a good tonic effect, braces up the appetite, and is slightly laxative, too, which is helpful. A handy remedy for hoarseness, croup, bronchitis, asthma and all throat and lung troubles.

The effect of pine on the membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norwegian white pine extract, and is rich in gualacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe has attained great popularity throughout the United States and Canada. It has often been imitated, though never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

CATARRH TRUTH

You Can Plainly See the Truth This Picture Tells.

This picture shows the mucous membrane tract of the nose, throat, and air passages. This is where catarrh germs live and where the disease spreads. The small black spot No. 1, shows where balms, creams, pastes, ointments and such treatments reach by direct application. You can see that it doesn't reach more than 2 per cent of the disease.

No. 2 shows where douches, sprays, atomizers and similar treatments reach. So their cure, like 1 and 2, only reach a tiny part of the disease. You cannot cure catarrh by stopping the disease only in a very small part.

No. 3 shows that medicated smoke can, will and does reach ALL the corners, nooks and creases, touching every part. Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy which I will send you free, is made of herbs, roots, flowers and leaves; no tobacco or habit-forming drugs. When this mixture is burned in a tube or new clean pipe, which I send you free, it sends forth a powerful, germ-killing, volatile smoke, relieving the distress and killing the germs. You can instantly feel the beneficial effects. I have shown you in the picture the truth about various treatments. You can see it is reasonable and fair.

Now I want you to write for a free treatment to let you prove for yourself what a grand remedy I have. The regular treatment costs only $1.00, postpaid. Just say in a letter or on a postal to me "Please send me Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy Free." When I get your request I will send the treatment by mail free and also facts about catarrh you will be glad to know. Address Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga.

CLUB PIANOS WITHSTAND BAD WEATHER.

One of the many advantages enjoyed by the members of the Advocate Piano Club is that Ludden & Bates' instruments which are furnished to Club members are especially constructed to resist the effects of damp weather. The rainfall in the South being heavy, and the climate warm, the air absorbs more moisture than that of any other section of the country. Ordinary pianos built for a cold, dry climate, frequently "go bad" in the South. For half a century Ludden & Bates have conducted one of the largest piano businesses in the country and as most of their pianos are distributed in the South, they have naturally given more thought and study to the requirements of the Southern climate. As a result they have perfected an action which employs five lines of Billings Brass Flanges which, being impervious to moisture, prevents the sticking of the keys in wet weather and the rattling of the keys in dry weather.

Every reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is cordially invited to write for a free copy of the handsomely illustrated new Club catalogue and learn of the many advantages presented by the Club. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

BEAUTY HINTS

Superfluous Hair

Will you tell me if there is any way to permanently destroy a disgusting growth of superfluous hair on my face and arms? I am 55 years old and the growth is very bad. My daughter who is 22, is similarly troubled. I have been told that depilatories are worthless and that nothing is effective except the electric needle which I hesitate to try, as I am told it is painful. I should be glad if you would give me your advice.

CHARLOTTE K.

You are wise to avoid the electric needle. It is a dangerous operation, and besides being painful, often leaves severe scars. I have frequently stated in these columns that it is better to endure the annoyance than to suffer the pain of the electric needle. I have also warned inquirers against depilatories, which are worse than useless because they cause the hair to grow out thicker than before. Recently, however, I have received some enthusiastic and reliable reports about a new method (originating in Japan) which has been successfully used in this country. I do not know its name but a friend of mine who received a complete cure by its use, told me that she would gladly furnish full particulars, without charge, to anyone who would write her.

If you will write to Mrs. Osgood, Apartment 490 K, 123 East 27th St., New York City, N. Y., enclosing a two-cent stamp for reply and mentioning my advice, she will send you quite free of all cost, complete instructions which will undoubtedly enable you to be permanently rid of all trace of the blemish.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT MEETING AT HAZLEHURST, MISS., OCT. 22.

To the untiring efforts of Mrs. B. E. Brister, District Secretary of the Brookhaven District, and to the help and presence of the consecrated Conference president, Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, was largely due the success of the meeting held at Hazlehurst, Miss., on October 22, 1912. The early morning train brought a large number of delegates from points below Hazlehurst, and the meeting was called for 9 o'clock. Delegates from Crystal Springs arrived not much later in automobiles, and from the first minutes of the business session, a lively interest and spirit of renewed consecration were evident. Mrs. Brister called the meeting to order, appointed a secretary, Mrs. Henry Meyer of Brookhaven, and the devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Lipscomb. The morning session was taken up by reports from the different auxiliaries. An earnest appeal was made to the corresponding secretaries and treasurers of societies to compare their reports before sending them to Conference officers, thus eliminating discrepancies which are a serious annoyance to the Conference officers in making up their reports. The needs of the District Parsonage were presented and $15.00 was pledged from three societies—Brookhaven, Magnolia and McComb City. All auxiliaries were urged to send boxes of clothing to Mrs. Meekin, to be used in her work in the Mary Werlein Home in New Orleans.

The afternoon was devoted largely to informal round-table discussions, conducted by Mrs. Lipscomb and Mrs. Brister, all present taking part with interest. Especial mention was made of the Standard of Excellence, pledge money, observance of Home Mission Week and the Week of Prayer; and Mrs. Lipscomb earnestly urged the organizing of societies in the rural churches by all the societies in this district. Several members signified their willingness to give their time, automobiles and other conveyances to further this work. As most of the delegates were compelled to return home on the late afternoon train, the meeting adjourned, after expressions of thanks to the Hazlehurst society by Mrs. Brister, and prayer by Rev. N. B. Harmon, who had shown his interest and co-operation throughout the day. Although for various reasons this meeting had to be condensed into one day's time, it proved a means of grace to all who attended, and an impetus toward better work and greater consecration; and even so short a season for interchange of thought will prove of inestimable help to the societies which sent representatives.

Shreveport District, Mansfield, Dec. 6-8.

One or more Conference officers have been assigned to each of these meetings. Every auxiliary is urged to send delegates to their respective District Meetings. Questions of importance are to be discussed, and it is the desire of the Executive Committee to get the sentiment of the members on these questions. No auxiliary should miss the opportunity for the information and inspiration which Miss Davies' visit will afford. A cordial invitation is extended to all ministers to be present at these institutes.

Notice.

Mrs. A. P. Holt, Conference Corresponding Secretary, Foreign Department, Louisiana Conference, has found it necessary to give up her conference work temporarily on account of her husband's protracted illness; and the president, Mrs. Abel Bliss, has appointed Mrs. Crow Girard to have charge of both departments, Home and Foreign, until further notice.

Mrs. Girard will conduct the correspondence for both departments and supply the auxiliaries with information and with literature. District secretaries and auxiliaries are asked to bear this in mind, so that there may be no confusion or delay about the work.

We learn with sorrow of this step which our Corresponding Secretary feels compelled to take. We ask that all the auxiliaries and friends throughout the Conference unite in prayer for the speedy recovery of her husband. In these days of deep anxiety may she "abide under the shadow of the Almighty."

ROYAL BAKING POWDER ABSOLUTELY PURE

Cooking under modern methods and conveniences is made so attractive the whole family is becoming interested.

"These biscuits are delicious; this cake is excellent," says the father. "I made them," says the daughter, and both father and daughter beam with pleasure.

Royal Baking Powder has made home baking a success, a pleasure and a profit, and the best cooking today the world over is done with its aid.

MISSISSIPPI ORPHANAGE WORK DAY.

We have received to date from Work Day, $3,016.97. This was given by 123 churches and Sunday schools that observed Work Day, and three W. H. M. Societies, one Epworth League, and 85 individuals who sent their Work Day contributions direct to the Home.

There are in the two Conferences 1,179 organized churches. Suppose all these had observed Work Day, what a handsome sum we would have realized! We hope that the other 1,051 churches will yet observe Work Day. I am sure many more will.

Those of you who have not done so have missed much real pleasure. I wish you could read the letters that came with the Work Day donations. They were full of joy and gladness, saying that they got more pleasure from working and giving than we would from receiving. The Bible says so, too.

To those who observed Work Day and helped to make it a success, we want to express our thanks and highest appreciation. We know that you have already received from God a greater commendation than we can possibly give. To those who give he has promised to give good measure, pressed down and running over.

We have received to date—November 1st—only a little more than half of the six thousand dollars that we are expecting. Of course, those of you who have not contributed will do so some time during November, and the report for December will have your Work Day contributions in it, making the other three thousand dollars.

You people have been helpful, and we have faith in you for the future. This has been and is now a hard year, and it takes hard work to make "buckle and tongue" meet, especially if they are a long way apart. By God's help and your co-operation we will do it and do it at the right time.

W. M. WILLIAMS.

PIANOS FOR CHRISTMAS.

How would you like to receive a beautiful piano for a Christmas gift, one that would retain its sweet tone and easy action for a life's time? Could anything be more acceptable? And if a high grade piano would be so acceptable to you, what about the other members of your family, wouldn't they appreciate it too?

Let us suggest that the Advocate Piano Club presents just the opportunity which you have long waited for and that it will help you immensely in solving this, otherwise difficult, piano problem. The Club makes it so easy, safe and convenient that when you have thoroughly investigated the plan we feel confident that you will do what many others are doing, namely "Join in time to get your piano for Christmas."

Write for your copy of the handsomely illustrated Club catalogue today. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

A CONVERSION AND ELSE.

Dear Dr. Meek: The writer filled an engagement to speak for the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League at Glennfield on the night of Oct. 28th, and after closing the service, a bright and promising looking gentleman, twenty-six years old and married, who had been bitten by the old serpent in the wine cup, to his sorrow, rushed forward with the many friends of temperance and prohibition to shake the speaker's hand. Confessing his weakness and error, he stated with considerable emotion that he intended henceforth to live a different and better life. A few minutes later, amidst the enthusiasm of the occasion, he gave his heart to God and was gloriously converted. Then followed appropriately—"the old-time religion" song, a hallelujah season, and the people returned to their homes, rejoicing over what had so unexpectedly happened that night. Truly,

"God moves in a mysterious way,
His wonders to perform."

Glennfield is a part of the Myrtle Circuit (North Miss. Conf.) and Rev. Elijah H. Cunningham is the efficient pastor. He has had good success in his work this year and will make a fine report at Conference. His splendid ability as a preacher and leader is recognized and admired by his people, and they want him back for another year. As a token of appreciation, the circuit has purchased for his use a good young horse. The Myrtle congregation has already arranged for one-half the pastor's time another year. They are a noble people. May Methodism continue to grow in that section.

Faithfully,

L. W. CAIN.

You Should Have Seen the Pimples

But Now Her Face Is the Fairest of the Fair, Due to Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

These pimples are like pearls in a ruby cluster when Stuart's Calcium Wafers clear the face of every pimple, spot and blemish. And even if you haven't pimples, the clear, transparent skin of a healthy Calcium Wafer complexion is more radiant than the deft touch of an artist to the most exquisite water color.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers act directly upon the sweat glands of the skin, since their mission is to stimulate the excretory ducts. They do not create perspiration, but cause the skin to breathe out vigorously, thus transforming perspiration into a gaseous vapor. The calcium sulphide of which these wafers are composed, consumes the germ poisons in the sweat glands and pores, hence the blood makes a new, smooth skin in a surprisingly short time.

You will never be ashamed to look at yourself in a mirror, once you use Stuart's Calcium Wafers. Nor will your friends give you that hinting look, as much as to say—for goodness sake, get rid of those pimples.

There is no longer any excuse for anyone to have a face disfigured with skin eruptions, when it is so easy to get rid of them. Simply get a box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store and take them according to directions. After a few days you will hardly recognize yourself in the mirror. The change will delight you immensely. All blemishes will disappear.

All druggists sell Stuart's Calcium Wafers at 50 cents a box.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

By the President of the United States of America—A Proclamation.

A God-fearing nation, like ours, owes it to its inborn and sincere sense of moral duty to testify its devout gratitude to the All-Giver for the countless benefits it has enjoyed. For many years it has been customary at the close of the year for the National Executive to call upon his fellow-countrymen to offer praise and thanks to God for the manifold blessings vouchsafed to them in the past, and to unite in earnest suppliance for their continuance.

The year now drawing to a close has been notably favorable to our fortunate land. At peace within and without, free from the perturbations and calamities that have afflicted other peoples; rich in harvests so abundant and in industries so productive that the overflow of our prosperity has advantaged the whole world; strong in the steadfast conservation of the heritage of self-government bequeathed to us by the wisdom of our fathers, and firm in the resolve to transmit that heritage unimpaired, but rather improved by good use, to our children and our children's children for all time to come, the people of this country have abounding cause for contented gratitude.

Wherefore, I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, in pursuance of long-established usage, and in response to the wish of the American people, invite my countrymen, wheresoever they may sojourn, to join on Thursday, the twenty-eighth day of this month of November, in appropriate ascriptions of praise and thanks to God for the good gifts that have been our portion, and in humble prayer that his great mercies toward us may endure.

In witness whereof I have set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this seventh day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twelve, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

WILLIAM H. TAFT.

By the President:

ALVEY A. ADEE, Acting Secretary of State.

PRAISE AND THANKSGIVING DUE TO GOD.

Both by example and precept the inspired writers teach the duty and privilege of thanksgiving and praise. It has ever been the disposition of pious hearts to extol the Heavenly Father for his unfailing mercy and abounding goodness. The Book of Psalms—the world's oldest hymnal—is largely made up of doxologies. Songs of gratitude to God began in the early dawn of human history, have resounded through all the succeeding centuries, will go on with increasing volume until the end of time, and finally will be sung around the great white throne by the vast company of the redeemed that no man can number.

There is a philosophic basis for adoration and praise. Like prayer, they spring naturally out of the relation that the creature sustains to the Creator. Such are the beauty and perfection of the attributes of Deity that to contemplate them aright must enkindle in the soul a profound feeling of admiration and homage. The winsomeness of the divine character, when clearly seen, commands universal recognition. Christ came in the brightness of the Father's glory and the express image of his person, and even skeptics have acknowledged the charm of his unique and flawless personality. He is the world's mightiest magnet, and the more he is lifted up, the more the millions of mankind are drawn unto him. It is by blinding men to the true nature of God that Satan deceives and destroys them. If they can be made to see the Father as he is—his righteousness, his holiness, his tenderness, and the vast wealth of his love—it is difficult to keep them away from him. The more clearly a human being apprehends God the fuller is his appreciation of him and the deeper and more frequent are the notes of praise that break from his lips. Therefore, the depth of one's gratitude is no mean measure of one's piety.

But the nobleness and loveliness of the Divine Nature do not constitute the only ground for praise and thanksgiving upon the part of humanity. God is a great giver. Men frequently boast of what they have acquired, but in reality we possess nothing worth having that has not come from the divine hand. Let us briefly recount some of the gifts with which the Lord has so graciously favored us.

1. To Him we owe all the rich material blessings that we enjoy. The beautiful world in which we live and have dominion is his creation. He made it expressly to be the temporary home of man. It was for us that he roofed it with azure, carpeted it with emerald, and lighted it with sun and moon and stars. The fertile soil and everything that springs from its bosom were designed to minister to our comfort. The animal kingdom is ours to use at will. The forces of nature—steam, electricity, magnetism, and luminiferous ether—were placed here to be our servants—our carriers and swift-winged messengers. The treasures of forests and mountains are ours, and for highways we have the land, rivers, oceans, and air. Nor has God given us this magnificent estate and left us to work out our own fortune. He is still its all-wise administrator and operates it in our interest. It is his voice that controls the winds, marshals the clouds, and sends the early and latter rain. To him we are indebted for the bountiful crops of the year—said to be the largest ever grown by any nation in the history of the world. In view of our plenteous harvests, there ought to be no want beneath our flag. The Heavenly Father has given us enough for all, if it were only properly distributed. Poverty is of human, not of divine origin.

2. We are under inexpressible obligations to God for our splendid inheritance in Christ. Though we cannot fully enter into this until we pass into eternity, it gives us even in the present life our most priceless possessions and sweetest joys. Pardon, peace, an approving conscience, communion with our risen Lord, the assurance that he is watching over us and directing our steps, a faith that strengthens and heartens us when the shadows fall across our way, and an opportunity for lofty service—these are some of the things that come to the Christian here upon earth. And our heritage in time is an increasing one. The kingdom of Christ continues to expand upon our planet. More and more the darkness of heathen lands is being shot through with the light that streams from the Cross. For the first time in their history the 400,000,000 of China have begun to write, "In the year of our Lord." For nothing should we be so grateful as for the deepening of our own religious experiences and the growth of our own characters, for the revival fires that have blazed throughout the land, resulting in the salvation of thousands of souls, and for other triumphs of the Gospel tending toward the production of a higher and better civilization. Moral progress counts for vastly more than material advancement.

And in no summary of the things for which we should be thankful, however brief, should we leave out the bright hope for the future that we have in Christ. The value of this is beyond all estimation. Without a definite promise of something beyond the tomb, the outlook would be dark indeed, and life's burdens would be well-nigh unbearable. The window that Jesus has opened into the sky, showing us the Father's house, is humanity's most unfailing source of cheer and inspiration. For the vision of that glorious home and loved ones awaiting us there, let us pour out before the beneficent Giver the tribute of loving hearts.

"Swell the anthem, raise the song;
Praises to our God belong;
Let saints and angels join to sing
Praises to our Heavenly King."

We have never been a believer in the affirmation, sometimes heard, that hard work is the sum total of genius; but it undoubtedly can accomplish wonders, and is an important factor in the making of men. As an illustration of this, we quote from the Times-Democrat the following statement, made by one of the great musicians as to how he attained his proficiency: "Paderewski was once complimented upon his brilliant playing, and turning with a smile, he said, 'I played with an orchestra in Vienna. My work lasted four hours a day. After I was through with my regular work, I practiced on the piano twelve hours every day. Often my arms and shoulders were stiff and numb, but I did this for fourteen years. The other musicians laughed at me and called me a fool. Now people applaud and call me a genius.'

THANKSGIVING

For morning sun and evening dew,
 For every bird that April knew.
 For storm and silence, gloom and light,
 And for the solemn stars at night;
 For fallow field and burdened byre,
 For roof-tree and the hearth-side fire;
 For everything that shines and sings,
 For dear, familiar daily things—
 The friendly trees, and in the sky
 The white cloud-squadrons sailing by;
 For Hope that waits, for Faith that dares,
 For Patience that still smiles and bears,
 For Love that fails not, nor withstands;
 For healing touch of children's hands,
 For happy labor, high intent,
 For all life's blessed sacrament—
 O Comrade of our nights and days,
 Thou givest all things, take our praise!

—Arthur Ketchum, in N. Y. Christian Adv.

WHAT ABOUT YOUR THANKSGIVING?

For what are you going to give thanks on the last Thursday of this November?

For a fortune you have inherited? Then you will be a Shintoist, not a worshiper of God, but of your ancestors.

For your winnings in stock-gambling? Then you have not advanced far from the days when the smoke of heathen altars rose above the carnage of heathen battlefields.

For the success you have achieved by your own brain or your own hand? Then you will be but the prototype of Caligula, who erected a temple to his own "honor," officiated as his own priest, and burned sacrifices to his own soul.

No, my dear Captain of Industry, you have no right to thank God complacently for your freedom while the lash of necessity whips your child workers and your underpaid workers to labor as Persian generals once whipped their slaves to war.

No, Mr. Voter, you have no right to thank God unconcernedly for your franchise while electors are bought and the elected are sold.

No, Doctor, no, Lawyer, you have no right to thank God contentedly for your growing practice while legislators leave controllable diseases free to steal into the house of the rich or to stalk into the tenement of the poor; while the man with money may appeal his case, and the man without can scarcely have his one day in court.

No, Professor, you have no right selfishly to thank God for your education until education is everywhere made possible.

No, my dear madam and my protected miss, you have no right to thank God for your safety, having little thought of others, while your sisters are creatures for barter.

Get down on your knees; but get down and pray God that he may drive into your hearts the spur of discontent, of anger against wrong, of strength to advance. And then get up and go out of your church, and into the streets, and there do your best, however little that may be, toward ending the world's abominations.

Words are well enough; a sense of gratitude is commendable; but the only real thankfulness sends you among those who need help to help themselves toward the things that you have been thanking God for giving you!—Cosmopolitan Magazine.

THE MOUNTAIN CHILDREN.

By Julia Fraser.

Miss Murfree's stories and later those of John Fox, Jr., have vividly portrayed a people previously little known to the general public, the Mountaineers of the South. They live in the mountainous sections of eight great States, namely: Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama, within a short distance of the Nation's Capitol, and yet have been practically a people forgotten and passed by. They are largely the descendants of the Scotch-Irish who, in the years from 1740 to 1760, landed in large numbers at Charleston and opened up a rich and fertile country.

Probably no portion of the Colonies suffered more during the War of the Revolution than the part occupied by those hardy pioneers. These were the men who formed the Watanga Association and who drew up the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, which is claimed to be the first written statement of Republican Government made on the American continent. Cornwallis, in his vigorous marches through the South, called these people "the hornets," and vowed he would scatter the "hornets' nest," only to be repulsed by them in many skirmishes, and finally to meet complete defeat in the battle of King's Mountain. After peace was finally established, the young and hardy pushed over the mountains and laid the foundations of the mighty inland empire, a story graphically portrayed in Col. Roosevelt's book, the "Winning of the West." But the old people, the maimed and the lame who had suffered in the war, and those encumbered with large families, drifted back into the mountains, securing little patches of ground which they tilled, and there they lived. In those early days the mountains were full of game; the little patches of land yielded rich returns of grain and of tobacco, and cotton was also raised. The invention of the cotton gin in the latter part of the eighteenth century suddenly made all cotton lands very valuable and put a premium on slave labor. These people were never slaveholders and those who still maintained their homes in the valleys were rapidly sold out and driven backwards into the mountains.

To-day the descendants of these mountain people are living in a poverty and degradation difficult for the general American public to believe possible. The grants for school funds are insufficient and the schools are very poor. Of course this is largely due to the poverty of the people. It was in this part of the country that the famous "blab schools" originated; that is, schools where children are actually taught to study aloud, and such schools are literally heard for miles before they are seen. Isolation has also been a marked cause of the degradation existing in the mountains. In this part of the country there are no great lakes, navigable rivers or a sea-coast, making water means, which is the cheapest mode of communication, utterly impossible. The miserable roads were often impassable. With isolation, no public schools worthy the name, no educated ministry to hold up high ideals, the people simply degenerated and the recent violent scene at Hillsboro, Va., is a natural consequence of 150 years of "let-alone-iveness." About twenty-five years ago some Churches and some generous philanthropists began establishing schools in the mountains of the South and a marvelous transformation has been effected. The schools are of two kinds, the little, widely scattered day schools where the children are drilled in the rudiments, and the larger boarding schools where the industrial arts are taught.

A memorable trip is indelibly impressed on the writer's mind, when after a horseback ride of many miles through the mountains, when the same mountain torrent was forded many times, a sudden turn in the trail brought the school-house prominently into view. There it was, perched up on the steep mountain-side, surrounded by a glory of autumn foliage, with the same mountain stream tumbling madly below it, and in a little cove farther down, the cottage occupied by the teachers; but not another building anywhere, and what was more to the point, not a house had been passed during the eighteen-mile ride. All my life I had heard of the "woeful waste of missionary money," the "extravagance of the sentimental missionaries," and all my life I had been looking for such an example; and now in the mountain fastnesses of the South I thought I had found my first example of this so-much-talked-about waste of good money. For whoever heard of building a school where there were no children to attend it? And, of course, there could be no children where there were no towns or villages or homes. With such virtuous thoughts crowding my brain, I finished my ride by again fording the treacherous river, climbed the steep bank, dismounted from my pony, went up the steps, opened the door and was confronted by 125 eager boys and girls, taught by two young mountain girls who themselves had recently graduated from our mission Normal School, not very many miles away. To my anxious inquiry, "Where do all these children come from?" one of the girls simply said: "Every little cove, every little sheltered spot has its cabin home; all are crowded with children and they all come to school." Certainly they were there in school, crowded and lacking equipment and many conveniences, but all good-natured and anxious "to have a chance" to do better.

There is no "race suicide" in the Southern Mountains, for large families predominate, the descendants of the men who in the early days helped to make our country free and to give her a republican and independent form of government. Their children are now standing with eager, outstretched hands, begging for an education, that they may have "a chance" to regain their steps with the nation and so keep up with the world's work.

BARON T. H. YUN.

From Court to Prison.

By W. W. Pinson.

On September the 28th, T. H. Yun was sentenced by the local court in Seoul to penal servitude for ten years. With him one hundred and five others were sentenced to terms ranging from five to ten years. Seventeen of the one hundred and twenty-three on trial were acquitted. This was the finale of one of the most remarkable trials ever held.

The case was long-drawn out, some of the men having been in confinement almost a year. Mr. Yun, himself, had been in prison since the 9th of February last.

Though distressing, the result did not come as a surprise. What had gone before had indicated such a sentence in spite of lack of evidence. The Court relied entirely on the confessions of the accused, in spite of the fact that they withdrew these confessions in court and declared they had been made under unbearable torture. On what ground this evidence was held sufficient in some cases and insufficient in others, we may not know. The court has not indicated.

It is not our purpose now to discuss this remarkable case at length. But it would be a monstrous injustice to a good man if Mr. Yun were left to be judged by the statements of biased newspapers and condemned unheard, as is being done by some who call themselves Christians. In the case of a man who for years, through storm and sunshine, has stood true to the highest ideals, it is worse than careless—it is cruel and wicked—to decide on such slender evidence and without a serious look at the facts that the moral foundations have gone to pieces under him.

It is easy to say that he is either guilty or not guilty. That if he confessed to what he did not do, he told a falsehood; if it was true, he had plotted murder. In either case it looks bad for a Christian. This is being said by men who do not know the conditions under which he confessed. They do not know what was the nature of his confession. They do not know whether it was true or false. In the absence of light on these points, surely it is but just—not to say brotherly—for men at least to withhold their verdict.

I have read carefully a translation of the record of Mr. Yun's examination in the police court. It is a curious document. For page after page, at great length, there is a clear, consistent, positive denial of any and all connection with or knowledge of the so-called conspiracy. This is maintained under cross-examination and almost wearisome repetition. Then suddenly there is a change of tone, manner and substance. Through a few pages of rambling and not very coherent questions and answers, he gives a cautious assent to what is asked by the police. It is not only strikingly unlike what had gone before, but equally unlike Mr. Yun's straightforward and clear-cut style of expression. Any unbiased reader would raise the question as to why this change, and would wonder what had intervened to cause it.

Mr. Yun has never made a full explanation. In open court he repudiated the confession unequivocally and asked that he be permitted to explain why. This was not allowed by the judge until Mr. Ogawa insisted that it was his right to so explain. Then the judge consented, with the sharp injunction, "Be brief." It was at the end of two and one-half hours of rigid cross-examination, standing before a court that was anything but tender and considerate, that in a few hurried sentences, uttered by a man worn-out physically and mentally, he made a statement not at all satisfactory, as reported by the press. This much was clear: First, that he had been misled; second, that before the case came to court he had asked to be allowed to withdraw the confession; third, that he thought when he made it that the confession would bring harm to himself only, and would end the case in which he thought he was confessing.

In his speech before the court Mr. Ogawa said: "He (Mr. Yun) had been deceived in the police court. He had been told that Yang Ki Tak and others who were charged with him had been tried, had confessed and were already undergoing sentence. Their confession, he was told, had implicated him. He was urged to confess also, that the case might be disposed of, and was made to believe that his sentence would be light. What Yun confessed to had no connection with the conspiracy case for which he is being tried. But Yun was thinking of Yang, Im and Ok, who had been tried in connection with the establishment of a school across the border in Manchuria. When Yun was told on April 6th that he was to be tried on a charge of conspiracy against the life of the Governor-General, he was greatly surprised and told the officer who served the notice that he had not confessed on this case at all, but was thinking of the case in which Yang and others had been tried. He confessed to having subscribed three hundred yen towards a school, but was not informed as to where it would be located. Hence, his confession does not apply to this case."

The school transaction referred to took place, we understand, before the annexation. Mr. Ogawa went to the police officer who served notice of trial on Mr. Yun on April 6th last, and that officer confirmed Mr. Yun's account, saying he had protested to this officer that what he had confessed had no connection with any conspiracy against the Governor-General, and had asked to be allowed to withdraw it. This was more than three months before the public trial. So that what was confessed was true, though in no sense a crime, and had no connection with the so-called conspiracy.

This does not tell the full story. There must be a chapter known to his lawyers not yet known to the public. Mr. Miyaki, a Japanese lawyer, said in his speech to the court that Mr. Yun's confession was an act of self-sacrifice for the good of others, such as is rarely seen among men. Only one who knows just why the confession was made and what was thought to be involved in it, can estimate the eloquent significance of that tribute. A deliberate falsehood is offensive to God and man. But for one to bare his back to the lash, that others may be spared the sting, is another story. When we get to the bottom of this matter, we shall find that, if there was weakness, it was the weakness of a great strength to which most of us are strangers, and we shall be glad to lift our hats to a man whose dimensions are quite beyond our ordinary measurements.

There was no evidence in Mr. Yun's case except the confessions which were all repudiated at the trial, as has been stated. An attempt was made to connect him with some supposed secret meetings through the testimony of an old and ignorant servant. When the court was requested to call this old man that he might be cross-examined, they refused. In fact, he had disappeared some time before. This testimony, as well as that of the confessions, was met by a complete alibi, proven by documentary and other evidences that were incontrovertible. It is neither extravagant nor even partisan to say that, so far as was shown in the proceedings, the reader of this article is no less guilty of the crime charged than Mr. Yun. There was not produced so much as a shred of credible or even rational testimony that he had ever contemplated such a crime as he was charged with. It will be a great day for the police and court when they can come out of this trial as stainless and unblushing as Yun Chi Ho came out of it.

An appeal has been taken, and in case the verdict is sustained it will be carried to a still higher court. The assurance has constantly been given that justice will be done in the higher court. I am told that new evidence can be introduced in the appellate court.

Meantime, it has leaked out that instead of losing heart and giving way to despondency, this Pauline Christian man, an ambassador in bonds, is preaching the gospel to prisoners and officials.

"INCONSISTENT."

Yes, Doctor, our brethren across the line were very inconsistent in not voting to license women to preach; but neither you nor I were in that General Conference. We Southern Methodists are not in the habit of getting our cues from across the Ohio. Our women are not asking to be licensed to preach. Suppose you were a pastor and some layman in your church would preach, as Dr. Carlisle used to do, and as some of our lay leaders now do, would you encourage or forbid him? I think you and I would both bid him Godspeed. So I would if a woman were to do it, provided it is not illegal. Our women ask to be made equal as laymen.

And why should we grow so very fearful that some sister might get "an episcopal bee in her bonnet?" Did you ever hear of a brother getting one in his? It did not hurt the Church. He did not get to be Bishop. I still have faith in our grand old Church, and in the Holy Spirit's guidance of the Church. I am not at all afraid that some General Conference in the misty future will put some improper person into the episcopacy. It is neither logical nor fair to charge us with motives and purposes we have not avowed. Stick to the question. Dr. Steele used the phrase "woman suffrage." In my reply, I used his word. Our contention has nothing to do with civil suffrage for women, nor with licensing women to preach. When we avow that platform then meet us there, if you will. Stick to the question!

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

SOME WORDS IN REPLY.

Dr. Featherstun says that he and the Editor were not members of the last General Conference of the Northern Methodist Church. To be sure, we were not. We are much obliged to him for making clear this important point. He remarks that "we Southern Methodists are not in the habit of getting our cues from across the Ohio." This observation might fit the Editor all right, but not the Doctor; for this woman's rights movement started on the other side of that stream, and the Doctor has swallowed the whole business—the hook, cork, line, and pole. To the laity rights part of it in the Church, he pleads guilty in his present article; his loyalty to the political part of it he surely will not deny, since we have heard of his being almost the lone clergyman at State Suffragette Conventions; and the preaching part of it he can scarcely repudiate, with his efforts to show that women preached in apostolic times still fresh in the minds of the readers of the Advocate. The truth is, this thing, hatched across the Ohio, seems to be the Doctor's pet hobby, the darling scheme of his heart.

The Doctor says: "Our women are not asking to be licensed to preach." Of course they are not, just at present—the few making this clamor are too shrewd for that. To ask for all at once would arouse such opposition that the whole movement would be defeated. But one step is almost certain to be followed by another. They did not ask to be licensed to preach in the Northern Methodist Church either in the beginning, but, from the action taken by the last General Conference of that denomination, this question seems now to be looming up among its members. And certainly, if this issue should ever arise in our Church, in combating it, we could hope for no assistance from Dr. Featherstun. He has already played the whole gamut and, by his utterances and actions, has committed himself to some of the most radical proposals that have sprung out of this movement. We doubt, if we should ever have female circuit riders, if he would even be willing to have it inserted in the Book of Discipline that the sisters must ride sidewise. Why, in his present article he admits that, after having granted the women the rights of laymen, the Northern Methodist Church is inconsistent in not granting their further request for license to preach. Does he not see that if our Church should ever take the first step, she would be equally inconsistent in not taking the second, if asked to do so? But even if our women should never ask for license to preach, what guarantee would we have that a few agitators would not spring up and try to thrust license upon them? No considerable part of them have ever asked for laity rights, and yet we are witnessing the strange spectacle of a few persons assuming the authority to speak for the millions of noble women in Southern Methodism and growing vehement over fancied wrongs done them, concerning which the great masses of them have never uttered a syllable of complaint.

We cannot follow the Doctor's suggestion to consider only the initial stage of this movement and shut our eyes to what may follow. We have been preaching to men too long that they should look at the final consequences of a course of action before embarking upon it, to do anything so foolish as that. It is always the part of wisdom in weighing any measure to consider what it involves even to the remotest limits of its influence. We know of no sounder philosophy than that of the great Bard of Avon, "ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL."

Nor can we promise the Doctor always "to stick to the question." Should we invariably do that, we could never have the pleasure of catching up with him and joining issue with him in the debating of any subject. Much as he may covet it, we will not agree to grant him a monopoly of the hop-skip-and-jump style of discussion.

TO THE LAYMEN OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We have what is known as the "Ministerial Relief Association" of our Conference. The object of this Association is to give ready financial relief to the families of preachers in case of death. The amount of the assessment in each case is one dollar for each lay member, and five dollars for each preacher who may be members of the Association, with an additional initiation fee of twenty-five cents. We all know that the average Methodist preacher has a hard time to make "buckle and tongue meet," and that if he provides his family with the ordinary comforts of life, there is little or nothing left to take care of them after his death. A contribution coming in after his death means a great blessing to his stricken and bereaved family. I have been a member of this Association for several years and my assessment has only been from two to five dollars a year, which I cheerfully pay, I consider it a privilege to be in a position to aid in giving comfort to the families of these self-denying and faithful servants of our Heavenly Father.

If you will become a member of this Association, kindly send me your name and the initiation fee of 25 cents and I will have your name properly enrolled.

Church News

The May meeting of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be held at Charleston, West Virginia.

The Southern Christian Advocate will hereafter be issued from Greenville, South Carolina, instead of Spartanburg, its former place of publication.

The Northwestern Christian Advocate is authority for the statement that "the ratio of Methodist churches to Roman Catholic churches in the United States is two to one."

Centenary Female College, at Cleveland, Tenn., is reported to be full to overflowing with students. So ought all our Methodist schools to be. And they would be, if our people would patronize them as they ought.

Salonika, the city recently captured by the Greeks, is the same as Thessalonica, of which we read in the New Testament. And the Veria now referred to in the press dispatches is the old Berea, of which we read in the Book of Acts.

Dr. J. O. Wilson, the President of Lander College, at Greenville, S. C., has announced that Founder's Day will be observed at that institution on Jan. 30, 1913, and that Dr. H. M. Du Bose will be the orator of the occasion.

The United Presbyterians, following the lead of several other denominations, are now undertaking to provide means for the erection of a spacious and commanding church edifice in Washington City. They will call the new structure the National Memorial Church.

Dr. W. W. Smith, President of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va., who has been in a precarious state of health for months, is said to be improving. He is recuperating at San Diego, Cal., where it is stated he will remain until next April.

In the sixty-two years of its history, the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Chicago has given assistance toward the erection of 158 other churches. This is a good example for other large and wealthy congregations to follow. A strong and resourceful church existing for itself alone must die spiritually. Doing for others is the only way of securing true religious growth and prosperity.

It is announced that, having about completed the task of raising the amount he set out to secure for the Representative Southern Methodist Church in Washington City, Dr. George S. Sexton will probably return to Texas and re-enter the pastorate this fall. He is a capable man, and has rendered the Church an important service in carrying forward the movement to provide at the National Capital a house of worship worthy of our great denomination.

Bishop Wilson preached the opening sermon at the Mid-Year Missionary meeting of the Baltimore Conference, which was held at Front Royal, Va., on October 23-24. The discourse was nearly an hour in length, and was delivered with much of the Bishop's old-time vigor and impressiveness. The whole Church rejoices in having the continued leadership and service of this majestic Chief Pastor. We sincerely hope that he may be able to do active episcopal work for at least another quadrennium.

The "World in Baltimore" is reported to be proving the most successful missionary exposition ever held in the United States. Thursday, Oct. 31, was known as Methodist Day, and throngs of the followers of Wesley were in attendance wearing badges containing a picture of Robert Strawbridge and the famous log meeting-house, which Francis Asbury pronounced the first Methodist house of worship opened in America. Northern and Southern Methodists intermingled in the most cordial and brotherly manner on this interesting occasion. Why shouldn't they? For, whatever may be their future relations, they have behind them a common history unsurpassed since the days of the Apostles.

At its recent session the Holston Conference devised a plan for conducting a vigorous campaign to endow Emory and Henry College. There will be a Conference Committee of five which will have general supervision of the movement, and a subordinate committee in each district, with the presiding elder as chairman. A new Financial Agent for the College was appointed in the person of Rev. Roby K. Sutherland. The object immediately in view is to raise $75,000 by June 1 of next year. This will secure a gift of $25,000 from Mr. Carnegie and a donation of $50,000 from the General Board of Education of New York (Rockefeller), thus adding to the endowment fund of the institution $150,000.

The Louisiana State Baptist Convention met in Ruston last week. The press dispatches announced an attendance of 200 delegates. Mr. W. H. Managan, a layman of West Lake, was chosen President, and Rev. C. P. Rooney, of Leesville, was elected Secretary. The report on educational work showed that nearly $2000 had been raised during the year for the assistance of ministerial students, and that $15,000 had been secured in the campaign to raise $100,000 for endowing and providing buildings for the Baptist College at Pineville. The proposition made by the people of Jackson, La., looking to the opening of a Baptist school at that place "was declined for the present."

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Jenkins, of Shiloh, Ga., have six sons engaged in the active work of the Methodist ministry. One of them, Rev. Charles R. Jenkins, is President of the Western Female College, and another, Rev. John S. Jenkins, is Missionary Secretary of the North Georgia Conference. The mother of this sextette of preachers is a graduate of the historic institution of which one of her sons is now the official head (Wesleyan), and is said to be a woman of deep piety and consecration. The father for a generation has been the faithful superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school in the village in which he resides. This is an admirable illustration of what may be the far-reaching influence of a genuinely Christian home.

At the recent meeting of the Publishing Committee of the Alabama Christian Advocate, Rev. J. M. Glenn, of the Alabama Conference, was chosen editor of that journal, in place of Rev. J. B. Cumming, who resigned to accept the agency of Birmingham College, which is soon to inaugurate a campaign for $250,000 for endowment and improvements. Mr. Glenn, who is a son of a Methodist minister, was born at Greenville, Ala., on May 12, 1869; he was a classmate of Bishop McCoy at the Southern University, from which institution he was graduated in 1888, and has been for twenty years in the active work of the ministry. We cordially welcome Brother Glenn to the toils, trials, and opportunities of the tripod, and extend Brother Cumming our best wishes for success in the new task to which he has set his hand. We do not doubt that they will both find plenty of work to do, which is what a Methodist preacher should want.

A THOUGHT FOR THOSE GONE ON.

Thanksgiving Day is so fully and sacredly home day in our dear country that we must never suffer its glory to wane, nor allow its celebration to fall into decadence. The land over, trains are loaded with the children going back to the homestead, fathers bringing their boys and girls to visit the dear old people who grow young with their grandchildren about them, sons hastening to the mother's side once more, city folks seeing the country, country folks turning to the town. Homeward ply the shuttles and roll the wheels; the very winds grow merrier as they blow on Thanksgiving Eve, and the snow, if it happens to come, falls with an air of holiday. And in our grateful thanks let us never leave out a memory of those for whom defeat and strife and struggle are over, for those, still ours, and still dearly beloved, who are safe in the city of the King, beyond the last river, beyond the touch of death, forever free, and forever living! Thanks be unto God for the great company of our kindred and friends who dwell where the song of praise is endless, in "Jerusalem the golden."—Western Christian Advocate.

MRS. MARY PRICE STACY DEAD.

Dear Brother Meek: There is great sorrow in the home of our dear brother J. M. Price, of Lyon, Miss. On Monday, at about 10 a. m., Brother Price's daughter, Mrs. Mary Price Stacy, was operated on in Memphis. She seemingly stood the operation well, and recovered from the ether all right, but on Tuesday, about noon, she began to sink and was dead at 3 o'clock p. m. Since the operation was considered a very simple one, her decease came as a great shock to all her family. Her husband, Brother Stacy, as well as her father, mother and the other members of the family are heart-broken over her sudden and unexpected death.

Mrs. Wright, a sister of the deceased, and her husband, Brother Stacy, were with her in Memphis. The remains was carried to Greenwood on yesterday, where they will be interred to-day.

I am sure that all the Christian friends of this bereaved family will remember them before God and pray that his comforting Spirit may sustain them in this sad hour.

JOHN TILLERY LEWIS.

ANOTHER ORPHANAGE CAR.

In addition to the free cars that we have already announced will be run to Jackson, Miss., just before Thanksgiving Day, in the interest of the Baptist and Methodist Orphanages located there, the Illinois Central Railroad will furnish another, which will start at Aberdeen on Tuesday, November 26, and make the trip by way of Kosciusko and Durant. This will give the people along that line a fine opportunity to do something substantial for the hundreds of orphan children in these two institutions, and we have no doubt that they will gladly avail themselves of it. The Committees aboard the train to take charge of these donations are as follows: From the Baptist Church.—Mr. D. L. Brown, Mr. R. E. Ousley, Mr. J. A. Simmons, Miss Ida Dean, and Miss Nabel Atkinson.

From the Methodist Church.—Rev. V. C. Curtis, Mr. David E. Crawley, Miss Mallie Holmes, Miss Bessie Noah, and Miss Lill Dodd.

TURKEY FOR THANKSGIVING DAY.

Mr. Editor: Do you know that the people of the Balkan States are preparing for a big spread Thanksgiving? Oh, yes, they are going to have "Turkey" for Thanksgiving.

J.

A PERTINENT INQUIRY.

This story is told of the late popular Congressman from Ohio, Mr. Butterworth, who was seriously ill for a long time, but recovered. When he was convalescent his personal and political friends called on him and tendered hearty congratulations. Big Ben Butterworth thanked his callers, and said:

"Yes, boys, I was so near the other shore that I could hear the bells ringing a welcome to me."

"Were they fire bells, father?" inquired little Frank.—Searchlight.

State prohibition carried in West Virginia in the recent election by a large majority.

The United States postal banks have received $28,000,000 in deposits since they were opened a little more than a year ago.

The Louisiana State Normal is now closed on account of an epidemic of slow fever that has prevailed among the students there for the last few weeks.

Infant paralysis is said to be transmitted entirely by the stable fly. If this is true, laws enforcing cleanliness about all barnyards should be made and rigidly enforced.

It is said that the average market prices of farm products are lower this year than for many years. This is due to the excessively large crop in almost every State in the Union.

Judge August M. Aucoin, of the Second City Criminal Court of New Orleans, died Monday, November 11. He was a strong factor in New Orleans politics, and was respected as a wise and impartial judge.

The new anti-typhoid vaccination treatment of typhoid fever suspects is said to be a pronounced success. Of the 57,000 United States soldiers who were subjected to the treatment last year, only ten have developed typhoid fever.

The See-and-Bee, claimed to be the largest fresh water steamer afloat, was launched and christened at Detroit, Mich., on November 9. It is 500 feet long, has 510 rooms, sleeping accommodations for 1500, and can carry 6000 passengers.

There will be 125 sailors engaged for the next five weeks chewing forty different kinds of tobacco in order to decide which brand shall be purchased for the use of the men in our Navy for the next year. This is big business for a gallant "jackie" who enlisted in his country's service as a fighting man.

Because of the recent trouble arising from an order issued by the faculty looking to the regulation of the social life of the students of the Mississippi A. and M. College, Governor Brewer has announced that after this year the school will exist for the benefit of male students only.

Mr. W. D. Hunter, who is in charge of the investigation that is being conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture as to the extent of damage that has been done by field pests, says that the boll weevil has already destroyed $125,000,000 worth of cotton. He further adds that the best way to fight the boll weevil is to uproot the entire cotton stalk in the fall and burn it.

President-elect Wilson has announced that he will call Congress into an extra session immediately after his inauguration next March. It will probably convene about the middle of April. The purpose of the extra session is to put Democratic policies into effect at the earliest possible date, in order that business may not be affected by a fear that certain things will or will not be done.

J. A. Weyland, who for years has been a leader of the Socialist movement in the United States, shot and killed himself on November 10. He was the founder of the once famous Ruskin (Tenn.) Socialist Colony, and later was the founder of the Appeal to Reason, one of the most widely circulated weekly papers in America. As publisher of the Appeal to Reason he became immensely wealthy.

A report that Hon. James Bryce, the English Ambassador to the United States, is soon voluntarily to retire, is received with regret by many in this country. Mr. Bryce is known as a man of high ideals and stability of character, and is such a man as should more often be found in the highest positions of great nations. He will probably be succeeded by Sir Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice.

Mr. James Eads How, a millionaire, has announced his intention of establishing a school somewhere in the middle West for the benefit of unemployed men. He desires to offer to all tramps who so desire the privileges of a home and the facilities with which to learn a trade. The total lack of money and a desire to improve their condition is all that will be required of those who are to be admitted to this school.

During the sixty years of its history the New York Independent has been under the control of Mr. Henry C. Bowen and Clarence W. Bowen, his son. It has now come under the direction of a grandson of its first manager, Mr. Hamilton Holt, who has been the managing editor of the paper for many years. Dr. William Hayes Ward, who has been on the editorial staff of this journal for forty-five years, will continue to be its editor-in-chief.

The war between Turkey and the Balkan States continues with unslackened energy. The slaughter of human lives has been almost unprecedented in the history of human warfare. To the awful carnage is added the horrors of disease, and thousands are said to be dying in camp with cholera. It seems that the time has come for the powers to intervene and put an end to what may prove to be one of the most inhuman wars of the present century.

Prof. Simon N. Patton, a lecturer in the University of Pennsylvania, has recently given additional proof that education is not a preventive of erratic notions. He said in a lecture before his class that if a man would go to the desert or mountains to live, he could without a doubt live to be 150 years old, and would not turn gray until 90 years were reached. He also stated that the fall of man in Eden was an economic and not a religious fall.

Two wrecks were reported in the vicinity of New Orleans last week. One, that of an excursion train, resulted in the death of sixteen passengers, and the other in the death of a train fireman. The wrecks were similar, and were each due to carelessness on the part of some one. The effort to fix the blame of the wreck of the excursion train has resulted in a decision that no railroad passenger service is safe unless the road is equipped with the block signal service system.

BISHOP HOSS IN BALTIMORE.

As was stated in our issue of November 14, Bishop Hoss left Tate Springs, Tenn., some two weeks ago and went to Baltimore to counsel with physicians concerning his physical condition. From the Baltimore Southern Methodist of the 14th inst., we take the following reference to the Bishop's visit to that city:

"Bishop E. E. Hoss, who has not been in the best of health for several months, was in this city in company with his son, Dr. Sessler Hoss, last week for the purpose of consulting Dr. Lewellys F. Barker, a noted specialist of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, as to his case. We saw him for a few minutes in his room at the Rennert. He was in bed, but entertaining as is his wont, as he is a brilliant conversationalist at all times. When we asked him what we should say to his many friends in the Baltimore Conference, he said: 'I love them all, and tell them I have never felt more humble and more unworthy, but I am confidently looking up into the face of my Heavenly Father, conscious that my intentions in the main have been right, and am willing to trust myself to His hands. I have never felt a deeper or more abiding sense of His presence and love.'"

This message, permeated with a spirit of deep humility and evincing an unwavering trust in God, is worthy of the distinguished Chief Pastor who uttered it. Great in head and heart and equipment, Bishop Hoss is a rare man. Even his temporary retirement from active service is a distinct loss to the Church, and should his illness take him permanently from the field, Southern Methodism will be appreciably weakened in its leadership and vastly poorer. Our people everywhere should earnestly pray for the speedy and complete recovery of this majestic minister, whose services we so sorely need. The vast vacancy caused by the translation of Charles B. Galloway yet remains unfilled—and may the Divine Arm intervene to prevent amongst us another of like proportions.

THE MATTER OF "LAITY RIGHTS."

The following shows what action the Conferences that have been held have taken upon the matter of appointing committees to study the question of "laity rights" for women: The Kentucky Conference appointed a committee; the Holston, Tennessee, Missouri, St. Louis, New Mexico, West Texas, and Western Virginia took no action. The Louisville and Southwest Missouri laid the matter on the table without discussion. —The Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

THE MID-WINTER MEETING OF THE BISHOPS.

The College of Bishops met in the Chapel of Lander Female College, Greenwood, S. C., October 30. All of them were present save five. Bishops Key, Morrison and Hoss were kept away on account of sickness. Bishop Murrah is in the East attending our Mission Conferences. Bishop Waterhouse was unavoidably prevented from being present. Bishop Atkins was present for only one day, on account of his Conferences.

Our much revered Senior Bishop Wilson was just returned from his trip to England, where he went as the fraternal messenger of our Church to the British Wesleyan Conference. All of our readers will be pleased to know that he looks stronger and in better health than he has been for several years.

Dr. James W. Kilgo, pastor at Greenwood, had arranged for preaching at the First Baptist Church every evening. The first service, on Wednesday evening, was conducted by Bishop Lambuth, who had just returned from a sixteen months' absence in Brazil and Africa. In the last named place, in company with Rev. W. L. Gilbert, of the C. M. E. Church, he was locating a mission field, which our Church proposes to occupy. He spoke most interestingly of the prospects and need of that work. He is looking robust and vigorous, notwithstanding he says he walked about 1200 miles while he was there.

Bishop Hendrix, on Thursday evening, and Bishop Mouzon, on Friday evening, preached to packed houses, to their great delight and edification. Bishops Wilson, Kilgo, Denny, and McCoy preached on Sunday at 11 o'clock to large crowds in the several Churches. There was great regret that Bishop Candler was compelled to leave before Sunday.

Under the chaperonage of Dr. J. O. Wilson, President of the College, and Dr. Kilgo, the Bishops were carried by automobiles on Saturday, to visit the site of old Cokesbury School, made famous in the annals of Methodism as the place where Bishop Holland N. McTear was a student and the great Stephen A. Olin, a teacher. They were shown the house in which Olin was boarding when convicted of sin, and the oak under which he knelt when converted. Also the birthplaces of other notables of the Palmetto State, whose names are famous in their country's history.

What the College said or did in executive session was hard to be learned, as they sat behind closed doors and had no press gallery. It was learned, however, in their exchange of opinions and experiences, that the work of our great Church is in a most hopeful condition. There was not an appeal case before them for decision. They were glad of this and the Church ought to be.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

A called meeting of the Board of Missions was held at the Publishing House on Tuesday, November 5th. Those present were Bishop Lambuth, Ed. F. Cook, E. H. Rawlings, J. M. Moore, G. B. Winton, J. L. McWhorter, A. B. Ransom, J. D. Hamilton, J. J. Stowe, Mrs. A. L. Marshall, Mrs. F. H. E. Ross, Mrs. Hume Steele, Mrs. E. B. Chappell. Several matters of detail came up for consideration, but the meeting was called chiefly to take action in regard to a proposed General Missionary Conference. Bishop Lambuth, vice president of the Board, occupied the Chair. In the course of the session, he asked Mr. Ransom to preside for a time and gave the Board a thrilling report of his visits to Brazil and to Africa.

The Board was advised that its executive officers had been approached by the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, with the suggestion that the next triennial Conference of the Movement, due to meet in 1913, be enlarged into a general rally or conference for the whole Church in the interest of missions, after the manner of the New Orleans Conference of 1901. The secretaries of the Board concurring, a tentative executive committee for such a conference had already been raised, and the list of its members was laid before the Board, along with the request for its indorsement of the whole enterprise.

By unanimous action the Board approved the Committee as appointed and authorized it to go forward with preparations for the Conference. This Conference will be held at the new Assembly Grounds near Waynesville, N. C., the probable date being June 25-29, 1913. It is hoped that even greater success will attend it than marked the Conference of 1901.

Dr. Cook was elected a member of the Board of Trustees of the Nanking University in China. Steps were taken to promote a large attendance on the Mid-winter Institute to be held the last of December at the Methodist Training School. A new edition of the Discipline in Portuguese was authorized to be printed in Rio de Janeiro. The Board then adjourned.

G. B. WINTON, Recording Secretary.

GREAT IS THE PRESIDING ELDER!

By Rev. W. F. McMurry, D.D.

In one of the smaller Conferences the report of the secretary of the Board of Church Extension, received a few days ago, reveals the fact that one District in the Conference has gone beyond what it did the year before in the matter of Church Extension receipts, and that the other Districts in the Conference have all fallen below what was done the preceding year.

A letter addressed to the presiding elder who made such a good record, asking how it happened that he had so far surpassed his fellow presiding elders in the same Conference, brought the following reply:

"I think the failure of crops last year, with the unusually severe winter and late collections, are the cause of the decrease. I am sure it would have been so in my District, had I not carried those Church Extension Charts (you remember you mounted some for me on cloth) around the District, and on Sunday nights I preached 'Missions and a House for Them Equals Church Extension.' I did this all over the District, and suggest that you have some charts printed on muslin and get a ruling that each presiding elder must preach on the subject in each charge at least once a year."

Great is the Presiding Elder! He can bring to pass anything that ought to be done in his District. This office believes in the "beloveds," seeks their co-operation, counts every one of them an Assistant Church Extension Secretary, and expects the best.

OFFICIAL EVANGELISM IN OUR CHURCH.

Dear Doctor Meek: I am sure that you and the readers of the Advocate will be much interested in the following questions which were addressed to the Bishops last May concerning Paragraph 371 of the Discipline and the answers which they have given:

1. Question: "Will a Bishop appoint a member of our Annual Conference to the office of General Evangelist?"

Answer: "If a member of an Annual Conference has been accepted by the Committee on Evangelism, acting under Paragraph 371, the Bishops will appoint him to the office of General Evangelist whenever, in their judgment, such appointment seems wise."

2. Question: "Does the term 'Conference Evangelist' indicate that the Evangelist must confine his labors to his own Conference, or is he at liberty to accept engagements according to his own wish?"

Answer: "The Conference Evangelist is responsible to his Conference Committee on Evangelism. He may not accept engagements beyond the bounds of his own Conference except with their consent."

3. Question: "Will the Bishops continue to appoint members of an Annual Conference to nominal positions in order to do independent evangelistic work?"

Answer: "We would not recommend nominal appointments in order to do independent evangelistic work."

Dr. John M. Moore, in a brief comment, says: "These questions clear the way for an official evangelism in Southern Methodism. Hereafter there will be General Evangelists, Conference Evangelists, Missionary Evangelists, and Pastoral Evangelists, and all will be more or less directed by the Committee on Evangelism." Please permit me to say that my personal experience as one of the Conference Evangelists and as a member of the Board of Missions of the North Alabama Conference, convinces me that "official evangelism" in our Church has a bright future, and that the opportunity is great. North Alabama has solved the problem, and our plan works well. If any brother desires information as to the larger and more important features of this work, Dr. John M. Moore, upon request, will furnish it. In regard to the practical working of the plan adopted in our Annual Conference, the writer will be glad to assist by giving information, concerning it to any who may desire it.

Mansfield Female College.

This has been a most delightful and happy week at the College. One of the many illustrious alumnae of old M. F. C. has been our honored and gracious guest. Her gentle, loving, loyal, Christian spirit endeared her to us all. Not a girl can forget the after-supper hour when they gathered in the lobby and sat on the floor at her feet. The name of Mrs. Julia Truett Bishop is known and loved far and near; but we love her most for she is ours.

Blessings come not singly and an added pleasure was the visit of another loyal friend, Rev. N. E. Joyner, of Monterey, Mexico. Fifteen rahs for Joyner, and all the girls joined in.

A third pleasure was the visit of Mrs. Lee, of Conshatta, another graduate upon whose head has shone the sunshine of several summers.

One new girl this week. Still they come.

LITTLE PAUL'S THANKSGIVING.

They tossed him and they squeezed him,
And they kissed him, one and all.
They said: "You, blessed, blessed boy!"
And, "Darling little Paul!"
But they didn't give him turkey,
Nor any pumpkin pie,
And when the nuts and grapes went round
They slyly passed him by.

He didn't seem to mind it,
For in the sweetest way
He sat and sucked his little thumb
His first Thanksgiving Day.

—Emma C. Down, in Sunbeam.

THE THANKSGIVING TURKEY THAT DISAPPEARED.

By Temple Bailey.

"The General is coming to dinner," said the Little Mother.

"What General?" demanded Dick and Dolly in unison.

With their round eyes upon her the Little Mother found it rather hard to explain. They were such rabid little Confederates that it was somewhat difficult to make them understand why she was extending her hospitality to their enemy.

"You see," she began gently, "the General has been very kind to us since the troops were stationed here on our plantation. He has not allowed any one to molest us, and when you children had that bad attack of fever he sent you good things, and insisted upon one of his surgeons attending you. I am very grateful, and I thought I might show my gratitude by asking him to help us eat our turkey at Thanksgiving."

"But he is fighting against our own people," Dolly said with her eyes flashing. "I hate Northerners, mother."

"You must not hate the General," the Little Mother told her. "He has been too good to us, and he has surely taught us a lesson of loving our enemies."

Dick said nothing. He was not quite sure of his opinion. He felt himself quite the man of the family, now that his father was away fighting for the Confederacy. He liked the General because he was a brave man, but he was not quite sure whether he wanted to share their precious turkey with him.

By Thanksgiving Day, however, the children were somewhat reconciled. The preparations in the kitchen where old Chloe did wonderful things with her pots and pans roused in them anticipation of the feast to come.

From the oven came the mingled fragrance of sage and of spices. On the shelves were custards and cakes, and there were pans full of vegetables ready to be cooked when the proper moment arrived.

In the dawn of the morning Dick crept to the door of Dolly's room.

"It's funny," he said, "but I thought I heard a noise last night in the attic."

"It's rats," said Dolly sleepily.

"There aren't any rats," Dick said. "Tabbykin sleeps up there, and she has cleared them all out."

"You dreamed it, then."

"I didn't dream it," Dick declared stoutly. "I heard a noise as if someone tiptoed up, then there was a dragging sound, and then silence."

"It could not have been any of the soldiers," Dolly said, as she looked out of the window toward the line of white tents where the bugle was waking the morning echoes. "They never come beyond our gate."

"Breakfast is ready," the Little Mother interrupted from below, so the children ran down pell-mell, and for a time Dick forgot the steps that he had heard overhead in the night.

Later the dinner was borne in triumph from the out-door kitchen, and the table fairly groaned with plenty. The turkey, brown and crackling with richness, was at the head, and at the foot was a big baked ham; there were sweet potatoes, and all the other vegetables that the garden could produce, and the General was due in a few moments.

Dick and Dolly, on tiptoe with excitement, danced around the table. Then suddenly the door opened and there appeared, not the General, but two thin unshaven men in uniform of Confederate gray.

"Father!" Dick shrieked, and Dolly threw herself into his arms.

The thin man kissed them both, and gathered them with the Little Mother into his embrace.

"No one must see us," he said hoarsely. "We are trying to get back to our line, but I could not resist coming home for Thanksgiving and eating my turkey with you."

The Little Mother wrung her hands. "You must hide," she gasped. "The General is to be our guest at dinner."

He stared at her. "The General—my enemy?"

"I cannot explain," she said wildly. "He will be here in a moment. You must hide."

He turned dejectedly from the room, and with his comrade climbed the stairs. Then the attic door was shut.

Dick and Dolly and the Little Mother stared at each other.

"Oh! he's got to have that turkey," Dolly said. "Every mouthful would choke me if I ate it."

Dick nodded. "He's our father," he stated, "and he is worth a thousand Generals."

"But what shall we tell the General?" the Little Mother asked. "He would suspect."

"Tell him the truth," Dick said. "You needn't say that father is in the house, but you can say that you gave the turkey to some ragged Confederates—that is what they are—and he needn't know that they are in the attic. He will think that they went on."

"Yes, yes," the Little Mother agreed. "He will think they went on."

She snatched the platter from the table, and with Dick and Dolly following with the gravy and a great dish of mashed potatoes, she flew to the attic.

Thus it happened that when the General came he walked into an empty dining room. His keen glance swept the table, taking in the fact that there was no turkey. Now the General had been promised turkey, and he had nursed vivid anticipations of that particular dinner, hence when his hostess came in somewhat breathless, and gasped, "I have so many apologies to make for my lateness," he answered her somewhat gruffly.

When her apologies went further, and he found that no turkey was to be served, he felt that he had been defrauded. But, in spite of his appetite, the General was a kindly gentleman, and the Little Mother's worried face and downcast air made him feel that there was something behind her simple story of how she had been led by sympathy to give the turkey to two ragged Southerners.

As the dinner progressed he found himself expanding. The baked ham was delicious, and the mince pies, the good coffee, the toasted crackers and the rich old cheese were greatly to his liking.

"I don't begrudge those fellows the turkey," he said. "Indeed, I wish they were here with us in the warmth and cheer instead of out in the frozen fields."

Dick and Dolly looked at their mother. "If we dared tell him!" was what their eyes said. But the Little Mother shook her head; she would not put the General's generosity to such a test.

The General, accustomed to reading faces, saw that there was a mystery.

"Your husband?" he asked the Little Mother, "is he with Lee?"

"My husband—" she faltered, and then in a flash the General knew!

Her husband was in the house eating the turkey that had disappeared.

At this moment Chloe appeared on the threshold bearing a tray on which were the glasses of spiced grape juice with which the meal would end.

The General had an inspiration. Not through him should there be any violation of hospitality. He raised his glass. "Let us drink a toast," he said, "to your father. May he live long and prosper, and next Thanksgiving eat his turkey with you at this table."

The Little Mother flashed a glance at him. She felt that he had divined the truth, and her heart was full of gratitude.

"God bless you, General," she murmured.

Upstairs in the attic two shabby men picked the bones of the turkey and ate a mince pie apiece. And presently up to them came Dick and Dolly.

"The General has gone, dear father," they cried, "and now at last you're safe."—From the New York Weekly Witness.

REVIVAL AT BOGALUSA.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have recently closed at our Church in this place what is generally, if not universally, regarded as the best revival Bogalusa has ever had. While there were many adversities the meeting was successful from the start. The very first day of the meeting there were 28 professions of conversion. We continued to have recruits at every service until the number reached 260. The meeting was peculiar in some respects. During the last week of it a protracted meeting was started at the Baptist Church and continued through the week. In spite of this fact, at nearly every service of the last week of our meeting and the first week of theirs we had conversions of people who united with the Baptist Church. I regard this as quite a tribute to the effectiveness and thoroughness of Methodist work. There were several forces arrayed against us. There was a big party at the Y. M. C. A., a ball at the Great Southern Hotel, and last, but not least, a big circus on hand, parading and operating the last Sunday of our meeting; but God gave the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ, over and against all.

There will come to our Church about 50 members as a result of the meeting, and every church in town will receive additions. Our Church membership has been wonderfully revived and transformed as a consequence of the meeting. Dr. A. C. Holder, of Shreveport, who did the preaching, is one of the best revivalists I have ever known. Our people showed their appreciation of his splendid work by giving him a purse of $235.

We have about doubled our membership here this year. There were about 100 accessions before the meeting and 50 as a result of it. We began with 147 members and now have approximately 300. The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad.

Editorial.

"As children sometimes suddenly
Run, grateful, to a father's knee—
We dimly feel our debt to Thee,
And thank thee, Lord."

The scholar in politics is all right; but the politician in the schoolroom is all wrong. We ought to have educators, and not wire-pullers, at the head of our institutions of learning. College presidencies and professorships ought not to be trafficked in as if they were legitimate patronage with which to pay political debts. Of late years, we have had far too much of this.

The more self is visible in a person the more invisible is Christ. The seeking of one's own worldly exaltation is incompatible with the highest character and noblest usefulness. A passion to honor their Lord, so strong that their personal interests faded away into insignificance, has ever characterized those disciples who were burning and shining lights. It was not with a feeling of regret but of exultation, that John the Baptist exclaimed: "He must increase, but I must decrease."

The Master in His Sermon on the Mount, said: "Whosoever shall do and teach them (the commandments), shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven." Notice that he puts doing before teaching. None save those who live the gospel are fit to be its expounders. This applies to all alike—to the minister, the Sunday school teacher, and the personal worker. One of the secrets of the mighty power of Jesus was that his doctrines and life were in the most perfect accord.

According to the press dispatches, Governor Woodrow Wilson attended services at the First Presbyterian Church of Princeton, N. J., on Sunday, November 10, and was forced to listen to a eulogy on himself. It is well-nigh inconceivable that a preacher should be guilty of such an act of impropriety as to extol a public man seated in the pew before him; but manifestly, there are some men occupying pulpits so lacking in good taste and manliness as to do this. Such clergymen are a reproach to the high and noble calling of the Christian ministry.

OUR PRESIDENT-ELECT.

In the person of Governor Woodrow Wilson, the second Democrat since the Civil War closed forty-seven years ago, has been called to the chief magistracy of the nation. The victory which has brought him this high honor was one of the most sweeping and remarkable recorded in our public annals. What of this new leader who, leaving the quiet of college halls for the political arena, has won this notable triumph, thus becoming a world figure, and who on the fourth of next March will enter upon the duties of the greatest and most responsible office in existence? A few of the leading facts of his life will doubtless prove interesting to our readers.

He was born at Staunton, Va., on December 28, 1856, being a son of Joseph Ruggles and Jessie (Woodrow) Wilson. He received his preparatory education in the private schools of Augusta, Ga., and Columbia, S. C., later also studying for a time at Davidson College in North Carolina. In 1875 he entered Princeton University, from which institution he was graduated with an A. B. degree four years later. He then matriculated at the University of Virginia, where he studied law and qualified himself for the legal profession. After this he located in Atlanta, Ga., and was a practitioner at the bar in that city for a year. In 1885 he became Professor of History and Political Economy at Bryn Mawr College, which position he resigned in 1888, to accept a similar one in the Wesleyan University at Middletown, Conn. His next move was in 1890, when he accepted the chair of Jurisprudence and Politics in Princeton University, which he held until elected to the presidency of that historic institution in 1902. As a sort of side work, while connected with other colleges, Mr. Wilson was lecturer at Johns Hopkins University from 1887 to 1898. About two years ago he was chosen Governor of New Jersey, an office which he has filled with great credit and which he still holds.

In the course of his distinguished career, honorary degrees have been heaped upon Mr. Wilson in profusion. He holds a Ph. D. from Johns Hopkins University; a LL. D. from the same institution and from Tulane, Brown, Pennsylvania and Harvard Universities, and Wake Forest and Rutgers Colleges; and also the degree of Litt. D. from Yale University. He was married at Savannah, Ga., to Miss Ellen Louisa Axson, on June 24, 1885, and has three children: Margaret, born in 1886; Jessie Woodrow, born in 1887, and Eleanor Randolph, born in 1889. Mr. Wilson is a member of the Presbyterian Church. It is interesting to know that both he and Mrs. Wilson were born in a manse and were reared under influences pronouncedly religious.

The President-elect is an author of distinction, his best known work being his "History of the American People." Harvard University has lately paid him the compliment of substituting his work on "Congressional Government" for Bryce's American Commonwealth as a text-book in its Civics Department. That Mr. Wilson will be one of the most scholarly and accomplished Presidents our country has ever had, ranking in this respect with John Quincy Adams and Theodore Roosevelt, is beyond question, but whether he has the quickness of perception, power of initiative and force of personality to make a great chief executive, of course, remains to be seen. With a party lacking coherency and untrained for administration behind him, his responsibilities will be tremendous; but his opportunities also will be vast and inspiring. Let us hope and pray that he may rise equal to the occasion and perform for the Republic a service that will never be forgotten. His friends confidently predict that he will prove fully equal to the gigantic task before him. When Mr. Wilson enters the White House, Virginia may again claim to be the mother of a President.

STRANDED BECAUSE HE COULDN'T WHISTLE.

We clip the following from Charity and Children (Thomasville, N. C.), which is one of the brightest Orphanage periodicals published in the South:

"A negro with an old gray mule hitched to a ramshackle wagon stood on the incline of Capitol Hill, in Washington, during one of the worst sleet storms in January. The old man, huddled in his rabbit-skin cap, was shivering; the mule was trembling with cold. According to Everybody's magazine, two Congressmen, waiting for a belated car, were attracted by the strange outfit, and wondered, as the time went on and the negro made no effort to depart, what ailed the old fellow.

"One of the Congressmen walked over and said: 'Why don't you move on, uncle?'"

"The old negro pointed a trembling finger at his team and replied: 'Cause dis yer mule won't go 'les I whistle to him, and it's so cold I cya'nt whistle!'"

We have never witnessed such a scene as that described above, but we have seen pastors and other Christian workers in such a state of discouragement that they couldn't whistle. And while they remained in that condition, the things that they were expected to make go, stood about as still as the mule and darcy in Washington. The man who has lost hope cannot be counted on to achieve much; but an optimism that can whistle is a potent factor in the promotion of progress. We cannot say that we always like to hear them at it, but we believe in the whistlers.

LOUISIANA ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

A call has been issued by Rev. Claude L. Jones, the last president of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, and concurred in by Dr. G. W. Young, acting under authority from Dr. P. A. Baker, the National Superintendent, for a meeting of the trustees and friends of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League in Alexandria, on Nov. 26. The object of this meeting is to organize the anti-saloon forces of the State for an advance movement. We hope that this gathering will be largely attended. Beyond question, it is high time that the temperance people of Louisiana were getting together and preparing for united and aggressive work. The existing conditions urgently demand it.

WILL YOU HELP HIM?

A young man, the son of a North Mississippi Methodist preacher who has a large family and who has always served circuits paying small salaries, is striving to obtain a collegiate education. He worked his way through a training school and has now matriculated at a university, where he is in urgent need of money to meet his current expenses. He is deserving, and we feel that it would be a gracious act to assist him. If any of our readers would like to make a contribution for this purpose and will send the amount they wish to give to us, we will see that it is properly applied. We shall also be pleased to give by private correspondence any information concerning this young man that may be desired. Who will be the first to lend this struggling young student a helping hand?

A NOBLE WOMAN CALLED HOME.

From Birmingham, Ala., under date of November 15, Rev. J. A. Bowen writes as follows:

"To-day my sainted wife went to heaven at 10 o'clock a. m. The Methodist preachers never had a better friend, and the Church a more loyal and faithful member. She is in glory, while I am here heart-broken. Please pray for me. Her remains will rest in Elmwood Cemetery, Birmingham."

This announcement will be read with deep regret and sadness in all parts of North Mississippi, where Sister Bowen lived and wrought with her husband in the Itinerancy for many years. She was a woman of beautiful Christian character, whom to know was to love and honor. She made her influence felt for good in every community in which she resided, and in all of them affectionate memories of her abide and her name is as "ointment poured forth." She was a model mistress of the parsonage, and to her fireside and table Methodist preachers were always cordially welcomed. She had sunshine in her face, a soft and gentle voice, and in her presence one could not but feel the elevating power of her Christlike personality and life. But the curtain of eternity has lifted, and out into its boundless fields she has passed. The Church is richer and the world is better because of her labors here and the blessings that she scattered along her pilgrim way. Having freely served the Lord's lowly ones on earth, we doubt not that she has been pronounced faithful and bidden to enter upon joys that are indescribable and that shall never lose their charm. Our heart goes in tenderest sympathy to Brother Bowen and the other bereaved ones in this trying ordeal. May they have to comfort and sustain them the conscious presence of Him who said, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Announcements pertaining to Annual Conference matters may be found on Page 12.

Rev. E. G. Kligore, of North Carolina, was a guest of the Editor of the Advocate last Saturday and Sunday.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, associate pastor of First Church, New Orleans, is delivering a series of special sermons to large congregations at the Sunday morning hour.

In renewing his subscription, Mr. J. M. Welch, of Seminary, Miss., adds: "This is about fifty years that I have been a subscriber to your paper." This is a good record, and we are pleased to have our brother continue with us.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, the accomplished President of Whitworth College, occupied the pulpit of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church, of this city, last Sunday at both the morning and evening hour. His discourses were of a high order.

At the recent meeting of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in Washington City, Mrs. E. C. Schnabel was chosen Corresponding Secretary of that organization. The annual meeting of this body for 1913 will be held in the Crescent City.

Bishop W. P. Thirkfield, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, after an absence of some days in the North, has returned to New Orleans, accompanied by his wife and two daughters. They will be domiciled for the present at the De Soto Hotel.

A dispatch to the Memphis Commercial Appeal states that Bishop Hoss reached Nashville last Saturday night for the purpose of attending the trial of the Vanderbilt lawsuit, which was scheduled to be taken up in the Chancery Court on Monday of this week.

Rev. A. G. Shankie left New Orleans Monday morning for Ruston, La., to attend the meeting of the Trustees of the Methodist Orphanage. Brother Shankie formerly served the Ruston Methodist Church as pastor, and he has many friends there.

Rev. W. F. McCrory, of Rocky Springs, Miss., was engaged last week in his last protracted meeting for the current year. Success had crowned his efforts in all his preceding revivals, and when he wrote, he was also hopeful of good results in the one then in progress.

Let your Thanksgiving offering go to the Methodist Orphanages at Ruston, La., and Jackson, Miss. If you enter into a union service, claim your part of the contributions and give it this direction. A good Methodist should be loyal to the institutions of his own Church.

Do not forget to bring them with you to Conference, if you do not send them in before that time. We mean the renewals and new subscribers to the Advocate that you ought to secure in your charge. You will not come empty-handed, brother, if you will go energetically after them.

Our contribution files at this time are unusually full. We ask those who have forwarded communications to us not to be impatient. Our space is limited, and we are doing the best we can under the circumstances. We hope to be able to handle the large amount of matter that we have on hand so that no cause will really suffer.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, our pastor at McComb City, Miss., sends us the following announcement: "Centenary Church at this place will be dedicated on Sunday, December 1, 1912, with Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, officiating. A cordial invitation to be present is extended to all, especially to former pastors."

Our church at West Point, Miss., is enjoying a large degree of prosperity under the pastorate of Rev. E. S. Lewis. There have been 65 additions to the membership during the year, and the Sunday school has taken on such proportions that quarters outside of the church building have had to be provided for some of the classes.

Rev. J. W. Booth returned to New Orleans last week from Houma, La., where he assisted the pastor, Rev. C. V. Breithaupt, in a ten days' meeting, which resulted in 16 accessions to the Church. Brother Booth speaks in words of high praise of the work that is being done on the Houma Mission by Brother Breithaupt and his assistant, Miss Iles.

Rev. E. J. Cunningham, our alert and resourceful pastor at Myrtle, Miss., is closing out the year with things in admirable shape. He is the church correspondent for the Memphis Commercial Appeal in his section, and has sent that great daily some excellent accounts of what is being done by the Methodist hosts of Northeast Mississippi.

Rev. W. A. Bowlin reports matters to be progressing favorably in the North Carrollton charge (North Mississippi). He expects to wind up the year in a satisfactory manner, and to meet the brethren in their annual convocation with a happy heart. Brother Bowlin has a right to be cheered by the success that is attending his labors to extend the Master's cause.

The dedication of Second Church, New Orleans, has been announced for the first Sunday in December. The building is receiving a few finishing touches in the way of improvements, and will present a fine appearance on the day of its dedication. Among other things that have been done, a concrete floor has been laid in the Sunday school department.

We had as a pleasant caller at the Advocate office last week Mr. L. F. Young, of Shreveport. We were pleased to see him and hear his encouraging report of the condition of Methodism in Northwest Louisiana. He left with the Publisher an order for three copies of the excellent Bible that we have been offering for sale through the columns of the Advocate.

Though our Tour Contest has ended, Miss Belle Roberts, the winner of the first prize, while recently in Winnsboro, La., secured for the Advocate seven renewals and six new subscribers. It is needless to say that we highly appreciate this good service. While tarrying there, Miss Roberts also organized a live Epworth League, which promises to be quite helpful to the young people of the town.

Referring to conditions in the Grenada Female College, Rev. J. R. Countiss, the scholarly and efficient President of that institution, says: "Things run so smoothly here that I hardly know what it means to have to use any other discipline but suggestion." Brother Countiss is fast taking rank among the foremost educators of the Church, and Grenada College is making splendid history under his administration.

Rev. A. Joe Beasley, who this year has been serving the Waterford Circuit, North Mississippi Conference, states that he will teach next year, with a view to meeting obligations incurred in attending Millsaps College and the University of Mississippi. He expects, however, to apply for admission into the Conference as soon as he finds it practicable to do so. He is a young man of much capacity and promise.

A note from Rev. D. R. Wasson, our pastor at Benoit, Miss., who officiated, informs us that Miss Kate Eason and Dr. J. E. Williams were married in the church at that place on Nov. 12. The bride is a charming young lady, who has friends and admirers throughout the Mississippi Delta. Dr. Williams is a physician of distinction and a steward in our Church. We extend congratulations and best wishes.

A correspondent of the Memphis Commercial Appeal referred as follows to a sermon preached before the Memphis Conference at Brownsville, Tenn., last week by Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker: "Dr. Parker preached at 3 o'clock p. m., to a large contingent of preachers and preachers' wives, as well as to many of the people of Brownsville. The sermon was classic in expression, heart-felt, and well received."

Rev. W. O. Wagoner, of Shannon, Miss., has lately been doing some good work in his charge for the Conference organ. We assure him that we highly appreciate his efforts to extend the Advocate's circulation among his parishioners. Brother Wagoner is one of the growing men of the North Mississippi Conference, and will carry to Greenwood a report that will attest his efficiency.

A delightful musical program was rendered before a large audience at the Carrollton Avenue Church, of New Orleans, last Sunday evening. Among others who helped to make the program a success, special credit is due the Carrollton Avenue organist, Miss Lucy Crebbin, who planned it, and to Prof. and Mrs. T. O. Adams, who sang some beautiful selections. Brother Snelling, the pastor, believes in praising the Lord in song, as well as in other ways.

An attractive card from Rev. J. S. Duke, dated at Jackson, Miss., announces the birth on Saturday, November 9, 1912, of Miss Margaret Galloway Duke—weight nine pounds. Brother Duke suggests that this event will make a valuable supplement to his report from the Nettleton (Miss.) charge, which he is serving with much success. So it will. We extend greeting to the young Methodist who has so recently arrived, and congratulations to the happy father and mother.

Rev. W. M. Williams, the capable manager of the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home at Jackson, Miss., in a personal letter to the Editor, makes the following statement of public interest: "We now have 208 children in the Home. We have received from Work Day up to date (Nov. 16th.) $4,256. We are expecting several free cars to be run this month that will replenish our store room considerably. The health of our large family is good, and we are making progress along some lines, especially in receiving children. We hope to have a large Thanksgiving offering. If we do, this will put us out of debt and 'a leetle the rise.'"

The Belzoni Journal, in a recent issue, paid the following deserved tribute to our worthy pastor in the town where it is issued: "The fifth stewards' meeting, which was held at the Belzoni Methodist Church on Friday, Nov. 15, practically closed the year's work of the Rev. O. L. Savage. Brother Savage is an able and eloquent preacher and an earnest and tireless worker, and in response to his efforts this charge has built up wonderfully. Sixty-one members have been added to the Belzoni congregation, and a handsome church has been erected at Swiftown, where there is now a good working membership."

Rev. W. W. Perry, the pastor of the Texas Avenue Church of Shreveport, writes: "Methodism about Shreveport is busy with large things. The Noel Memorial Church is nearing completion, but owing to delay in receiving some material for the building, the congregation will not be able to occupy it so soon as they expected. The foundation has been laid and the work is well advanced on the first story of First Church. This will be a splendid edifice when completed. The Queensboro people are planning to begin their building in the near future. All of us are working to bring things to pass before the Conference at Monroe on Dec. 11."

Through her pastor, Rev. T. J. Embree, Mrs. J. S. Purcell, of Plain Dealing, La., sends $2 to be used in placing the Advocate in the hands of supernuminate preachers or needy widows who are unable to pay the cost of subscription. This money goes to a worthy cause, and we extend to the elect lady contributing it our most hearty thanks. We wish that our "Help Fund" were many times as large as it ever is. To send a church paper fifty-two times a year into a destitute home into which it would not otherwise go, is no mean benefaction. Who can measure the influence of such a gift? And there are thousands of Methodists in our territory who would not miss a dollar donated for this purpose.

Rev. L. M. Broyles, of Fort Smith, Ark., in a business letter to our office, says: "The Advocate is a great joy to us. It is a voice from home to our eager ears. At this Conference season my heart more than ever turns to dear old North Mississippi—the dearest place in all the world to me. * * * My work here has been blessed with success. God has been pleased to manifest himself in saving power in all the departments of our service." We are pleased to have this kindly and cheering message from Brother Broyles. Both he and his accomplished helpmeet are held in affectionate remembrance in the State of their nativity; and if their homesickness should grow to be more than they can bear, they may feel assured that the door is ready to swing wide open for their return.

On Sunday morning, Nov. 10, while the State W. C. T. U. of Louisiana was in session at Alexandria, Dr. S. H. Werlein, our pastor in that city, delivered a discourse dealing with the liquor traffic. To his sermon, the Alexandria Daily Town Talk of the 11th inst., made the following reference: "Dr. Werlein's sermon Sunday morning was a message with no uncertain sound. A natural orator, a master artist at word painting, with a heart full of love for God and humanity, a burning zeal for right and a strong desire for justice, with a world-wide issue, prohibition, for a subject, the result was inevitable—a charmed audience." Those who know Dr. Werlein will have no hesitancy in accepting, without reservation, this estimate of his effort. He is one of the really strong preachers of Southern Methodism.

From St. Louis, Mo., under date of the 14th inst., Rev. T. H. Morris, of Mansfield, La., writes as follows: "My nephew, Morris Gish, was drowned in the Mississippi River near Grand Tower, Ill., last Saturday, and I am here with my sister, who is greatly distressed by the loss of her only child. I do not know any of the particulars of the accident. He was employed to run a small steamboat from St. Louis to Palm Beach, Fla. He was only 19 years of age. The body has not yet been recovered. On account of my absence from home, I cannot report this week the additional subscriptions that have been made to purchase the old church property for Mansfield College, but will do so as soon as I return. Several had come in before I left. I am anxious that this important matter should be kept before the public." We regret to hear of the sad occurrence which has taken Brother Morris from home, and we extend to the grief-stricken mother and other sorrowing loved ones our deepest sympathy.

SORRY SHE DIDN'T JOIN THE ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB.

The following letter just received from Mrs. L. P. Coats, Plano, Texas, will be interesting to those readers who are thinking of joining the Advocate Piano Club.

Mrs. Coats writes:—

"I failed to get your book on prices and terms of payment. On last Monday my husband went to the County Seat, McKinney, and bought us a Weiler piano, just shipped from Chicago, warranted for ten years. We had paid an agent $105 on a Kimball organ, and he refused to allow us that much on our piano, leaving us owing $250, to be paid in monthly payments of $10.00 each. I am sure sorry, as I wanted to join the Piano Club so much. I would have felt I was getting the worth of my money."

Our club members get the best style of Weiler for only $173.00, whereas Mrs. Coats had to pay $250.00 plus her organ, the cost of which was $105.00. Assuming that she got the best style of Weiler made, she lost $77 in money and her organ, or $182.00 in all. Now the Club catalogue only claims to save its members $102.00 on the best Weiler piano, whereas it would really have saved Mrs. Coats $182.00.

This is only a sample of what is going on around you every day. The moral is: "Investigate the Advocate Piano Club's splendid offers before you buy." We will gladly send you a free copy of the Club's beautifully illustrated catalogue on request. Address: Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

On Thursday, October 31, little ANNIE, aged two years, daughter of S. E. and Minnie Culpepper, went to be with God. Her earthly habitation loving hands deposited in the silent tomb in the Vivian cemetery to await the resurrection morn. As we viewed that silent form, the countenance still beautiful, we could but say, she is "not dead, but sleepeth." While her little body is asleep in Jesus, her spirit lives with him in glory. Beloved, let us not sorrow as those that have no hope, for while we cannot have her come back to us, we may rejoice in that we can go to her. Then shall we know even as we are known. The same smiling face, the same sweet voice, the same innocent ways that characterized her short stay here, will be our joy through eternity. Dear ones, let your fountain of tears be dried and your sad heart be comforted, and look away with an eye of faith, and see her at the beautiful gate, waiting and watching for papa and mamma, brothers and sisters, loved ones and friends, and let us be determined not to disappoint her expectations. A. S. BYRD.

WILLIAM MORRIS died at his home near Shannon, Miss., July 29, 1912, in the 69th year of his age. He was born in Marengo County, Alabama, October 24, 1843. When but two years old his parents moved to Pontotoc County, Mississippi, where he was reared. At the age of 17 years he enlisted as a Confederate soldier in Company L, 41st Mississippi Regiment, under Col. Tucker. He was engaged in the battles of Perryville, Murfreesboro, Missionary Ridge, Jonesboro and Franklin, besides a number of minor engagements in which his regiment took part. He was paroled in 1865 and returned to his home. During the Reconstruction period he stood shoulder to shoulder with the brave sons of the South, whom the fortunes of war had permitted to return home, in redeeming the State from the misrule of the alienists who had invaded it. On January 12, 1869, he was married to Miss Minerva Gidden, who survives him. Brother Morris was a kind husband, and his home was a place of good cheer and hospitality. He was a true neighbor and was always ready to help those that he could. In 1874 he, with his wife, became a member of the Pleasant Grove Methodist Church, where his membership remained until his death. He was elected a steward soon after uniting with the Church, and was faithful, always doing his duty in this capacity as well as in all the other relations of life. He did not feel that he was gifted enough to do some things in connection with the Church, but gave freely of his means to its support, was faithful in attendance upon its means of grace, and was a true friend to the preachers. He is greatly missed in his church and community. William Morris was a true Southern gentleman and the kind of layman so much needed in the Church. He stood back of his church and never allowed it to fall behind in the support of the ministry, and supported all the institutions of the Church. He took an active part in the business of the Kingdom. He loved to pray and read the Bible, and was a reader of our religious literature. He lived a clean, Christian life of service and good will on earth. Dressed in his gray uniform, according to his desire, we laid his body to rest in the Pleasant Grove cemetery to await the resurrection. W. O. WAGONER, P. C.

A PASTOR COMMENDED.

Whereas, according to the rule of our Methodism, the four-year limit will not permit the return of our pastor, Rev. W. W. Graves, to this, the Homewood charge; and whereas, the several churches in this charge show marked improvement along all lines, the cause of which we attribute to the efficient management of Brother Graves; therefore, be it resolved by the fourth quarterly conference of the Homewood (Miss.) charge:

(1) That we do hereby express our heart-felt appreciation of his labors among us during the quadrennium of his pastoral service.

(2) That we pledge to him our hearty co-operation in the making of this, the closing year of his quadrennium, the best of all, and assure him that our prayers will follow him into whatsoever field the Lord may call him.

(3) That these resolutions be spread on our minutes and published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate. (Signed) W. E. MCKENZIE, Secretary.

COMMENDATION OF REV. R. W. TUCKER.

Rev. R. W. Tucker is closing his fourth year as presiding elder of the Ruston District. When he came to this district he won the love and confidence of the people on his first round. It was easy to learn to love him, because he came with a big heart full of love for us. His first sermon at Gibbsland was very strong and full of the Holy Ghost. He said in that sermon that he was once asked by a preacher why he did not learn to preach in a cold collar. His answer was, "God forbid that I should ever learn to preach to dying men and women in a cold collar." The writer has heard him preach more than fifty sermons, and each sermon was a strong one.

He is not loved and appreciated by his own people alone, but by members of all denominations. Brother R. J. Shaw, a cultured gentleman and a Presbyterian preacher of Athens, said at the close of the last revival meeting Brother Tucker held at that place, that he would like to have a seat by him in heaven. In spite of weather conditions and all other hindrances, Brother Tucker has been able to fill all his appointments. If it were not wrong, we would envy those who get him next year. We will advise those who are fortunate enough to secure him not to fail to have him preach the following three sermons: "Concerning the Immortality of the Soul," "The Bible as a Book," and "The 23d Psalm."

Either as a preacher and as an official, we do not believe Brother Tucker can be excelled by any man in the Louisiana Conference. He has truly been a good shepherd over us. The Ruston District's loss will be somebody's gain. We feel that when he has finished his journey's end he, like Paul the Apostle, may rest assured that he has fought a good fight, that he has kept the faith, and that henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness. A. G. PACE.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

ASK FOR CATALOGUE and SPECIAL DONATION PLAN No. 3
 ESTABLISHED 1858
 THE C. S. BELL CO., 9 Hillsboro, Ohio

Tidings From the Field

Standard, La.

Dear Editor: On this charge this year one church has been rebuilt and dedicated; one new building is in process of erection, and more than $1200 has been raised on another. Should we succeed in building the latter during my pastorate, it will be the ninth church erected during the fifteen years that I have been a pastor. I have had the pleasure of taking some part in the building of other churches; and also, in erecting some parsonages. I enjoy the work.—H. W. Ledbetter.

Chunky, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am finishing my second year on the Chunky charge, and it has been a fairly good one. There have been a large number of conversions; more than 200 have united with the Church; 30 children have been baptized, and a number of family altars erected. Our finances are somewhat behind, due to the ravages of the boll weevil, but in spite of this we hope to make a good report at Conference. We have held seven revival meetings on the work this year. Since becoming the pastor of this charge I have organized two new churches which have a combined membership of 114, and I am expecting more to join before Conference. You see I have not been idle. I have also sent in a good list of subscribers to the Advocate. Pray for us.—C. C. Griffin, P. C.

Pine Grove (La.) Circuit.

I am getting along nicely with my work. I have worked hard and God has crowned my efforts with a measure of success. I am expecting to go up to Conference with a good report. I have held five meetings. I did all the preaching, except in my meeting at Pekin Chapel; Brothers Harvell and Rutledge assisted me there. They did some faithful preaching, and we had a good meeting. I will hold my meeting at Natalbany next week, and the week following I will hold a few days' meeting in the school house at Pine Grove. We had a great meeting in the church at Pine Grove and are praying for a good meeting at the school house. We have good people over here on the Pine Grove Circuit; they have treated me nicely and I should not object to being returned to them for another year. I hope to be able to send you in some more subscriptions for the Advocate before Conference.—W. A. Mangum.

Hurricane Church, Boyd Mission, La. Conf.

Dear Doctor Meek: I have a somewhat belated report to hand you—that of a meeting held at Hurricane Church, near Arcadia, La., during the third week in August. I thought the pastor, Rev. D. L. Griffin, would report it. The meeting began on Friday evening, August 17, and continued through Sunday, the 26th. Brother Griffin preached the first two sermons, as I did not reach him until the afternoon of Saturday, the 18th. Congregations were good at the beginning of these services, and increased each day, so that there was not room in the church to care for them. But they were determined to hear the preaching; so the people placed wagons and buggies near the doors and windows and crowded them to their full capacity. Some of the results were as follows: Cold and lukewarm members were revived; a number of bright conversions took place; 16 united with our Church, and there was a quickening of the whole community spiritually. Also a Sunday school was organized, which is now doing good work. This Methodist church was organized last year with about 50 members. There have been additions since then till now we have a large membership ready to do service for our Lord. The community is made up of fine people, who own their own homes and are interested in education and morals. As I see it, there is a fine future for this church.—W. W. Perry.

Ashland, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Please permit me to make this brief report of my year's work. After the reorganization of the Sherman (Miss.) charge, which I was supplying as junior pastor, last winter, I returned home and began studying music. Since then I have taught singing school, led song services, and have done some preaching. I held one meeting at the Old Central school house, in which there were 18 professed conversions. The meeting was interesting, and I had the co-operation of the entire neighborhood. I am now taking a 40-day special course in singing, and about Jan. 1, 1913, I will be ready for active work as a leader or teacher of singing. I realize that the man who preaches the gospel needs an education, and it is my purpose to pay my way through school by singing or teaching music during the summer. Any one desiring such assistance as I am able to furnish may communicate with me at Hickory Flat, Miss.—A. R. Beasley.

Itta Bena, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: The Conference year is nearing its close and I want to tell you how our Heavenly Father has been with us in all the work. First, we have been able to get into our new church. Although there are some things lacking, we are quite comfortably situated. Our church services are largely attended, and we are having about the best prayer meeting attendance we have had at any time. Our Sunday school is doing nicely and has a good, live superintendent and efficient teachers. But I believe the growth is even more noticeable in the women's societies. A year ago the average attendance at the Home Mission meetings was four or five; now we have from sixteen to twenty. The Foreign Society died out completely, but last week, at the regular monthly meeting of the Home Mission Society, the president gave an opportunity to all who wished to join the Foreign Department to do so, and without a word of urging fourteen gave their names. For all this we give praise and glory to the Lord. Our women are beginning to hold up their heads and look the prosperous King's Daughters and U. D. C.'s, squarely in the face; and the president says that she believes some day we may even be on the honor roll. (I am delighted to see the names of three of our past charges on the honor roll.) Our Annual Conference is near at hand, and of course our Editor must be there.—Mrs. S. L. Pope.

A Practical Talk on THROAT TROUBLES

MOST people imagine that when they are afflicted with inflammatory diseases of the respiratory tract, such as croup, pneumonia, sore throat, coughs, colds, or catarrh, they must swallow all manner of medicines and afflict the whole body with divers fluid drugs in order to secure relief.

Modern methods of medication run exactly counter to this old-fashioned theory. Treatment of these diseases by inhalation of curative vapors is now practiced in all hospitals and sanatoriums.

These diseases are essentially local inflammations, and should be treated by direct application of the curative agent to the affected parts.

As it is impossible to breathe a fluid treatment into the lungs, the local medication is possible only by inhalation.

In harmony with this fact the treatment of such inflammations as colds, croup, catarrh and incipient pneumonia with Vick's Croup and Pneumonia Salve can be depended upon for prompt and satisfactory results.

The salve, which contains valuable remedial agents, volatilizes on being applied to the warm skin of throat and chest. The curative vapors are inhaled, going direct to the seat of the trouble in throat, nostrils, lungs and the cavities of the organs of respiration.

The effect is to stimulate the mucous membrane, throw off the phlegm and restore normal breathing promptly.

The vapors, being antiseptic, cleanse the air passages and check disease.

The stomach, having been left without interference by internal medication, continues to digest food regularly and this supplies the rich new blood so necessary to combat disease and maintain the body in strength.

Locally, on throat and chest, Vick's Salve has the effect of a counter irritant assisting the inner treatment by stimulating the external surfaces nearest the seat of the trouble.

By absorption it allays the inflammation or reduces congestion.

Every mother should become familiar with this dependable method of treatment.

Those who are acquainted with its value and with the effects of this thoroughly scientific, yet practical method of treatment, find it advisable to keep a jar of the Salve always on hand for emergencies.

CLUB PIANOS WITHSTAND BAD WEATHER.

One of the many advantages enjoyed by the members of the Advocate Piano Club is that Ludden & Bates' instruments which are furnished to Club members are especially constructed to resist the effects of damp weather. The rainfall in the South being heavy, and the climate warm, the air absorbs more moisture than that of any other section of the country. Ordinary pianos, built for a cold, dry climate, frequently "go bad" in the South. For half a century Ludden & Bates have conducted one of the largest piano businesses in the country and as most of their pianos are distributed in the South, they have naturally given more thought and study to the requirements of the Southern climate. As a result they have perfected an action which employs five lines of Billings Brass Flanges which, being impervious to moisture, prevents the sticking of the keys in wet weather and the rattling of the keys in dry weather.

Every reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is cordially invited to write for a free copy of the handsomely illustrated new Club catalogue and learn of the many advantages presented by the Club. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

For over 20 years James Anderson of 801 Elm Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a very hard drinker. His case seemed a hopeless one, but 10 years ago his wife in their own little home, gave him a simple remedy which much to her delight stopped his drinking entirely.

To make sure that the remedy was responsible for this happy result she also tried it on her brother and several of her neighbors. It was successful in every case. None of them has touched a drop of intoxicating liquor since.

She now wishes every one who has drunkenness in their homes to try this simple remedy for she feels sure that it will do as much for others as it has for her. It can be given secretly if desired, and without cost she will gladly and willingly tell you what it is. All you have to do is write her a letter asking her how she cured her husband of drinking and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope. As she has nothing to sell do not send her money. Simply send a letter with all confidence to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above, taking care to write your name and full address plainly. (We earnestly advise every one of our readers who wishes to cure a dear one of drunkenness to write to this lady today. Her offer is a sincere one.)

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The Sunday school at Plaquemine is putting in a Home Department.

Under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. W. F. Roberts, a Sunday school has been organized at Kingston, with Mrs. J. W. Waggoner as superintendent. Good work is being done.

Rev. W. H. Hatfield, for a number of years a traveling preacher in our Conference, is teaching the Adult Bible class at Winnsboro, and it is needless to say he is a good teacher. He was a splendid preacher when in the work. Mrs. Lula Shipp superintends the Home Department of this school, and Miss Carrie Wiggers the Missionary, these being new departments.

Analogous to the Boy Scout organization, an organization known as the Camp Fire Girls has been started, with headquarters at 118 East 28th street, New York. It is a distinctly feminine organization and appeals to the domestic instincts of young women, the symbol being the family fire, which stands for home. There are three degrees to be attained, viz: Wood Gatherer, Fire Builder, Torch Builder. To attain the first, the member must understand the law of the Camp Fire—to seek beauty, give service, pursue knowledge, be trustworthy, hold on to health, be happy. To attain the second degree, a girl must learn to do such things as mend stockings and hem a dish towel; to refrain from candy and sodas between meals, and know the life of a woman who has done much for the country. The third degree requires the attainment of such acquirements as a love of nature, camp and hand craft, home craft, and business. The scheme is to take the elements of work, health, and love, and invest them with an air of romance, and teach the members practical life. From some quarters the organization is already receiving warm commendations.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE PASTORS—NOTICE.

The Sunday School Board is sending each of you a blank for a detailed report of your Sunday schools, and we trust you will give faithful attention to the matter of giving us the information asked. It is an easy thing for you to do, and will aid us in knowing the needs of our whole field. In our special or co-operative work the information asked for is indispensable, especially as we seek to perfect our District and State Sunday School Conferences. The blank filled out might be mailed to the undersigned, or, at the latest, handed to some member of the Board at Conference.

Please don't neglect preparation for your Christmas program too long, but have it so under way by Conference, that in case of change of pastors the program will not suffer. Our Publishing House is issuing suggestive literature that will help in making the occasion a happy one. Order sample programs, etc., at once. And don't forget that the spirit of Christmas is giving, not receiving. Remember at this time the poor, who "shall be with you always." Why not follow the plan adopted by the DeRidder Adult Class last Christmas, and gather up the gifts of the people and take a wagon and go where Santa Claus is likely not to go? Or who will suggest a better plan for carrying out the spirit of Christmas? Faithfully yours,

P. O. LOWREY.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Brother Gladney's Boy Scouts stand by him and the Sunday school in all their efforts and render splendid assistance.

Miss Etile Willingham, of Eupora, assisted in the Rally Day observance at Bellefontaine not long since and, as usual, did fine and telling work.

Intermediate and Senior Classes should be organized in order that they may be more highly efficient. Dr. Bulla has a comprehensive leaflet on this subject which should be used in every Sunday school.

There are three million more women than men in our Sunday schools, despite the many new men's classes. But if the present acceleration among the men continues, such an overwhelming feminine predominance in Sunday school life will not long exist.

Remember that every Adult Class should register with Dr. Bulla at once. We want to be the first Conference in Southern Methodism to organize a Federation of Adult Classes, and there are more than enough such classes in our Conference to easily reach the 100 mark Dr. Bulla has set for us.

Do not allow the Devotional Committee work to lag, for upon it depends much of the real worth of the class. A prayer circle should be formed looking to the conversion of every member and to the bringing of the inactive ones into a vital and inner spiritual union with their Lord and Master.

Mr. Carlton's fine Sunday school at Saris lacks only one point of being a Standard Sunday school, and that point will be gained before Conference. The Standard of Excellence is one of the finest goals a Sunday school should aim at, and a steady effort should be made each Sunday and every month by every school to reach it.

Plant a generous supply of flower bulbs now so that you and shut-in folk may enjoy the brightness during the dreary, winter days soon to come. Plan further for a hearty, wholesome and happy Thanksgiving service; make it an attempt to pass on to our Sunday schools and our fellowmen the heaped-up measure God has this year given us.

One teacher of young girls is assisting them in having one really enjoyable social affair each month, and a jolly nutting afternoon is a soon-to-be-consummated pleasure. A year ago this teacher was discouraged and many a tear and disappointment has marked the days, but now she sees the fruit of her labors and how she was building better than she knew.

LETTER FROM MEXICO.

The Managers of the Advocate Piano Club have just received a letter from Miss McClelland, Missionary, of Tamps, Mexico, speaking in terms of highest praise of the Club Piano which the young ladies of the Daniel Baker College, Brownwood, Texas, have presented to the Mission there. Miss McClelland is a graduate of the Daniel Baker College and the young ladies of that Institution have taken this means of expressing their interest in her mission work.

Miss McClelland writes: "The piano arrived Friday, Oct. 5th, and is all that a piano should be. We are charmed with it and feel that our cup of happiness is just about ready to run over."

Every reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is invited to join the Club. Write for your copy of the new Club catalogue to-day. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

CATARRH TRUTH

You Can Plainly See the Truth This Picture Tells.

This picture shows the mucous membrane tract of the nose, throat, and air passages. This is where catarrh germs live and where the disease spreads. The small black spot No. 1 shows where balms, creams, pastes, ointments and such treatments reach by direct application. You can see that it doesn't reach more than 2 per cent of the disease.

No. 2 shows where douches, sprays, atomizers and similar treatments reach. So their cures, like 1 and 2, only reach a tiny part of the disease. You cannot cure catarrh by stopping the disease only in a very small part.

No. 3 shows that medicated smoke can, will and does reach ALL the corners, nooks and crevices, touching every part. Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy which I will send you free, is made of barks, roots, flowers and leaves; no tobacco or habit-forming drugs. When this mixture is burned in a tube or new clean pipe, which I send you free, it sends forth a powerful, germ-killing, volatile smoke, relieving the distress and killing the germs. You can instantly feel the beneficial effects. I have shown you in the picture the truth about various treatments. You can see it is reasonable and fair.

Now I want you to write for a free treatment to let you prove for yourself what a grand remedy I have. The regular treatment costs only $1.00, postpaid. Just say in a letter or on a postal to me "Please send me Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy Free." When I get your request I will send the treatment by mail free and also facts about catarrh you will be glad to know. Address Dr. J. W. Blosser, 224 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga.

Good Advice to Rheumatics.

If you want a permanent cure of Rheumatism, you must correct the cause in the body which creates Rheumatism. Bodi-Tone permanently cures such disorders by correcting the bodily conditions which cause them. You can try a dollar box without a penny. See offer on last page.

Bond's Liver Pills

were originated in 1895 by three of the most prominent physicians of the south, who had many years experience treating diseases depending on a torpid liver.

Grandly has this splendid combination of anti-bilious and anti-malarial agents sustained the reputations of its originators.

Bond's Liver Pills have long since proved to be a most effective remedy for the troubles arising from torpidity of the liver or the bowels.

The small dose—one little pill—and gentle action, make them almost invaluable.

Intelligent readers will not confound Bond's Liver Pills with the numerous so-called "wonderful" remedies that flood the country with reckless and misleading claims of astonishing merit.

When you require an honest and gentle liver or bowel stimulant, take one Bond's Liver Pill at bedtime. You will almost certainly wake up well.

PRESS DEPARTMENT.

Some one has said that knowing, giving, and praying, are the three strands of the rope by which the car of missions is drawn. Much is contained in the remark, and, following out the figure, we find each strand indispensable to the successful twining of the cable. Without knowing, giving will be constrained and meager; without knowing and giving, prayer will likewise be constrained. We can not be properly interested in a subject of which we are ignorant. Information must always precede enthusiastic work, and as a progressive civilization presses us hard with every form of social problem, we cannot afford to be ignorant. Every child of God ought to know the condition of our country which makes for our righteousness, and by knowledge "work together with Him" to counteract, to change, to redeem.

In the effort to place these facts before the membership of our societies in such a crisp, short manner as to catch the attention and quicken the conscience, the Press Superintendent came into existence. The development and effectiveness of this work depends largely on the auxiliary press superintendent. To her is given the opportunity of making a willing people, and ours need but to know what must be done in order to be ready to give their substance or their service, and if she enters into the work with zeal, she will soon learn that it is a God-given opportunity for serving the Master.—The King's Messenger.

CARROLLTON AUXILIARY.

This Auxiliary in the Winona District sends a good report of both Home and Foreign Departments through its Press Superintendent, Mrs. C. N. Neal, who has resigned. She says: "The Home Department is full of local work, having so many repairs needed at parsonage. We are planning to observe the Week of Prayer; to send a large box to the Orphanage this month; have paid a pledge of $5 for an orphan girl at Grenada College, and $2 to Scarritt Bible and Training School.

"In the Foreign work we have paid a pledge of $25, and most of a $40 scholarship has been subscribed. We have elected a delegate to attend the Institute and District meeting at Eupora, in company with our Conference First Vice-President and District Secretary, Mrs. H. M. Bryan. OUR SUB-SCHOOL FOR CUBANS.

Thirteen years ago the Woman's Home Mission Society saw the need of establishing for the Cubans a Protestant school on the beautiful island of Key West. The effort resulted in our Ruth Hargrove Institute, which is valued to-day at $50,575. Last year the school enrolled 617 students, housed in three well built and equipped school buildings; the home for the Principal is also located on the campus.

Key West is seven miles long by one and a half miles wide, so we naturally infer that communication between the inhabitants at the extremes of the island is somewhat limited. The growth of the school was rapid, but the children at the other extreme received no benefit therefrom. How to overcome this difficulty was the next problem for solution; but January, 1912, saw the problem solved. It was made possible to open a sub-school on this island. A suitable building could not be rented, nor did finances permit the purchase of property. A lease was secured on a vacant lot, and permission was granted to erect a temporary building; so a two-room, portable cottage was put on it, and the name "Our Sub-School" given to this new enterprise.

A teacher who speaks Spanish was secured. By friendly visiting she won the confidence of the people and thus obtained the nucleus for the school. On opening day there were fifteen pupils. The school has continued to grow in favor with the Cubans despite the opposition from those who oppose every enterprise of a Protestant nature. It is hoped that a Wesley House will grow up out of this effort to render mental and moral help. In another year there will be need for a second teacher, and these two can work together for the uplift of the home life of these poor benighted people.

The cost of maintaining this sub-school is $850. Here is your opportunity for trying the "Share" plan. Is there an individual, auxiliary, or district ready to take up this work? "The field is white unto the harvest," and "why stand we here idle all the day?"

TO THE AUXILIARIES OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Our President, Mrs. Abel Bliss, has sent a letter of greeting to each auxiliary in the State. In this letter she stresses several important subjects; the raising of our Conference pledge is especially emphasized. Read carefully and prayerfully these words of hers:

"The fiscal year of our organization now ends with December 31st, so there is little time left us to act; but we can act quickly, and so be able to send in our annual reports with every obligation met. Our burden is our Conference Pledge of $1800 to the Foreign Department, and $1000 to the Home Department. Only about one-third of this amount has been raised at this date, and unless we make a determined effort right now to do our whole duty, each one of us, we shall fail, and fail we must not. I feel sure we will not, when you know the facts. We have given our word; God's work waits while we perform our part, the part he has given us to do. The Louisiana Conference cannot bear a record of failure, when a little effort on the part of each auxiliary will mean success.

"To meet the Foreign pledge, the a new appreciation of Christ, for whom the world is unconsciously longing."

How Are Your Nerves?

Nervousness is often merely an indication that the body is out of tone, and entirely disappears when this fault is corrected. Hundreds who suffered from Nervous Prostration, Sleeplessness, Exhaustion, etc., have found Bodi-Tone just what they needed, for its activities in the body are of a character needed to set bad nerves right. You can try a dollar box without a penny. See offer on last page.

Terrible Suffering

Eczema All Over Baby's Body.

"When my baby was four months old his face broke out with eczema, and at sixteen months of age, his face, hands and arms were in a dreadful state. The eczema spread all over his body. We had to put a mask or cloth over his face and tie up his hands. Finally we gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a few months he was entirely cured. Today he is a healthy boy." Mrs. Inez Lewis, Baring, Maine.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cures blood diseases and builds up the system.

THE OBLIGATION TO PAY THE PASTOR'S SALARY.

When men and women join the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, they promise to support the Church and its institutions. In joining other denominations persons promise the same in substance. When the Board of Stewards makes an assessment for the preacher's salary, it is then obligatory upon every member on the charge to see that the assessment is paid in full, and no member is relieved of the obligation until the entire amount is paid.

Sometimes, in order to pay the assessment, it falls hard on some of the members; but even then it is much easier and better for a few persons to pay more than they feel able to pay, than for the preacher to pay it all. To illustrate, suppose a circuit, or station, is behind with the pastor's salary to the amount of $175.00 or $200.00, and suppose the leading paying members have paid about all, or quite all, that they feel able to pay; and so they say, "we don't see how we can pay the balance." Would it not be far better for fifteen or twenty persons to pay the $175.00 or $200.00, than for the pastor to pay the whole amount? It simply means one of two things: the church must pay it, or the pastor will have to pay it by not getting it. And sometimes he has to leave bills unpaid that are just and should be paid, and he would pay them if the church would pay his salary. Now, the officials should see that the salary is paid in full.

The eternal Word says that the laborer is worthy of his hire, and even so hath the Lord ordained that they that preach the gospel shall live by the gospel. Let every charge in the Louisiana Conference see that the pastor is paid in full. You will feel better, you will be better. The preacher can sleep sounder, and work harder and better when he has the money to pay his bills.

The salary promised the average Methodist preacher is small at best, when compared to the salary paid other men, and for a circuit or station to fail to pay the entire amount means hardship and distress for the pastor. There is no obligation more sacred than that of supporting the gospel. The business man looks for his money and he wants it and demands it. Is not the preacher just as much entitled to his? Let every charge do its duty, and may the Lord help!

S. D. HOWARD.

Baker, La.

BERNICE, LA.

Dear Advocate: The Conference year is fast closing—too soon for some of us. It seems that I have hardly had time to begin my work. I landed on the Bernice charge on December 28, 1911, and immediately assumed my pastoral duties. I came to a very friendly people. I began my revival meetings in May. My first was held at Dubach, commencing on May 23, and closing June 5. The preaching was done by Rev. Dr. Rolfe Hunt, of Atlanta, Ga. Dr. Hunt is one of the humblest and most consecrated men with whom I have ever been associated. The people at Dubach rallied to the meeting, and we had a splendid revival with 11 accessions to the Church. The people responded to the call for complete consecration, and many family altars were erected. A splendid prayer meeting has been running ever since. On June 6, we began at Bernice. The meeting opened with flattering prospects, but we failed somehow to make the progress we desired to make. Yet, in some respects, it was a good meeting and resulted in six accessions to the Church. Then, after a vacation of some little time, I began at Ala, an old established Methodist church. There I was assisted by Rev. C. B. Powell, from Pollock, La. Brother Powell did the preaching and did it well. He endeared himself to the people, and did what I believe to be a lasting work. We had only two accessions. Ala is a place that has been noted for bad order, and possibly justly so. I was asked, when the meeting was announced, if I intended having night services. It was a place where people feared to go and take their families at night. I said, yes. I am glad to say that we had fine order, both at night and in the day; in fact, all the year, according to some old men who have been going there for forty years, we have had the best order that has ever been known there. I think we had quite an uplifting meeting. The fourth and last was my meeting at Summerfield, which began Aug. 16. I was assisted there by Rev. R. H. Bamburg, from Vernon, La. The people at Summerfield were delighted with the preaching by Bro. Bamburg. I'll tell you he is a superior preacher. His sermons are logically arranged, well delivered, and very spiritual. We had one accession to the Church. The Summerfield people do not raise a very big fuss about anything, but they try to carry their end of the stick; they are a fine people. My heart's desire has not been accomplished by any means, but I am truly grateful for what has been done.—J. C. Price.

If Bodi-Tone benefits you as it has thousands, pay us a dollar for it. If not, don't pay a penny.

Bodi-Tone

Does just what its name means—cures disease by toning all the body, and we want you to try a box at our risk and see what it will do for your body. Bodi-Tone is a small, round tablet, that is taken three times every day. Each box contains seventy-five of these tablets, enough for twenty-five days' use, and we send you the full box without a penny in advance, so that you can try it and learn what it is, so you can learn how it works in the body, how it cures stubborn diseases by helping nature to tone every organ of the body. Bodi-Tone is a little word, but it means a great deal, everything in health. When all the organs are doing their part, when each is acting in a perfectly natural way, when all the functions are healthy and performed with natural vigor, when the energy, strength and power of resistance to disease are all at a natural point, then the body is in proper tone. When disease has attacked any part, the tone of the entire physical body should be raised to the highest point, to make all the body help to cure. This is the power which Bodi-Tone offers you to help you get new health.

Not a Patent Medicine

Bodi-Tone is not a patent medicine, for its ingredients are not a secret. It contains Iron Phosphate, Gentian, Lithia, Chinese Rhubarb, Peruvian Bark, Nux Vomica, Oregon Grape Root, Cascara, Capsicum, Sarsaparilla and Golden Seal. Such valuable ingredients guarantee its merit and power.

When you use Bodi-Tone you know just what you are using, know it is good and safe and know you are taking the kind of medicine to provide real help for the body. It contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs, nothing that your own family doctor will not endorse and say is a good thing. It does not depend on killing pain with cocaine, opium, morphine, or other dangerous drugs. It does not excite the body with alcohol, but it tones the body and cures its disorders with remedies Nature intended to tone and cure the body when that power was given them. Thus, Iron gives life and energy to the blood, Sarsaparilla drives out its impurities, Phosphate and Nux Vomica create new nerve energy and force. Lithia aids in the kidneys. Gentian does invaluable work for the stomach and digestive forces. Chinese Rhubarb and Oregon Grape Root promote vigorous liver activity. Peruvian Bark raises the tone of the entire system. Golden Seal soothes the inflamed membrane and checks catarrhal discharges. Cascara gives the bowels new life in a natural way, and Capsicum makes all more valuable by bettering their quick absorption into the blood. A remarkable combination that does wonderful work for the body's health. Each of these ingredients adds a needed element from nature to the body. We claim no credit for discovering the ingredients in Bodi-Tone, each of which has its own well-deserved place in the medical books of most of the civilized world. We simply claim the credit for the successful formula which we invented, for the way in which these valuable ingredients are combined, for the proportions used, for the curative force which thousands of sick have found in Bodi-Tone. Many of its ingredients are regularly prescribed by doctors, either separately or in combinations with such drugs as each doctor may favor, for there are wide differences of opinion among the doctors of various schools. The exact combination used in Bodi-Tone is what makes Bodi-Tone the curative and restorative power that makes possible the remarkable cures experienced by Bodi-Tone users.

You Need It

If you are tired of ceaseless doctor bills and wearied of continual dosing without results, you need Bodi-Tone right now. If your local doctor is doing you no real good, if you have given him a chance to do what he can and the ordinary medicinal combinations he used have failed, give this modern, scientific combination of special remedies a chance to show and prove what it can do for you. Its greatest triumphs have been among men and women with chronic ailments who had good physicians without lasting benefit, and for this reason all chronic sufferers are invited to try a box at our risk.

Bodi-Tone offers its valuable services to you right now, if you are sick, if you need medicinal help, if your bodily organs are not acting as they should, if your body is not in right, natural and normal tone. This is what Bodi-Tone is for, to help Nature restore tone to the body, to restore health, vigor, vitality and strength.

If there is anything wrong with your kidneys, Bodi-Tone helps to restore tone to the kidneys, helps to set them right. If there is anything wrong with your stomach, Bodi-Tone helps to tone the stomach, helps to set the wrong right. If there is anything wrong with your nerves, your blood, your liver, your bowels or your general system, the health-making ingredients in Bodi-Tone go to right to work and keep on working day after day, producing the results of the kind sufferers appreciate. If you have Rheumatism, Bodi-Tone helps to eliminate the Uric Acid from the system while it restores tone to the kidneys, stomach and blood, thereby preventing a continuance of Rheumatic poison and putting new activity into muscles, nerves and joints. Bodi-Tone should be used by all women suffering from any Female Ailment, for its splendid toning properties have been found of special value in such ailments.

We Risk All

Why delay another day, when a trial of this proven medicine is yours for the asking? Why keep on suffering, when by clipping the coupon, filling in your name and address and mailing it to us, you can get a twenty-five days' treatment of this great remedy which has already restored thousands to health, which thousands everywhere are talking about? It costs costs a stamp and you don't pay a penny unless it benefits. The powers of Bodi-Tone have been amply proven by three years of glorious cures. It has been tested by thousands, in a great variety of ailments in both sexes at all ages. Persons suffering from Rheumatism, Stomach Trouble, Kidney, Liver and Bladder Ailments, Uric Acid Diseases, Female Troubles, Bowel, Blood and Skin Affections, Dropsy, Piles, Catarrh, Anaemia, Sleeplessness, La Grippe, Pains, General Weakness and Nervous Breakdown, have tested Bodi-Tone and fully proven its remedial value in such disorders. Read the reports, send for a box and try it.

Your Own Opinion Decides! When you use Bodi-Tone on this trial offer you take absolutely no obligations to pay one penny unless it satisfies you. You will know if you feel better, if you are stronger, more vigorous and active, if your limbs and back do not pain you, if your stomach or kidneys do not trouble you, if your heart or liver does not bother you. You will surely know if your organs are acting better than they did before using Bodi-Tone, and if health is returning. If you are not sure, don't pay.

CARTERS, GA.—I had been diseased for fifteen years with what the doctors called Systemic Catarrh. I had pains all through my body, in my bowels, stomach and Back, and my Heart would flutter and smother so it appeared that I could not live. I had Indigestion and Constipation, with Blind spots. Everything I ate soured on my stomach. It seemed I could not stand it much longer. I tried all the doctors in my settlement and three specialists of Atlanta, Ga., and most of the patent medicines I heard of, without any relief, until I got Bodi-Tone. By the time I had taken a treatment of Bodi-Tone I could eat anything I wanted, and there was not a pain in my body. Bodi-Tone did more for me than all the doctors. I am seventy-five years old. J. F. FETTY.

LANTANA, FLA.—I had Rheumatism for twenty-five years from my back to my ankles. Catarrh of the Head for about twenty years and a bad Stomach. I had a terrible swimming in my head, and last Winter I took a terrible cough and spit up quantities of mucus, which the doctors said was Bronchial Asthma. They doctored me all winter with but little benefit. I saw Bodi-Tone advertised, sent for a trial box, and I got my cure from this medicine. I am stouter this Winter than I have been in thirty years and seem to be entirely cured of all my troubles. I have gained thirty-two pounds since taking Bodi-Tone, and can walk ten miles in a day. I am sixty years old. I owe all my good health to Bodi-Tone and believe it saved my life. MRS. EMILY DRIVER.

WAUSEON, OHIO.—Bodi-Tone has done wonders for me. Last Fall I was so run down that I could hardly get up and down. I doctored and received only temporary relief. I tried everything and had about made up my mind that there was no help. I could not eat and didn't seem to crave anything. Everyone thought I would not live through the winter, and I really thought so myself. My Kidneys and Bladder were so bad, and my Stomach also. I had such weak spells with my Heart that it was not safe for me to start out to walk; as I could only stand on my feet a little while. My head was dizzy, I saw the Bodi-Tone offer and decided to try once more. I have not felt so well for years as I do since I used Bodi-Tone. I am in my seventy-second year and can do a day's work. Everyone is surprised to see me as well as I am now. A. SAMS.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The North Mississippi Conference was organized by the General Conference of 1870 from territory taken from the Memphis, Mississippi, and Alabama Conferences, and met in its first session in Water Valley, Miss., Nov. 30, 1870, with Bishop Doggett presiding. The Rev. John Barcroft was elected secretary and re-elected annually till his death twenty years later, filling the office with great credit to himself and much satisfaction to the Conference. Of the 120 preachers assigned at the first session, only 12 remain on the roll today, viz: J. B. Stone, T. G. Freeman, D. L. Cogdell, H. C. Morehead, T. C. Wier, T. Cameron, W. S. Harrison, J. W. Poston, J. D. Newsom, J. J. Brooks, G. W. Bachman, and A. W. Langley, the last three being on the effective list. There have been admitted on trial 335 men, and there are now on the roll 179 names. Counting the charter members, the transfers received, and those received from other Churches, more than 500 men have been in the Conference in these forty-one years. Charges have been preferred against only about a dozen of these men in the forty years, and only about half that number have been found guilty of immorality. Not a bad showing, considering the cry made over the sad falls that occur here and there. One of our men, W. B. Murrah, has been elevated to the episcopacy, and another who attained to that high office was at one time connected with our body—Chas. B. Galloway, who was received into full connection in 1870, but transferred to the Mississippi Conference. A considerable number have achieved distinction in other Conferences after transferring from us.

The Conference was started with 21,815 members and now has 56,329. Owing to changes in the manner of reporting accessions, it is impossible to tell just how many members have been received, but it seems that 76,964 adults have been baptized. Twenty years ago we had 41,233 members and in this score of years we have added 84,397. Adding these, we should have a membership of 125,630, minus the losses by death and removal. Immigration has probably offset emigration, and the fact that we have but 56,000 members indicates an appalling leakage. The simple truth is that Methodism has given much more time to conversion than to conservation. She is in the vanguard of the active, aggressive evangelizing hosts, but in the last file of the rear ranks in caring for her own. The result is that millions of Methodist converts have gone where their baptism was despised and their confirmation rejected, their Christian experience leavening many a lump of formalism and vitalizing many an ecclesiastical mummy.

The number of Sunday schools has more than doubled and their membership trebled. The number of local preachers has dwindled from 200 to 100, the great reduction coming before the authority to give them license was removed from the quarterly conference to the district conference, a fact often overlooked. The contribution for missions has increased from $2421 to $18,000, or adding Church Extension, and contributions of the women, to $48,000, to which might be further added about $6000 for educational work. The average salary for preachers was in 1876, $377; in 1886, $450; in 1896, $464; in 1906, $653; in 1911, $733. The Conference has no comparative figures that look so bad as these: in 1871, 21,000 members paid for Conference claimants, $2332—a little over ten cents per member, while in 1911, 56,359 members contributed $5600, or less than ten cents per member. This, notwithstanding riches have multiplied in our hands and the expenses of the veterans, widows, and orphans have vastly increased. A beggarly pittance it is, and some would rather die than hold out our hands for it, though every preacher must face the possibility of being a pensioner of this pittance.

The Conference has been true to the traditions of Methodism in its interest in education, though much of its energy has been scattered and wasted. At its first session it recognized and stood sponsor for no less than ten "colleges" and schools. Its first real investment was made in Grenada College in 1882. While Major Millsaps made the efforts of the Mississippi Conference effective in 1888, by his princely liberality, North Mississippi antedated the action of that Conference by two years, appointing a commission of seven members in 1886, to "receive proposals for the location and erection of a college for young men and boys." In 1887, the Conference adopted a resolution signed by T. C. Wier, "That this Conference appoint a committee of three to act jointly with a like committee to be appointed by the Mississippi Conference in reference to the adoption of some college, either established or to be established, for the education of boys and young men." In 1888, the Mississippi Conference met a week prior to the North Mississippi Conference, appointed a commission of six to meet a like commission from North Mississippi, sent a delegate to our Conference the next week, and history, as written in the catalogue of Millsaps College, gives the Mississippi Conference credit for initiating the movement.

Perhaps the most striking characteristic of the Conference has been its spirit of fellowship and brotherly love. Having no large city charges, there is remarkable equality among the appointments. It seems easily possible that five charges might get votes for first place, and at least fifteen for second place, depending on the taste, talent, and family of the preacher. Fifty-six charges pay $1000 or more, the salary usually being about in proportion to the expense of living in the town. Merit is generally sought for and rewarded, and "rings" and cliques," so-called, vary too much in personnel from year to year to have any large influence in the making of appointments. No member of the Conference has ever been charged with heresy and it has been singularly free from cranks and fanatics. The great body of its membership are earnest, faithful, and orthodox.

The younger men of the Conference should find inspiration in filling the places of Tuggle, Barton, Brooks, Wheat, Kendall, Barcroft, Cameron, Adams, Honnoll, Sullivan, Oakley, and others who led our hosts in the past. Among laymen who have rendered distinguished service may be mentioned Chancellors Garland, and Mayes; Foote, Clark, Fant, Shands, Streater, Jones, and Bingham, all of whom have served in the General Conference, the last two five times each, an honor accorded to only one minister, Dr. Murrah, who was serving his fifth time when made Bishop.

Looking over our history, we thank God and take courage.

J. R. COUNTISS.

BISHOP H. C. MORRISON.

Bishop Henry Clay Morrison, who will preside over the North Mississippi Conference next week and the Mississippi Conference the week succeeding, is one of the most widely known ministers in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. As a pastor, he attained to the highest rank, filling with unsurpassed acceptability our leading churches in Atlanta, Ga., Louisville, Ky., and other prominent cities. Where he wrought, not only were the material interests of the congregation built up, but there was invariably a deepening of its spiritual life and usually an ingathering of souls. Bishop Morrison was for a number of years one of the Missionary Secretaries of the Church, a position which he adorned as but few men have ever done. From the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, his eloquent voice was heard pleading in behalf of this great cause, and much of the missionary sentiment now existing among our preachers and people was born under the spell of his earnest and moving appeals. It was under his inspirational leadership that the heavy debt of more than $125,000 that burdened the General Board of Missions was wiped out. As a money raiser Bishop Morrison ranks with John B. McFerrin and the late Charles B. Galloway. He has lifted many a struggling church out of sore financial straits and placed it upon a safe foundation.

In person the Bishop is attractive, having a frank, open face and a fine presence. He is genial, affable, and brotherly, and there is never any difficulty in approaching him. He is willing to receive information from any worthy source, but has a mind of his own and the courage of his convictions. He is a loyal Southern Methodist, who believes in our doctrines and polity, and who is ever ready to stand up and maintain them. A hearty welcome awaits Bishop Morrison at the Mississippi Conferences, and we have no doubt that his presidency over them will reach a high standard and make for the progress of our Church in that State.

GREENWOOD AND GREENWOOD METHODISM

Dear Mr. Meek: We are rapidly perfecting arrangements for the entertainment of our Conference which will convene in Greenwood on December 4th. A most cordial welcome awaits the members of the North Mississippi Conference, not only by the Methodists of our city, but by all the good people of Greenwood. We shall leave nothing undone to make the stay of this body of faithful men in our midst both pleasant and profitable.

REV. H. S. SPRAGINS,
Host of the North Mississippi Conference.

This will be the second time our Conference will have met in Greenwood. Thirteen years ago this body met here with Bishop Candler presiding. That session made a deep religious impression on the entire community; and it is our sincere hope that the coming session, when Bishop Morrison will preside, will be an occasion of great spiritual profit and inspiration to all. Let fervent prayer be made by all our people to this end.

You will notice a marked improvement in the growth of Greenwood during the past thirteen years. The town has taken on much larger proportions in every way. To-day we have one of the best, most progressive and thorough-going little cities in all the State. And our church has kept pace with the growth of the town. The history of Methodism in Greenwood has been, by every token, a highly creditable one. Among the first to plant herself in this section, she has played a conspicuous part in winning this country for Christ. Among the "agencies working for the kingdom," ours is a history of which we may be justly proud.

The following words from the pen of Rev. T. W. Lewis, a former pastor of this charge, under the caption, "How a Church Was Built," will give you some idea of the struggles and triumphs of our Church in this section: "It was back in the eighties. I was a boy preacher, with a new appointment—'Carrollton and Greenwood'— * * * Greenwood was a river town of five hundred people. Saloon-keepers, a few gamblers, river rats, lawyers, doctors, planters—all sorts—made up her population. There were many college graduates there, but some how the unorganized condition of society removed the constraints somewhat and wickedness was common.

"The Methodists, Presbyterians and Masons owned a dingy, two-story frame structure which would hold about seventy-five people. When I moved there we had about seventy-five members. A few men, a goodly number of women and several boys and girls belonged to us. The Presbyterians held their Sunday school in the morning and we held ours in the afternoon. A young lawyer who was not a church member was our superintendent and teacher of the adult class. In the early spring I held revival services and received thirty-four into the Church.

"We needed a church building very much. Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Henry, both of whom are now dead, had given us a lot, and I went to work to raise the money. Our Methodist people were poor but all gave. I called on everybody. Saloonkeepers, clerks, our Jewish brethren, lawyers who never went to church—everybody—gave. It was something new. A little river town undertaking to build a Methodist Church! I remember how Sister Henry insisted that we had better give up the project. I had enthusiasm and determination, and I was not to be defeated. I went over to see Geren McLemore and his mother. They lived at Fort Loring, across the river, six miles away. Geren was not a member of the Church, but his dear old mother was. I told them about the church enterprise; that we must build a Methodist Church in Greenwood, and when I asked for their subscription my heart leaped for joy as I read the figures.

"When I returned from Fort Loring I reported to the prayer meeting that night that I had added $260.00 to our Church subscription list. Sister Henry could not believe her ears. Old Uncle Henry Sisloff, who was not a church member, and his dear old wife, gave $50 each, and paid their subscription by selling butter and eggs. The work moved forward from that hour and not many moons had come and gone before we had a church building worth $2000.

"It was a great achievement. Bishop Gallo-way came up and dedicated the church one cool Sunday in the early spring of the following year, and everybody was happy. * * * For twelve years that church building served our people in the Queen City of the Delta. To-day Greenwood has a population of about ten thousand, and we have a modern brick church building worth $40,000. Its present Sunday school superintendent, R. T. Jones, joined in the dingy old church up the street. When we moved to the new church I appointed him to his present position. I look back over the three years spent in Greenwood with profound gratitude to God. 'The people had a mind to work.'

This early achievement of Methodism in Greenwood, being the first denomination to build a house of worship of her own, shows the spirit by which she has been characterized through all the years. She has kept well to the front in every movement looking to the moral betterment of the community and to-day occupies a vantage ground that ought to make her a continual power for good. That Methodism still has a great mission to fulfill in this country, I suppose no one would for a single moment deny. And yet, I, for one, am glad that on her shoulders does not rest the whole responsibility of ministering to the spiritual welfare of the people of this country. That would be a heavy load to carry. Others share with us in the work and have wrought well. Greenwood is a town of good churches—all aggressive and active. And what is better still, you will find here a splendid spirit of co-operation existing among all the churches for the establishment of the "Kingdom of God" on earth. This is as it should be.

My last word is to ask all to pray most earnestly that our coming Conference may be a time of great spiritual power.

HAL SPRAGINS, Pastor,
Greenwood, Miss. M. E. Church, South.

TO DR. J. J. WHEAT.

By Walter Malone.

There is a wondrous power in earthly song,
Whose eagle spirit soars to Paradise,
Too free and happy for earth's deeds of wrong,
Too grand and glorious for our clouded skies.
The liquid bird-notes at the dawn of day,
The laughing winds that kiss the budding flowers,
Breathe echoes of an Eden far away,
And sing the beauties of its fadeless bowers.
Our yearning hearts leap forth with them to soar,
And by their airy wings are borne on high;
We break the chains of clay which once we wore,
And feel too happy for a tear or sigh.

But eloquence like thine can sway the mind—
More strongly than the trumpet's loftiest peal,
More deeply than the moaning midnight wind,
More sweetly than the witching waves' soft spell.

The organ's grand triumphant harmony
Moves not the soul more than thy swelling voice,

The master-singer's notes that mount on high
Have not more power to make man's heart rejoice.

And like Arion singing to the sea.

Till gathering dolphins shone like rainbow clouds,

Thou spreadest forth thy hand, and soon we see
Sweet dreams and visions rise from tombs and shrouds.

When listening to thee, Fancy breaks her bars,
And follows in thy free, unbounded flight;

She wends her way beyond the farthest stars,
And bathes her pinions in eternal light.

We wander with thee by blue Galilee,
Where every wavelet sings a sacred song;

The vine-clad rocks of Nazareth we see,
Where Jesus, weak and foot-sore, passed along.

We see poor Mary weeping bitter tears,
Which wash forever all her sins away.

And then the woman at the well, who hears
Of that unfailing fount which springs in endless day.

Without immortality all human history seems like a path leading nowhere.—Charles G. Ames,

GRENADA COLLEGE.

By President J. R. Countiss.

This school, established by the Baptist Church in 1851, was not prosperous in the disastrous days following the Civil War, became involved in debt and fell into private hands. In 1882 it was about to be sold for use as a Negro school, when it was fortunately purchased for the North Mississippi Conference as a school for girls, and was opened for work under the presidency of Rev. T. J. Newell. In 1884 it was chartered under the name of Grenada Collegiate Institute, and was leased successively to Presidents Newell, Maione, and McIntosh, each of whom wrought faithfully, maintaining standards equal to others of that day.

In 1902, in accordance with the plans and instructions of the General Board of Education, the Conference abandoned the leasing system and placed the school directly in the hands of the Board of Trustees, the officers and teachers to be elected at fixed salaries by them. In this way all profits accrue directly to the school, and during the eight years' administration of President Clifton the value of the property was probably doubled. In 1904, the curriculum was raised and the name of the school changed to Grenada College by amendment to the Charter.

Two years ago the writer was elected President, and took charge under very favorable circumstances, which have been used to such advantage that the school has made the largest material gains in its history without calling for direct contributions from the Church. Probably no five previous years ever showed so much expended for improvements out of the net earnings.

The course of study is based on four years of high school work and requires four years of collegiate work for the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Only experienced, university-trained teachers are employed, and the school, having more than one teacher for every ten pupils, gives a personal care and interest not excelled anywhere. The personnel of the student body is superb and their spirit of earnestness and obedience is rarely equaled. The character of work done compares favorably with that of the best institutions supported by taxation or endowment. In addition to its literary work the College maintains schools of Art, Expression, and Music. The teachers in these departments are all graduate specialists with post-graduate work, and they represent the best schools in this country and in Europe. All these have a good patronage, more than 100 being enrolled in music alone. The standards maintained, the faculty employed, and the work done would be impossible without the generous assessment of $3000 per year by the North Mississippi Conference for the school, yielding an income equivalent to that from a $50,000 endowment.

While the school is doing a remarkable work under the circumstances, its needs are large and imperative. It is impossible to make any large advance within the present quarters. The parlors are utilized as class-rooms, certain classes have to be divided for lack of adequate room, several more piano rooms are badly needed, the art studio is entirely too small for the present class, and more laboratory room is a necessity.

Pupils in pipe organ have to go to the church for practice. Provision for all these cannot be made without the erection of a new building, and no better opportunity will come for some good man or woman of means to build a lasting monument and bestow an immortal benefaction than by donating the necessary funds for such a building. The need is great, and the building should be erected before the opening of another session.

For the future, the College must have endowment. The modern curriculum calls for trained specialists and costly apparatus. The large profits once made from the boarding department of schools for girls have been made impossible by the high cost of food and by the keen competition of State schools furnishing board at cost. The middle of the present century will see the unendowed school relegated to the scrap heap. Even now, no one thinks of establishing a college for men without endowment. Young women are as worthy and as capable as young men and must have similar provision made for their education. The only schools that can survive without endowment are the expensive, fashionable "finishing schools," furnishing frills and furbelows to foolish, frivolous females. These will probably be kept up by the newly rich who contemplate breaking into "society," but detest the work and discipline necessary to secure a real education. Unless the Methodists of North Mississippi mean to endow Grenada College in the near future, they may as well surrender its charter and turn it into a preparatory school. They are sending 500 girls a year to so-called colleges and paying out much more money than would be required to equip and maintain a first-class college at home under their own care and under the soundest Christian influences and environment. Let us have the buildings and the endowment to care for our girls at home.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

The College has its origin in the general policy of the Methodist Church to maintain institutions under its own control for higher learning in the Arts and Sciences.

At the annual session of the Mississippi Conference in the City of Vicksburg, on December 7, in the year 1888, the following resolutions were adopted by a large majority of the Conference:

"Resolved, 1. That a College for males under the auspices and control of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, ought to be established at some central and accessible point in the State of Mississippi.

"2. That a committee of three laymen and three preachers be appointed to confer with a like committee to be appointed by the North Mississippi

REV. A. F. WATKINS, D.D.,
President of Millsaps College.

Conference to formulate plans and to receive offers of donations of lands, buildings, or money for that purpose and report to the next session of this Conference."

In accordance with this action, the President of the Conference, Bishop R. K. Hargrove, appointed the following committee: Rev. T. L. Mellen, Rev. W. C. Black, Rev. A. F. Watkins, Major R. W. Millsaps, Col. W. L. Nugent and Dr. Luther Sexton.

On December 12, 1888, the North Mississippi Conference met in Starkville, Mississippi, Bishop C. B. Galloway presiding. The Rev. T. L. Mellen appeared and reported the action taken by the Mississippi Conference. The following transcript from the North Mississippi Conference Journal gives the response made by that body:

"Resolved, 1. That a College for the education of boys and young men should be established in the State of Mississippi under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"2. That a committee of three laymen and three ministers be appointed to confer with a like committee already appointed by the Mississippi Conference."

The following committee was accordingly appointed: Rev. J. J. Wheat, Rev. S. M. Thames, Rev. T. J. Newell, Hon. G. D. Shands, Capt. D. L. Sweatman and Mr. J. B. Streater.

To the action of these Conferences we may trace the direct origin of the College. The joint commission constituted by the action summarized above met in the City of Jackson in January, 1889. The Rev. Dr. J. J. Wheat was called to the chair. In stating the purpose of the meeting he made a stirring appeal in behalf of the proposition to establish a Methodist College in Mississippi for the education of young men. In response to this earnest appeal Major R. W. Millsaps, a member of the commission, proposed to give $50,000 to endow the institution, provided the Methodists of Mississippi would give a sum equal to this amount for said purpose. This proposition was enthusiastically approved and after a plan of procedure was adopted, Bishop Charles B. Galloway was invited to conduct a campaign in the interest of the proposed endowment fund.

In December, 1889, the Rev. A. F. Watkins, a member of the Mississippi Conference, was appointed a special agent to co-operate with Bishop Galloway in all matters pertaining to the endowment of the proposed College. As the work of raising the sum designated in the original proposition progressed, and $25,000 had been collected, Major Millsaps, in the year 1890, paid $25,000 into the College treasury.

In December, 1892, the Rev. J. W. Chambers was appointed agent for the College, and on December 30, 1893, he reported that the full amount had been collected to meet the terms of Major Millsaps' proposition, and thereupon $25,000 were immediately paid by Major Millsaps to the Executive Committee and the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That the Executive Committee return our most heartfelt thanks to Major R. W. Millsaps for his second gift of $25,000, this day turned over to us. For his princely liberality and unfaltering interest in the great enterprise so happily and successfully inaugurated, the Church and State owe him a large debt of gratitude."

The Conferences having provided for a Board of Trustees, the joint commission dissolved in January, 1890. This Board, to which was referred the matter of organizing the College, was composed of the following:

Bishop Charles B. Galloway, President, Rev. J. J. Wheat, D. D., Rev. S. M. Thames, Rev. T. J. Newell, Rev. C. G. Andrews, D. D., Hon. G. D. Shands, Capt. D. L. Sweatman, Mr. J. B. Streater, Mr. John Trice, Rev. W. C. Black, D. D., Rev. T. L. Mellen, Rev. A. F. Watkins, Rev. R. M. Standifer Maj. R. W. Millsaps, Col. W. L. Nugent, Dr. Luther Sexton, Hon. M. M. Evans.

After the Board organized under the charter the question of locating the College was considered with great care. The Board met repeatedly to consider the offers made by different towns, and finally on May 20, 1891, while in session in Wlnona, Mississippi, decided to locate the College in Jackson, the capital of the State. The citizens of Jackson contributed $21,000 for grounds and buildings, and to this sum Major Millsaps added $15,000. Plans for a commodious main building were immediately procured, grounds were purchased, and in a comparatively short time buildings were in process of erection.

The College was opened for students in September, 1892, with the following faculty: President and Professor of Philosophy, Dr. W. B. Murrah; Professor of Mathematics, N. A. Patillo; Professor English, W. L. Weber; Professor of Latin and Greek, G. O. Swearingen; Principal of the Preparatory Department, M. M. Black. In 1893 Mr. A. M. Muckenfuss was elected Professor of Chemistry, and in 1897 the Chair of Modern Languages was created and J. P. Hanner was elected to fill it. The Department of History was created in 1904 and J. E. Walmsley was elected to fill the position; in 1911, G. L. Harrell of the class of '99 was selected to fill the newly created chair of Physics.

Since the founding of the College the various chairs have been filled by the following professors in addition to those already named:

President—Dr. D. C. Hull, 1910-1912; Dr. A. F. Watkins, 1912.

Mathematics—Dr. J. A. Moore, 1894-1908; J. T. Erwin, 1908-09; E. Y. Burton, 1909.

English—D. H. Bishop, 1900-04; A. A. Kern, 1904.

Latin and Greek—M. W. Swartz, 1904.

Chemistry—J. M. Sullivan, 1902; B. E. Young, 1900-03.

Modern Languages—J. E. Walmsley, 1903-04; O. H. Moore, 1904-07; H. T. Moore, 1907-09; G. D. Davidson, 1909-10; J. M. Burton, 1910.

History—J. R. Lin, 1912.

Professor R. S. Ricketts was first elected Headmaster of the Preparatory Department, and had associated with him E. L. Bailey who was succeeded by G. W. Huddleston. Later S. G. Noble was added to the faculty. At the close of the session of 1910-11 the Preparatory Department was formally separated from the College and made into a distinct institution under the name of the Millsaps Preparatory School, with Professor S. G. Noble as Principal.

The remarkable facilities for conducting a Law School in Jackson led to the establishment in 1896 of a Law Department. The Hon. Edward Mayes, ex-Chancellor of Mississippi State University, and for over fourteen years a professor of law in that institution, was engaged to take the active control of this department. Dr. Mayes has associated with him as active Professors, Judge A. H. Whitfield, of the Supreme Court of our State, and Judge Wm. R. Harper, a distinguished member of the Jackson Bar.

In addition to the buildings first provided, consisting of the main college building, the President's home, and homes for the accommodation of students, the facilities of the institution were greatly enlarged during the session of 1895-96 by the generosity of Major Millsaps in the gift of Webster Science Hall, at a cost of $10,000. In 1901 Mr. Dan A. James, of Yazoo City, Mississippi, built an observatory for the College, in honor of the memory of his father, Mr. Peter James, and of his brother, Mr. Samuel James, and furnished it with a magnificent telescope, thus enabling us to offer the finest advantages in the study of astronomy.

The evolutionary process through which Millsaps College passed during the first ten years of its history developed an ever-increasing demand for better dormitory and dining hall facilities. This need was supplied in 1902 by the gift of Major Millsaps of the property formerly known as the Jackson College, at a cost of more than $30,000.00, and subsequently of fifty acres of land immediately adjoining our campus valued at $50,000.00. The splendid brick structure thus secured, together with other buildings admirably adapted to college uses, enables the institution adequately to meet the demands made upon it.

In the year 1906 the General Education Board of New York City agreed to contribute from the income of the John D. Rockefeller foundation for Higher Education, $25,000.00, provided a supplemental sum of not less than $75,000.00 should be collected, and thus add $100,000.00 to the permanent endowment of the College.

To meet the terms of this offer, a vigorous campaign was prosecuted by the Rev. T. W. Lewis, then of the North Mississippi Conference, who had been duly appointed as Financial Agent of the College.

In 1910 it appeared that $32,279.10 had been collected for said purpose, and Mr. I. C. Enochs paid in $5,000.00, and Maj. R. W. Millsaps, in keeping with the generosity that has always characterized him in making it possible to improve opportunities which would have been lost but for his timely aid, paid the additional $37,720.90, thus completing the transaction and increasing the endowment by $100,000.00.

With an endowment of over three hundred thousand dollars and buildings and grounds worth approximately two hundred and fifty thousand dollars more, the College rests on a foundation which guarantees its perpetuity. It has the support of a great religious denomination, yet it is not sectarian in its policy, but numbers among its patrons representatives of all the Christian churches.

One of the purposes that the College keeps consistently in view is indicated by the following section of the charter:

"The cost of education shall, as far as practicable, be reduced to the lowest point consistent with the efficient operation of said College, and every reasonable effort shall be made to bring collegiate education within the ability of the poorer classes of the State." E. Y. BURTON.

REV. T. J. UPTON.

On the 17th day of October, 1912, Rev. T. J. Upton passed from this life and entered into rest at the age of 33 years, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Burnett, of Minden, La. He was the oldest son of D. W. and Susan R. Upton, and was born in Columbus, Ga., May 18, 1830. He grew to manhood in Talbot County, Ga., and there was converted and united with the M. E. Church, South, in 1848. He said: "The genuineness of my conversion I have never doubted, though I have on several occasions doubted my present acceptance with God." For some time he resisted the call to preach, until, like Paul, he felt, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel of the Son of God." He was licensed to preach by the quarterly conference of the Buena Vista charge, in Marvin County, Ga., in May, 1856. He continued as a local preacher until he came to Louisiana and was admitted to the Louisiana Annual Conference in February, 1859. He said: "I have never looked back and have no desire to do so now. I have served twenty-two charges in this Conference, and about two-thirds of them circuits, the others stations. About three years I served as financial secretary of Horner College. In all these years I have ever aimed to do my duty, in the fear of God."

He was granted the superannuate relation at the Conference held in Minden, in December, 1913, and continued therein until death. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Wheelless in 1849. To them were born nine children, two of whom preceded their mother to the grave. The others are members of the Church of their parents. He paid the following tender tribute to the memory of his wife: "On December 23, my dear wife was called to her reward. We had lived together in the sacred relationship of husband and wife for 53 years. Having witnessed her conversion and her upright life for so many years, I think I am safe in saying that I have never known her equal in Christian character and living. She let her light shine in all the relationships and responsibilities of life, and when the end came she was ready to go." This writer and wife lived in that home two years. Truly, it was a godly home, and a truer woman or a finer Christian character than Sister Upton we never knew. Their home life was beautiful. Their son writes of his father as follows: "He was our horse and we rode him as such; we towseled him and piled ourselves onto him; we played all sorts of pranks on him, and he in turn played pranks on us. He was the greatest romper of us all. No child ever escaped his notice, and he spoke kindly to all; even the negroes gathered around him to hear him talk and ask his advice. I never knew father's faith to waver. I have seen the clouds, big and black, hang low about him, but I never knew him to falter or lose confidence in God. In the most trying times, he would say, 'It will all come out right, for God rules.'

"In the forty-seven years that he served charges, there were many bitter struggles, but I never knew him to complain or grow despondent. He always spoke a word of cheer to others. One time mother said, 'Papa, there is nothing for dinner. I cooked the last we had for breakfast, and the children are hungry. What shall we do?' He answered, 'Call the children in and we will have prayers.' He laid our condition before the Lord as if he were talking to an earthly father. Within a short time a negro climbed from off a load of cotton and carried to our house the half of a large hog and said, 'Marster told me to fotch this to the preacher. Said you might want some pork.' The negro had scarcely disappeared down the road when another drove up to the gate with a cart-load of general provisions—about all that we needed. He said, 'The folks in de town told me to fotch dese to de preacher.'"

He was a clear, strong preacher. Few men could make the truth contained in a text more luminous than he, or press it home more pointedly on the consciences of men. He once said, "My association with my brethren has been delightful, and with some of them it has been unbroken for forty-seven years."

Duty seemed to be his watch-word. At a time when his salary was so small that his family could not live on it, a business firm offered him a salary five times as large, but he refused it and went on faithfully in his Master's work. Near the close of his life, when his mind had worn out, he preached to the negro man who cared for him and urged him to accept Christ. Once, this man sang an old hymn, and Brother Upton joined him, carrying the bass part to the end. His son relates this touching incident: "One day he went into the kitchen and said to my sister, 'Gussie, have you any food in the safe?' She answered, 'Yes, father, what do you want?' 'I want a biscuit.' She followed him and found him distributing it to the widows and orphans he imagined the Conference had put in his care."

He was ever the friend of the man who was in trouble, fearlessly defending the right and as boldly condemning the wrong. He feared nothing but sin. He had but one rule of life, and that was to do right. He was a foe to be dreaded by evil and evil men, and a friend to be trusted. I can not better close than with a paragraph from his autobiographical notes, written in 1905 at the request of his oldest son: "My future prospects are glorious beyond description. I feel that I will not live much longer; that I am ready to go, and, in looking back, I feel that I have been engaged in a good cause. I have been in earnest; I have kept the faith; I have tried to do my duty, and to live right before my God. Though I have made many mistakes, my motives have been pure. God knows that I feel that henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of life, which the Lord, the righteous judge, will give me in that day." This thought makes me happy."

"Servant of God, well done,
Rest from thy loved employ.
The battle fought, the victory won;
Enter thou the Master's joy."

NOTICE!

To the Pastors and Laymen of the Louisiana Conference—

Dear Brethren: During this year your Board of Missions has endeavored to conduct an evangelistic campaign with Rev. A. W. Turner as Conference Evangelist, and with the help of a number of our pastors who have rendered valuable assistance. We are thankful to say that the work has given general satisfaction and has been the means of leading many into the kingdom of God. However we will be forced to face a considerable deficit on the salary and expenses of our evangelist, and therefore we cannot continue this most important work without greater financial assistance.

Our State also presents to us a most important and needy mission field with unprecedented opportunity to extend the kingdom of our Lord into our unevangelized rural sections in the quarter of a million population who have scarcely heard of the saving grace of God, and the 130,000 unchurched people in the city of New Orleans. The field is white unto the harvest right here at our very doors, but we are sadly handicapped in the glorious work for lack of material assistance.

Then we are very desirous of assisting in all the home mission work of our great country, and of doing our part in evangelizing the forty millions who have been given to us and who shall never hear the glad tidings of God's redeeming love unless the gospel is carried to them by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

All this work must suffer and, at least, partly fail, unless every one of our charges in the Louisiana Conference pays out of the bounty with which God has greatly blessed us more for missions than our small assessment.

Your Board is anxious that every charge shall at least pay an amount equal to 75 cents per capita for the entire membership, and more according as God has blessed you. Will you not see that your charge comes up to this minimum, and goes far beyond it, if possible?

How glad we would be to be able to properly carry on our important French Mission work; to keep our Conference Evangelist in the field; to help every weak and needy mission charge; and to adequately represent our great and fertile and richly endowed State and our great denomination in the mission work abroad! Will you not help us to do this?

Let us take nothing less for the measure of our faith and liberality this year than "Louisiana for Christ!"

With gratitude for your co-operation, and with anticipation of still greater help from you, we are your co-workers in the Master's vineyard.

THE BOARD OF MISSIONS,
Per Wm. H. Coleman, Chairman.

TO LOUISIANA PASTORS.

I call your attention to the importance of being very accurate in making out your reports to Conference, especially as to the item of membership. Please remember that the item "Members reported last year," must correspond with the number reported by your charge in the last Minutes as "Present total membership." Then see to it that "Members Reported Last Year," "Additions on Profession of Faith," and "Additions by Certificate and Otherwise," when added together, balance with your "Removals by Death and Otherwise" and "Present Total Membership," when added together. You will save the Statistical Secretaries no end of time and trouble and your report from confusion, if you will carefully make out your reports. Remember that you will subject yourself to public censure from the Bishop if you fail to have your report in the hands of the Secretaries by the close of the first session of the Conference. I will be on hand the day before the opening of Conference prepared to receive all reports. Faithfully,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Statistical Secretary.

YOU NEED IT.

Dear Dr. Meek: In view of the fact that the centennial of the organizing of the Mississippi Conference falls in 1913, and that both the Mississippi and the Louisiana Conferences are looking to the celebration of this event, will you allow the presumption on my part to suggest to your readers, both clerical and lay, the indispensable value of Jones' History of Methodism in the Mississippi Conference? This work can be bought either direct from our Publishing Houses or from Revs. John T. Sawyer and G. W. Bachman, or myself. Copies will be on hand at the coming sessions of the two Mississippi Conferences and the Louisiana Conference. Your brother, MAJOR R. W. MILLSAPS—MISSISSIPPI'S FOREMOST PHILANTHROPIST.

Major R. W. Millsaps was born May 30, 1833, on a farm in Copiah County, Mississippi. He began life with work on the farm, attended the country schools of that day and went to Hanover College, Indiana, at the age of 17; after two years there he attended Asbury (now De Pauw) University at Greencastle, Indiana, and was graduated from that institution in 1854. Returning home, he taught school two years, in the family of Col. Glass on his plantation ten miles below Vicksburg. He then studied law at Harvard University, graduating in 1858, when he settled in Pine Bluff, Ark., for the practice of law, which occupied him till the outbreak of the Civil War. He entered the Confederate Army as a private and was successively advanced to the offices of lieutenant, adjutant, captain, major, and lieutenant colonel. He was wounded in the battles of Shiloh and Nashville. After the surrender Maj. Millsaps returned to his old home in Mississippi, and began life anew by hauling cotton to the market with a wagon and two mules which a comrade and he had been allowed by General Sherman to bring home from Greensboro, N. C., where the surrender of his regiment occurred. With the meager earnings from hauling cotton, he opened a store at Brookhaven, Miss., and the business grew to large proportions, and at the end of fifteen years had proven to be very successful. In 1880 he opened up a wholesale grocery and commission business in St. Louis, from which he retired in 1884 with a fortune, and traveled for a time with his family in Europe. In 1886 he returned to Mississippi and established the Capital State Bank, now the Capital National Bank, at Jackson, Miss. He also subsequently established in the same city the Citizens' Savings Bank & Trust Company; and he is also now a stockholder in various banks in Mississippi, and a director in the First National Bank of Vicksburg, and First National Bank of Greenville, and president of the Merchants & Planters' Bank of Hazlehurst, and of the Bank of Forest.

It was at the meeting of the Joint Committee of the two Mississippi Conferences in Jackson, Miss., in 1889, that Major Millsaps submitted a proposition to give $50,000 to endow a Methodist College in Mississippi for young men, provided the Methodists of the State would give a like sum for that purpose. This offer started the great educational campaign, headed by Bishop Galloway, that resulted in the establishment of Millsaps College.

Besides the $50,000 donated by Major Millsaps, he has kept standing a proposal to duplicate any sum donated to Millsaps College, which proposition he has met, until the aggregate of his donations to the College has reached the sum of more than $250,000 of the $500,000 in endowment and property owned by the institution.

Major Millsaps also has been a liberal giver to the Mississippi Orphans' Home, and has given in cash and land to that institution over $20,000. He has been treasurer of the Board of Education of the Mississippi Conference for nearly twenty years.

Major Millsaps was president of the Monteagle Chataqua Assembly for fifteen years, and is now treasurer of the Mississippi State Board of the American Red Cross, and president of the Board of Stewards of the First Methodist Church at Jackson, Miss. He is a man of broad views and sympathies, and many other enterprises not mentioned above have profited by his large philanthropy.

BISHOP KILGO IN THE CHAIR.

The Memphis Conference met this year in Brownsville, Tenn. Bishop Kilgo was in the chair. I have been going to Conferences for many years, but this Conference was something new. From start to finish the Bishop threw the emphasis on spirituality. Whether it was the report of presiding elder or pastor, remarks from the chair on the points raised in the proceedings, or sermons in the pulpit, all was focused on the supreme importance of the inner life. If a preacher began to talk about his finances the Bishop took up his big pen, and wrote to "Miss Fannie," as he calls his wife—had no time to be "pestered" with "trivial matters;" but if a preacher reported a revival, so many sinners converted he put down his pen, seemed to forget even "Miss Fannie," his eyes flashed, he began to exhort, and talked from the chair; then rose, and with an eloquence I have never heard surpassed, and rarely approached, electrified us with the "glorious gospel of the blessed God." And this not once, nor twice, but time and again. His theory is that if the heart is full of the love of God, all else will come of its own accord. So he raised the main issue, and kept it paramount. The devil of worldliness never got such a "bruising" as he got at this Conference from this Bishop. He struck like a giant with a sledge hammer at card playing, dancing, and theatre-going, as the triple-headed demon that is befouling our homes with the smoke of hell. He openly declared that no layman who had cards in his house and no altar of prayer, need come to see him on any other matter than how to get right with God. He told everybody that if they didn't have religion, and wouldn't get it, to quit the Methodist Church, and go to a moral trash pile. Perhaps sham education, the intellectual culture that has no God, received his sternest and most vehement denunciation.

Bishop Kilgo has been accused of "talking to the gallery" on the subject of education. That is a mistake. What he demands in the name of the living God is Christian education. And it is high time to speak out. Never before has the Memphis Conference had such a burning message given to it, or listened to such a protest. "How do you feel about your appointment?" a brother was asked. "I don't care a flip—any appointment that man gives me is all right." That is the spirit of our ministry. Complaints about appointments, the friction and reluctance to accept any work, is the inevitable result of a lack of confidence in the spirit of the administration: a feeling that God has been left out in a large measure in the consideration of the case. When godless laymen take the Bishop in hand; when the Bishop himself in his utterances from the chair stresses "the finances" of the Church, and plays into the hands of the devil by a weak and evasive attitude towards unsanctified wealth and popular forms of worldliness, then the preacher's faith is unconsciously shaken, his fervor dies, and his whole nature is chilled by the frigid atmosphere of the Conference. But let a Bishop hold an Annual Conference as Bishop Kilgo held ours—sing and shout, and kindle hot flames of spiritual enthusiasm in every heart, and the brethren leap to their errands like the evangelists of the living God, and "devils fear and fly!" Then the complicated wheels of our splendid Methodist organization run smoothly and swiftly, "for the spirit of life is in the wheels." Otherwise they drag, and the machine is cumbersome and its very massiveness is a hindrance.

As you know, Meek, I am not given to puffing Bishops, but this is a Bishop after my own heart. He puts "first things first," subordinates temporal to spiritual concerns, and makes an Annual Conference a dynamo that generates tremendous religious enthusiasm. Listen for revivals in the bounds of the Memphis Conference this year. Look out for a large increase in every department of Church work. Keep your eye on us now, and see if there is not a forward movement. If it doesn't come in this way, we may as well quit.

These splendid public utterances of Bishop Kilgo are in keeping with his private sentiments. The man has religion; he talks it all the time. And he talks about the great things of theology—"the unsearchable riches" of the grace that saves us. All his thought seems to center in Christ; and in my conversation with him I got light on many subjects. He is a thinker as well as a superb speaker. He says that "Hallelujah" is the limit—when you get as high as you can go in glory, when the light blinds you, and language fails you, and the mind trembles, throbs, and staggers with an ecstasy no thought can analyze or mortal or angelic tongue express, you just give it up, and exclaim, "Hallelujah!" O it was great, Meek. I'm happy yet.

In one respect I criticised Bishop Kilgo. He will kill himself at the rate he is going. Galloway went to the grave in his glorious noonday of usefulness, because of over-work. Hoss has hung his armor up, and his hand is too feeble to draw his mighty bow. We must check the vehement zeal of such splendid men. I think Bishop Hendrix shows great wisdom, and sets his episcopal colleagues an example they ought to follow, in the care he takes of himself. God gave him a magnificent body, and he takes religious care of it, and does right. Kilgo must rest. His intense spirit must abate its strain on the slender body it uses. But let us thank God for giving us such a great spiritual Bishop. S. A. STEEL.

THE CHILD'S TALK OF HEAVEN.

"Let's go and play One Old Cat," said Molly, with an uncomfortable jump; "I wish I hadn't got to go to Heaven!"

"Why, Molly Bland! why, I think Heaven's splendid! I've got my papa up there, you know. Here's my little girl—that's what he's going to say. Mamma will be there, too; and we're all going to live in the prettiest house. I have dreadful hurries to go up there sometimes, when Phoebe's cross and won't give me sugar. They don't let you in, though, unless you're a good girl."

"Who gets it all up?" asked puzzled Mary.

"Jesus Christ will give me all these beautiful fings," said Faith, evidently repeating her mother's words—the only catechism that she had been taught.

"And what will he do when he sees you?" asked her mother, coming down the stairs and stepping up behind her.

"Take me up in his arms and kiss me."

"And what will Faith say?"

"Fank—you!" said the child softly.

In another minute she was absorbed in the mysteries of One Old Cat. * * * "Such talk quiets her," said mother, "like a hand laid on her head. Mary, sometimes I think it is his very hand, as much as when he touched those other little children. I wish Faith to feel at home with him when he calls her to him. I really do not think that she is conscious of any fear of dying; I do not think it means anything to her but Christ, and her father and pink blocks and a nice time, and never disobeying me or being cross. Many a time she wakes me in the morning talking away to herself; and when I turn and look at her, she says: 'O mamma, won't we go to heaven to-day, you fink? When will we go, mamma?'"—Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, in The Gates Ajar.

A QUARRELING-ROOM.

The twins ran in together, and at the same moment both began: "Mother, Mattie won't let me—" "Mother, Edna took my—"

"Now, little girls," said mother, "I've told you that in this room we have no conveniences for quarreling; you will simply have to go up to the quarreling-room."

They looked at each other in sudden wonder, and then, with beating hearts, followed their mother up-stairs. In the room to which she led them the plasterers had just finished their work; there was no carpet on the floor, and no furniture—nothing but a small box and an empty nail-keg. "You may sit here, Mattie," said mother, pointing to the box at one end of the room. "And you here, Edna."

Edna seated herself on the overturned nail-keg. With breathless interest they watched their mother. She took a piece of blue chalk which the carpenters had left and drew a circle around each child.

"Now," she explained, "you must not step outside your circles until the quarreling is over, and the quarreling must all be done here."

As she closed the door they looked at each other, and could not help laughing.

"I don't know how to begin," said Edna.

They sat for a while longer, looking at each other and trying not to laugh.

"Oh, pshaw, sister," exclaimed Mattie, at last, "let's go back and build houses! It's more fun!"

"Is the quarrel over so soon?" mother asked. "It looks, then, as if we should not need the quarreling-room, after all."

"It isn't much fun," returned Mattie.

"Well," mother went on, "father and I thought if we did not really need it, we might change its name, and call it the play-room. You could have all your books up there then, and use that room for your very own."

"Oh, mother!" shouted the two small voices.

COLPORTAGE WORK IN THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES.

At the session of the North Mississippi Conference in 1884, by request of the American Bible Society, Bishop Keener appointed me Bible Colporter. But a short time afterwards I was stricken with nervous prostration, which so disabled me for several months that I could not take up the work, and I resigned it. As soon as I was able to travel by railroad, I began to attend district conferences and other places upon invitation, carrying with me a few of our books, and soliciting subscriptions for the church papers, primarily to pay traveling expenses. As the months passed my physical strength was renewed and the way opened more and more for the work I was doing in circulating the Church literature. The interest generated by this year of tentative work was expressed in the report of the Committee on Books and Periodicals at the Conference in Kosciusko in 1885, which was adopted, as follows:

"We regret that more of our people do not purchase and read our books. How can this evil complained of be remedied? How can we get our books before the people and induce them to buy them? The old plan by which this work is relegated to the pastorate has proved only a partial success, and partial success is partial failure. Most of our preachers are sorry book sellers. Let us improve upon our methods. At least let us render the old plan more efficient by adopting a thorough system of colportage in the Annual Conferences. Let a Colporter or Conference Book Agent be appointed in each Conference, whose duty it shall be to travel throughout the Conference for the purpose of selling and distributing our books and periodical literature.

"T. C. WIER, Chairman."

In accordance with this action Bishop Hargrove appointed the writer Colporter and Book Agent, although there was at that time no provision for such an appointment in our Church. But the General Conference in 1886 provided for this work by the following enactment:

"Each Annual Conference may provide a system of Colportage best suited to its necessities."

In 1890 fuller and more special provision was made for this interest, giving one whole section in the Discipline to it, and thereby constituting it one of the principal agencies of the Church; and such it has continued to the present, with a few changes in the law governing it.

The primary design of this colportage work was to aid the agencies already in use in circulating the Holy Scriptures and in placing our literature in the hands and homes of our people. This purpose can be fulfilled only by field work, to accomplish which the man chosen for it must be truly a traveling man, whether he be a preacher or a layman. The mere keeping of a book store will not achieve success, but will prove a failure, as has been demonstrated in several instances.

Like many other worthy enterprises our colportage work has been hindered in efficiency, and in some sections brought into disrepute, by the appointment of inefficient and incompetent men to conduct it. Such had been the financial loss to the Publishing House by the mismanagement of colporters, that in 1894 the Agents were ready to ask for the abolishment of the whole business by the General Conference; but the law was so changed as to give them better protection, and thus safeguarded, it still continues.

So far as is known to the present writer, he was the first appointee to this work in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and has been continued consecutively in it longer than any other man. This is noted, not boastingly, but as a matter of history. In 1887, in order to make the continuance of the colportage work possible, by request of the Book Agent, and at the suggestion of Bishop Keener, the Conference combined with it the office of Sunday School Agent, with an appropriation for salary by the Sunday School Board, which plan was continued till 1902—15 years.

In 1897, the Mississippi Conference, having no colporter, requested that I should also serve them in that capacity. This arrangement, being approved by the Book Agents, has continued, with mutual satisfaction, to the present time.

During these 28 years I have sold and distributed more than $76,000 worth of good literature in the form of books, tracts and periodicals for the advancement of the cause of Christianity and the dissemination of useful knowledge. No account has been kept of the miles traveled, hardships endured, sermons preached, speeches delivered, meetings attended, churches and homes visited, though these may be numbered by the hundreds and thousands. Experiences of divine grace and love and of human favors and kindnesses have been innumerable, for which I cherish feelings of gratitude that are inexpressible.

A BOOK DEPOSITORY AT NEW ORLEANS.

The Methodist pastors of New Orleans in one of their recent meetings went on record as favoring the establishment by our Publishing Agents of a book depository in this city, and took steps to bring this proposal to the attention of the proper authorities. We have no hesitancy in saying that we think that such an establishment here, properly managed, would succeed and that it would exert a far-reaching influence for good. Barring St. Louis and Baltimore, which are on the border, and San Francisco, in the far West, New Orleans is the largest city in the territory occupied by Southern Methodism in the United States. Its population is now well past the 350,000 mark, and it is the commercial center of a thickly settled and rapidly improving section. And there is scarcely a doubt that with the opening of the Panama Canal, New Orleans will be the chief gateway to the West Indies and Central and South America, and that within the next few decades it will have a marvelous growth. In view of the strategic situation of this city, it behooves Southern Methodism to entrench itself strongly here. Paul showed ecclesiastical statesmanship in the opening years of the Christian era when he sought to plant the Church first in the great centers. He knew that from those commanding points its influence would be the most widely and quickly felt.

Under the charter and deed by which it is held, the Publishing House at Nashville has a right, when it sees fit, to occupy a part of the Advocate building in this city. This property is admirably located for both a local and general book business. It is not more than a block from the magnificent new marble postoffice which the Federal Government is erecting, and when that is completed a vast stream of population would daily pass immediately in front of the doors where the depository would be. Such an institution would also be quickly within reach of all Louisiana, Mississippi, South Alabama, Florida, and of the foreign countries to the South. We sincerely hope that our Publishing Agents will think favorably of this proposal when it is brought before them. The Northern Methodist Church sees the strategic importance of the Crescent City, and is steadily strengthening her forces here. She has established here one of her connectional organs, an episcopal residence, and has acquired considerable property. Her next step may be that which we are planning to ask our Church to take.

It is high time that we were up and doing if we are to make the most of the great opportunities that stretch out before us in this expanding mart of commerce and the fast developing territory that surrounds it. Especially do we need to be enterprising and progressive in the management of our publishing interests in this day when the whole country is being literally flooded with vicious publications. Satan freely uses the printing press, and only by a more vigorous employment of it may we hope to overcome him. The reading matter of a people largely shapes their destiny for time and for eternity. As Victor Hugo has said, an invasion of bullets may be resisted, but not an invasion of ideas. It is not enough to print good books, tracts, and papers and announce where they may be obtained. We must also find some way of getting them into the millions of homes that dot our land. The suggestion seems reasonable that the accomplishment of this urgent task would be facilitated by bringing the sources of supply nearer to hand. And as a favorable distributing point for our literature, we do not believe that any municipality in the South offers better advantages than New Orleans.

A GREAT PREACHER.

We publish this week a poem addressed to Dr. J. J. Wheat, written by Judge Walter Malone, of Memphis, Tenn., when he was a student at the University of Mississippi more than twenty years ago. It was composed after listening to an extraordinary discourse delivered by Dr. Wheat in the city of Oxford. We think we would hazard little in saying that this remarkable man was the most scholarly and accomplished Methodist minister that ever figured in the history of our Church in Mississippi. He was a native of that State, but obtained his collegiate education at South Hanover College, Indiana, and old Center College, at Danville, Ky., graduating at the latter institution. His theological training was secured at Princeton University, where, if we mistake not, he took a degree. At that time he was a Presbyterian, and expected to spend his life in the ministry of that Church; but later he discovered that he could not adhere to the teachings of Calvinism and entered the Methodist itinerancy.

Dr. Wheat possessed an intellect of surpassing brilliancy. He was an omnivorous reader, and had a memory so retentive that when he perused a volume he never forgot its contents. For a number of years he was the Professor of Greek in the University of Mississippi, and for a time also filled the Chair of Metaphysics. In the pulpit he was a star of the first magnitude. His style was unique—he had neither the presence nor the grace nor the voice of the typical orator; yet he was a speaker of marvelous power. The abandon—the far-away look—that he had when he was absorbed in his theme; the unusual gestures, somewhat awkward, but seeming to fit the man exactly; the plaintive tones that found their way direct to the heart; the rhythmic flow of monosyllabic words that a child could understand; the masterful exposition of the text; the lifelike pictures that stood vividly out, and the earnest, moving exhortations that thrilled and stirred the whole audience—who that ever sat before him in the pew can forget them?

Perhaps the most remarkable thing about Dr. Wheat as a preacher was that he fascinated alike the ignorant and the learned. Untutored countrymen sat spellbound under the witchery of his eloquence, and men like Judge J. B. Chrisman, General E. C. Walthall, and Jefferson Davis pronounced him unsurpassed in the pulpit. L. Q. C. Lamar, the South's foremost orator since the Civil War, said that there was more eloquence in the trembling of "Jack" Wheat's right hand than in all the gestures and postures of any other speaker that he had ever seen before a public assembly. After listening to his inspiring sermon on "Citizenship in Heaven" at Grenada during the session of the North Mississippi Conference in 1890, Dr. J. D. Barbee declared that no man in Southern Methodism could surpass it.

And, best of all, Dr. Wheat was a man of deep and unquestioned piety. He had the faith of a little child. His humility was as beautiful as it was remarkable. He never seemed to be conscious of his unusual gifts, or to feel that he was entitled to more than others. His character was pure gold, all the dross having been consumed in the fires of affliction. As one of his pupils who admired and loved him, we write these lines concerning this prince in Israel, whose memory deserves to be kept forever green. Never do we expect to see on earth his like again.

THE VANDERBILT CASE.

The trial of the Vanderbilt University case was taken up in the Chancery Court in Nashville, Tenn., on Monday, November 18, in the presence of a large audience. All the lawyers engaged in the suit were present, as follows: For the Church—Fitzhugh and Biggs, Percy Maddin, Harris and Harris, E. C. O'Rear, and A. B. Anderson; for the Trustees—J. J. Vertrees, I. C. Bradford, G. T. Hughes, J. M. Anderson, John Bell Keeble, C. C. Trabue, and Jordan Stokes. The reading of the original bill of the complainants and the reply of the defendants consumed over two hours each. Both Bishop Hoss and Chancellor Kirkland testified during the week. After working on the case four days, an adjournment was taken on Thursday afternoon until Monday morning, the 25th. Judge Allison stated that this was necessary since Friday was the motion day of the Court. It is the general impression that the trial will last three weeks, and possibly longer. The written testimony in the case is said to comprise between 8,000 and 10,000 pages. We notice that the Nashville papers in their reports of the proceedings refer to the Trustees as the "liberals" and the representatives of the Church as the "sectarians." Things have come to a pretty pass if a Church may not take steps to exercise a legitimate control over property that she believes to be hers, in a manner wholly free from narrowness, without being charged with "sectarianism." But this is the logical fruit of such seed-sowing as has been done about Nashville by some so-called Methodists for the past few years.

SOLDIERS, NOT ONLOOKERS, WANTED.

Persons who can see injustice done without moral indignation are to be pitied. They evidently are lacking in depth and nobility of nature. A great soul in which right is regnant, cannot keep from being stirred by the wrong-doing that it witnesses. A smiling complacency in the midst of prevailing evils is not a thing to be commended. The Christian is a soldier commissioned to aid in establishing the divine kingdom on earth—not a mere onlooker who may pass light-heartedly through life, caring little what happens to others. "We must fight, if we would reign." When death was impending and the door of eternity was about to swing open to him, Paul did not say, "I have pleased the people and have been popular where I lived and wrought," but "I have kept the faith," "I have fought a good fight."

SAYS DR. WINTON IS WRONG.

Readers of the Advocate will remember the oracular manner in which Dr. Winton claimed to be enlightening the public concerning the litigation over Vanderbilt University two or three weeks ago. Among other affirmations, he made with the greatest cock-sureness the following statement:

"Counsel for both sides agreed that the case should be made ready for trial in the October term of the Chancery Court. That term, however, lasts from October till March, and the agreement did not, of course, imply that the trial should take place in October."

Referring to this utterance, Dr. W. C. Lovett, the able Editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, says: "The attorneys of both sides of the case agreed (if we are not mistaken, the agreement was in writing) that the case should be heard in October, in time to reach the Supreme Court at the ensuing term in December. On October 17 the counsel for the Church announced ready, and were anxious to have the case heard. Dr. Winton may be right when he says that the October term of the Chancery court lasts from October till March, but he is certainly mistaken in saying that there was no agreement that the case should be heard early in October."

Which of these brethren is correct we shall not presume to say, but we have observed that when Dr. Lovett shoots he generally hits the spot, while Dr. Winton's arrows often fly wide of the mark.

WHAT THE VIRGINIA CONFERENCE DID WITH IT.

From the Raleigh Christian Advocate of November 21, we take the following:

"The rights of the laity for women met with scant favor in the Virginia Conference last week. The resolution for a commission to study the question and also a substitute offered were laid on the table by an overwhelming majority."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Miss Belle Roberts, of Franklin, La., sent us a few days since five subscriptions from Oak Ridge, La., and six from Rayville, La. She has our hearty thanks for this good work.

President C. M. Chapman, of Port Gibson Female College, writes: "We are having a good school. Girls are still coming, and the outlook is fine."

Mr. T. J. Doss, the faithful and ever present secretary of the Gueydan (La.) Sunday school is spending a few days in New Orleans, the guest of his brother, Rev. W. L. Doss, the pastor of Epworth Church.

We are indebted to Rev. M. A. Burns, our energetic pastor at Greenwood Springs, Miss., for a fine list of subscribers forwarded on the 23d inst. Brother Burns also inclosed a report from his charge, which we hope to have appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

The Thanksgiving program arranged in Jackson, Miss., provided for two union services; one in the First Presbyterian Church, with Dr. A. F. Smith as the preacher, and the other in the Capitol Street Methodist Church, with a sermon by Dr. A. F. Watkins.

Rev. S. S. Bogan, of Sicily Island, La., sends us the following announcement: "Our new church at Florence will be dedicated by Rev. Wm. Schuhle, presiding elder of the Monroe District, on Sunday morning, Dec. 1, at 11 o'clock. All former pastors are invited to be present."

Rev. P. O. Lowrey, the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Missionary, is in New Orleans helping to further the interests of the new Sunday school that was recently organized by Rev. W. W. Holmes in the down-town section of the city.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, the beloved President of Whitworth College, expects to spend a couple of days in attendance upon the session of the North Mississippi Conference. While in Greenwood, he will be the guest of relatives—Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Jones.

Rev. Robert Selby is closing the year happily at Brookhaven, Miss. More than fifty people have been received into the Church; the congregations are excellent, and the Sunday school is in a most flourishing condition. This charge will make a splendid report to the Annual Conference.

Our hustling pastor at Gilbert, La., Rev. W. L. Hunter, recently delighted the heart of the Publisher by sending eight names for our subscription files, accompanied by a check to correspond. We trust that the Advocate will re-enforce Brother Hunter in his work, and prove a weekly blessing to every home into which it finds its way in his charge.

The revival which is in progress at Algiers is increasing in interest. The sermons by Rev. W. E. Thomas are of a high order, and the song services under the leadership of Prof. R. N. Jeffreys are said to be enjoyable and helpful. Brother Booth, the pastor, is closing his second year's work in Algiers, and hopes by this meeting to bring his membership to a high plane of spirituality.

Rev. S. W. Vowell, who is in his first year on the Rural Hill Circuit (North Mississippi), has had a gracious year. He reports 21 additions, has one church building now under way in the Mineral Springs settlement, and has already finished another at Smyrna, which he stated was to be dedicated by Rev. V. C. Curtis on Thanksgiving Day. This is a fine showing for a beginner in the work of the itinerancy.

A correspondent from Greenville, Miss., who is a competent judge, in referring to Miss Daisy Davies, who recently delivered an address in that city, says: "She is about the most effective speaker I have ever listened to on the subject of missions." Everywhere that this enthusiastic worker goes, she seems to win for herself golden opinions. She is at present making a tour through the Louisiana Conference.

In making an appreciated remittance for subscriptions a few days ago, Rev. W. V. Shearer, of Sweetman, Miss., added: "I am glad to say that I shall be able to carry to the Annual Conference the best report of my ministry." This means much, for Brother Shearer has never failed any year to make a good record. He is a hard worker, and faithful effort is in all worthy undertakings the price of success.

The revival which has been in progress for the last ten days at the Louisiana Avenue Church, of this city, closed Wednesday night. Rev. J. L. Sutton, the pastor, reports that it was a successful meeting from every standpoint. The preaching of Rev. C. C. Selecman was earnest and spiritual, and was heard by large audiences. The membership generally was revived, and there were some additions to the Church.

The work at Fannin, Miss., has prospered this year under the capable direction of Rev. J. F. Campbell. He has had good revivals, and many of the members of the Church have grown spiritually. In taking care of the various interests committed to his hands, Brother Campbell has not overlooked the claims of the Advocate. We assure him of our appreciation of his efforts to circulate the Conference organ among his people.

We devote this issue of the Advocate largely to the status and work of Southern Methodism in our patronizing territory, and we shall do the same in the next two or three numbers. We think it is well for our people to be informed concerning the history, equipment, and needs of the institutions that have been established in our own field. A larger amount of space will be given to Louisiana and South Mississippi in the editions immediately following this one.

Rev. J. F. Wynn and his wife, who was Miss Pauline Gorton, of Waterproof, La., will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary on December 25, 1912. They hope to have all their children and grandchildren with them on that occasion. They lost their two oldest children. Those living are: Rev. R. H. Wynn, Joe W. Wynn, Miss Mary Wynn of Crowley, Miss Alice Wynn of New Orleans, Mrs. H. W. Rickey of Lafayette, Ala., and Mrs. E. W. Wall of Baton Rouge.

Under date of Nov. 25, Rev. J. E. Gray, of Fayette, Miss., writes as follows: "We are in great sorrow. My wife's precious mother, Mrs. W. H. Day, of Liberty, Miss., was called home on last Tuesday, the 19th inst. She was a member of the M. E. Church, South, for forty-five years, and was a good woman. A more extended notice of her life will be written later." We regret to hear of the death of this elect lady, and we extend to the bereaved our deepest sympathy.

A card from Rev. L. E. Wicht, of Washington, Miss., informs us of the marriage of Mr. Henry C. Swayne, of Yazoo City, and Miss Mary M. Allen, of Greenville, Miss. The wedding took place at the home of Mr. Wm. Swayne, with Brother Wicht officiating. This faithful pastor is winding up the second year in his present charge, and though the financial conditions are adverse in his section, he thinks his report at the Annual Conference will at least be up to the average.

Prof. E. Y. Burton, of Millsaps College, in a personal note to the Editor says: "Everything is just fine with us this year." Bishop Mouzon, in speaking at the East Oklahoma Conference a few days since, said: "Millsaps College is already beginning to weave itself into the history of Mississippi." So it is. No college in the church has a brighter future than this vigorous and growing young institution. Read the interesting story of its establishment and growth which appears upon another page.

Brother J. A. Toler, the Secretary of the fourth quarterly Conference of the McCool Circuit, North Mississippi Conference, informs us that that body unanimously adopted resolutions expressing appreciation of the pulpit ability and Christian character of Rev. N. G. Augustus, who is finishing his quadrennium on the Durant District, and commending him highly for the efficient service rendered that charge. We regret that the present crowded condition of our columns forbids the publication of these resolutions in full.

Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Henry entertained the Methodist pastors of New Orleans last Tuesday evening at a delightful luncheon. A most enjoyable evening was spent by the brethren around the comfortable fireside of the district parsonage, and each guest was made to feel that in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Henry there is dispensed a charming hospitality. The one wish of each one present was that the New Orleans pastors may be entertained similarly next year in the same parsonage, with Dr. and Mrs. Henry as hosts.

WE ARE COUNTING ON YOU!

Bring them With You to Conference:

A full list of renewals and at least two or three new subscribers. If every pastor would do this, it would make the Advocate boom, and send the Publisher and Editor home with happy hearts. Do not meet us empty-handed, brethren. The pitiful state of our exchequer urgently pleads for assistance. This is the time for every preacher to lend the Conference organ a helping hand.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, who is one of the liveliest wires in the Louisiana Conference, writes as follows: "Things are humming in Arcadia and throughout the entire Ruston District. Brother Tucker, our tireless presiding elder, is making 'a whirlwind finish' of his quadrennium. During the summer and fall, besides his regular work, he has held nine revival meetings." Brother Tucker has, indeed, magnified his office. The presiding eldership seems to fit him as it does but few men. He is both sound in the faith and zealous in its propagation.

Have you the two volumes, entitled "Methodism in Mississippi," by the Rev. John G. Jones? If not, by all means procure them at the approaching session of your Conference, where they may be obtained at the cost of $2. They tell the thrilling story of the planting of Methodism in Mississippi and Louisiana, and will kindle anew in your bosom the fires of enthusiasm. The man who is unacquainted with the history of his Church in his own State is a mossback. Wake up, brother, and inform yourself concerning the heroic pioneers of Methodism in this section.

Pontotoc will invite the North Mississippi Conference to convene there next year. Pastor Wendel states that the town papers have heartily endorsed the proposal to extend the invitation, and that the whole community is enthused over it. He affirms that there would be no scarcity of good homes to make the brethren comfortable, and that our beautiful new church there would afford all the necessary conveniences for committee work and meet fully all the other demands of the occasion. In this progressive municipality, Tupelo may find a rival that she will have to bestir herself to outstrip.

From the historic city of Vicksburg, Rev. C. W. Crisler, writes the following optimistic note: "Sunday, November 17, was a great day with us at the Crawford Street Church. The attendance at Sunday school exceeded that of any other Sabbath as far back as the records go. At the 11 o'clock preaching service, the audience was a great one—the largest that we have had since my appointment here. I have received 61 members since Conference. The future of this Church is bright. Some day it will be one of the great congregations of Southern Methodism." Brother Crisler has certainly wrought well in the Hill City of Mississippi, and he has every reason to be encouraged.

Rev. W. D. Wendel, of Pontotoc, Miss., requests us to state that, because the delay of the brethren in responding to the announcement which appeared in the Advocate concerning the orphanage car to be run over the N. O., Mobile & Chicago Railroad and the scarcity of cars at the disposal of the Company, which made it impossible for one to be had on a short notice, it was deemed best to postpone the undertaking. He yet hopes to carry the enterprise through later in the season.

Rev. A. L. Davenport, of Walnut, Miss., thinks it worth while to place the Advocate in the homes of his people, and has lately been doing some work looking to this end. We acknowledge our obligation to this stirring pastor for the service thus rendered.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS,

President of Grenada College and Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference.

SECULAR NEWS AND COMMENT.

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

It is said that the outlook for prosperity in Cuba is now brighter than ever before.

John Schrank, who recently attempted to assassinate ex-President Roosevelt, has been pronounced insane and sentenced to an asylum.

There are thirty-three members of the British House of Lords who are 80 years or more of age, and six members of the House of Commons are octogenarians.

The oldest painting in the world, an Egyptian canvas claimed to be 3500 years old, will probably be brought to America in the near future, having been purchased by an American art collector.

If there is a deficit in the United States Post Office Department this year it may be due to the amount of political matter carried by the Department free. It is estimated that it would have cost the politicians $3,250,000 to have paid postage on the matter that was carried free of charge.

Andrew Carnegie has set aside a fund for the purpose of paying a pension to ex-Presidents of the United States and their unmarried widows. He desires to pay them $25,000 a year, so that they may give the value of their experience obtained as Presidents to the general public. His object may be a worthy one, but somehow this looks to us like far-fetched philanthropy.

Obituaries.

HENRY O. ZEIGLER was born Nov. 29, 1855, and died Aug. 19, 1912. The place of his birth and the place of his death were near together in the Zeiglerville community. His entire life was spent in this community, where through business sagacity and economy he managed to amass a neat fortune. Brother Zeigler was a man of wide and useful influence. His career as a business man was unswayed by any act of dishonor or hard dealing. He was a good citizen. On political and moral issues he stood uncompromisingly on the side which in his opinion was right. He spoke out boldly against existing evils, regardless of whom it affected. For many years he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and for quite a while a steward in the Zeiglerville church. He was a loyal Methodist, and his death is a sore loss to the church. Brother Zeigler was married in 1877 to Miss Ida Smith. His widow and quite a large family of children and grandchildren mourn his death.

F. L. APPLEWHITE.

On Monday evening, Oct. 7, 1912, just as the sun went down, the soul of little FRONIE LEE, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Hatchett, of Montpelier, Miss., winged its flight back to God, who gave it. She was born Sept. 30, 1908, and for only four years and a few days was she permitted to live here, but these years and days were filled with blessings. She was such a sweet and loving child that she will long be remembered. She has gone where peace and joy rule forever. A home has been made sad and fond parents mourn their loss. We cannot bring her back, but we can go to her. Let us try not to complain since God thought it best, but let our aim be to meet her in Heaven. Let us remember that she is in the presence of Christ and has no share in pain or sorrow. May God's presence take the place of the little one, and may those who weep remember that the Savior said, "Blessed are those that mourn, for they shall be comforted." Her aunt, MRS. W. G. VAUGHN.

Brother G. W. FERGUSON, a good, true and useful man, who lived near Vicksburg, Miss., passed suddenly from earth to his home in heaven on Sept. 3, 1912. He was born in Warren County, Miss., Oct. 18, 1841, where he lived until the Heavenly Father called him to his reward on high. He had been in failing health for some time, but the end came suddenly and unexpectedly, both to his friends and the dear ones of his own home. Brother Ferguson came of one of the oldest and most substantial families of Mississippi. His life was the soul of honor and uprightness. He was converted and joined the Church at the age of 30. He lived a faithful, Christian life for nearly forty years. He lives to-day in the memory of his many friends, and in the hearts of those who loved him. He was one of the most faithful stewards of the Church I ever knew. I had the pleasure of being his pastor for two years, and I have never known a truer man to the church and his pastor than this grand old soldier of the Cross. When the gentle spirit of this good man went home the Church on earth was made poorer. Brother Ferguson was married on Dec. 3, 1875, to Miss Magie Ferguson, of Carroll County, Miss., who was a true and faithful wife, and whose patient hands ministered in fidelity to her good husband. To them four children were born: one boy, Lawrence, and three girls, Lou, Bulah and Sarah, who with their mother are left to mourn their loss. As a husband, he was kind and considerate; as a father he was patient and loving.

On September 5, 1912, surrounded by his bereaved family and a concourse of sorrowing friends, we laid his body to rest in the cemetery at Partis Chapel Church. Revs. J. W. Price, his pastor, and W. H. Saunders, assisted in the service. To the sorrowing family and other relatives our hearts go out in sympathy. My prayer is that God may comfort them in this sad hour of bereavement. J. R. JONES.

REGRET TO GIVE HIM UP.

We, the members of the fourth quarterly conference of the Topisaw (Miss.) charge, realizing that our presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, is closing his fourth year with us, hereby adopt the following resolutions:

- (1.) That we recognize Brother Leggett to be an able preacher, an efficient presiding elder, and a just and lovable executive.
- (2.) That his association with us has been pleasant, and that his visits to our homes have been both helpful and inspiring.
- (3.) That we realize our loss of him to be the gain of others, and we pray that God's richest blessings may ever abide with him.

Signed by W. D. Beacham, J. C. Hoffman, A. S. Dawson, Committee.

IN APPRECIATION OF REV. W. H. LEWIS.

Whereas, Rev. W. H. Lewis, who has been the presiding elder of the Meridian District for the past four years, according to the law and custom of our Church, will be called to another field of labor at the close of the present Conference year; and whereas, by his faithfulness and devotion to the Master's cause and by the manner in which he has discharged his duty as our presiding elder, he has endeared himself to us and won our love and highest esteem; therefore, be it resolved by the members of this, the fourth quarterly conference of the Enterprise and Stone-wall charge:

- (1.) That we hereby express our regret that Brother Lewis cannot continue with us as a presiding elder; that we unreservedly commend him for his fair and impartial rulings, for his holy and consecrated life, and for his earnest and inspiring exhortations; that we pray God's richest blessings upon him, and that we commend him to the people whom he may be called to serve as one worthy of their love and confidence.
- (2.) That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, and one sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by B. W. Lewis, S. O. Moore, E. S. Estes, T. J. Davis, R. G. Gilmore, N. M. Rogers, J. W. Zachery and H. T. Odom.

Tidings From the Field

Meridian (Miss.), Seventh Street.

Dear Brother Meek: Please say through your columns that I made a most grievous mistake (and oh! how often do I make such mistakes) when I reported the work at Seventh Avenue, Meridian, for this year, and failed to mention the work of Dr. C. W. Campbell of this city. He preached for me several times while I was out in meetings and, according to reports, his preaching was of the highest order. On account of sickness in his family he was unable to do much pastoral work, but he did much in holding things together while I was away. As long as Dr. Campbell remains in the Church militant he will have a warm welcome at Seventh Avenue. May the Lord bless him in his declining years.—J. A. Wells.

Kentwood, La.

Methodism at Kentwood is making some progress. We have recently closed a revival meeting, in which we were assisted by Rev. A. W. Turner, our Louisiana Conference Evangelist. Brother Turner came to us about the first of the month, and for ten days a strenuous effort was made to revive our people. The evangelist soon endeared himself to all by his carefully prepared and soul-stirring sermons. He is a preacher who has the happy faculty of making old things new and interesting. Some of the questions which we are inclined to pass over as unworthy of our time, he handled in a very interesting and convincing way. He discussed much the excuses that men out of the church are accustomed to make, and we dare say that all of this class who heard him are ready to bury forever such excuses. His sermon on Repentance was forcible and, in our judgment, one that needs to be preached all over our country. Brother R. N. Jeffery led our choir. He came to us a few days ahead of Brother Turner. He soon convinced our people that he was thoroughly qualified for this work. His solos were animating and touching. No doubt in response to his gospel songs many heartstrings that had long been unstrung were tightened and made to vibrate again in unison with heaven's music. During the meeting nearly all of our people who attended renewed their obligations to the Lord, and many who were out of the Church responded to the proposition that they would renounce sin. We received two by baptism, five by vows, and eleven by certificate. During the year the church here has made some material improvements. Our building has been repaired and made very comfortable. The ladies have looked well after the needs of the parsonage. All in all, there are many things encouraging to Methodism in this field.—R. S. Walton.

New Albany, Miss.

We have had a fine year, and will be able to make the best financial report in the history of the charge. About forty have been added to the Church, and everything runs smoothly and prosperously. Harmony prevails among all the churches of New Albany. We had a great revival here this year, and the present outlook is very encouraging. We lost a good Sunday school superintendent last week when Brother G. L. Jones and his estimable family left us for El Paso, Texas, where they will make their future home. Health conditions prompted their removal. The whole town is sad beyond expression over their departure. Brother Jones was appreciated by the church, town and community as few men were ever appreciated anywhere. They knew him and loved him deeply for his sincerity, candor, great-hearted generosity, faithfulness, honesty, and uprightness in life and character. He has always stood for the highest and best in private and public life. Not only have New Albany and his own county and church suffered irreparable loss in his removal to the far Western country, but also the North Mississippi Conference and his native and beloved State, which he has represented both in the lower and upper branches of her law-making Assembly with such conspicuous ability and fidelity. He was a "plumed knight" in the royal ranks of truth and reform; always battling for the honor, good name and progress of his town, State, and humanity. He is a golden-hearted Christian gentleman whose virtues will shine long after he has ceased to speak and live. He also served his Church by representing his district in many an Annual Conference, and he was chosen a delegate to the General Conference that met in Asheville, N. C., two years ago. His counsel in Church or State was thoughtful, wise, and progressive. No trappings or compromises, or pleas of expediency, or decoy of personal aggrandisement, material advantage or fear ever swerved him from the living truth. With him, thinking is a birthright, life a sacrament, duty a privilege, and opportunity the call of God. In the prohibition forces of Mississippi he was a Lord Chatham, an Oliver Cromwell, a knight of valiant strength—firm, intrepid soul, whose sword never turned back when it thrust the mailed casement of the enemy. He is a lawyer of ability, who lives on a high plane of moral character and integrity. Oh, for more like him!—L. M. Lipscomb.

HURRAH FOR INDIANOLA!

Dear Doctor: We observed yesterday as Mission Day, took collection for all claims, and more than raised the assessments. I think I can see forty per cent excess. It is wonderful what our people have done under all the circumstances. Our planters expected to be devoured by the boll weevil when arranging for their crops, and then we had the overflow, but out of it all the good Lord has delivered us. Our good people feel thankful.

At the eleven o'clock service Miss Lee Grider, one of the finest women in Southern Methodism, read a paper on our obligations to our worn-out preachers that thrilled and stirred our people. When we took the collection there were five fiftys put down just about as quick as Secretary M. T. Davis could write them. And there was one twenty-five and one fifteen, and many smaller amounts until we went far beyond the assessment. And some of our best people were not there.

What a change a few minutes can make in a preacher's feelings. I feared that conditions were going to be such as would prevent my being able to raise the assessments (a thing I am thankful to say I have never failed to do); but our record these good people are determined shall not be broken at Indianola, especially as this is their first year as a station.

I hope to see you soon, Doctor, at Greenwood, my old home and pastoral charge, where I had the honor of leading the first successful whiskey fight ever waged in Leflore County. Some of the best friends I have live in Greenwood and that county. Our Conference may expect an unusual hospitality. To Tupelo, I suppose, we will go next time. I shall stand for Tupelo as they have stood for us.

fer personally with the Committee

The Conference Minutes.

Please do not overlook the small item of the assessment for the Minutes. It amounts to but little for each charge, but it should be paid in full. The price of material and the cost of labor make the small assessment scarcely adequate for the expense of printing and sending out the Minutes. It takes about three weeks of hard labor to prepare the copy, read the proofs, and send out the Minutes after they are printed. I do not mind the labor, but I do protest against paying out of my own empty pocket some $20 to $25 for the privilege of doing the work. Please look after this small item. Faithfully,
ROBT W. VAUGHAN,

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

On October the 20th the Second Church, New Orleans, observed Rally Day with a splendid program, Rev. J. M. Henry, the presiding elder, and Mr. J. G. Cronbach, the superintendent, being the principal speakers. A splendid program of vocal and instrumental music was also rendered, and certificates of promotion and reward were given. Under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. W. E. Thomas, the debt of $1200 on this church has been paid, off this year, Mr. Chas. Adams, one of the old and most liberal members, giving $1000 of the amount. In addition to this, $200 has been raised to do some needed repairing.

At the noon hour of each working day the official force of the International Sunday School Association gather in the Secretary's office in Chicago for a brief season of prayer, at which time the different State Secretaries and the field force at large are remembered. No less an authority than the great Apostle to the Gentiles said, "brethren pray for us," and nothing could be more brotherly than these leaders praying for the men on the firing line. At least one of our presiding elders thus daily remembers the pastors of his district. If "more things are wrought by prayer than the world dreams of," then our Sunday school workers, from General Secretary down to the humblest teacher, should be remembered at a throne of grace. Let us pray more and criticize the shortcomings of our co-workers less.

The best record of Home Department work that we have found comes from the Felicity Street Church, New Orleans, over fifty members having been enrolled since the department's organization last year under the pastorate of Rev. W. W. Holmes. In addition to the splendid workers' weekly council of the united school, the superintendent and visitors of this Home Department, composed of Mesdames Carrie Porter, Virginia Wakefield, F. B. Sandige, R. F. Harrell, George Pagot, S. J. Faris, and James Bell, and Miss Alice Morse, meet every quarter and give in their reports and talk over their work in detail together. The members are regularly visited and supplied with literature, and their reports gathered. It affords the members great joy to get their new Quarterlies, and their offerings are double the cost of their literature. They have a vital interest in the work of the Sunday school, and study their lessons regularly. The Home Department is considered a great asset to the church, and the pastor, Rev. C. A. Battle, who is a member of our Conference Sunday School Board, thinks a church not near so efficient without one. What would it mean to have all the people in our country, who believe in the Bible, studying its divine truths just thirty minutes a week? And this is all that it takes to be a member of the Home Department.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

The State Sunday School Association has announced a series of institutes at Meridian, Hattiesburg, Brookhaven, and Jackson. Some of the finest Sunday school workers of the United States will be in attendance. It is to be hoped all Sunday school workers in reach of these points will attend. Reduced railroad rates and entertainment have been provided.

At our last Conference at Meridian, there was reported a decrease in our Sunday school enrollment of 1064. Every one knew this was an error. Even the Bishop commented on the decrease in the various departments of church work. During that year several new schools had been reported to the Board, and a large increase in attendance by several others. The statistics were a painful surprise. Sunday school statistics have been a problem for many years. The General Sunday School Board has issued a ruling on Sunday school statistics. Coming from headquarters, it is authoritative. In a few days a resume of this ruling will be mailed to every pastor in the Conference. May we ask your earnest attention to it and your compliance with its suggestions? It will save much confusion in our own Conference and in the office of the General Sunday School Board.

We have just received the record of two of our Sunday schools for the year now closing. Both of these schools are organized and graded after the standard adopted by our Church. They will bear studying. One of them is on a mission and at a small church. Eighteen months ago systematic work was begun. They have had to increase the size of the Sunday school room, and report an attendance equal to that of one of the largest churches in the city where it is situated. The other school began its grading three years ago. It then reported an average attendance of only about 125 students on Sunday, and an enrollment of about 300 in all departments, with only fifteen officers and teachers. A few weeks ago this same school reported an enrollment in all departments of over 525, with forty officers and teachers. During this time the population of the town had decreased rather than increased.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

"If you have faith, preach it; if you have doubts, bury them; if you have joy, share it; if you have sorrow, bear it."

"Try the New Graded Lessons. They will give to the individual pupil the true perspective of the needs of the world, physical, mental, and spiritual."

Brother Lagrone writes of his Wesley Adult Bible Class banquet on Nov. 15th, the first of the kind ever held in Greenville, that city of many banquets of many kinds, and of its impress on the general public. His Sunday school is at present the largest in the history of our church in that city.

At a recent Elementary luncheon the topic for the hour was, "The Elementary Garden." The toasts were a "Snow-drop — The Beginners;" "A Daisy — the Primaries;" "Johnny Jump-up — the Juniors;" and "The Gardeners — the Teachers." A delightfully helpful, as well as beautiful, Sunday school hour resulted.

Several adult classes are getting out typewritten or mimeograph bulletins to be distributed during the class session. They do not feel able to have these printed, and take this means of placing in the hands of each pupil a clever little bulletin of class activities and personals, with good quotations and extracts from Bible study authorities.

Rev. S. L. Pope's Business Men's Bible Study Class at Itta Bena is doing a splendid work. Their stationery is attractive, and they are making their influence felt not only in the church, but throughout the whole community. Mrs. Pope is doing equally well with her class of ladies, and these two classes rank high in our Conference adult class list.

THE QUALITY OF TRACTOR FARM WORK.

A good oil tractor will do the farm work better than it can be done with horses or mules. It will get a larger crop and of a better quality than if the work had been done with mules.

There are good reasons for this. The plowing can be done deep, and in that short time which is best for doing it. The ground may be plowed and pulverized at the same time if one wishes it. Or it may be plowed, pulverized and planted at one time.

One may rush that important task of seeding to a speedy close. The tractor may be hitched to a combination of stalk crusher, a double disc harrow, a drill and a smoothing harrow. This outfit may be rushed over the land continuously day and night until the seeding is all done; one trip over a field with it finishing the entire process.

The two great factors which make tractor power better than animal power are this adaptability and its untiring endurance. It is not affected or hindered by the heat. All day long it toils in the hottest weather that blows; uninjured and unfaltering, pulling its full load as usual. And this in a day that would kill the hardest mule. And at the end of the day it is ready to go on in the same way throughout the night.

The Hart-Parr Company, 330R Lawler Street, Charles City, Iowa, have some very interesting literature regarding the advantage of using their Oil Tractors. They will be glad to send this on receipt of a request from you.

A Rousing Appetite Is a King's Delight

And What is of Greater Interest, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Enable the Stomach to Digest Whatever is Eaten.

We all like to see the way healthy children devour their meals. Would we could all do the same! Eating ought to be a delight. It is one of life's chief enjoyments. People who cannot relish a good meal are apt to fall into those ill-tempered moods from which they view the world as a sorry place to live in. So let us learn to employ the best means of harmonizing our existence and thus extract from our daily grind all the pleasure there is to be had. This we can do by keeping our stomachs in prime, active working order.

A majority of people have come to know the blessings which an occasional use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets confer upon the stomach. They are unquestionably the most popular remedy known for the reason that dyspepsia is the national disease, and these wonderful little tablets have long since acquired a national reputation as a thoroughly reliable and efficient cure for all form of dyspepsia and indigestion.

No matter how great the excess of food taken into the stomach, one or two of these tablets will digest every particle of it. A package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets should always be in the house. Many a person has saved himself from a serious attack of acute indigestion by using them after heavy meals, such as are eaten Christmas, New Year's, Thanksgiving and other holidays and festive seasons.

After attending banquets, late suppers, heavy fancy dinners, after-theatre parties, etc., where one has dined sumptuously and luxuriantly, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets should invariably be used, as they digest the food perfectly and completely, and prevent all possibility of dyspepsia, which, without their use, is more than likely to ensue.

Americans are exceedingly fond of the good things of life, and there is apt to be great excess of eating, and the only way to overcome its bad effects on the stomach is to employ a powerful and efficient digestive such as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which always insure a good digestion.

Echoes from Missionary Institute at Holly Springs, Miss.

The Institute and District Meeting of the Holly Springs District was held on the 12th and 13th of November, in Holly Springs, that being the most central, easily accessible, and of the greatest altitude of any point on the railroad. As all needed clear heads as well as warm hearts for the successful conduct of the work, the latter item was a necessary condition.

The District Secretary, Mrs. T. J. Binford, presided throughout, guiding the thought and action to a successful culmination. The morning devotional was marked by a service of consecration, so sweetly spiritual that it gave the key-note to the entire meeting. Miss Knapp, our charming young deaconess, whose winning personality was felt by all, said that it had been her pleasure to attend four of these Institutes, and this was the first one preceded by a consecration service, and it gained her commendation.

A talk by Miss Knapp, reports, and papers, were features of the first day's session, as Miss Davies did not arrive until the late afternoon. Her address at night was to a small and, presumably, select audience; that is, if a few in numbers denotes exclusiveness.

At the recent convention of the Christian Church in Louisville, there were 22,000 delegates present; eight from the Hawaiian Islands, two from Russia, marking the zeal for the cause; while in a Christian community in Mississippi there were twelve delegates, and the rest of the congregation conspicuous by their absence or scarcity. It may be said that a cause, like a prophet, is not without honor save in its own vicinity.

The delegates were delightfully entertained in a few of the charming homes of this historic old city, still full of the landmarks of the olden days as well as its scars of the ravages of the War.

The District Secretary and the only Conference officer present were lovingly and charmingly entertained in one of the ante-bellum mansions, so full of the spirit of the "ancient regime." Now it is the home; a home in the truest sense, of former State Senator W. A. Belk and his hospitable family, gracefully presided over by the charming wife and the talented daughters.

It would be advisable always to have a shorthand reporter present whenever Miss Davies makes her characteristic, sparkling addresses, replete with wit, wisdom, and spiritual power. Prof. Consley of the High School granted her the privilege of speaking to the student body. The bright eyes and interested manner of the intelligent auditors showed that the seed were sown in good ground, and in years to come missionary ranks may be recruited from these attentive hearers.

Miss Binford's report of the District was good. Financially it led the districts composing the Conference. The delegates were all enthused by the power and pathos of Miss Davies' talks, as well as by her spiritual appeals, and all promised better work in the future under the influence of these spiritual utterances. A. C. Y.

Plea for a More Careful Use of the Bulletins.

The Council has wisely arranged that Conference press superintendents and the same officer in the auxiliaries shall handle the bulletin exclusively; thus disseminating the fresh sparkling news it contains directly among the societies. Where an auxiliary has not elected a press superintendent, (we hope this condition will not obtain in a single instance this year), a copy is sent every month to the president of that auxiliary, and she is expected to take the place temporarily of the superintendent. But is this the end of it, and is the circulation to stop here? No, indeed! The idea is that each superintendent shall carefully read every item in the Bulletin and be allowed a short time at the meetings to present those items to her society. With just a little tact, some preparation, and much prayer, how effective she can make these few moments allotted to her! But you may say, "Even then she reaches only a few." True enough. Then comes her duty to carry the information further through that one avenue which reaches nearly everybody—the secular press.

Why should it be so hard to get our women to take up this press work, when the way is so plain and simple? She need not ask for a column—a few paragraphs wisely chosen would be much better. A diploma from a school of journalism is not at all necessary to fill the position. Take one or two interesting, helpful paragraphs from the Bulletin, and it is always full, add to that a few words about the work of your local auxiliary, or the work of some officer, and there is the complete matter for one week's secular press work. Isn't it simple?

May God be with us when the time for the election of officers comes, and impress each auxiliary with the importance of having a press superintendent of its very own.

ON THE CARE OF OUR GIRLS.

By Mrs. W. H. Vaughan.

The girl problem is a great problem, and to care for them is a problem among problems, and one hard to solve. The very word care in connection with it should not mean merely oversight, but carry with it the deeper, tenderer meaning of the word solicitude. In one sense it also means cure, protection. We all have heard the old adage: "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." Cures are not always effected. Protection, therefore, is better. Every home now being erected for the benefit of the working girl contains more than an ounce of prevention. When the ounce of prevention fails, which it sometimes does, then the pound of cure gets in its work, and our mission homes and rescue homes come in, and become more than a necessity. It is a great work. The greatest factor in the care of our girls is the individual woman in her attitude towards her neighbor. If, in all ages, women had been half as solicitous to care for the erring girl, as she was to apologize for and cover up the faults of the man, would there have been a white slave traffic?

The Best Cough Syrup is Easily Made at Home

Costs Little and Acts Quickly.
Money Refunded If It Fails.

This recipe makes a pint of cough syrup, and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It stops obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—in a hurry, and is splendid for sore lungs, asthma, croup, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this recipe, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe. This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equalled. Its low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FROM THE FAR WEST.

Dear Dr. Meek: The readers of the New Orleans Christian Advocate have already learned that I have been transferred to the Los Angeles Conference and stationed at Santa Ana, California. We left McComb City early in the morning of Oct. 26th, and arrived in Santa Ana about noon on the 30th, having traveled continuously for four days and nights. The distance from here to McComb City is 2500 miles, and we made the trip without the slightest mishap or inconvenience.

Our train stopped two hours at San Antonio, which gave us an opportunity to see a little of the Metropolis of West Texas. Twenty-four hours later we reached El Paso, where our train made a stop of three hours. In company with several passengers, we took in the main part of the city on the street cars and went over the Rio Grande into Mexico to the city of Juarez, where we purchased some little souvenirs of our trip to Mexico. While in Juarez we were stopped by some Mexican soldiers who questioned us closely. I suppose that they suspected our party of being spies. On the return trip the car stopped on the boundary line between the United States and Mexico, and one of Uncle Sam's soldiers entered the car and slowly walked through, closely scrutinizing every passenger. Following him, a United States inspector came through and asked everybody this question, "Have you anything from Mexico?" It looked for a while like we were going to get into trouble, but we came through all right. When we got back into United States territory, we felt that we were perfectly willing to stay out of Mexico till after the war is over.

From El Paso, on through New Mexico and Arizona, there is little to be seen but vast stretches of barren plains and ranges of rugged hills and mountains. The things on the trip which impressed me most were the vastness of this Western country, the uniform courtesy and kindness of the railroad men, and the push and hustle of these Western people. Everybody out here is in a hurry.

Santa Ana is a beautiful place. The streets are all paved, and the town has a splendid car system. There are twenty-three churches, six public schools, a commercial college, and a conservatory of music. Two large sugar-beet factories, several canning establishments, and other similar enterprises are also located here.

There are no saloons, and I have heard no talk about blind tigers and gambling dens. I am told that the population is about 12,000. Southern Methodism is well entrenched here, though the M. E. Church is stronger than ours. We have a beautiful church building erected five years ago at a cost of $25,000, and a splendid two-story parsonage, which is nicely furnished, and which is valued at $4500.00. There is no indebtedness on either structure. We have 390 members and the pastor's salary is $1500. The next session of the Los Angeles Conference will be held here.

I am delighted with California, so far. Conditions out here are different from what they are back East, but I believe that, by the help of the Lord, I will be able to adjust myself to the situation as I find it. I hated to leave my friends in Mississippi, and did not know how dear to me my native State was, till I came away. There will always be a warm place in my heart for the preachers in the Mississippi Conference; I love them all. Nineteen of the best years of my life were spent with them in the service of the Master. I was never a deadbeat in the Conference—I always did the best I could in every charge that I served. It will, perhaps, not be out of place to give just here a brief review of my work in the Mississippi Conference: I was admitted on trial in December, 1893, and finished my work there at McComb City, on Wednesday night, Oct. 23, 1912. During the intervening years, I served eight pastoral charges, built six churches, and either completed, repaired, or paid debts on seven others. I built two parsonages, and improved or paid debts on four others. I always left every parsonage in a better condition than I found it. I raised for all purposes $43,804.55, and received 1238 persons into the Church. For my services in the Mississippi Conference, I received $12,484.20—an average salary of $693.56 per year, or a monthly salary of $57.80. I shall never forget the faithful men and women in the various charges that I served, who stood by me and held up my hands while I tried to do the Lord's work. May God bless them all!

Now, Mr. Editor, I will write you a short article occasionally, that my friends back in Mississippi may hear from me through the Advocate.

LOUISIANA METHODISM.

By Rev. R. W. Vaughan.

No page in the history of religious movements is more inspiring or divulges a greater degree of genuine heroism than the account of the planting of Methodism in Louisiana. Bowman, Winans, Hobbs, Moore, Menefee, Drake, Lasley, Axley, Hininger, Ford, Nolley, Shrock, Hewitt, Nixon, and a score of others, must ever stand among the names of the most self-sacrificing, heroic band of workers who have wrought for the establishment of God's Kingdom on the earth. Suffering untold privations, plunging through dismal swamps, swimming swollen streams, beating their way through trackless forests and over measureless prairies, traveling afoot, by horseback, and in canoes, these dauntless heroes carried the banner of the Cross and planted deep the seed of Methodism throughout the State of Louisiana. The debt of gratitude that we of this generation owe to the heroic struggles of these Apostles of Methodism can never be overestimated. We are fortunate in having in our midst to-day a man who unites the names and bears in his veins the mingled blood of two of these greatest heroes—William Winans Drake, our popular and successful pastor at Baton Rouge.

After the sending of Elisha Bowman to New Orleans in 1805, the earliest attempt made to plant Methodism in Louisiana, and after several intermittent attempts to gain a foothold in that godless city, Benjamin M. Drake reported "23 white, and 60 colored members" in 1826. In 1813 there were but 89 white members and 10 colored members in the entire State. The territory occupied in Louisiana was included in the organization of the Mississippi Conference at the residence of Newitt Vick, the founder of the city of Vicksburg, on November 1, 1813. In 1816 the membership in Louisiana was "130 whites and 32 colored." So discouraging was the prospect that "at one time it was suggested in the Bishop's cabinet that it might be best to withdraw the preachers and appropriate their labors to a more promising field; and the subject was gravely discussed." But Ashley Hewett, who with "one more," had bravely held the ground in Louisiana for many years, interceded. "Was it sound policy," he pleaded, "to lose what little ground had been gained by so much privation and toil? What would become of those few sheep in the wilderness?"

The Louisiana Annual Conference was organized in Opelousas in 1846. The membership for the State at the time of organization was 4715 white and 3378 colored members. The first session of the Conference was held January 6, 1847, and was presided over by Bishop Joshua Soule. This Conference was held at Opelousas, and 51 preachers were appointed to the various circuits within the State. There has been a steady, though not rapid, growth since the organization. The gain in membership the first decade was 2891. From 1856 to 1866 there was a loss of 1653. This was during the war period and is accounted for by the loss of 2883 colored members—there was an actual gain of 1230 white members. From 1866 to 1876 the records show a gain of 4159, after having cut off the entire colored membership by giving them a separate organization in 1872. This was a most remarkable gain, considering the fact that this was the Reconstruction period and that the entire country was in a state of demoralization and excitement. From 1876 to 1886 the gain was only 1795. From 1886 to 1896 we record our largest gain of 13,419. This large gain is partly accounted for by the addition of the Baton Rouge District, with a membership of 5769. There was a gain, aside from this added district, of 7650, which is the largest increase for any one decade in the history of Methodism in Louisiana. From 1896 to 1906 there was a gain of 3275. We have gained since 1906 1324 members, thus bringing our present membership to 33,803.

From the beginning Louisiana has been considered a difficult field for Methodism. "Hard, unyielding Louisiana" was the characterization our early forefathers gave it. The occupation of our territory by Spain and France, the early settlement of the rich alluvial section constituting the southern portion of the State by people from these countries, and the subsequent grant by which large areas of the finest lands in our State were given to these overlords, created a state of landlordism as obnoxious as the baronetcy of England. These people were Roman Catholics. They spoke the French language with a mixture of the Spanish, and this condition of things presented a barrier almost insurmountable. The obstacles were so difficult that for years the Methodists were the only Protestant people who attempted to occupy the field. While there are yet some Parishes where we have no churches and where the evangelical faith is not preached, for the most part, the Methodist Church is fairly well entrenched, and some of our most devoted and loyal people live in South Louisiana. The hills and piney woods of North Louisiana presented early a fertile field for Methodist propaganda, and we soon had a strong, vigorous church in that section.

Louisiana can justly be proud of the preachers she has produced, and the eminent men she has given to the Church. Three of Methodism's strongest Bishops came from Louisiana—McTyeire, Keener, and Parker. A number of Southern Methodism's most eloquent and effective preachers are Louisiana products. We proudly boast that to-day our venerable Dr. C. W. Carter stands unexcelled as a pulpit orator by any man in the connection. We point with pride to Fitz Parker, Henry Carre, Thomas Carter and Dr. Frank Parker, who have been called out of our ranks to occupy some of the most prominent and responsible positions in our great Church.

For many years our Conference has maintained two denominational schools—Centenary, for boys, and Mansfield, for girls. These schools have done a great work. Some of the leading citizens and noblest products of Louisiana manhood proudly claim Centenary as their Alma Mater. From this historic old school we have secured some of our most effective and useful preachers. After several years' debate Centenary College was changed from Jackson to Shreveport, where it is now growing into a flourishing college under the efficient presidency of Dr. F. R. Hill. Mansfield College has recently been greatly strengthened by adjusting the indebtedness on an easy payment plan, and under the capable presidency of Prof. R. E. Bobbitt, is attaining a measure of success not known for years. To these two historic and deserving institutions our people should give their strongest and heartiest support.

After four years of hard struggle the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage was established under the management of Rev. C. C. Weir, its founder. The building was completed and occupied in 1909, and has rapidly grown to be one of the most prosperous and deserving institutions of its kind in the country. There are now 77 children sheltered and cared for by this Home, and it has become an institution of great popularity in the Conference and State.

The prospect for the growth and advancement of the Methodist Church in Louisiana was never brighter, though the problems that we confront were never greater. In an era of great prosperity, with the development of the unequalled resources of our great State assuming unparalleled proportions, with the great Panama Canal soon to be opened, and with the great advantage which that water-way must bring to Louisiana, our opportunities have rarely been equalled. The call was never louder for strong, capable men to engage in this great work. Our people should be alert and aggressive. Our preachers should be watchful and vigilant. The great, peculiar note of Methodism should be sounded forth in no uncertain tones. We need not only to hold our own, but occupy newer and larger fields, for even yet a large portion of our legitimate territory is unpossessed. We have 240,000 French people, 60,000 Italians, and large numbers of other aliens and foreigners are spreading all over our territory. It is authoritatively said that there are 120,000 people in New Orleans alone that claim allegiance to no Church.

In view of our past and the inspiring heritage that is ours; conscious of our present advantageous position and aware of the vast work needed to be done; with renewed consecration, we should redouble our energies and press our cause in every direction, until we can say that the Methodist banner floats in triumph in every city, town and village throughout the length and breadth of our great State.

Ruston, La.

THEN AND NOW, 1860—1912.

By Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D.

When I joined the Louisiana Conference in 1861, there were 84 preachers' names on the roll. Only two of those names are on the roll now. To-day there are 175 names on the roll. Then there were 115 local preachers; to-day there are only 53. Then the membership of the Methodist Church was 7761; now that membership is reported to be

BISHOP E. D. MOUZON,
Who Will Preside Over the Louisiana
Conference.

33,564. Then the number of Sunday schools was 109, Sunday school scholars 4189, teachers 747; now there are 309 schools, 23,461 scholars, and 2279 teachers. Then the number of circuits and stations was 72; now there are 141. Then the number of parsonages was 18; now there are 119. Then the amount paid to preachers was $44,338, an average of $528; the amount paid last year was $112,748, an average of $644. Then, widows, orphans and Bishops received $2030; last year they received $8089. Then the Mission Board received $9,500, an average of $1.22 per member; last year the two Boards received $11,778, an average of 35 cents per member. The Sunday schools received then $2604; last year $12,101. Then church buildings and repairs cost $48,104; last year they cost $41,281.

In the old days there were fewer objects for which money was collected, and comparing those with the same objects to-day, we do not seem to have advanced very much. In 1860 the members paid an average of $5.70 per member for the support of the ministry; last year they paid $3.36 per member. If we take into consideration the fact that there are quite a number of causes for which we take collections—causes that had no existence fifty years ago—the comparison is not so depressing. There are many hopeful signs that give us encouragement when we look toward the future. To my mind the most hopeful sign is the large number of earnest, energetic, enthusiastic, consecrated young preachers in our Conference. If these continue faithful to their vows and loyal to Jesus Christ, the future progress of the Church is assured.

Natchitoches, La.

It is well-nigh impossible for any event of importance to take place in the United States without Methodism having some connection with it. President-elect Woodrow Wilson is a Presbyterian, but he once taught in the Wesleyan University at Middletown, Conn., a Methodist school, and his three daughters are said to be Goucher girls (another Methodist institution).

THE CORRELATION OF CENTENARY AND MANSFIELD COLLEGES.

By Rev. M. Carter Holt, Secretary of the Louisiana Conference Board of Education.

The auspicious openings of Centenary and Mansfield colleges cause great rejoicing to those who love the educational institutions of our Conference. Prospects are bright for splendid achievements during this scholastic year. This is especially gratifying, as the Louisiana Conference is planning a forward movement, having adopted at its last session a plan for the correlation of Centenary and Mansfield Colleges, as the following extract from the Minutes will show:

"The time has come for an educational advance. Our institutions should be unified and strengthened. Therefore the Board recommends the correlation of Centenary and Mansfield Colleges and presents the following plan as possible and practicable:

"Let the Annual Conference of 1911 appoint a committee of five Methodists, two of whom shall be lawyers, to draw up a charter, which shall include both Mansfield and Centenary Colleges; said charter to be secured under the general laws of the State, or by special act of the Legislature of 1912, or by amendments to charter or charters. Plan to be determined by the committee. The draft of the charter to be reported to the Annual Conference of 1912 for action.

"The committee of five shall be composed of P. M. Brown, R. E. Bobbitt, H. T. Liverman, P. M. Welsh and M. C. Holt. This committee of five shall be restricted and instructed as follows:

"1. The name shall be the Centenary-Mansfield College of the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"2. The system shall include Centenary College, for men, which shall remain at Shreveport; Mansfield College for women, which shall remain at Mansfield, and such other schools as the Conference shall deem necessary to establish in the future.

"3. The Board of Trustees shall consist of not less than 24, and not more than 40 members, four-fifths of whom shall be members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; one-half shall be laymen and one-half ministers.

"4. One-half of the first board shall be elected by the present board of Centenary and one-half by the present board of Mansfield, from their own membership. The boards shall elect their trustees in groups of four, so that the term of one-fourth of their body shall expire in one year, one-fourth in two years, one-fourth in three years and one-fourth in four years. Thereafter the trustees shall be elected for terms of four years. The board shall nominate new members annually to fill vacancies and the Annual Conference shall elect.

"5. The Board of Trustees shall elect the president of the system, vice-presidents for Centenary and Mansfield, other officers and teachers. The teachers are to be nominated by the president. They shall have power to remove officers and teachers for cause.

"6. The Board of Trustees shall elect two Executive Committees of five each, one for Centenary and one for Mansfield, to attend to the local or special interests of each.

"7. The Board of Trustees shall make an annual financial report for each institution to the Annual Conference.

"8. The Board of Trustees of Centenary College and the Legal Conference of the Louisiana Annual Conference are instructed to convey to the Board of Trustees of Centenary-Mansfield College all property, money, notes, etc., which they now hold belonging to Centenary and Mansfield Colleges.

"9. The 'Trust Clause' shall be inserted in the charter."

This committee will submit a charter, in accordance with above instructions, to the Conference at its approaching session in December, and expects hearty support and co-operation from its members.

First Methodist Church, Monroe, La.

This plan is in line with the spirit of the age, as this is a period of consolidation. Especially is this true in the commercial world, where large corporations are formed for greater efficiency, to successfully meet competition and to carry out large enterprises.

This policy agrees with the plan of the General Board of Education, which is urging closer relations between all our educational institutions. Their plan is to have a complete system from Academies, through Colleges, to Universities. To this end they are grading all institutions and requiring them to maintain certain standards. They have graded our "Colleges." Do you know where they place them?

This plan will unify our educational enterprises. It is a well known fact that friction has existed in the past between adherents of the two colleges and that there has been a conflict of interests which has been detrimental to both institutions. By this correlation, friction would be eliminated, as their interests would be identical; for one Board of Trustees and one President would direct the affairs of both institutions, and they would be directly responsible for the success of both colleges.

Correlation will make for economy of administration. One President would be employed for both Colleges. The Vice Presidents, in addition to the duties of their office, would do the work of full professors. Professors, in certain departments, would probably be employed to teach in both colleges. This, too, would enable the Board to employ specialists to a greater extent than under the present arrangement. When a man went out to canvass for students, he would represent both colleges and thus save the traveling expenses and salary of one man. One catalogue would be gotten out, thus effecting a considerable saving. Money would also be saved in the purchase of supplies, as they would be purchased in larger quantities.

This plan will inspire confidence in the future of our Colleges, and it will make for stability and permanency. It will put them on a firmer financial basis, as it will show property worth at least $150,000, with liabilities of about $30,000, most of which is guaranteed by the Louisiana Annual Conference, and the balance will be paid out of the Shreveport tax. This would relieve the Colleges of the burden of financing their debts.

Several things are imperatively needed:

1. The rallying of the Methodists—ministers and laymen—to our Colleges, arousing an educational spirit, and aiding in the securing of students.
2. The securing of the assessments in full. The Board of Education will need every dollar to meet its financial obligations and plans for the future.
3. Would that all Methodists were impressed with the importance of Christian education, and would awake to their responsibilities to the coming generation!

THE CENTENARY COLLEGE OF LOUISIANA.

By President Felix R. Hill.

On Sept. 18, 1912, the Centenary College of Louisiana entered upon its fifth scholastic year at Shreveport, which promises in many respects to be the best and most satisfactory since the establishment of the school here. These years just passed were marked by trial and difficulty; and yet we feel that God is with us, and that our labor has not been altogether in vain.

Centenary opened for its first term in September, 1908. Previous to that time the now sainted Wm. Lander Weber was engaged busily in making ready for that opening. With a number of the trustees and friends of the school, I was present on that memorable day. I can never forget the hopeful and enthusiastic look upon the face of my friend, as he entered formally upon the work of his presidency. He was in the early prime of manhood, about forty years of age, and apparently in good health. Little did we know, or did he suspect, that the seeds of consuming disease were within, and that his life-term, alas! would be so soon shortened. Centenary was dear to his heart, and he did noble and enduring work, in getting the school well organized and started, and in adjusting it to surroundings and conditions in its new home. He was unable to continue actively in the work but little more than a year after the first opening. In the autumn of 1909 his health failed. He could not keep at his post but three or four weeks of the entire fall term. Of course the school suffered. It felt the absence of a clear head and guiding hand in its affairs. Many of the students failed to return after the Christmas holidays, and the consequent financial loss was a cause of serious embarrassment.

In January, 1910, I was called suddenly to Shreveport, and urged to take temporary charge of the institution. Feeble in health myself, and with no previous experience whatever in conducting a school, I consented, most reluctantly, to serve as president only for a few months. The thought was not in my mind that I would be kept in the place for a succession of years. My work has not satisfied me, and my service has been imperfect, but most earnestly have I endeavored to serve the Church and my Master in this very responsible charge. Some encouragement has come to me. At the beginning of the spring term of 1910 there were less than sixty members of the student body. Since then, the enrollment has gone as high as more than twice that number.

We need more room for Centenary. Our one building is a stately and commanding structure; but we have no adequate accommodations for our laboratories; and with rooms needed for recitations, for teachers and their families, in addition to culinary and dining departments, our quarters are indeed limited. As matters now are, an enrollment of one hundred almost fills the school; we confidently expect much more than that number before the beginning of the spring term. I believe that with another building and larger equipment, it will be easy to secure two hundred students at Centenary, before the opening in September, 1913. Can we have these? Let the Methodists of Louisiana answer. Much, very much, depends on the preachers. The work at Shreveport has been difficult ever since the school was planted here. The change from Jackson, La., to Shreveport gave grief to many good people. There are still those who, perhaps, will be slow to lend a hand, to give a dollar, or to speak a good word for Centenary at Shreveport. They were loyal friends to the old Centenary; and they cherish, tenderly, the traditions and achievements of its past history. Really, I do not know how I would have felt, or thought, had I been in the Louisiana Conference when the change was made. It is possible that I might have voted against it.

But why debate that question now? The school is at Shreveport, and it is the property of the Church and the Conference. It is a very valuable property—with the building and grounds worth not less than $135,000. The property is practically without debt. Assets are about sufficient to cover indebtedness. We are well located in a beautiful, growing city, accessible by railroads from all parts of the State. We try earnestly to take the best care of the boys and young men who come here. We aim to train them in good scholarship and sound Christianity. We have always from twelve to fifteen promising young preachers preparing for the itinerant ministry. Without Centenary, from where could we expect a regular ministerial supply for the Louisiana Conference? Oh, my brethren, rally to Centenary! My time here is winding to a close; I cannot carry on this work much longer. I pray God that some man, younger, stronger, wiser and more resourceful than myself, may be found who will be able to make Centenary more than ever before, a blessing to the commonwealth and to the Church.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Rev. A. F. Watkins, D. D.

On December 11th, 1911, there will convene at Hattiesburg, Miss., the thirty-third session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, the first session having been held at Spring Hill in Jefferson County, November 1st, 1812. The years that lie between these dates more than measure the history of the State of Mississippi, which did not take its place in the sisterhood of States until 1817, but they do not compass the history of Methodism in the Natchez country. For as early as January 1, 1794, Bishop Asbury had selected Tobias Gibson as a missionary to the settlements of the southwest, and instructed him to proceed to his new field of labor as soon as the rigor of winter would permit.

The historic trip of this heroic missionary by horseback for six hundred miles, then by skiff and friendly flat-boat down the Cumberland, the Ohio and the Mississippi Rivers, began in the early spring of that year and ended with his arrival at Natchez about the end of March.

During the thirteen years intervening between the coming of Tobias Gibson and the formal organization of the Conference, the Mississippi Territory may be said to have formed a part of the "Western Conference," which was the official designation of that body embracing the States of Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana and Illinois. For strict accuracy this statement must be qualified. It was not from the borders of the Western Conference that the missionary came, but from the South Carolina, and for the first few years Mr. Gibson continued his membership in that Conference. In the quadrennium between 1809 and 1814 the territory seems to have been informally transferred to the Western Conference, and by the General Conference of the latter year it was formally included within the territory of that Conference.

The First Methodist Society was organized in Washington, the Territorial Capital, and consisted of eight persons—four men and four women; two of this little company, a man and his wife, were negro slaves. During the year Societies were organized at other points adjacent to the river, and to the South Carolina Conference of January, 1809, there were reported sixty members.

During the years that marked the connection with the South Carolina Conference Natchez was in the Georgia District. Such a fact strikes us with amazement when we think of the populous and prosperous States that now stand between the Atlantic Ocean and the Mississippi River, and of the thousands of missions, circuits, and stations that show the century's growth of Methodism. Nor is the marvel lessened when we find the territory the next year forming a part of the Kentucky District of the Western Conference, and notice that the States of Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Mississippi are represented in the District, over which William McKendree presided. The lines were shortened (!) the following year; for Natchez appears with Nashville and Red River in the Cumberland District. It is well that there were no District Conferences in those days.

As noted above, Mr. Gibson reported sixty members as the fruitage of his first year of labor. The lone missionary reported a net gain of twenty at the end of the second year, and a like gain for the third year. The report for 1803 showed a membership of 102, of whom two were negroes—probably our faithful slaves of the Washington Church.

In the decade between 1803 and 1813 the work grew steadily; new members were added, new churches were built, and deeply within the virgin soil were striking the roots of the mighty tree, "planted by the rivers of water," bearing a perennial fruitage, and whose "leaves were for the healing of the nations." New shepherds were sent to gather in and tend the growing flock; first Moses Floyd, then Hezekiah Harriman, and Abraham Amos. Good scriptural names, these three!

April 1, 1814, died Tobias Gibson, the first missionary to the Southwest, and the apostle to the Natchez country. He was buried in Warren County, a few miles south of Vicksburg, where a marble column marks his last resting place. In 1816 came Learner Blackman and Nathan Barnes, and with them in their long journey through the almost trackless wilderness rode Lorenzo Dow, that eccentric but devoted man whose wandering footsteps were marked by traditions illustrating at once his oddities and his zeal.

During this year, under the leadership of Blackman, Barnes and Dow, was held the first camp-meeting ever held south of the Tennessee line. It was held on Clark's Creek, six or eight miles from Port Gibson.

The next year witnessed the organization of the Mississippi District (with Learner Blackman as Presiding Elder), which consisted of four pastoral charges, named as follows:

Natchez Circuit, Nathan Barnes and Thomas Lasley; Claiborne Circuit, William Patterson; Wilkinson Circuit, Caleb Cloud and Luther Taylor; Opelousas Circuit, Elisha W. Bowman. This constituted the effective force, though Harriman, whose health was broken, and Floyd, who had located, and James Griffing and Randall Gibson, the first man licensed to preach within the limits of the territory, were earnest assistants.

We cannot follow the record as it unfolds year by year. Mississippi and Louisiana now constitute the field of labor, to which is soon added Alabama, as the settlements on the Alabama and Tombigbee rivers grew in number, and importance. In 1810 we find the name of Samuel Sellers, the presiding officer of the first Annual Conference session, and in 1811 that of its secretary, William Winans, destined to become the mightiest man in all the Southwest. In 1812 the historic Western Conference ceased to be, and its place was taken by the Ohio and the Tennessee Conferences; of the latter the Mississippi Territory formed a part. The membership had grown to 1067 whites and 240 negroes.

In view of the growing importance of the work on the lower Mississippi the General Conference of 1812 authorized the establishment of an Annual Conference within this territory, and at the meeting of the Tennessee Annual Conference that year the time and place were appointed for the organization and holding of an Annual Conference in Mississippi. Although the unsettled conditions of the country did not warrant the coming of one of the Bishops into the territory, until 1814 the sessions were regularly held from 1814, and all of the business of an Annual Conference was transacted, except that of ordination. Of these earlier sessions Samuel Sellers was President and William Winans, Secretary.

The session of the Conference in 1814 was held at the home of Rev. John Ford in Marion County. It was a short and unimportant session, and but for two facts connected with it might pass without mention. First, its location shows how the early settlers chose the rich valleys along the rivers—the Mississippi, the Pearl and the Tombigbee—leaving for future settlement the trackless pine forests, the source of future wealth. Secondly, the decision to hold the next Annual session at Foster's, in Adams County, and the fact that it was not so held, gave rise to what was called the question of the "lost Conference." For many years it was thought that the Conference of 1815 was not held. It is certain that it was not held at Foster's and no journal of the session remains; but that a session was held is evident from the fact that the appointments appear in the General minutes for that year, and several changes were made in the membership of the Conference. Rev. John G. Jones, the gifted and painstaking Historian of Methodism in Mississippi, has discovered the fact that it was held at Adams Camp Ground, in Amite County, the place for the meeting having been changed for reasons that do not now appear. Whatever the hindrances, they do not seem to have been permanent; for the brethren, before final adjournment, voted to hold the next session at Foster's and the record shows that it was so held.

The Conference of 1816 was in session at Foster's, Samuel Sellers presiding, and the work of the second day was in progress when some one noticed the approach of a solitary horseman, and to their delight Bishop Roberts, wearied with his long journey, rode into their midst. What would twentieth century Bishops, whirled across the country in Pullman Sleepers, think of that horseback ride from Western Pennsylvania to Southern Mississippi, and what wonder that he was a day and a half late? The records of the session show that eleven preachers received their appointments, and that the membership of the Church was less than two thousand, of which about twenty per cent were negro slaves.

The geographical boundaries of the New Conference are somewhat uncertain, but may be said to have embraced the States of Louisiana and Mississippi, and an indefinite part of Alabama in the east, and of Texas in the west. Not all of this vast territory was occupied, of course, but later Conference records show Annual sessions held in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, and from Mississippi went Robert Alexander, the first Methodist Missionary to Texas.

From this period the history shows the continuous progress of two influences: the narrowing of geographical lines, and the more thorough cultivation of the field. The organization of the Alabama Conference was attended by the loss, not only of all the appointments in that State, but also some within the Northeastern limits of our own State. The Memphis Conference appropriated a strip from our Northern border. The Louisiana Conference left us only the Florida Parishes in that State. The organization of the North Mississippi Conference in 1870 caused the further drawing in of the lines toward the South. The General Conference, of 1894 gave to the Louisiana Conference the Florida Parishes, but for every loss in area a more than compensating gain was found in the ever-growing membership in the territory that remained. Circuits and stations multiplied on every side; schools and colleges were established and equipped; the support of a rapidly increasing ministerial force was more adequately provided for; gifts to the benevolent work of the Church were increased; an orphanage has been built and a hospital projected. The little one has become a thousand, and the small one a strong nation; for the Lord has hastened it in his time.

Many were the hindrances that opposed the work of our fathers; the trackless wilderness, the hostile Indians, the more unrelenting opposition of the Roman Catholic Church, and the lawless character of many of the early settlers. The abolition agitation of the second quarter of the century and the rupture of the Church in 1844 weakened our forces. The Civil War overwhelmed them in desolation and sorrow. The horrors of war were lost in the greater horrors of "reconstruction," and the fair land was plundered even while the people were weeping at the graves of their dead. But no desolation could appall them; no sorrow weaken their faith in God; no "policy of disintegration and absorption" could seduce them from the sense of their high mission. Their only permanent loss was that of the thousands of negro members, and this loss they tried to repair by means of the organization of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church.

The growth of Southern Methodism since the war has been phenomenal, and in this growth Methodism in Mississippi has had its share. The last session of the Mississippi Conference reported as follows: Preachers 188; local Preachers 135; Societies 560; Sunday Schools 448; Sunday School Scholars 29,602; total membership 54,419; pastoral charges 164; parsonages 152; value of parsonages $301,845; number of Churches 519; value of Churches $784,721; paid for Foreign Missions $11,320.72; paid for Home Missions $8,695.68; paid for Church Extension $4,318.31; paid for Education $3,979.83; paid American Bible Society $1166.12; paid preachers in charge $118,113.76; paid Presiding Elders $13,750.70. The total amount raised from all sources for all purposes amounted to $374,352.98.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

By Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb.

This historic institution has had an honorable life of more than fifty years, and during that period has made a worthy contribution to Methodism in the Mississippi Conference by giving Christian training to its women. Her graduates are in every community of the Conference presenting a high standard of womanhood. The daughters and granddaughters of these constitute a large part of the present student body. Much of sentiment and hallowed memory cluster about the College, and there is that in her noble past which strongly commends her to the love and loyalty of the Methodists of Mississippi.

But however much the institution's past appeals to us, it is the efficient present and bright future which constitute its chief claims upon us at this time. At present the College is striving in every particular not only to sustain the reputation it has gained in the past, but to enhance this by fully measuring up to all the present-day demands of our advancing educational system, and to hold its own among church schools as worthy of the respect and patronage of Methodists who desire that their daughters shall have the best. Our course of study is being steadily advanced to meet the requirements of the Commission of Education, and while on account of our need of money, it may be some time before recognition can be given Whitworth as measuring fully up to these demands, we propose in every possible way to prepare for that classification. What a boon to Christian education it would be if some layman of our Conference would make a liberal gift toward a permanent endowment for this old school which has struggled so bravely to sustain itself and fulfill its mission! This would make possible the realization of its highest hopes and ambitions. It may be that some one reading this may feel an inclination to use the means which, under God's blessing, he has amassed for this purpose. God grant it!

The maintenance of a good curriculum requires a strong, well-equipped and earnest-spirited faculty, and Dr. Cooper has spared neither pains nor expense in securing this. Each department is presided over by a lady whose training and spirit are such as will inspire her pupils and assist them in reaching a high degree of culture. As a whole, I am safe in saying that the present faculty has not been excelled in the history of the College.

Not only in the literary department is this high standard maintained by instructors, but also in the special Departments of Music, Art, Expression and Commerce. Students seeking courses in these branches can find no better advantages outside of conservatories than here at Whitworth, and here they can have that thorough foundation laid for further work in Conservatories and special schools. In our piano department the graduate students have been able for some years past to finish the course with high rank at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music in two years. The following is a list of the faculty for 1912-13:

President and Professor of Ethics and Economics, Rev. I. W. Cooper, A. M., D. D.; Dean of the Faculty and Professor of Higher Mathematics, Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb; English Language and Literature, Miss Marjorie Chappell Davis, A. M. (Univ. of Tennessee); Science and History, Miss Bessie C. Cooper, A. B. (Whitworth, Wesleyan and Randolph-Macon); Latin and Greek, Miss Elizabeth Lusby; History, Miss Sarah Rector Smith, A. B. (Randolph Macon); French, Mrs. Maxie Sisk McCullough (Pupil of C. E. Purdy, B. L., University of Paris); Spanish, Miss Virginia Revere (Wisner School); Presiding Teacher, Miss Sophie Cameron; Expression and Physical Culture, Miss Lulah Ragsdale (New York School of Expression); Drawing, Painting and Arts-Crafts, Mrs. Maxie Sisk McCullough; Stenography, Typewriting and Bookkeeping, Miss Virginia Revere; Voice, Miss Lucy Irwin Shannon; Music Teachers—Miss Elizabeth McVoy (New England Conservatory; also pupil of Theodore Bohlman, Cincinnati); Miss Lois W. Cooper (Whitworth Conservatory and Graduate pupil of Theodore Bohlman); Miss Courtney McLaurin Rauch, M. B. (Whitworth); Miss Sara Stout (Buford College, Nashville, and Cincinnati Conservatory); Miss Grace Lane, Superintendent Piano Practice.

The chief cause of concern for some years has been the need for new buildings and general improvements in the equipments. The present buildings were sufficient for the past generation, but they have grown old with that generation, and the new one demands better things. God has blessed us in the past year by putting it into the hearts of the Lampton Brothers to honor their sainted mother, and at the same time serve the Church by giving an auditorium in her name. Work is just beginning on this building and we are happy in the prospect of the beauty and comfort which it will add to Whitworth. This gift was an earnest of others. Dr. Cooper has built at his own expense and given the College an attractive cottage for a President's home. The town of Brookhaven has subscribed $10,000 toward a central building, and our field agents, Rev. P. D. Hardin and Rev. H. A. Batin, have been most active in raising the remaining funds necessary for this building among the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference. Substantial progress has been made and we face the future with high anticipations. We are confident that when the old-time Whitworth is attractively and comfortably domiciled in suitable new quarters, there can be no limit set to the efficiency of her work.

The home life at Whitworth is happy and wholesome. The students are encouraged to engage in out-door sports. Care is exercised to provide entertainment and social functions at frequent intervals so that there is an abundance of innocent pleasure and fun. The health of the students is carefully watched by a motherly matron and a good college physician. The table is supplied with an abundance of nourishing and well cooked food. In every way the physical and mental life is developed.

But Whitworth recognizes Christian character as the only permanent and most desirable possession. A decidedly religious atmosphere is created by the influence of the Faculty and the activities of the students in the Y. W. C. A. A daily vesper service is conducted by the girls in the college parlor, and the student body almost as a whole voluntarily attend these services. On Sunday nights the students conduct a service in the College Chapel. These services, conducted by the girls, appeal to the girls and are helpful in strengthening their Christian lives.

A regular contribution, liberally supplemented by Dr. Cooper, is made to the Mission cause each year. We want above all things to fulfill the mission of the Church School and send out women in whose hearts is a firm faith in Christ and a desire to serve humanity. A meeting is conducted each session and an effort made to get each student to make a surrender of her life to Christ and become a Christian.

The present session is one of the most successful in the history of the College. Under Dr. Cooper's able management, its affairs are wisely administered and there is prosperity everywhere. The future is as bright as the prospect of Methodism, whose banner Whitworth carries. She asks with confidence for the continued patronage of the Conference and for the sympathy and co-operation of all the friends of Christian education. Her past has been honorable; her present is prosperous; but her future is to be, under the blessing of God and the loyalty of her friends, better than either.

A SKETCH OF HAZLEHURST METHODISM.

The New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern railroad, now called the Illinois Central, ran its first train through from New Orleans to Jackson in April, 1858. Trains had been running from the Crescent City to Hazlehurst for some time, probably for considerably more than a year. Before the railroad was built the spot where Hazlehurst now stands was an unbroken pine forest. Soon after the town came into existence, the little handful of Methodists who had settled here, by heroic effort, built and paid for a good-sized church. The dedicatory sermon was delivered by that princely preacher, Dr. Charles K. Marshall, then in his prime, who rose to unusual sublimity on that momentous occasion. Foremost among the leaders of Methodism at that time was William Graves, a thoroughly consecrated man, who, with his noble wife, was always ready to help in any good cause. Their son, A. T. Graves, is now a member of the Hazlehurst Board of Stewards, and will be one of the hosts at the approaching session of the Mississippi Conference. Another leader in those olden days was Dr. Funchess, who was able in prayer, and a mighty influence for the cause of righteousness. The name of John Oliver should also be mentioned, a very quiet, modest man, of most excellent spirit and irreproachable life. Still another meriting honorable mention was Col. Edwin G. Cook, formerly of Vicksburg, who located in Hazlehurst soon after the close of the Civil War, and remained here to the end of his life. He was a Southern gentleman of the ante-bellum type, refined, high-toned and honorable. His son, E. M. Cook, is now and has been for several terms the Mayor of Hazlehurst.

The Methodist Church at Hazlehurst, Miss., in which the Mississippi Conference will be held.

The Methodist Church was first erected on the east side of the railroad, on the present site of

REV. N. B. HARMON,
Host of the Mississippi Conference.

the stately Granberry home, and was used jointly by the Methodists and Presbyterians. It is interesting to relate that the pastor of the Presbyterians at that time was Rev. M. W. Trawick, father of Mrs. E. W. Taylor, wife of the present editor of the Hazlehurst Courier. Col. Cook and others, seeing the rapid growth of the town on the west side of the railroad, deemed it expedient to move the church to its present site, the lot being bought from Judge Stone, the father of the late Mrs. Burditt. During the pastorate of Dr. I. W. Cooper, the present edifice, in which the coming session of the Mississippi Conference will meet, was erected.

From around Hazlehurst have sprung several prominent laymen in Methodist circles, whose memorials will be lasting in Mississippi, among them being Maj. R. W. Millsaps, whose early home was near the historic Pleasant Valley church, now on the Bayou Pierre Circuit, and about whose boyhood days many traditions are extant in the county and are rehearsed by the older citizens. That stalwart layman, Mr. I. C. Enoch, and his noble band of brothers, were of the old Bethesda neighborhood, and their uncle, Mr. Jim Enoch, though enfeebled by age, is still a leader of Methodism in this county. Dr. Luther Sexton, a philanthropist and prominent physician of New Orleans, is another layman who went out in the world from this section of Mississippi; while Dr. W. C. Black, who is now an honored member of the Mississippi Conference, used to belong to the old Bethesda church.

Some of the best equipped men in the Mississippi Conference have filled the Hazlehurst pulpit, among them Revs. W. G. Millsaps, Leith, McNeil, Pierson, H. J. Howell, Joe T. Nicholson, B. F. Jones, I. W. Cooper, J. M. Weems, T. W. Adams, Robert Selby, R. W. Bailey, J. T. Leggett, John A. B. Jones, C. F. Emery, V. D. Skipper, Herbert Watkins and William L. Linfield.

This will be the fourth time that hospitable Hazlehurst has entertained the Annual Conference, having received the prophets in 1874, in 1878, and again in 1893. To-day the present pastor and the good people of Hazlehurst, irrespective of denomination, are preparing to give the brethren the warmest of welcomes and the best possible entertainment. The Hazlehurst Board of Stewards is composed of the following named gentlemen:

Hon. H. J. Wilson, president, a well known and popular lawyer; W. R. Cooke, secretary and treasurer, assistant cashier of the Bank of Hazlehurst; Hon. J. S. Sexton, prominent throughout the State in legal and educational matters; and those sterling business men, Messrs. E. C. Garland, C. C. Herlong, A. T. Graves, P. B. Nesmith, John McKewen, W. E. Hester, W. A. Schueler, J. H. Rogers, Joe S. Wise, Dr. Luther Knight, and John Lowe.

THE SUNDAY NEWSPAPER.

"Where do you go to Sunday school, little girl?"
"Nowhere. I have only gone once in my life. I want to go." "Why don't you go, dear?" "Father won't let me." "Where does your father go to church?" "He doesn't go anywhere. He just reads the newspapers all the morning." That father was a church member.—Christian Index.

THE SECRET OF IT.

A young Southern girl said to a woman of eighty, who still attracted all in spite of her snowy hair, "Tell me the secret of your power, and teach me to fascinate people as you do." "My child," was the gentle response, "remember just this,—in the alphabet of charm there is no such word as 'I,' it is all 'you.' Here is a hint that every girl can take to heart.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

THE BOY AFTER SCHOOL.

It is a fine thing for a boy to have some regular work after school, though it ought not to take up all his time by any means.

This work is generally in the line of regular "chores," and is looked upon with ill-favor by even an ambitious boy. Vary it, if you wish that boy to get the idea that he likes farm work. Give him a written formula for preparing white-wash, and let him whitewash the chicken-house, the cellar, the stables or such parts of them as he can reach. He will do it as well as any one, and will grow an inch or two from sheer importance and delight.

Let him spray the hen-houses with a kerosene solution occasionally. He will generally consider spraying the cows in fly-time much more fun than milking. If he does it satisfactorily, why not let him do it?

He will occasionally enjoy oiling the harness instead of brushing the horses. Change off with him once in a while.

It is an excellent plan to send him to transact business sometimes. He may make mistakes, but he will be learning each time. And each time he learns he will get ambitious to do greater work; so he will come to be useful.

Let him experiment in setting out vines and trees about the place. It is a valuable experience which may result after a while in improving your place with fruit and fine shade.

Give him a corner of good ground for experimenting, if he enjoys that sort of thing, and help him a little when needed.

See that the boy has sufficient honest work after school, but vary it enough to make it interesting, and there will be fewer boys "dismissing" the home farm work and leaving it for something else.—Alice M. Ashton, in Farm and Fireside.

WHY CLASSES SHOULD ENROLL.

By Charles D. Bulla.

Enrollment in the Wesley Bible Class Department is of positive advantage to both the individual class and the organized Bible class movement.

Loyalty to our Church should impel every Southern Methodist class to enroll in the Wesley Bible Class Department. Our Church is connective throughout. The members of these classes are very largely from Southern Methodist homes, and our Church has a right to their allegiance and support. As classes increase in membership and influence, the tendency to become independent of the Sunday school will be counteracted by denominational loyalty.

Enrollment creates a Church-wide fellowship among the classes. The aim of the organized Bible class movement is to bring people together for the study of the Bible, and, when they are qualified, to send them forth in service to mankind. The fact that we have tens of thousands in the membership of our Wesley Classes encourages and stimulates the zeal of those who are engaged in this important work.

Classes should enroll in the Wesley Bible Class Department because this is the only practical way in which they can co-operate with other Southern Methodist classes. By enrolling the individual class makes a contribution of its life to the movement. It leads the way by its example. Its experience becomes an asset of all classes. Plans that have been successfully used in one place may be adopted elsewhere. By becoming a part of the larger movement a Bible class projects itself beyond its own locality.

It is possible for the Central Office to assist all classes registered in the Wesley Bible Class Department. Through the medium of the Sunday school periodical literature and Bible class leaflets, information is imparted, new lines of activity are suggested and conferences and institutes are announced from time to time. An enrolled class receives the Joint Certificate of Registration and is recognized at headquarters as a part of the organized Bible class movement.

All Southern Methodist classes are urgently requested to enroll in the Wesley Bible Class Department. For information concerning the Department and the work of organized classes, address Rev. Charles D. Bulla, Superintendent of the Wesley Bible Class Department, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

It is the results which we have garnered that are of consequence to us, not the steps by which we attained them. It is what we are, not what we have done, or what any one else has done, that concerns us.—Anna C. Brackett.

Editorial.

IN ACCORD WITH MR. WESLEY.

The Methodists have sometimes been criticized for their doctrine of assurance, being accused of being more confident of their salvation than the facts in the case warrant. But the views which they hold concerning the witness of the Spirit to adoption and sonship are not theirs alone, though they have placed more emphasis upon this great truth than any other modern religious sect. Recently in reading the "Theology of Prayer" by Dr. B. M. Palmer, the great Presbyterian clergyman, whose fame was national and whose ministry so impressed itself upon the city of New Orleans, we were interested to find that his teaching upon this important subject was in the most perfect accord with that of Mr. Wesley. Like the great Founder of Methodism, he clearly distinguished between the witness of our own spirit and the witness of the Holy Spirit, as the following quotation will show:

"The question then arises, If this witness of the Spirit is found to consist in what we inwardly experience, how are we to distinguish this testimony from the witness which our own spirit bears to the same fact? Possibly this might be suggested as the solution. The fruits of the Spirit are certified to us by the testimony of consciousness as our experiences. The peace is our peace, the joy is our joy, the long-suffering is our long-suffering. We have the testimony of our own spirit, which is nothing else than the deliverance which consciousness makes that these are acts which proceed from us, under the operation of those laws which govern and control them. We know them to be ours, and hence they constitute, under the testimony of consciousness, the witness of our spirit. * * * According to the exposition just given, the conclusion is reached only through a syllogism. The believer says to himself—the Scriptures set forth certain graces of the Spirit as evidences of sonship in Christ; I know that these graces are features of my own experience; I am certified therefore of my 'acceptance in the beloved.' The argument may be perfectly sound; but it is a conclusion of the logical understanding alone—a demonstration to the intellect and not to the heart. * * * The witness of the Holy Spirit goes beyond this in a present assurance of our adoption into the family of God, through a secret influence which he brings to bear directly upon the believer's heart."

But Dr. Palmer not only taught that the Christian may have an occasional clear assurance from the Holy Spirit of his salvation, but that it is a privilege to have his continuous testimony to that effect. We quote him again: "Nothing is more common than to hear the wail breaking from a troubled heart: 'Oh, that I could be assured beyond a doubt that I am a child of God.' And yet this assurance has been enjoyed a thousand times by the soul that utters this cry. There is not a moment of spiritual communion with God when this assurance is not ours. In those moments when we weep over our sins, and under a sense of pardon hold fellowship with our Father and his son Jesus Christ, we can no more doubt our acceptance with God than we can doubt our natural existence. The misconception is here: What these mourning disciples mean is an assurance that shall be the permanent and fixed habit of the soul. The witness of the Spirit, on the contrary, is often intermittent, though progressive. In the precious moments above referred to this, witness brings to us the desired assurance. But our misfortune and guilt is, that we have not always the exercise of faith; and these experiences, so full of comfort and joy, become occasional and not constant. It indicates a large advance in the divine life when faith becomes a steady principle, always pointing to God and the Redeemer, and love goes forth in constant exercise. Only then does this assurance, which was occasional before, become the permanent condition of the soul. It is not wise, however, for the lack of this high attainment, to disparage those joys, which though inconstant, are still secured to us through the witness of the Spirit bearing witness with our spirit to the reality of our Christian hope."

These utterances of this great preacher conclusively prove that he believed in a personal religion which could be felt, enjoyed, and which had upon it the stamp of certitude. The cold and intricate theology of Calvinism did not keep his clear intellect and pure heart from discerning and cherishing these precious truths, which are as old as Christianity. Indeed, they are positively necessary to the highest happiness and largest usefulness in the religious life. A full measure of joy cannot come to the soul harassed by doubts; and if a person has vague notions of his own salvation, how can he talk confidently and convincingly to others of what Christ would do for them? Nor should any one, with this privilege of knowing our sins forgiven within reach, dare to stop short of it. Anything less than frequent assurances of our salvation should alarm us and send us to our closets in heart-searching penitence and prayer. And with the knowledge that we may also have a full and abiding assurance, we should earnestly and unceasingly seek it, until the voice Divine ever speaks within, making "clear our title to a mansion in the skies."

STILL TRUE AND FAITHFUL.

It is quite the fashion now a-days to criticize the Church and her ministry. This herating comes from both the outside and inside, from both open enemies and professed friends. That some of this criticism is deserved, is no doubt true. The Church lacks much of being what she ought to be; the spirit of worldliness and self-indulgence is far too widely prevalent among her members. And it must be confessed that some of her ministers do not possess the spirituality, consecration, and zeal that they ought to have.

But, notwithstanding all this, the Church is today the world's mightiest uplifting force. The best people to be found on earth are numbered among her votaries. The sentiment that starts and sustains the moral movements that tend to make society better is born of her teaching and efforts. The widespread philanthropy of our time, even that flowing through outside channels, owes its existence to her influence. And though occasionally a man who is unworthy finds his way into the pulpit or becomes so after his entrance into it, the rank and file of our ministry are men of sound religious experience and clean and upright lives.

Frightful and humiliating as are the things which sometimes occur, there is no cause for pessimism and despair. Satan has been having his triumphs since the beginning. It is nothing new for him to succeed in striking down now and then a man of promise. His aggressiveness knows no limit—he even sought to ensnare the Son of God. Of the twelve chosen by the Master to constitute his inner circle, one became his unfortunate victim. But because a few make shipwreck of character, let us not forget the many who are faithful and true. Because Judas fell shall we forget the eleven who stood firm and laid deep and strong, the foundations of Christianity? Some of the brightest chapters in the history of Christendom have been written by Methodist itinerants. But for their self-denying labors, neither the American nation nor modern civilization would be what they are to-day. And in most cases the spirit that animated the fathers yet abides in their sons, and, like their predecessors, they are ready to dare and to do and, if necessary, to suffer for their Lord.

BISHOP KILGO'S WORK.

From the accounts that reach us through the press and privately, it appears that Bishop Kilgo has struck a popular chord in his vigorous crusade against modern movements and his appeal for a return to the old paths. It is to be hoped that our leaders generally will join him in beating back the rising tide of disintegrating influences with which our Church in the Southland is menaced.

Bishop Kilgo seems not less happy in his administrative work, if we may judge of it by his appointment of Dr. H. B. Johnston to the presiding eldership of the Memphis district. Dr. Johnston enjoys the reputation of being one of the most capable administrators in Southern Methodism, and it is not doubted that under his leadership Memphis Methodism will make a distinct advance along all lines of progress.

ANNUAL MEETINGS ARRANGED

A committee on arrangements composed of representatives of the College of Bishops, of the Board of Missions, and of the Board of Church Extension, has agreed upon the following dates for the annual meetings for 1913; namely: Board of Church Extension, May 1-4; College of Bishops, May 5-6; Board of Missions, May 7-11. An invitation to these boards from the churches in Dallas, Tex., to hold their respective annual meetings in that city has been accepted, and arrangements are being made to make the occasion one of more than ordinary interest to the Church in general and to Texas Methodism in particular.

A WRONG CONCLUSION.

At the late session of the Memphis Conference a resolution to dispense with the verbal reports of the pastors was voted down, as it ought to have been. A brother who was in attendance to represent a connectional interest, in writing of this incident, takes the position that the Conference made a mistake. He says that the uninteresting statements of the pastors drive the people away, so that a connectional man who comes to speak for a cause of great importance cannot secure a hearing. This is somewhat amusing. Most of the brethren that we have seen reaching for their hats and overcoats and hunting the door during a Conference session, were fleeing from some long-winded connectional brother. The habit of fastening the blame for things we do not like upon others is as old as the human race. It began with Father Adam in the Garden of Eden.

A NEW MANAGER FOR THE LOUISIANA ORPHANAGE.

After an incumbency of four years, Rev. R. W. Vaughan has resigned the position of Manager of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage at Ruston. His work as the official head of that institution has been conspicuously successful, and it has steadily grown in strength and resources under his wise and energetic superintendence. He leaves it on a far better footing than it has ever before had, viewed from any standpoint, and he deserves the commendation of all for the noble and self-sacrificing service which he has rendered.

The new Manager of the Orphanage is Rev. P. H. Fontaine, who is just finishing a successful quadrennium in the pastorate at Waterproof, La. He was born in Hinds County, Miss., Dec. 15, 1869.

being a son of the Rev. Edward Fontaine, LL.D., of the Protestant Episcopal Church. He received his collegiate training at the Mississippi A. & M. College, the University of Mississippi, and Millsaps College. He was licensed to preach by a quarterly conference in Jackson, Miss., Sept. 12, 1893, and was received on trial into the Louisiana Conference at Ruston, in December, 1896. Since then he has filled a number of important charges in the Conference, and has shown himself to be a well poised, industrious, and effective worker. He is considered by those who know him admirably equipped for the position of large responsibility to which he has been chosen, and his friends confidently predict that the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, under his direction, will go continuously forward to larger things.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

A representative of the Advocate will be on hand at each of the Conferences, with our account books. Make it a point to hunt him up and settle with him on the first day of the session.

Brother J. S. Hudson, of Oxford, Miss., was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office last week. He spoke in terms of high appreciation of our pastor in his home town, the Rev. W. W. Mitchell.

Rev. Robert H. Wynn has won golden opinions for himself as presiding elder of the Lafayette (La.) District. He is a leader who does not spare himself and who sets the pace for his associates in the work.

Rev. C. H. Ellis, of Terry, Miss., reports a good year in his charge, though he finds the task of raising the collections quite difficult. He will tell us of the progress of the work under his supervision in our next issue.

Rev. W. B. Aisworth, the pastor, who has recently completed a new church in the Clark settlement near Leaksville, Miss., will formally open it this week by holding in it a three days revival meeting, beginning Friday evening, Dec. 6, and closing next Sunday.

Dr. W. W. Smith, President of the Randolph-Macon system of colleges, died on November 29. He had been in failing health for several months. Dr. Smith was born in Warrenton, Va., March 12, 1845. He served four years in the Confederate Army, and was twice wounded.

At the recent Session of the North Alabama Conference, Rev. J. A. Bowen was reappointed one of the Conference evangelists, a position for which he is splendidly qualified. Rev. C. A. Bowen, his gifted young son, was returned to Trinity Church, Birmingham, for another year.

The brethren along the Gulf Coast recently had the pleasure of dining at Gulfport with Rev. M. L. Burton and Rev. W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Seashore District. Good fellowship abounded, as it has always done at these annual reunions which have been kept up for several years.

The Epworth League Union of New Orleans is making a special effort to increase the League membership and to organize new chapters. The New Orleans District is possibly the leading League district of the Louisiana Conference, there being but three charges without a League organization.

The new brick church at Gulfport, Miss., which will be known as the First M. E. Church, South, is going up rapidly and will soon show up to advantage in the heart of the city. The entire congregation seems enthused over the prospect of having such a handsome house of worship.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, the efficient superintendent of the Sailors' Rest at Gulfport, writes: "The heavy shipping at Gulfport is bringing many sailors to our city, and the Sailors' Rest is having a very large attendance at this time. The Norwegian Mission has in no way hindered our work here, but, on the contrary, has helped it."

Mrs. Geo. D. Green, of Bunkie, the widow of the late Rev. Geo. D. Green, of the Louisiana Conference, underwent an operation at the Touro Infirmary in New Orleans last Friday. She stood the operation nicely and is reported to be doing well. That the Great Healer may restore her to her loved ones in perfect health, is the prayer of her many friends.

The Wesley House at Biloxi, Miss., is enjoying unprecedented prosperity, having over 200 pupils enrolled in the Sunday school and over 70 in the night school. The Kindergarten and other departments are doing proportionately well. Misses Long and Stubbs are wise and enthusiastic workers, and souls are being saved and many instructed in the way of the Lord and made better.

Rev. W. B. Hogg, of Madison, Miss., who several weeks ago was stricken down with typhoid fever, has had a severe battle for life, but has now been pronounced out of danger. His people, who left nothing undone to promote his recovery, are happy over the outcome of the fierce and protracted struggle. Brother Hogg is one of the most promising young ministers in the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. T. M. Bradley will report for the Advocate the proceedings of the North Mississippi Conference; Rev. H. B. Watkins will report those of the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. A. J. Gearheard those of the Louisiana Conference.

Dr. S. A. Steel is conducting a meeting for Rev. W. L. Linfield at Biloxi, Miss., where he is delivering a series of remarkably strong and searching sermons. The services are reported to be deepening in interest, and the prospect for a revival is encouraging.

Rev. Wm. Schuhle, who was appointed to succeed the lamented Dr. S. S. Keener, on the Monroe District, after a considerable part of the year had passed, has magnified the office of presiding elder. He is an energetic worker, and one of the best informed men in his Conference.

After two conspicuously successful years at St. John's Church of Augusta, Ga., Dr. H. M. DuBose has been stationed at First Church, Atlanta. The Methodists of the Georgia metropolis are to be congratulated upon having secured for their city the services of this brilliant and useful minister.

As both the Editor and Publisher had to leave Tuesday for Greenwood, the seat of the North Mississippi Conference, this issue of the Advocate went to press on Monday, a day earlier than usual. If matter for this edition was sent in late and has failed to appear, this statement will explain the reason why.

Rev. W. H. Saunders is closing a most successful year at the Washington Street Church of Vicksburg, and will make an excellent report to the Annual Conference at Hazlehurst. Brother Saunders possesses unusual efficiency both in the pulpit and the work of the pastorate. He has never failed to give a good account of himself in any field to which he has been assigned.

DON'T FORGET THEM!

We mean those renewals and new subscriptions that you ought to bring with you. The Conference Organ has tried to be faithful: do not neglect it NOW. No pastor has any more important interest to look after than the claims of his church paper. For the Advocate, which will you be at the Conference—A FRUITFUL OR A BARREN FIG TREE?

Rev. C. C. Miller, who has served the Baton Rouge District for the past four years, has shown himself a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed." He will leave behind an enviable record and a host of friends, who will ever hold him in loving remembrance. Brother Miller is a man of culture, poise, and solid character and worth. The charge that secures his services may count itself fortunate.

In a competitive examination at Oxford, Miss., Mr. John Kyle, of Sardis, was selected as Mississippi's representative for appointment to a Cecil Rhodes scholarship. Mr. Kyle is a nephew of ex-Congressman J. C. Kyle. He was graduated from the University of Mississippi last June, winning the first honor. The scholarship for which he has been chosen will last for three years and will commence next October.

Rev. C. A. Northington gives the following brief summary of his work on the Corinth Circuit, North Mississippi Conference: "I have received 52 new members during the year; have built one new church and am raising money to repair another; have liquidated a debt on the parsonage, and have purchased one new organ. Twenty-two infants have been baptized." Evidently this young itinerant has not been spending the days in idleness.

Elsewhere in this issue we publish a communication from Rev. J. B. Randolph, of Como, Miss., who is recovering from an attack of typhoid fever which held its grip upon him for several months. His many friends will be delighted to know that he will be able to take an appointment at Greenwood, though they will be disappointed not to see him at the Conference. His physicians have advised him that it is not yet safe for him to travel and expose himself to changes of temperature and weather.

The Jackson Daily News of Nov. 29 contained the following reference to the celebration of Thanksgiving Day at our Orphanage in Jackson, Miss.: "At the Methodist Orphanage 225 children consumed 20 turkeys. The feast there was elaborate, the donations having been made by the ladies of the First Methodist Church. Of pies, cakes and candies there were goodly supplies. It was a happy day out there where there are gathered so many little children who have no homes of their own."

Rev. A. Inman Townsley informs us of the death of the infant child of the Rev. and Mrs. Hoyt M. Dobbs, which occurred in Kansas City, Mo., on November 20. After obsequies in that city, conducted by Dr. McClure and Rev. C. M. Simpson, the remains were brought to Arcadia, La., for interment, where the service at the grave was under the direction of Brother Townsley. Brother Dobbs is the pastor of the Central Methodist Church of Kansas City. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

The officials of the Auburn Circuit, Mississippi Conference, representing the four churches of the charge, in their last quarterly conference, adopted resolutions highly commending Rev. J. T. Leggett, the presiding elder, for "his strong, orthodox, and edifying sermons, and his gracious and kindly bearing." They attribute the spiritual and financial prosperity of their own charge and the notable advancement made throughout the Brookhaven District during the past quadrennium very largely to Brother Leggett's tireless industry and efficient leadership.

From Nashville, Tenn., under date of November 29, Dr. John W. Boswell writes as follows: "Owing to the serious illness of my daughter, I shall not have the pleasure of meeting the brethren at Greenwood on December 4. This I deeply regret. Only once before in fifty-three years have I missed a Conference. I hope and pray that the session may be a pleasant and profitable one." It will be a distinct disappointment to the North Mississippians not to have Dr. Boswell with them. No member of their body is held in higher esteem than he. We trust that the stricken one in his household will soon recover.

On Friday evening, Dec. 6, the new parsonage at McDonoghville will be formally opened. Dr. J. W. Moore, of the First Methodist Church of this city, will conduct a religious service, and Rev. and Mrs. Gearheard will receive their many friends and the members of the McDonoghville church and extend them a welcome to the house. McDonoghville, which was formerly attached to the Mary Werlein Mission, has grown during the past year until it is now a station appointment, able to pay its pastor a living salary and house him in one of the best parsonages in the New Orleans District.

The fourth quarterly Conference of the Pickens charge, in the Durant District, North Mississippi Conference, appreciating the services of the presiding elder, Rev. N. G. Augustus, during his quadrennium, now closing, adopted the following resolution: "Resolved, That we do hereby express publicly our hearty commendation of the able and faithful administration of the Rev. N. G. Augustus during the past four years, and that we pray that God's blessings may attend him wherever he may be called to labor." We are indebted to Brother J. F. Wilburn, the Secretary of the quarterly conference, for this item.

The Centenary Methodist Church, of McComb City, Miss., was dedicated last Sunday. Dr. A. F. Watkins, President of Millsaps College, preached the dedicatory sermon. Mr. W. T. Deuman, president of the Building Committee, formally presented the building for dedication. The building has a seating capacity of 500 in the main auditorium and of 200 in the gallery. The basement is floored with cement and divided into Sunday school rooms. The completion of this structure is largely due to the untiring efforts of the pastor, Rev. Paul D. Hardin, and the consecrated ladies of the church. It was built at a cost of about $20,000.

The Daily Leader of Ruston, La., in announcing the prospective retirement of Rev. R. W. Vaughan from the position of Manager of the Methodist Orphanage located in that city, says: "Mr. Vaughan has made a splendid record as the manager of the affairs of this institution, greatly improving the appearance of the place and systematizing the work of caring for the little 'tots' placed under his protection. He and his estimable wife have been sympathetic, tender and kind to the children in their charge. The Board of Trustees was loath to accept Mr. Vaughan's resignation and sought to have him withdraw it, but he felt it to be his duty to re-enter the pastorate and declined to do so."

Jerusalem is said to have increased in population from 10,000 to 50,000 within the past thirty years, the Jewish section of the city growing the most rapidly. The total population of Palestine is estimated to be between 80,000 and 90,000.

The subject of this sketch, JAMES LUNDY MOSS, was born March 12, 1866. He was married to Miss Overton Jennings on December 27, 1905. To them was born one child, a boy who is now three years of age. Brother Moss died August 21, 1912. He was reared under religious influences, and as he grew to manhood developed into a fine, Christian character. As a member of the Church he was always loyal; as a steward he was faithful, and as a friend he was true. He was a kind and affectionate husband and father. Thus, in brief, is told the history of his life, but to all that knew him, there is so much of good about him that can not be expressed in words. Many were the pleasant hours this writer spent with him. He loved his church and pastor as he loved his own family, and no cause of the church suffered because of his neglect. And now that he is gone, he will be greatly missed, but we expect to see him again. We commend the sorrowing loved ones to the God of all grace, who looks with pity upon all troubled and sorrowing ones everywhere.

B. H. SHEPPARD.

MRS. MATTIE McDADE was born the 4th of July; was married to Mr. N. F. McDade, December 22, 1870, and died in Haughton, La., March 18, 1912. Seven children blessed this marriage, four of whom survive: Loye, Joe, Wilkins and Mrs. Eva Robertson. She also raised six step-children. When young she professed faith in Christ, united with the M. E. Church, South, and, during her long and eventful life, lived as a consistent Christian. "Like as a shock of corn cometh in his season," so she came to her grave in full age and entered into that "rest that remaineth to the people of God." The last years of her life were full of affliction and bodily weariness which only served to sanctify her spirit and render her more submissive to God. She was calmly waiting, listening and hoping that on the other shore of time she would hear the music and see the glory of Heaven. All doubts and fears were dispelled by the hand of faith which pointed her above the mists, beyond the sun, moon and stars to that "house not made with hands." Her death was quick and peaceful. Being summoned to supper, she attempted to respond and fell—simply fell "asleep in the arms of Jesus." Her remains were laid to rest by the side of her husband in the presence of many sorrowful relatives and friends whose love-tributes were a profusion of exquisite flowers. The funeral service was conducted at the grave by her pastor, Rev. J. G. Sloane.

MARY LAWRENCE.

MRS. A. N. COLEMAN was born near Knoxville, Tenn., in 1825, and died in Como, Miss., August 12, 1912. She was converted at the age of 15 years. In 1840 her parents moved to Desoto County, Miss. Here she met and married Edwin Coleman of the same county. One year later they came to Panola County, Miss., where she spent the remainder of her long, useful life. After the death of her husband in 1880, she lived with her daughter, Mrs. R. M. Short, in whose home she passed peacefully away at the ripe old age of eighty-eight years. Though always frail in body she was strong in heart and mind. She was deeply pious, lived her religion, was loyal to God and her church, and was willing to make any sacrifice for the cause of Christ. Her heart was sensitive to the needs of others, and responded gladly to any call to help the poor and needy. Her prayers and alms laid up before God for her children will be her richest legacy to them. While suffering no great pain she steadily grew weaker for five weeks, and gently, almost imperceptibly, the end came. Like a tired child, she fell asleep to awake no more in this world of sickness and sorrow. Her sweet face wore the same smiling expression in death, which patience, resignation and beautiful thoughts had given it in life. The devotion of her children and grandchildren was beautiful indeed. God grant that they may emulate her noble example of Christian living and be as ready to meet our Lord as she was.

L. C. S.

Truly, we live in a world where dark shadows are continually falling across our pathway, reminding us that here "there is no abiding stay." How forcibly was it realized that in the midst of life we are in death, when the sad news came that ERASTUS WILLIAM LUM, the eldest son of W. J. and Lucretia Lum, had passed quietly from this to the spirit land, on October 11, 1912, at his home near Rocky Springs, Miss. Though the deceased had been a sufferer for many months, the angel of death came suddenly, awakening him from peaceful slumber and leaving an aching void in the hearts of loved ones. Having been reared in a Christian home, he, early in life, joined the Methodist Church and was always a faithful member. From young manhood he was public-spirited, joining the Confederate Army when only seventeen years of age, and served as a gallant soldier until the close of the war. For a number of years he served as secretary of the Masonic lodge at Rocky Springs, having joined that brotherhood in early life. For the past twenty years he served his county as magistrate, always seeking to administer justice, and working for the advancement of his community. His home life was beautiful. He was devoted to his wife and children. A loving wife, three daughters, two sons and a number of relatives mourn his death. While the entire community will feel the loss of a useful citizen, in the home by those who loved him best, will his death be felt most keenly. Sorrowing ones, think not of him as dead, but as a purified and redeemed spirit, awaiting you in "the Sweet By and By," where the faithful meet to part no more.

A RELATIVE.

CHEAP PIANOS CAUSE NEURASTHENIA.

An eminent nerve specialist is authority for the statement that pianos of a "tin-panny" tone are responsible for many cases of neurasthenia or nervous prostration. If you have ever lived next door to such an instrument you will doubtless agree with the doctor.

In selecting a piano it is well to remember that instruments which are ordinarily sold at two hundred to two hundred and twenty dollars, almost invariably develop a metallic tone within one to five years. Such instruments soon become a nuisance to the neighborhood and fall into disuse. They are the most expensive pianos you can possibly buy.

It is here that the Advocate Piano Club comes to the rescue of the man with a limited purse, for, by uniting our interests in a Club of one hundred buyers, instead of each one purchasing from a different factory, we are able to secure the wholesale instead of the retail price, and thus obtain instruments of standard quality for a price such as we are ordinarily asked to pay for an inferior product. Every reader is cordially invited to write for the Club's beautifully illustrated catalogue, which gives full information. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

Tidings From the Field

Buena Vista, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: We will thank you for a small place in your paper that we may give vent to the fullness of our hearts. We want to write a word of appreciation of our much loved pastor, Rev. T. J. Durrett. Brother Durrett is nearing the close of two years' work with us, during which time he has, by his exemplary life, become very dear to us. Despite the very heavy work which has fallen upon him these two years, he has quite uncomplainingly carried it as becometh the true soldier of the Lord. Truly, we are wont to say that with Brother Durrett, "To live is Christ." To serve is, indeed, the one purpose of both him and his noble companion; they seem happy only when toiling for the Master. They make all their friends and are friends to all. To know them is to love them, and their lives are an inspiration to all who seek a higher life. We trust the Conference may see fit to make us happy by their return; if not, may it be theirs to be cast to a better place.—The Methodist Ladies of Buena Vista.

Woodville, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: As the days draw near to the close of the Conference year I beg to pen a note concerning our church and people. Brother Huntley, our presiding elder, changed the writer to this place to fill the vacancy made by the removal of the Rev. Mr. Barrington. The year has been most delightful among these kind and cultured people. The Lord has blessed our labors and given us a gracious revival, both in the church and among the unsaved. Thirty-three have been added to the church during the year. We were assisted in our meeting in October by Rev. C. W. Crisler, of Vicksburg, Miss. Our brother is not only a preacher of marked ability, but a true servant of God, and the seal of the Holy Spirit rested upon his ministry of the Word. All our collections will be reported at Conference "paid in full," which is a fine report, considering the present financial stringency. But our people are loyal to the demands made upon them, and are liberal to the cause of Christ. They are now contemplating the building of a new church.—W. W. Hopper.

Church Point (La.) Circuit.

Dear Doctor Meek: In summing up my year's work I feel like I would not be satisfied unless I should mention the many tokens of kindness extended to myself and family by the members of Branch and Long Point churches. Liberality and kindness have abounded in both churches the three years that I have been their pastor. But quite recently the ladies of Branch presented me with a purse of $25 in cash, and Mr. Chas. Bruner made me a present of a real nice Conference suit of clothes. Mrs. John Bruner and Mrs. Chas. Bruner, and Mrs. Eunice Clark deserve special mention for their leadership in every good work undertaken by their church. Then, too, Long Point has been very generous. The people of this church and community made up a purse of $30.90 and presented it to me to pay the expense of taking care of my daughter when she was in the sanitarium at Alexandria for treatment. I certainly am grateful to one and all for their kindness. We hope to be able to make a good report at Annual Conference.—H. B. Vandenburg, P. C.

Como, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: I have been shut in for quite a while, but I am glad to say that I am improving rapidly now and am able to be out some. I have been clear of fever for 44 days. The doctors are afraid for me to go to Conference on account of the uncertainty of the weather and the danger of taking cold. My physicians say that I will be as strong as ever in a short time and that I will be able to carry on my work all right. The brethren of the District have been kind enough to fill my pulpit during my illness. Our faithful and efficient presiding elder, Brother J. W. Dorman, and that prince of preachers, Rev. T. W. Dye, preached a number of times each. Besides Brothers Dorman and Dye, the following pastors preached one or more times for us: Revs. W. H. Mounger, D. W. Babb, W. N. Duncan, I. T. Lockhart, and H. G. Roberts. I also appreciated most heartily the many expressions of interest and sympathy which came from the brethren of the Conference. They cheered my heart and made my burdens lighter. Above all, I thank our Heavenly Father that I have been restored to health again. I wish to testify in the words of the great Apostle, that "His grace is sufficient." The people here have been good to us all the time, but especially so during my illness. I shall never forget them. The work on our new church is progressing rapidly. I think it will be completed and ready for service in a few weeks. Give my love to all the brethren of the North Mississippi Conference. I wish I could be with them at Greenwood. We expect to be able to report everything in full by December 4.—Joseph B. Randolph.

Greenwood Springs, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: The Conference year is fast coming to a close, and we are far from ready with a good report. I have never been more busily engaged than this year—and with so little to show for it. Our finances are not at all satisfactory, but when it is remembered that we are in the midst of the "down-and-out" section, resulting from such excessive downpours of rain in the early part of the year, thereby reducing our crop production from one-half to one-third of what we ordinarily produce, it can better be understood. We have had a good year on this charge, notwithstanding these conditions. We have had fine meetings at most of the churches, having been assisted by Brothers Durrett, Young and Hawkins, all of whom did us fine work. Brother L. B. Hawkins, who, as will be remembered, broke down physically last year and had to give up his work, is strong and active again, and expects to ask for work next year. He was with us three weeks this summer and did his part well. We have some excellent Sunday schools and prayer meetings on the charge, which speak well for the spiritual condition of our people. We have never known more sickness and deaths than we have had this year in the bounds of this work. However, we have lost but few of our members. Success to you and the Advocate force. I hope to see you at Greenwood.—M. A. Burns, P. C.

Bond's Liver Pills

were originated in 1895 by three of the most prominent physicians of the south, who had many years experience treating diseases depending on a torpid liver.

Grandly has this splendid combination of anti-bilious and anti-malarial agents sustained the reputations of its originators.

Bond's Liver Pills have long since proved to be a most effective remedy for the troubles arising from torpidity of the liver or the bowels.

The small dose—one little pill—and gentle action, make them almost invaluable.

Intelligent readers will not confound Bond's Liver Pills with the numerous so-called "wonderful" remedies that flood the country with reckless and misleading claims of astonishing merit.

When you require an honest and gentle liver or bowel stimulant, take one Bond's Liver Pill at bedtime. You will almost certainly wake up well.

CATARRH TRUTH

You Can Plainly See the Truth This Picture Tells.

This picture shows the mucous membrane tract of the nose, throat, and air passages. This is where catarrh germs live and where the disease spreads. The small black spot No. 1 shows where balms, creams, pastes, ointments and such treatments reach by direct application. You can see that it doesn't reach more than 2 per cent of the disease.

No. 2 shows where douches, sprays, atomizers and similar treatments reach. So their cures, like 1 and 2, only reach a tiny part of the disease. You cannot cure catarrh by stopping the disease only in a very small part.

No. 3 shows that medicated smoke can, will and does reach ALL the corners, nooks and crannies, touching every part. Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy which I will send you free, is made of bark, roots, flowers and leaves; no tobacco or habit-forming drugs. When this mixture is burned in a tube or new clean pipe, which I send you free, it sends forth a powerful, germ-killing, volatile smoke, relieving the distress and killing the germs. You can instantly feel the beneficial effects. I have shown you in the picture the truth about various treatments. You can see it is reasonable and fair.

Now I want you to write for a free treatment to let you prove for yourself what a grand remedy I have. The regular treatment costs only $1.00, postpaid. Just say in a letter or on a postal to me "Please send me Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy Free." When I get your request I will send the treatment by mail free and also facts about catarrh you will be glad to know. Address Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga.

METHODISM IN THE SHREVEPORT DISTRICT.

Dear Doctor: I would like to give a few brief facts regarding Methodism and its work in the Shreveport District. This has been a great year for all the district—great in every way, and we expect to make the greatest report in many respects that we've made from this great district.

Much has been done and is being done in the way of Church improvement and building. Brothers Davis at Coushatta, Walman at Pleasant Hill, and Sheppard at Many have made substantial improvements on churches. Brother Sheppard is completing his fourth year at Many and this is reported to be the greatest year in the history of the charge. Noel Memorial Church, of Shreveport, under the very able pastorate of Brother Felix R. Hill, Jr., is nearing completion. This is a splendid structure and is modern in every particular. Provision is being made for what we hope to be one of the largest Sunday schools in Southern Methodism. The building will cost about $70,000 when completed.

Brother J. S. Noel has in this building a fitting and lasting monument to the memory of the late J. S. Noel, Jr., his son, and the tireless efforts of this loyal little band of Methodists have borne such fruits that ages yet to come will be reminded of them.

The First Church of Shreveport is well under way of construction. One has but to look at the great derricks, piles of brick and stone, and the crowd of workmen to see the unmistakable evidences of real progress. This building will cost about $100,000, and will be one of the most splendid in the South. The plan is after that of our new Washington City church. It will have thirty-five Sunday school rooms, and will be three stories high. Occupying the site of the old church at the head of Texas Street, and having on the front six great marble columns, the cost of which alone will be $1800 dollars each, this church will have the most desirable and commanding position of any church in the city.

Dr. Cameron has done and is doing a great work here. On Rally Day, a few weeks ago, the Sunday school, of which Brother McKennon is superintendent, had an attendance of more than sixteen hundred. Too much can not be said in praise of the fruitful efforts of the consecrated workers of this great church. It is, perhaps, generally known that they are supporting several missionaries and that they are engaged in various other works for our Lord.

Brother Hugh W. Jamieson is finishing up his fourth year at Queensboro. He has done some very substantial work at this place, where four years ago, we had no organization. Brother Jamieson informs us that we have such a congregation now as will pay quite a nice salary to the preacher for the coming year. He also has quite a neat sum of money in hand for the building of the proposed $10,000 brick church. These Queensboro people are great workers and a great opportunity awaits some preacher at this place next year.

The Cedar Grove work, which is now in charge of Brother A. D. George, a student of Centenary College, is moving along nicely. There is said to be quite a goodly number of people in this soon-to-be-great manufacturing suburb of Shreveport, and we are to be felicitated in that we are on the ground at the start. We are also informed that we are to have a nice new church at Vivian soon, and we are hoping to have a new church building at Cedar Grove early in the coming Conference year. With these churches planned and with the ones now under construction, we think we have evidences of almost unheard of progress for a district as old as ours.

We have witnessed a well planned and well carried out revival campaign throughout the district this year.

Some of our revivals began immediately after last Conference and the work still continues. Our Conference Evangelist, Brother Turner, is now conducting a series of revival services at Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport. The results of this continuous campaign have been great, and so far as we know, we have never had a more spiritual year or a year of larger spiritual fruits in the history of the District.

We might note some of the missionary features of the district: The finding of gas and oil in what seems to be limitless quantities in and around the city of Shreveport is fast making this a great city. Few cities in our great nation have shown such an increase in population during the last ten years. This great increase of people naturally makes a great demand on the Church. We should have at least two more earnest workers in the city and one or two more for work in the oil fields. There are also several large mills within the bounds of the district, as well as much undeveloped territory, that are strictly mission localities. These should be looked after immediately by the Church.

Brother Paul M. Brown, our presiding elder, has been abreast with this march of progress, and has shown conclusively that the presiding elder's office is yet one of great usefulness and importance in the work of our Church. His labors of love, wisdom and constancy have endeared him beyond measure to those of us who labor under him, as well as to the people and the laity of the district generally.

With praises to Him who has given us all these blessings and victories, and hoping to meet the brethren at Monroe in a few days, we bring these hastily gotten together notes to a close.

THE SWEETEST SINGER IN THE WORLD.

Who is it? The mocking bird, of course. The sunshine of Dixie scintillates in its liquid notes. The sweet singer of the Southland, famous the world around, knows no competitor in the softness, purity and melody of its musical notes.

And what the sunshine of the South has accomplished in softening and sweetening the tones of the mocking bird has its parallel in the field of instrumental music, for it was a Southern piano house that is responsible for perfecting the superb Ludden & Bates Piano, claimed by critics to possess the sweetest tone of any piano that has yet been built. Professional musicians pronounce its notes absolutely free from the "metallic" quality which piano builders have found so much difficulty in avoiding.

It is this "Mocking Bird of the Piano World," the peerless Ludden & Bates Piano, which is eliciting so much praise from the members of the Advocate Piano Club. A beautifully illustrated catalogue describing the five different styles, will be sent free on request to and reader. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

Farm with this Modern Mule

Whether you farm 160 acres or thousands of acres, a Hart-Parr Oil Tractor will easily save you 25% to 50% every year over animal power.

There is no power job on the farm that is too big for this MODERN FARM HORSE. None that it will not do quicker, better and cheaper than horses or mules.

Quicker—because you can work the tractor hour after hour, day and night, if necessary, without a stop for rest.

Better—because this giant of steel furnishes such tremendous power you can plow much deeper, and do all your other farm work, with greater efficiency and thoroughness than ever before.

Cheaper—because it gives you the power of 15 to 30 sturdy horses or mules, and does it on the cheapest kerosene for fuel. When the tractor is idle, it doesn't cost you a cent for fuel. The instant you stop the engine, the fuel expense stops.

Think of it! Speed, efficiency and positive economy, all combined in the wonderful

HART-PARR OIL TRACTOR

And all under the absolute control of one man. It takes only one man to successfully operate and care for the tractor under every condition of service. For raising grain, cotton or cane; for plowing, drilling, cultivating, harvesting and hauling; for driving a grain separator, clover huller, corn shredder, corn husker, and for countless other operations, a Hart-Parr Oil Tractor furnishes ideal, reliable and economical power. We build this tractor in 30, 40, 60 and 80 B. H. P. sizes. One of these sizes will just suit your power needs.

Let us send you our Illustrated Catalog; also other literature explaining the cost of power farming.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE NOTES.

Dear Doctor Meek: The present session of Millsaps College is well under way and the reports for the first quarter, which will be sent out in a few days, will reveal the fact that the present student body is here for work and is determined not to be outstripped by any former body of students at the College. To be brief, the present is one of the best sessions that the College has had. The enrollment is somewhat in advance of that of the same time last year. The faculty returned to their posts with renewed energy after the rest of the vacation period.

It may not be uninteresting to your readers to know where the members of the faculty spent their vacations.

President Watkins divided the time between his office and visits to various points in the State in the interest of the College. Dr. Sullivan was engaged for the greater part of the summer in canvassing for students in North Mississippi. Dr. Swartz spent the entire vacation period in Milwaukee. Dr. Kern divided his time between a visit to his brother in Murfreesboro, Tenn., and a visit to his father in their summer home in Winchester, Va. Professor E. Y. Burton spent the summer in Arkansas and Oklahoma. Professor J. M. Burton went to his home in Virginia. Professor Lin, who came to us at the beginning of the session as the new head of the Department of History and Economics, enjoyed with his sister in Chattanooga, Tenn., a season of much needed rest after two years of study in Cornell University. Professors Noble and Huddleston of the Preparatory School were engaged most of the summer in canvassing for students. For a short while, however, Professor Noble was in Florida, having been called there by the illness of his father. Professor Ricketts, of the Preparatory School, and the writer, remained in Jackson all the summer.

The South Atlantic Quarterly for July contains an article on "The Unpublished Verse of Irwin Russell," by Dr. Kern. Dr. Sullivan has just finished an analysis of Pearl River water for the engineers who are to submit plans for a filtration plant for the city of Jackson. Prof. Lin has recently attended the meeting of the Association of Colleges and Preparatory Schools, which convened in Spartanburg, S.C., the seat of Wofford College. Bishop Thirkield, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, delivered a most interesting and inspiring address to the students and faculty in the chapel a few weeks ago.

The most important announcement of the year was made in chapel a few mornings ago, when Dr. Watkins announced that a teaching fellowship had been established. The faculty devoted considerable time to the discussion of the conditions upon which the fellowship is to be awarded. It is to be given to that member of the Sophomore, Junior, or Senior class who makes the highest average in scholarship, who is an active member of the Y. M. C. A., a member of one of the literary societies, and who takes an active part in at least one form of college athletics. The successful candidate must be willing to teach nine hours per week, though he may not be required to teach so many hours. The first award will be made at the end of this session, though the service and remuneration will not begin until September, 1913.

Under the new administration the old committee system has been replaced by a new method of assigning to the individual members of the faculty, certain matters, for which they will be individually responsible. To the writer has been assigned, The Press, The Alumni, and Annual Conferences, and some matters of only local interest.

It is needless for me to ask that the Advocate give all the assistance possible in placing the affairs of the College before the public.

The new President has taken hold of the situation in a masterful manner, and his administration promises to be an eminently successful one.

THE HOLY BIBLE AS A CHRISTMAS PRESENT.

What could be more appropriate? To celebrate the birth of our Savior through the giving of His own Word, strikes the writer as a very timely present, and one sure to be appreciated by every God-fearing man, woman or child. Read the remarkable offer of an old, reliable Bible House on page 15.

CUTTING DOWN THE COST OF PIANOS.

Have you ever stopped to ask yourself the question why oranges which sell for five cents apiece cost only forty cents a dozen? Or why apples sell so much cheaper by the bushel than by the nickel's worth?

It is the same way with pianos and everything else you buy. If you were to purchase one hundred pianos (eight car loads) you would expect to get a much lower price than if you purchased only one. That is why the Advocate Piano Club, composed of one hundred piano buyers, who club their orders into one big order, is able to save its members at least one dollar out of three and still provide pianos of much better quality.

You are cordially invited to write for your copy of the Club's beautifully illustrated catalogue, which fully explains every feature of this unusual piano opportunity and pictures and describes each of the five different styles of pianos offered. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE AND THE TOBACCO QUESTION.

Since in the reception of members into its traveling connection the Annual Conference is entirely democratic and no one is admitted without a majority vote, it is practicable to go by a definite rule, either written or unwritten as to a standard by which the candidate's fitness or unfitness shall be judged, and by which he could know beforehand how the Conference would act on that certain thing. The tobacco question could thus be settled. The General Conference has recorded its sentiments in the matter by requiring the Committee on Admissions to exhort the candidates to abstain from its use, and then leaves it with the Annual Conference as to whether the exhortation shall be heeded or taken as a joke. Suppose those members of the Annual Conference who sympathize with this law of the General Conference, enroll their rule in a resolution such as the following, so that there could be uniformity of action, and that all candidates could know how its supporters would act on their cases without any reference to the individual (the majority thus agreeing would make it a law for the Conference):

"Since by law the General Conference requires our Committee on Admissions to exhort all applicants to abstain from the use of tobacco, for at least reasons of ministerial prudence, and we concur in the spirit of this exhortation, it shall be the rule of this Conference to receive no one either on trial or by readmission who does not agree to abide by this exhortation in abstaining from the use of tobacco."

I move the resolution. Who will second it? P. O. LOWREY.

RESOLUTIONS.

(Adopted by the Noxapater Missionary Society.)

Whereas, our Heavenly Father has seen fit to remove from our midst MRS. H. B. DUCK, who was born December 24, 1843, and died August 11, 1912; and whereas, her life was so full of loving words and kindly greetings that to know her was to love her; and whereas, though she regretted to leave her husband and family whom she loved devotedly, she was resignedly submissive to the Divine Will, therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in her death our Missionary Society has lost one of its most ardent and devoted members, one who was always at her post of duty when her health permitted.

2. That we are deeply grieved at her death and shall miss her willing service in all our plans, but that we are glad to have known one who possessed such a consistent Christian character.

3. That we tender to her husband and relatives our sincere sympathy in this dark hour of their grief, and ask for them the benediction of Him who can heal all our griefs. Mrs. C. Gunn, Mrs. Geo. B. Taylor, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Broad Street Methodist Church, Lake Charles, Louisiana, at its regular November meeting passed the following resolutions upon the death of Mrs. Maud Foster Carter:

Death having invaded our ranks and removed from our midst one of our most faithful and devoted workers in the person of Mrs. Maud Foster Carter; therefore, be it Resolved by the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Lake Charles, Louisiana, That it is with a feeling of profound and inexpressible sorrow that we chronicle the death of this devoted Christian worker; that in her death the Methodist Church to which she belonged from infancy has been bereft of a member who, by her graces and devotion to the cause of righteousness, was a bright and shining example of the Christian life; that her presence at our meetings was always an inspiration to holier living, and that this society has sustained an irreparable loss.

Resolved, further, That we extend our condolence to the bereaved husband and family; that a page of our minutes be set aside for the purpose and that these resolutions be inscribed thereon, and that copies be furnished the local press and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Mrs. W. B. Williamson, Mrs. L. C. Rushworth, Mrs. Jno. B. Kent, Committee.

COLDWATER, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: We are closing out a very pleasant year with this royal people. Our work here is as near ideal, I suppose, as any in our Conference (the North Mississippi). Our stewards assume all responsibility for the money collections, which lifts a great burden off of the pastor's shoulders. Our charge is in good shape, and peace and harmony abounds. We had with us in our meeting at this place my predecessor, Brother Curtis, whose presence and preaching brought gladness to all hearts. He has a hold on this people that doubtless no other man will ever have. We have received 16 into the Church this year, and all of our finances are in full. The charge will pay to all the interests of the Church nearly $3000, and only about $100 of this has been for church repairs. Our church buildings are in good condition. "The water agrees with us." We go to Conference hoping and praying for a spiritual time. May all of our preachers be in place during the sitting of the Conference. Sight-seeing and smoking may be attended to later.—D. W. Babb.

HAYNESVILLE, LA.

My third protracted meeting was held at Colquit Church. The preaching was done by Rev. W. H. Harvell, of Grand Cane, and I do not believe a more successful meeting was ever held anywhere. God's saving power was present in every service. Brother Harvell proved himself to be a soul saver. The Lord gave him many precious souls in this meeting. We had old time shouting from the beginning to the close. As an appreciation of his work the people gave him $90. Brother Jeffries conducted the singing and to say that it was well done does not express it. It pays to have Jeffries to do the singing. His Amens have a clear ring and help no little. My fourth and last revival was at the New Salem Church and the preaching was done by Rev. B. L. Sutherland of the Mississippi Conference. The meeting was a great success, and resulted in a number of accessions and bright conversions. We had old time shouting in the camp. Brother Sutherland won the hearts of the old and young alike. As an appreciation of his work the congregation gave him $45. It is delightful to preach to the people of the Haynesville charge.—G. D. Anders.

Rid Your Face
Of All Pimples

Skin Cleared in a Few Days by Stuart's Calcium Wafers, the Famous Blood Purifier.

Pimples, blotches, skin eruptions of all kinds, are simply the impurities in the blood coming to the surface. All the external treatment in the world won't do a particle of good unless you purify the blood. And there's nothing so humiliating as a face that's all "broken out" and spotted.

It's a Glorious Change to Be Rid of Pimples. You Just Feel Fine.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will clear the most obstinate complexion, because they go right into the blood and remove the cause of the trouble. The blood is cleansed of all impurities and foreign substances and these are quickly eliminated from the system. You'll notice a wonderful change in a few days—you will hardly know yourself in a week.

And Stuart's Calcium Wafers are absolutely harmless to any one. Their ingredients are just what a physician prescribes in most cases of skin eruptions and poor blood. These wafers are put up in a concentrated form, which makes them act quickly and thoroughly.

You can get Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store at 50 cents a box. Begin taking them to-day and then look at yourself in the mirror in a few days, and find all those awful pimples, blackheads, acne, boils, liver spots, rash, eczema and that muddy complexion rapidly disappearing and your face cleared like the petal of a flower.

THE SOUTH LEADS THE NATION.

Has it ever occurred to you in how many different fields of human activity the South has led the nation and the world? A Southern physician discovered Anaesthesia and gave the world painless surgery. A Southern surgeon revolutionized surgical procedure and won for himself the name of "The Father of Gynecology." A Southern man invented the harvesting machine. A Southern General and Statesman was the "Father of his Country" and still another the "Father of Democracy." Southern theologians, orators, jurists, statesmen, generals, scientists, authors, artists and inventors have time and again led the world to greater achievements in their respective fields.

And in the field of instrumental music it is a Southern Piano House that is responsible for the perfecting of the peerless Ludden & Bates Piano, said to possess the sweetest and purest musical tone of any instrument ever built. It is this superb piano, that we have secured for members of the Advocate Piano Club. Five beautiful styles including the Baby Grand, three Cabinet Grand Uprights and a Self-Player Piano are offered in the Club's catalogue, a copy of which will be sent free upon request to any reader. NEWS FROM MISS CORA GODAT.

Miss Cora Godat, our New Orleans girl who is now at the Scarritt Training School preparing for service as a foreign missionary, writes that the class of 1913 has selected the Marooned Nettle as its class flower; its color, yellow and white; its motto, Exodus 15:2; and its class hymn, No. 419 of the hymnal, beginning: "Lord speak to me, that I may speak in living echoes of thy tone." She says the girls are all splendid types of Christian womanhood, and the teachers most lovely, cultured and consecrated women, and that it is a great privilege to be there. Miss Godat is to be one of the representatives of Scarritt at the Missouri Sunday School Convention this month.

CHINA'S NEW FLAG.

China's new flag is composed of alternate stripes of black and yellow, red, white, and blue. The black refers to the Mohammedan population, the yellow to the Manchurian, the red to China proper, the white to the Tibetan, and the blue to the Mongolian. The flag symbolizes the union of the five great populations into one great republic.

At the Northern Methodist General Conference, held in Minneapolis, this flag shared equal honors with our own "Stars and Stripes." Dr. Bi Cu Li, a noted Chinese woman, addressed the Conference. She told how the future government of China was formed, how they decided that a Republic was the best form in use among the nations of the earth, and how they sought to find the nation with the best form of government. Their investigation resulted in choosing the United States as their pattern. Shall not our religion become their guide and inspiration, too? Are we really ready for them to pattern after us?

MAKING PROGRESS.

Since my last report I have received the following subscriptions to the fund for buying the old Methodist Church property in Mansfield for Mansfield College:

Mrs. M. S. Scales	2.50
Mrs. H. McClanahan	2.50
Rev. P. O. Lowrey	10.00
J. T. Watkins, Minden	10.00

James H. Rives, Mer Rouge	10.00
L. C. Johnston, Alexandria	10.00
Dr. G. W. Robinson, Shreveport	10.00
Mrs. F. M. Williams, Mer Rouge	10.00

Total $120.00
Previously reported 212.00

Grand total $332.00
Balance needed, $668.

The fund grows surely, even if somewhat slowly. I hope the loyal Methodists and friends of the College will not forget to send in their subscriptions and urge others to do so. Something like 350 personal appeals have already been sent out. If they all understand how important this property is to the College, and how much the local church is losing by the plan, the money needed would be promptly forthcoming.

No matter whether you are a man or a woman, twenty years old or seventy, all you need do is send the coupon with your full name and address and it will be sent to you, without a penny from you. Age is no barrier to health and this offer is open to all Old Folks, as well as middle-aged and young men and women. We want to send every elderly person a full-sized one dollar box of Bodi-Tone on twenty-five days' trial, the same as we send it to the young and middle-aged, all at our own risk and expense, to prove how Bodi-Tone acts in ailments of the old as well as the young, to prove what it does for persons suffering from bodily weaknesses and ailments, from age or otherwise. Thousands of persons, old and young, have sent for Bodi-Tone on trial without paying a penny, and found it put new flesh on their bones, new vigor in their minds, new vim in their muscles, and new vitality into every vital function, and we want you to try it, to see if it will not do as much for you.

All you need do is tell us you will try it and a dollar box will be handed to you.

It makes no difference who, where or what you are. Bodi-Tone takes all the risks, and asks no pay if it does not benefit. You don't need to write a long letter, don't need to send money or stamps. All you need do is clip the coupon, which tells us you want to try Bodi-Tone, fill in your name and address, and we will send Bodi-Tone to you. This is how Bodi-Tone wants to be tried by old and young, this is how it wants to prove its curative powers. We are glad to send it to you without a penny, glad to give you a chance to try it, to learn about this medicine which has brought new health and vigor to so many sick, suffering and feeble persons, old and young, glad to show you how health can be created, and all agree with the right medicine, made from the right ingredients. If Bodi-Tone benefits you as it has thousands, pay us a dollar for it. If not, don't pay a penny.

Bodi-Tone

Does just what its name means—cures disease by toning up the body, and we want you to try a box at our risk and see what it will do for your body. Bodi-Tone is a small, round tablet, that is taken three times every day. Each box contains seventy-five of these tablets, enough for twenty-five days' use, and we send you the full box without a penny in advance, so that you can try it and learn what it is, so you can learn how it works in the body, how it cures stubborn diseases by helping nature to tone every organ of the body. Tone is a little word, but it means a great deal, everything in health. When all the organs are doing their part, when each is acting in a perfectly natural way, when all the functions are healthy and performed with natural vigor, when the energy, strength and power of resistance to disease are all at a natural point, then the body is in proper tone. When disease has attacked any part, the tone of the entire physical body should be raised to the highest point, to make all the body help to cure. This is the power which Bodi-Tone offers you to help you get new health.

Not a Patent Medicine

Bodi-Tone is not a patent medicine, for its ingredients are not a secret. It contains Iron Phosphate, Gentian, Lithia, Chinese Khabarb, Peruvian Bark, Nux Vomica, Oregon Grape Root, Cascara, Capsicum, Sarsaparilla and Golden Seal. Such valuable ingredients guarantee its merit and power.

When you use Bodi-Tone you know just what you are using, know it is good and safe and know you are taking the kind of medicine to provide real health for the body. It contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs, nothing that your own family doctor will not endorse and say is a good thing. It does not depend on killing pain with cocaine, opium, morphine, or other dangerous drugs. It does not excite the body with alcohol, but it tones the body and cures its disorders with remedies Nature intended to tone and cure the body when that power was given them. Thus, Iron gives life and energy to the Blood, Sarsaparilla drives out its impurities, Phosphate and Nux Vomica create new nerve energy and force. Lithia aids in the Kidneys, Gentian does invaluable work for the Stomach and Digestive forces, Chinese Khabarb and Oregon Grape Root promote vigorous Liver activity, Peruvian Bark raises the tone of the entire system, Golden Seal soothes the inflamed membrane and checks Catarrhal discharges, Cascara gives the Bowels new life in a natural way, and Capsicum makes all more valuable by bettering their quick absorption into the blood. A remarkable combination that does wonderful work for the body's health. Each of these ingredients adds a needed element from nature to the body. We claim no credit for discovering the ingredients in Bodi-Tone, each of which has its own well-deserved place in the medical books of most of the civilized world. We simply claim the credit for the successful formula which we invented, for the way in which these valuable ingredients are combined, for the proportions used, for the curative force which thousands of sick have found in Bodi-Tone. Many of its ingredients are regularly prescribed by doctors, either separately or in combinations with such drugs as each doctor may favor, for there are wide differences of opinion among the doctors of various schools. The exact combination used in Bodi-Tone is what makes Bodi-Tone cure where doctors have failed and gives Bodi-Tone the curative and restorative power that makes possible the remarkable cures experienced by Bodi-Tone users.

You Need It

If you are tired of ceaseless doctor bills and wearied of continual dosing without results, you need Bodi-Tone right now. If your local doctor is doing you no real good, if you have given him a chance to do what he can and the ordinary medicinal combinations he used have failed, give this modern, scientific combination of special remedies a chance to show and prove what it can do for you. Its greatest triumphs have been among men and women with chronic ailments who had good physicians without lasting benefit, and for this reason all chronic sufferers are invited to try a box at our risk.

Bodi-Tone offers its valuable services to you right now, if you are sick, if you need medicinal help, if your bodily organs are not acting as they should, if your body is not in right, natural and normal tone. This is what Bodi-Tone is for, to help Nature restore tone to the body, to restore health, vigor, vitality and strength.

If there is anything wrong with your Kidneys, Bodi-Tone helps to restore tone to the Kidneys, helps to set them right. If there is anything wrong with your Stomach, Bodi-Tone helps to tone the Stomach, helps to set the wrong right. If there is anything wrong with your Nerves, your Blood, your Liver, your Bowels or your General System, the health-making ingredients in Bodi-Tone go right to work and keep on working day after day, producing results of the kind sufferers appreciate. If you have Rheumatism, Bodi-Tone helps to eliminate the Uric Acid from the system while it restores tone to the Kidneys, Stomach and Blood, thereby preventing a continuance of Rheumatic poison and putting new activity into muscles, nerves and joints. Bodi-Tone should be used by all women suffering from any Female Ailment, for its splendid toning properties have been found of special value in such ailments.

We Risk All

Why delay another day, when a trial of this proven medicine is yours for the asking? Why keep on suffering, when by clipping the coupon, filling in your name and address and mailing it to us, you can get a twenty-five days' treatment of this great remedy which has already restored thousands to health, which thousands everywhere are talking about? CARTERSVILLE, GA.—I had been diseased for fifteen years with what the doctors called Systemic Catarrh. I had pains all through my body, in my Bowels, Stomach and Back, and my Heart would flutter and smother so it appeared that I could not live. I had Indigestion and Constipation, with Blind spells. Everything I ate soured on my Stomach. It seemed I could not stand it much longer. I tried all the doctors in my settlement and three specialists of Atlanta, Ga., and most of the patent medicines I heard of, without any relief, until I got Bodi-Tone. By the time I had taken a treatment of Bodi-Tone I could eat anything I wanted, and there was not a pain in my body. Bodi-Tone did more for me than all the doctors. I am seventy-five years old. J. E. PERRY.

LANTANA, TENN.—I had Rheumatism for twenty-five years from my Neck to my Ankles, Catarrh of the Head for about twenty years and a bad Stomach. I had a terrible swimming in my head, and last Winter I took a terrible cough and spit up quantities of mucus, which the doctors said, was Bronchial Asthma. They doctored me all winter with but little benefit. I saw Bodi-Tone advertised, sent for a trial box and I got my cure from this medicine. I am stupider this Winter than I have been in thirty years and seem to be entirely cured of all my troubles. I have gained thirty-two pounds since taking Bodi-Tone, and can walk ten miles in a day. I am sixty years old. I owe all my good health to Bodi-Tone and believe it saved my life. MRS. EMILY DRIVER.

WATSON, OHIO.—Bodi-Tone has done wonders for me. Last Fall I was so run down that I could hardly get up and down. I doctored and received only temporary relief. I tried everything and had about made up my mind that there was no help. I could not eat and didn't seem to crave anything. Everyone thought I would not live through the winter, and I really thought so myself. My Kidneys and Bladder were so bad, and my Stomach aiso. I had such weak spells with my Heart that it was not safe for me to start out to walk, as I could only stand on my feet a little while. My head was dizzy. I saw the Bodi-Tone offer and decided to try once more. I have not felt so well for years as I do since I used Bodi-Tone. I am in my seventy-second year and can do a day's work. Everyone is surprised to see me as well as I am now. A. SAMS.

GOD'S MAN.

He comes! God's man, across the hills!
With high resolve he fronts the dawns;
He swiftly trails the upland lawns,
And, eager, hears the song that thrills.

His heart is warm, and clear his brain;
He scorns to wrong a brother man;
In honor's march he leads the van;
His dreams are sweet as April rain.

When error's hordes the right invade
And justice strive to overthrow,
Then God's man dares to face the foe,
And, lightning-quick, descends his blade.

The heartless jibe and ridicule,
The swish of envy's stinging whip,
The firmer make him set his lip,
And stricter draw the Golden Rule.

He brooks no compromise with sin;
His steps are ever Godward bent;
He lives for that divine event
When God shall say: "Well done!
Come in!"

—Frank P. Reno, in Adult Bible Class Monthly.

THE MINISTER'S ONE WORK.

"Oh, the books which have been written on Christology! If half the energy displayed mentally in analyzing Christ were devoted to the work of inducing dying men and women to accept him as their Savior, what a wave of evangelical power would sweep over the land!"

Well worth meditating upon are these earnest words, written by Dr. T. N. Ivey, the Editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate. The Christian religion unfetters the human mind and sets men to thinking. The nations that have come under its influence lead in the grand march of intellectual, as well as of material and moral, progress. The world's best literature is Christian, and the influence of the Bible upon the distinguished authors who produced it is clearly manifest in their writings. But this mental activity, which is one of the glories of Christianity, if properly directed, may become a source of peril. Speculation may be overdone. We fear it is to some extent in this day. For instance, some men will persist in endeavoring to trace the line of demarcation between the human and divine in Christ; others even dare to try to solve the mysteries of the Holy Spirit's work and waste their time writing upon what they are pleased to term the 'psychology of conversion' and kindred subjects, forgetful of the truth that "all the Spirit's operations are covered with a cloud that will not lift before the gaze of human research."

It cannot be too strongly emphasized that the supreme mission of the disciples of Jesus, and especially of ministers of the Gospel, is to bring the unsaved to the Master and imbue them with his spirit. The value of a book, so far as they are concerned, must be chiefly determined by the extent to which it contributes to this end. The shepherd who buries himself in his library, delighting in intellectual pursuits, while members of his flock are wandering off to destruction, makes a tremendous mistake. Human souls are the only things of enduring value upon our planet, and in rescuing one of them we perform an immortal achievement. For a preacher to forsake this task for any other is to trifle away his energies, to the neglect of opportunities that an angel would covet. Making ponderous volumes to repose in bookcases may be a good thing, but to make saints that will shine forever around the Father's throne is a far better work.

Paul taught in his time that there was no saving power in the enticing words of men's wisdom; nor is there any in them now, much ado as we make over the intellectual displays often heard from our pulpits. Too much philosophizing is the explanation of many a barren ministry. To be sure, we want educated preachers, but not because they have the capacity to talk more learnedly and eloquently than others, but because, if fully consecrated, they can present more simply and appealingly the great truths of the Gospel. Efficiency in reaching the lost and bringing them to our Lord and building them up in him, is what we want in our ministry. The education that helps in this we should highly prize; and that which hinders it, no matter how men may admire it and be dazzled by it, is a dangerous snare of which we should beware. Oh, let us see what our high calling is, and keep humbly and faithfully at the work which the Master has commissioned us to do. Earth can summon us to no activities which are anything like so grand and noble, or which will at last bring so rich and unfading a reward. Every herald of the Cross should be able, with Charles Wesley, truthfully to exclaim:

"His only righteousness I show,
His saving truth proclaim;
'Tis all my business here below
To cry, 'Behold the Lamb!'"

"Happy, if with my latest breath
I may but gasp his name;
Preach him to all, and cry in death,
'Behold, behold the Lamb!'"

A FORMER SENTENCE EXPLAINED.

The Southwestern Christian Advocate says: "The New Orleans Christian Advocate quotes the Central Methodist Advocate as saying, 'There is not in South Carolina a white congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church. What congregations of that Church there are in the State are composed of Negroes, and with the colored M. E. Church already existing in that State, there is very little reason why the white M. E. Church should go on organizing the Negroes of that State into M. E. Churches, thereby dividing them into two rival organizations.' The New Orleans Christian Advocate says that the question raised is 'well worth careful consideration.'" Having made this statement, the Southwestern desires to know if we think the Methodist Episcopal Church should withdraw from South Carolina, and since the same argument would apply to their work among the colored people in the other commonwealths of the South, if we would have them cease it altogether.

The statement quoted above is not ours; nor did we give it full endorsement. We quoted it simply as the view of a brother editor and made the single comment that the question raised by Dr. Mann was deserving of careful consideration. It was the suggestion that there ought to be a union of the Negro Methodists in South Carolina that caught our attention, and that was what we had in mind when we remarked that the issue raised by the Doctor was worth considering. We have never seen any more reason why there should be competing colored Methodist bodies in the same territory, building altar against altar, than that there should be different white Methodist Churches doing this. We were not thinking at the time of the steps by which such a union may be best consummated, but of the possible benefits that might result from a united colored Methodism.

We assure our contemporary that we do not desire to see the white Methodists of either the North or South do less for the negroes of South Carolina or any other Southern State. On the contrary, we would have them to increase their gifts and efforts to assist them. But as to how this can best be done, there is considerable diversity of opinion. It must be admitted that, both in numbers and the amount of property owned, the independent Negro Methodist bodies are far in the lead of those operating under the direction of white denominations. And we are by no means certain that the Northern Methodist Church would not act wisely to assist in merging into one great organization all the Negro Methodists of the United States. Such a course would not necessarily mean the shutting up of a single church or college, or the lessening by a single dollar of the contributions made to carry on the work among our colored population. On the other hand, by doing away with all unnecessary competition and waste, this plan of operation might possibly strengthen and facilitate the work in all its various departments. Nor are these reflections merely the vain imaginings of a Southern Methodist. There are not a few in the Northern Church who are thinking seriously along this line.

SUGGESTIVE.

Here is a point for ministers to remember: Representative William B. McKinley of Illinois is in such close touch with the children of his district, that upon each Thanksgiving, Easter and Christmas every child in attendance upon public school receives a remembrance from him in the way of a post-card. Recently each child received a little bundle of campaign matter. We are informed that these little fellows are all for McKinley. We do not blame them. Any child can be won who receives such attention. What would Methodism be in the coming generation if all its children were given such attention as this?—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

A BACKWARD GLANCE

At Some Who Attained Upright Positions "Among The Thirty and Who Were Numbered With The Honorable Ones."

In pursuance of your request, Mr. Editor, I undertake to set forth some impressions of our leaders of the past. However, in the outset, circumstances confront me: lack of space in your columns, the great number to choose from and my poverty in selection of adjectives for such a contribution; and furthermore, the consciousness that after my selection shall have been made, some may say that there were others more worthy. With these reflections I throw myself upon the mercy of your readers.

Still above the horizon of forty years ago, when this writer was but a youth, there appeared with names as Marshall, Abbey, Jones and Watkins. Having known the first two in my boyhood, they seemed to me not only as venerable men, but eminently worthy to occupy places among those who had attained unto the first three. Though unlike at almost every point, there was a congeniality of spirit which drew them together like that between Jonathan and David. In personal appearance Dr. Marshall was striking and imposing—an attraction in any company. His eloquence was applauded throughout the nation; great crowds gathered at the announcement of his coming. One in writing of him says that "Dr. Marshall was a genius, an able theologian, and of peerless eloquence." Dr. Abbey was short of stature and rather inclined to hide himself from the observation of others. To eloquence he made no claim, but was rather thoughtful and didactic. Well informed upon whatever cause he espoused, we unto the champion who met him in debate. He will live longest in our history because of his numerous publications in books and his contributions to the press of the Church.

At the session of our Conference in Canton, in 1859, it was my good fortune to have these two honored patriarchs in our home and to listen to their discussions of living questions, and their rehearsals of other days shall last as a precious memory. Each recognized the greatness of the other, as was frequently brought out in such expressions as the following: "Abbey, write it, write, yours is such a ready pen;" "No, Marshall, you must preach it, others will hear you who will never read my scribbles." Thus they spent the week in freedom and friendship sweet, which was to be their last this side the Father's house; for ere there was another gathering of our militant hosts they had joined the ranks triumphant.

Of the other two, Jones and Watkins, better known to our rank and file, what shall I say that is not already stamped upon the memory of your readers? My first acquaintance with these leaders was at the last session of the Mississippi Conference held in the town of Brandon—my first visit to the annual gathering of that body. As an on-looker I was impressed that Brother Jones, as he was familiarly called, was the recognized historian of the body—many appeals being made to him for the verifying of our records. He had already published two or three volumes of greater or less note, and he had been requested by the Conference to write its history from the beginning. Of Dr. Watkins there was that pleasing first impression which never leaves one. He was neatly frocked in his long Prince Albert, graceful as a lady, and the personification of neatness. His well rounded periods, his correctness of diction, which impelled men to hear him, and his logical speech were evident while he discussed the questions before the body. Born and reared in the same neighborhood, entering the ministry nearly at the same time, and firm friends throughout their long and eventful lives, these also were not long separated in their going hence.

But time flies as on rapid wing, and the actors change upon the stage. We are looking upon new faces and hearing other voices. No longer does the versatile Harris sit at the secretary's desk, but one who is destined with his faithful assistant to occupy the position for thirty-five consecutive years. It would not have seemed a proper organization in all these years had others than C. G. Andrews and John A. B. Jones occupied these places. These two have joined the holy ranks and others have taken up their long-wearied pens. But upon the floor and in the pulpit others have come into view, and we see towering in his greatness "head and shoulders above all the mighty ones" the sturdy Linfield, matchless in his eloquence and powerful in his appeal—few, indeed, there are within a generation who might be likened unto him. Then there stands the scholarly, polished Johnson—our famed educator and much trusted lawyer. He lives yet in the hearts of many mothers within our commonwealth and will live long in the homes of our Methodism through memories perpetuated from parents to daughters. Of Ransom J. Jones, our interpreter of laws; W. L. C. Hunt, our correct scholar and graceful writer; the sweet-spirited Forsythe, the greatly beloved Ellis, the trusted Lewis and many others whose faces pass before me and whose voices still are heard, I would write, but your space and your readers, alike, proclaim a halt. Looking over the minutes of four decades my eye rests here and there upon those too numerous to mention, and of whom it may be truly written, the "world was not worthy." Coming in the wake of the greatest war of modern times, operating in a country that had been swept like a besom of destruction by a cruel revengeful conqueror, they wrought as heroes and left to us a goodly heritage.

But this chapter would be incomplete should I fail to speak of one who early took rank among the thirty and was numbered among the "three." Of his marvelous career others have written so fully and so truthfully that I will not attempt more. Within the patronizing territory of the Advocate he was too widely known and too well beloved as preacher, editor and Bishop, to need aught from my poor pen. The name of Charles B. Galloway is one which every Mississippian delights to honor, and his memory one which every Methodist loves to cherish. However, it was not in these more conspicuous places that he ranked the highest, but in the home and the inner circle of his friends. Those who knew him best trusted most implicitly his counsel. Of his sincerity and greatness of heart there was no doubt, and of this there was no greater evidence than the cordial welcome given him in his presidency over his home Conference. All trusted him as incapable of willful wrong or injustice. In those virtues, concerning a Bishop, suggested by the Great Apostle, he stood supreme. To the needy his purse was ever open, and to his friends and the transient itinerant his was an open house. Amid all the honors received from the great of earth, he seemed never to get out of sympathy with the young; to them his home and heart were always open. To the less fortunate and the aged, he gave special thought, willingly sacrificing himself for their pleasure and comfort. To know him amid his honors was to admire him, but to know him in the social circle and in his home was to love him.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE: BRIEF HISTORY.

By President C. M. Chapman.

In the early development of Methodism in Mississippi, the Port Gibson Female College played an important part. Its founders were in advance of the time of any general interest in educational work, except in a limited way. It is the oldest college in the State for the education of women, and possibly the second one founded in the State for that purpose (Elizabeth Academy at Washington was the first. It has never had a checkered history, but an abnormal growth, but for seventy-four years has grown in the public confidence and esteem and has added in giving to the South an educated womanhood that has cleared the home, Church and State. Its relation and loyalty to the Church have never been questioned. The position and location of the institution are ideally reached from the west, north, south or east. There has never been a death in the College within the memory of those in position to know.

The first President, a Mr. Harvey, who was the founder of the college, lived so long ago that little about him is known save the fact that in 1837, at the solicitation of the town of Port Gibson, he "started a college for girls." Port Gibson was at that time competing with Grand Gulf for preeminence in commercial affairs.

After Mr. Harvey's administration came the Rev. Mr. Capers, M. D., whose term was brief. He was followed by the Rev. Ben Jones (now related to the present members of the Mississippi Conference who bear that name). Mr. Jones ran the institution successfully for four years, and was followed by a Dr. Stark (Ph. D.). What this capable man did is not now well known. Rev. Ben Jones again became president of the college and made a permanent record for himself by adding to the college buildings the Auditorium building and the "Old Dormitory" which is so well known to the students and friends of the College. Prof. Wright became the president after Rev. Mr. Jones' second administration, and was succeeded by Prof. R. S. Ricketts, now of Millsaps College. Prof. Ricketts, whose labors for the institution were during the Reconstruction period, was handicapped by the difficulties of the "seventies," and by the loss of his dear wife; yet he made an enviable record—one that the college will ever cherish.

REV. C. M. CHAPMAN.

President of Port Gibson Female College.

Now we come to history that is so bright that not even time will dim it. Mrs. T. B. Holloman says that her father, Rev. J. A. B. Jones, often said that he had given five of the best years of his life to the Port Gibson Female College. He reigned—for a reign it was, and a triumphant one, for the college—from 1872 to 1881. He found twenty-seven, day and five boarding pupils in the college. Would it be saying too much to say that Rev. J. A. B. Jones saved the college to the Church? We think not. There was no fault in the deed to give trouble, but there was a worse condition than that. The school had no successful past history upon which it could lean; there was no pressing demand from the Church or community to spur it to activity, and there were few, if any, who even dreamed of the possibility of a great college or who tried to arouse enthusiasm among the people in favor of carrying the institution forward to larger things. Brother Jones went to his task as one with a vision. He impressed the Church with its need of the college. It was soon so crowded with pupils that its parlor was curtained and used as bedrooms. Long live the sainted memory of him whose life meant so much to this institution!

All stars are not of the same magnitude. We do not know all that was done by Rev. T. C. Bradford, who succeeded Rev. J. A. B. Jones as president, but we know that he maintained a good, high-grade school for the Church. He was succeeded by Dr. E. H. Moulger, who rendered to the Church and college an excellent service, and was followed by Miss Mary Compton, who also did a good work. Dr. B. F. Jones was the next head of the school and was faithful in the discharge of the duties that devolved upon him.

Dr. W. H. Huntley was president during a most distressing time—a time when colleges and schools were almost bankrupt on account of the financial condition of the country, in 1893-4. If faithful work may be counted for success, then Dr. Huntley's administration was attended with marvelous success. The school then passed into the hands of Mrs. Meek, of Port Gibson, who successfully conducted it for three and a half sessions.

As the tide of prosperity came in, it brought a vision of a greater college to both the Church and Port Gibson. Under the leadership of Rev. L. S. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, the present dining room and the new dormitory were constructed, the course of study was raised, and a lasting work for the college accomplished. In 1905 Rev. H. G. Hawkins became president, and accomplished the purchase of the "Annex" building and made a number of necessary improvements. No preceding president left the school in such good condition as did Rev. H. G. Hawkins.

Port Gibson Female College has always maintained as high a grade as any school for girls in the State; but this fact has never been so widely recognized as during the last ten years. During the last decade each session has witnessed the graduation of a fine class of young women well equipped for the work of life.

With its commodious and well-kept brick buildings suitably adapted for class rooms and dormitories, with its library, music halls, dining-room and well equipped kitchen; with its site and campus in the very heart of the residential section of Port Gibson; with such benefits as municipally furnished water and light, and a fine laundry near at hand; with nothing in the past to regret nor the present to embarrass; with as proud an Alumnae as any college ever had, and a great Church behind it; with an able Faculty and its buildings filled with the choicest girls from the best homes of our State, why should not the Port Gibson Female College "go on to perfection?"

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE,
The only Methodist Institution for the Education of Young Women in Louisiana.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

A Brief Historical Sketch.

By President R. E. Bobbitt.

The foundation of the main building of Mansfield Female College was laid in 1854; the work of the College began in a frame building, now used as a dining hall, in 1855. The main building was completed in 1856, the year in which the first class graduated. There were three in this class, two of whom have died within the last year.

Dr. Thweatt, together with Rev. Wm. E. Doty, selected Mansfield as the seat of the College and received from the town and vicinity about $30,000 in contributions. Dr. Thweatt was made the first President. His grave is on the campus.

About ten acres of ground and the college building were presented by the citizens of Mansfield to the Louisiana Conference at its session in January, 1855. The State General Assembly of 1855 incorporated the Institution and the Act, No. 88, was signed by Gov. Hebert on March 9th.

When the war came the College was in debt and it was sold to Mr. Phillips of Mansfield, who held it until it was repurchased by Dr. Jno. C. Keener. Dr. Keener freed the College of debt and again placed it in the possession of the Church. The second president, and the first after the war, was Dr. Chas. B. Stuart.

Since Dr. Stuart the following have been presidents of the College: Rev. Thos. Armstrong to 1880; J. Lane Boyden to 1883; Rev. F. M. Grace to 1889; Dr. A. D. McVoy to 1896; Prof. T. S. Sligh to 1907; Prof. O. S. Dean to 1909; Prof. Geo. L. Harrell to 1910; Dr. W. L. Weber, who lived but a few weeks after his election, dying on September 30th, 1910; Prof. A. B. Peters to 1912.

About ten years ago there was added to the main building a large three-story annex at a cost of about $15,000. To finish the architect's plan it will be necessary to put another annex on the south side of the main structure.

Last year $25,000 in bonds were sold and every dollar of indebtedness was paid, the Annual Conference obligating itself to pay a $1000 bond each year and the accrued interest. This relief came none too soon, for foreclosure of the mortgage was threatened. The debt is now in such shape that it may be easily met and the College has received a new lease of life. In accomplishing this result, much is due Rev. N. E. Joyner for his untiring efforts and sound business judgment. Many and true have been the friends of old Mansfield Female College. For years the burden fell on Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard; Mr. A. F. Jackson, who has but lately passed to his reward could always be counted upon, and Mr. D. G. Petty, the present president of the Board of Trustees, has remained faithful in the hour of sorest need.

Everybody says there is at present a brighter prospect for the College than it has had in many years. There are 14 old and 32 new students in the boarding department which, with 83 from town, makes an enrollment of 124.

There have been 320 graduates—princesses and queens of Dixie land.

The good old days are gone; the better new day is here, but the best is yet to be.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Reported by Rev. T. M. Bradley

The present is the second Annual Conference that has ever assembled in Greenwood. The first met here thirteen years ago when this place was a town of perhaps 2000 people. It was presided over by Bishop W. A. Chandler, then prince of preachers and masterful administrator. His quiet addresses from the chair and pious devotion from the pulpit are for the subject of conversation among the people of this country. Since the North Mississippi Conference last convened here Greenwood has made marvelous progress. Its population is perhaps now not less than 8000; no city in the State has more beautiful churches or pays larger salaries to the pastors who serve them. More cotton is marketed here than in any other town in Mississippi; the banks carry large deposits; the streets are being paved; beautiful residences are seen on every side and the ring of the hammer indicates that the tide of prosperity is still rising. Methodism in Greenwood is alert and vital; our house of worship is a substantial brick structure, modern in its appointments and handsome in appearance. During the past four years this congregation has enjoyed a steady growth under the pastorate of Rev. H. S. Sprague, the genial host of the Conference, whose name is never mentioned except in praise. As a convention city, Greenwood is now famous and unsurpassed.

Tuesday Evening, December 3rd

The Historical Society of the North Mississippi Conference met on Tuesday evening. Rev. G. W. Packman, the president, being absent on account of sickness, Rev. J. A. Hall presided. Rev. Nash Broyles was elected secretary.

Rev. J. J. Brooks read a very interesting paper on old Epworth Church in Marshall County, giving the history of its organization and development. This church was founded in 1837, and is one of the oldest churches in North Mississippi. Four men were converted and granted license to preach at its altar.

Rev. E. S. Lewis gave the history of old Friendship Church. He showed the influence of that church over men who have entered the various walks of life. Several ministers have come from the membership of old Friendship Church, among them, being the speaker, and his brother, the Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Memphis, Tenn.

Wednesday, December 4th

Bishop H. C. Morrison called the Conference to order at 9 o'clock, after which Hymn number 360 was sung with the old time revival ring. The Bishop's comments on the first verses of the fifth chapter of Romans were apt and helpful. He announced that each morning of the Conference a prayer meeting would convene from 8:30 to 9 o'clock.

The roll call showed almost a full attendance of the ministers and lay delegates, there being only a few ministers who failed to answer when their names were called. Since the last Conference three have been called home, having answered Heaven's roll call, as follows: Rev. J. W. Hootoll, Rev. J. T. Cunningham, and Rev. J. T. Murrah.

Rev. J. R. Counties was re-elected Secretary of the Conference; Rev. E. S. Lewis, Assistant Secretary; Rev. V. C. Curtis, Railroad Secretary, and Revs. Nash Broyles and W. M. Langley, Statistical Secretaries.

The following visiting brethren were introduced to the Conference: Revs. T. W. Lewis, J. A. Bowen, I. D. Borders, G. W. Eichelberger, Mr. C. O. Chalmers, and Mr. I. G. Campbell.

Some twelve or more superannuated ministers answered to their names, and gave reports. The short talks of these brethren, who labored in former days, but who are now awaiting the roll call on high, were helpful and encouraging. Each stated that God was very near, and that his faith was growing brighter unto the perfect day.

In the afternoon the Veterans' Association met, with Rev. S. M. Thomas presiding. Ministers who have served forty years in the ministry are eligible for membership in this Association. The sermon was preached by Rev. John Ritchey. Brother Ritchey's review of his life and ministry was interesting. He said that vast changes have taken place indicative of improvement since he came into the Conference. He stated that his first salary paid him $175 a year. In recent times preachers are paid better, and the work is not so laborious as the physical man as compared with early days.

Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Memphis, preached an eloquent sermon at the evening hour.

Thursday, December 5th

The morning prayer service, led by Rev. W. S. Lagrone, was spiritual and instructive. Bishop Morrison called for the reports of the presiding elders. On the whole, they were very good. Rev. J. E. Thomas stated that there had been a number of revivals in the Columbus District and considerable advancement along material lines.

Rev. N. G. Armstrong, of the Durant District, represented the conditions as somewhat depressing in the territory under his supervision, due to unfavorable seasons and the depredations of the boll weevil. He said that most of the preachers, however, had done good work and that a majority of the charges had made a fairly good showing; five new churches had been built.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham stated that the work in the Aberdeen District had been done in the face of many obstacles, but that notwithstanding a fair measure of success had been achieved. About 475 members had been received into the Church.

Rev. W. W. Woodard, though a considerable portion of the territory of the Greenville District was overgrown last spring, announced a year of noteworthy progress. Nearly all of the charges met their assessments in full though they had been considerably raised. The women's work and the Sunday school work had made marked advancement. About 150 had been received into the Church—a net gain of 150. Special mention was made of the work at Shaw, Rosedale, and Greenville. A handsome new parsonage had been built at Glen Allen.

Rev. R. A. Tucker, of the Holly Springs District, said that the year had been a successful one in nearly all respects; 600 members had been added to the Church.

Rev. J. W. Dorman, of the Sardis District, sounded an optimistic note. The pastors had been faithful and nearly everywhere encouraging signs are visible.

Rev. J. H. Mitchell gave a gratifying account of conditions in the Corinth District. The brethren had wrought faithfully and their labors had not been unfruitful. There had been a large ingathering of souls and the membership had been considerably increased.

Rev. B. P. Jacob was happy over the results accomplished in the Winona District. Eight hundred had been added to the Church; several new churches were in prospect, and the finances were in fine shape.

The estimated net increase in membership for the entire Conference is 4100.

The pastors of the Conference reported next; this consumed one hour and a half.

Mr. Sherard addressed the Conference in the interest of the Methodist Hospital in Memphis. The work is going steadily on. He said the movement would progress rapidly when the preachers take hold of it energetically.

Rev. J. W. Gilbert, who toured with Bishop W. R. Lambuth in Africa, spoke of Africa's needs and thirst for the Gospel. He intends to return soon to Africa and erect a college to train workmen for the Master in that land. Africa must have trained leadership, if the people are to be reached and saved. Several hundred dollars were given for the purpose of erecting such a college. A goodly number of laymen took part in today's deliberations, notably Judge Percy Bell, of Greenville. An executive session was called to meet at 2:30 p.m.

At the evening hour Mr. Chas. D. Bulla spoke on the Sunday school work, showing the value of the Sunday school to young life. He stated that the work with the children is the most important work committed to the Church. He said that 90 out of every 100 ministers, as well as 80 per cent of church members, come from the Sabbath schools of the land. The Treasurer of the Board reported over $1200 collected on Children's Day.

Friday, December 6th

Dr. T. C. Weir led the appointed devotional service, using the hymn, "Amazing Grace," as the opening song. Addresses from connective representatives from Nashville, New Orleans, Memphis, and Jackson, Miss., consumed much time of the morning session.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, President of Whitworth College, addressed the Conference on "Universal Education." He urged the ministers and laymen to be loyal to our universal schools. Rev. E. S. Lewis read the report of Millsaps College, which showed that Millsaps is prospering and is in a firm basis. The character of work done should commend the institution to the people of Mississippi. The report emphasized the existence of a positive religious atmosphere at the College. It is the program for a student not to attend regularly church and Sunday school services. Dr. I. M. Shilpp, of Jackson, Miss., a member of the Millsaps Faculty, delivered a stirring address in which he told of the harmonious spirit prevailing at this institution.

Rev. J. R. Counties, President of Grenada College, gave a splendid report of the work being done by that school. He urged the necessity of educating the girls for the highest usefulness in life. No Methodist should send his daughter to a school outside of the State when such a college as Grenada is so easily accessible.

Dr. J. M. Moore, of Nashville, and the Rev. Mr. Rennie, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Greenwood, were introduced to the Conference.

Bishop Morrison, in an impressive manner, expressed his thanks to Miss Elizabeth Edgwick and her Sunday school class of 500 pupils for some beautiful flowers presented to him. He said in part: "I trust the lives of these young men will ever be as white and spotless as are these flowers presented to me. I hope that when the events of time are forever closed, Miss Edgwick may gather up her class where everlasting spring abides and never-withering flowers."

Miss S. M. Thomas, First Vice-President of the Women's Home Mission Society, read an interesting paper. Rev. E. S. Lewis read the report of the Orphans' Home, which showed that that institution has enrolled during the year 173 children. The finances of the Home are in good shape. T. H. Dorsey, J. M. Wyatt, and R. T. Jones were elected members of the Board of Management. Rev. W. M. Williams, in his address, stated that $50,000 had been expended for improvements, and that there is no incumbrance upon this splendid plant. This Home, which is doing so much for the orphan children of Mississippi, owes much to Mr. J. H. Sherard, who is one of the big-hearted and noble-hearted laymen of our Conference. The institution has never had more efficient managers than Brother Williams and his good wife.

D. H. Crowson, J. L. Nabors and J. R. Bright were elected to elder's orders; D. R. McDougal and E. M. Shaw to deacon's orders, and W. J. Wood to local elder's orders. Mr. J. R. Bingham was elected Conference lay leader. The following having passed an approved examination, were admitted into the traveling connection on trial: P. F. Luter, T. H. McGee, F. L. Oakes, E. C. Newbern, J. D. Wooten, R. W. Lovett, Melville Johnson, L. P. Wesson, A. J. Henry, D. R. McDougal, R. B. Burks, B. F. Bullard, W. W. Bruner.

The Conference then proceeded to select the place for the meeting of the next Annual Conference. J. E. Cunningham and W. S. Lagrone spoke in behalf of Tupelo; W. D. Wendel and John Ritchey presented the claims of Pontotoc. Tupelo was selected.

Rev. H. M. Ellis preached at 3 o'clock in the Baptist Church to a large audience. He emphasized the spirit of Christ in administering to the sick and needy.

At the evening hour the Board of Missions held its anniversary, with a large attendance. The principal address was delivered by Dr. John M. Moore, General Missionary Secretary for the Home Department.

Saturday, December 7th

Saturday morning's session was a busy one. First, the committees were heard from. The report of the Committee on Sabbath observance was read by Rev. O. P. Armour. It was a strong report. Rev. T. M. Bradley read the report of the Joint Board of Finance. He stated that the assessment for the Superannuate Fund, which in this Conference is 1 per cent of the preachers' salaries, had not been collected in full. This should not be, since there are so many needy claimants upon it. For another year the assessment for Conference Claimants was raised $1000.

Dr. James Cannon, of Virginia, represented the Waynesville assembly of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He showed the necessity of our Southern Church opening an assembly such as that which is being planned under his leadership.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb reported for the Board of Education. He insisted that the preachers do not discriminate against the General Board in their worthy loyalty to Millsaps and Grenada Colleges. On motion, it was ordered that after the coming year, the representatives of the North Mississippi Conference should not obligate that body, financially or otherwise, to support or con-

The Mississippi Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, Miss.

THE MISSISSIPPI ORPHANS' HOME.

The first definite action taken by the Mississippi Methodists to care for the orphans of the State, was in 1892, when in Natchez, Miss., the Mississippi Annual Conference appointed a committee, consisting of three preachers and three laymen, to look into the advisability of building an Orphanage. The first meeting of this committee was held in the pastor's study, at the First Church, in Jackson, Miss., March 2, 1893. Nothing further was done than to discuss the needs of such an institution and to make an effort to secure a site and contributions.

During the year 1894 certain preachers and laymen of the North Mississippi Conference took the matter up, and at the Conference which met in Sardis, commissioners were appointed to confer with like commissioners from the Mississippi Conference. This action was reported to the Annual Conference which met in Meridian, and on the recommendation of the committee appointed at Natchez, commissioners were appointed. These commissioners met in Winona in April, 1895, and recommended to the two Annual Conferences the establishing of an Orphanage under the patronage and support of the Methodists of Mississippi. This report was presented to the North Mississippi Conference which met in Water Valley in December. The recommendation was adopted. Trustees were appointed and a subscription of $1100 was taken for the building fund.

The Mississippi Conference met a week later in Yazoo City, the recommendation was adopted, trustees appointed, and a subscription taken amounting to $2000.00.

The joint Board of Trustees met early in January in the Sunday school room of the First Methodist Church in Jackson, and made plans to carry out the purpose of the resolution adopted by the Conferences. A committee was appointed to secure a charter, and the late Hon. W. L. Nugent was requested to prepare the same, which he did. The committee adjourned to meet at Winona on the 3d of April to consider a location. At the meeting in Winona, Water Valley was selected as the site, the town giving fifty acres of land. In September of the same year the plans for the building were adopted, and on December 6, the contract was let. On April 26, 1907, the corner-stone of the building was laid by the late Rev. R. J. Jones, during a meeting of the Epworth League Conference in Water Valley.

At a meeting held in Oxford, during the session of the North Mississippi Conference, 1907, the writer was elected manager, and on the first day of March, 1898, the Home was formally opened with two orphans, Ava Ford and Boyd Robertson, from near Oxford.

The great question was how to maintain the institution. Those who favored the work contended that it could be maintained free of encumbrance; those who opposed said that this could not be done, for orphanages were debt producers. At first the people did not realize the need, and the contributions were small, as a rule, and while adequate, not abundantly so. Much, however, of the financial success is to be attributed to the work of several laymen, who took it in their hands to see that regular contributions were made. The first, and possibly the most enthusiastic of these, was Rowan Thayer of Greenwood, who organized a club to contribute monthly, he collecting and remitting to the Treasurer. Next in point of organization was a band known as The Orphans' Home Helpers, in Satartia, under the leadership of Rev. C. C. Evans, and each month a contribution came from them to the Treasurer. The next regular contributor in point of time, was Mrs. A. B. Finlay of Greenville, who encouraged the Methodists of that city to give regularly and liberally.

There was a need of information that could not be supplied through the church press, or by the Traveling Agents, and it was thought wise to try the experiment of a paper. The result is the orphanage paper, "Our Home." It probably has done more to create interest than any other one agency.

When the Orphanage was first opened it was not thought wise to send the children to the public school; so there was a young lady employed who filled the dual position of teacher and seamstress, for the first year. The next year a regular teacher was employed and the school has been kept up.

In December, 1899, Rev. W. S. Harrison, of the North Mississippi Conference, was elected manager, and Rev. W. T. Griffin, of the Mississippi Conference, traveling agent. In December, 1902, Rev. W. T. Griffin was elected manager and agent, and served until April, 1904, when Rev. W. S. Shipman was elected manager, and Rev. W. T. Griffin acted as financial agent for the remainder of the year.

In July, 1904, the building in Water Valley was burned. The trustees had a meeting soon after the burning of the building and appointed a building committee to receive propositions from towns that might want the Orphanage, if it was moved from Water Valley, and made arrangements with the trustees of Hamilton Female College of Water Valley for the orphans to occupy that building. The committee, after several meetings, referred the matter of the location to the two Annual Conferences, recommending Jackson, Miss., because of its accessibility, cheap freight rates, and the further consideration that the City of Jackson offered $10,000 as a bonus for the location.

The Conferences, which met respectively at Gulfport and Kosciusko, adopted the recommendation of the Board of Directors, if a suitable site could be secured. Rev. Q. A. Oats, of the North Mississippi Conference, was elected manager.

The Committee met in Jackson early in January, all the members being present, and after canvassing different sites, settled on the plot of ground now occupied. Major Millsaps, the owner, generously donated the property. The site at Water Valley was offered for sale and the money for the purchase price tendered back to each of the donors.

The Building Committee advertised for plans, and by the early summer of 1905 the work was well under way. In the early days of 1906, the Orphanage family, consisting of more than one hundred, was moved from the temporary quarters in Water Valley, to Jackson. In December Brother W. M. Williams was elected manager and agent, and is the present very efficient manager.

The Orphanage has cared for nearly one thousand children. The institution has been maintained comparatively free of debt. During Bro.

Williams' administration there have been built a Boys' Dormitory and a School Building. The school building was made possible by the donation of Dr. Luther Sexton, of New Orleans, La., and the other building by the gift of Mrs. Mary Lampton, of Magnolia. The buildings and grounds are worth about $100,000. During the sixteen years there has been contributed by the Methodists of Mississippi, about $250,000. The contributions have not been in large sums, as a rule. I suppose I would not overstate the fact if I were to say that more people in Mississippi contribute to this fund than any other one interest of our Church. When we think of the thousands of dollars it has cost, some might say in the language of Judas, "What a waste." But when you turn and look at the great company of children that have passed through the halls of this institution, I do not hesitate to say that no other investment in the State of Mississippi has meant more to the future of the State than this money which has been invested in the morals and intellect of these hundreds of children.

The question may be asked, Have all the children turned out well? The answer might be given, Have all children in private families turned out well? If, then, there is a failure now and then on the part of the parents in well-regulated homes, it would hardly be wise to charge the institution with failing, when we gather children from all parts of the State and from all grades of society, when now and then we fail to accomplish that which we would like. But if the testimony of each child could be taken, the words of commendation would be an inspiration to the multitude of contributors. Let our prayers go out for Brother Williams and those who labor with him, and let our contributions be continued for the maintenance of the Home.

The College has been delighted to have Rev. D. E. Kelly for its guest during the revival here. Nearly every girl gave her heart and life to Jesus.

We wish to thank our patrons for the promptness with which they have met their financial obligations. Ninety-seven per cent of our accounts have been paid us and the College is paying for everything it gets. If you want our goods at our price, pay for them.

Another new girl. Still they come. We want a dozen more after Christmas. Let everybody get busy. A long pull, a strong pull and pull all together. A merry Christmas to every graduate and friend of M. F. C. from President, Faculty and Students.

ORPHANAGE REPORT.

To the President, Hon. E. D. Pearce and the members of the Board of Directors of the Louisiana Orphanage in session at Ruston, November 15, 1912.

Dear Brethren: On the whole this has been the most satisfactory year in the history of the Orphanage. While we have not been enabled to locate more than one-third of the children who have applied for a home, and while we have not made the material advancement we hoped to attain for the general conditions, the fine progress of the children, the steady settled confidence of the people in the need and worthiness of the Institution, and the splendid success of the management plan as a means of raising the money needed for our running expenses, have been most gratifying and encouraging.

We have had under our care this year 14 children. Seventeen of this number we have either placed in homes or returned to relatives who can provide for them. We now have 11 children in the Orphanage. Fifty-six of this number are in regular attendance at public school and one in the North Louisiana Industrial Institute. Only three of this large number of children from our home failed to pass their examinations and be promoted to higher classes. The pupil attending the Industrial Institute will graduate with honors next year, and will then be enabled to go out in life and make her own way working or following some other equally commendable profession. What we have done for this one girl we hope to do for all who will be able to take this training. The value of this steady progress and development in the intellectual lives of these children, who otherwise might have grown up in ignorance, cannot be overestimated. All of the children here even attend regularly the Sunday school and church. Many of them have become members of the church and are trying to live sincere Christian lives. They are becoming more truthful, more diligent, more intelligent each day. We are trying to help these children to realize and appreciate the obligations they have taken as church members, and in each case they are making regular and small contributions to the church work. While we have not attained the ideal we had set for this great work, we have sought to make the most of the facilities we have had at our disposal, and we do not believe that any set of children in any similar institution can show more marked improvement and development than these have shown. With proper management, reasonable tact and genuine consecration on the part of the future management, we see no reason why these children should not develop into such a type of men and women as will become useful citizens, consecrated Christians and such as will be an honor and credit to the great Church and noble-hearted people who inaugurated and who maintain this splendid Institution.

I beg to submit the financial showing and inventory for the year, November 15, 1911, to November 15, 1912, as follows:

Cash received from all sources $10,275.63

Expended:

The Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, Ruston, La.

In addition to the above inventory we have large quantities of dried fruits and vegetables, besides corn, hay, beans and sweet potatoes, which will be of considerable value in the upkeep of the Home.

During the four years of our service for the Orphanage the people have contributed $48,013.61. We have seen the property grow from a half completed building with a heavy indebtedness thereon to the splendid structure we now occupy with a gradually diminishing indebtedness. We have handled 150 homeless children during this time, and have been gratified to see some of the most unfortunate of human kind find splendid homes and become sheltered and protected from care and suffering. We have seen them have the best of school advantages and are gratified at the very encouraging development and progress made. For all that has been accomplished we give God the praise.

The future is most promising. The assessment plan is now an accomplished fact. The preachers and people have given it hearty support, and it has greatly diminished the anxiety and uncertainty of support that existed heretofore. Our Institution is thoroughly established in the economy of the Church and in the hearts of the people. We are especially gratified at the support that comes to us from many that are not members of the Methodist Church. The work of clothing the children done by many of the Societies of the Church is most helpful. We feel that this growing and widespread interest will increase and that our great cause will continue to receive the hearty and cordial support of the Conference, churches, Sunday schools and people, both in and out of the Church, and we feel that at no distant day our great opportunities will be appreciated, and all the means needed for reasonable development will be at hand.

To this work I have given four years of my life. Called out of my divinely appointed vocation, the burden and care of this strange task was placed on me. I faced every possible difficulty, I wrestled and prayed with unknown burdens and responsibilities. I have failed in many of my plans. My ideals have not been attained; yet I have done my best for the great cause. My failures have not been because of lack of interest or desire, but from lack of experience and ability. Yet I believe I am laying down the task at a time when the risk from change in management will be least hurtful, when the work will go forward with the least friction. I am sure that your honored Board and the keen self-sacrificing interest you take in the work, will so help the unskilled hands that may be appointed to guide and manage this difficult task, that the dangers may be reduced to the minimum.

It is therefore with many regrets that I offer you my resignation. Twice before have I placed my resignation in your hands, and twice you have prevailed on me to reconsider. You will have no disposition to ask me to reconsider now, and should you have I would not have the courage to ask you to consider this responsibility to my keeping again. My personal inclination, the great possibilities of so noble a work, the bright and hopeful future for this particular Institution, very greatly appeal to me to continue in this work. But conditions I can no longer control make imperative and irrevocable my resignation. One of the most painful features of my discontinuance with the Orphanage is the severance of the always pleasant relations with your Board. I have made no suggestion, proposed no plan, imposed no demand, but that you have cheerfully and gladly acceded to my desires. In the hours of trials, difficulties and perplexing problems, and even in the darkest grief that can tear a human heart, you have been my loyal and devoted friends. If I have made mistakes, you have been most lenient; when I have failed, you have encouraged me; and when success has attended my efforts, you have cheered. Without you, what has been done would have been impossible. With your strong and hearty support, no man worth his salt would but do his best. I leave you and your great work with sincere regret. I pray God to greatly bless you. Be sure that, in whatever way I can find, I will most gladly and heartily serve you and this great cause. It will continue to have my prayers, my keenest interest, and, whenever possible, my best efforts.

My resignation is in your hands, to take effect at the close of the forthcoming session of the Louisiana Annual Conference.

Faithfully,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,

Supt. La. Methodist Orphanage.

THE HINDERED CHRIST.

The Lord Christ wanted a tongue one day
To speak a message of cheer
To a heart that was weary, worn and sad,
And weighted with doubt and fear.
He asked me for mine, but 'twas busy quite
With my own affairs from morn till night.
The Lord Christ wanted a hand one day
To do a loving deed;
He wanted two feet, on an errand for Him
To run with gladsome speed.
But I had need of my own that day;
To His gentle beseeching I answered "Nay!"
So all that day I used my tongue,
My hands and my feet as I chose,
I said some hasty, bitter words
That hurt one heart, God knows.
I busied my hands with worthless play,
And my willful feet went a crooked way.
And the dear Lord Christ—was his work undone
For lack of a willing heart?
It is through men that He speaks to men,
His men must do their part.
He may have used another that day—
But I wish I had let Him have His way.
—Alice J. Nichols, in Zion's Herald.

A TRUE STORY OF THE QUEEN.

The following story reaches me at first hand: Queen Mary was lately at a picture gallery in Bond Street. It was an unexpected visit and few people were there. As she walked round one of the rooms she saw an old lady sitting down, remembered her, and went up and spoke to her. The lady was puzzled, and said she remembered her face, but could not recall her name. Queen Mary replied: "My name is 'May,' but the people call me 'Mary.'"
Then the old lady rose to her feet and made her courtesy, realizing at once that she was talking with her Majesty.—British Weekly.

FAITHFULNESS REWARDED.

George Mason was a boy of ten years and of noblest qualities. His bearing was manly. His face would inspire confidence anywhere. He was not of the goody-goody sort of boys, whose characters are wholly of the negative sort, and who die while young. George was in no danger along that line. He had robust health, a fine sense of humor and a generous share of mischief. He enjoyed rollicking and frolicking with the other boys. He was an expert at a game of ball. He could run as fast and glide as swiftly on his skates as any boy of his acquaintance.

One mild winter afternoon, when the snow was in just right condition for making balls, he and several other boys were on their way home from school. The snow was tempting, and soon the balls were flying rapidly right and left. In the excitement George threw a ball without noticing its exact direction. Unfortunately it went crashing through Judge Stacy's window. The other boys all ran, and soon were lost to sight. George stood thoughtfully for a moment. He knew the judge was within, for he had seen him enter the house a few minutes before. George, with firm, resolute step, walked to the door and rang the bell. In a moment the judge appeared.

"This is Judge Stacy, I believe," said George.
"It is," was the judge's reply.

"I threw a snowball through your window a moment ago. I am very sorry, sir, but I want to do the right thing about it," said George.

The judge looked down into the honest, manly, up-turned face of the boy for a moment, then said:

"What are you going to do about it? Why didn't you run off like the other boys?"

"Because that would not be honest."

"The glass you broke will cost one dollar to have it replaced."

"I will pay it, sir," said George.

"Have you the money?"

"I sell papers of mornings and evenings. I make from fifty cents to a dollar a week. I have only twenty-five cents now. I will give you that and the balance as soon as I can get it."

"Are your father and mother living?"

"My father died when I was two years old, and I live with my mother on Wayne Avenue."

"Are you the only child?"

George's chin quivered. The tears sprang to his eyes. Controlling himself, he said:

"I had a darling sister. Daisy was her name. She came just after papa died, in the springtime, when the daisies were in bloom. Oh, sir, it nearly broke our hearts when she went away six months ago! She was so bright and sweet. She was all I had, except mamma. After she died the house was so still and mamma so sad that I thought I would die," and he sat down and wept most bitterly.

"Is our mother poor?" softly inquired Mr. Stacy.

"Yes, Mr. Stacy, we have nothing but the little cottage where we live. Mother does washing and sewing and I sell papers, thus we get something to eat and wear."

"Come to my office, 329 Cherry Street, tomorrow morning at 8:30. Here is a dollar for your good mother. Tell her I am glad she has so noble and truthful a boy."

Next morning, prompt to the minute, George entered Judge Stacy's office.

"Glad to see you so prompt, George. Now I am going to give you a chance. You are the kind of boy I like. I want you to come here each morning at eight o'clock, and each evening at four o'clock. I shall want you to tidy up my office and run errands. You will get home always by 5:30 at the latest. I will give you three dollars a week, and the window glass is paid for. Does that suit you?"

"Oh, Mr. Stacy, it is too good!"

George took the place. He made himself useful in many ways. He was always faithful and truthful. At the age of sixteen Mr. Stacy sent him to college, from which he graduated at twenty-one, with the first honors. He entered the office with Mr. Stacy, became one of the ablest lawyers of his day, and was finally elected to Congress, where he served with distinguished ability for many years. He would betimes say, with the old-time mischief dancing in his eyes:

"Judge, I am so glad I broke your window."—Michigan Christian Advocate.

DR. STEEL'S CROSS-EYED THROWS.

Cuffy was holding a hog. His boss was about to "knock it on the head"; the boss was cross-eyed. Cuffy said: "See here Boss, ef youse agwine to hit whars youse alooking, lemme turn this hawg loose." Dr. Steel's logic must be cross-eyed. He throws like a cross-eyed school boy. He entitles his article, "Dr. Featherstun's Defense of Dr. Trawick." This is cross-eyed throw No. 1. I made no defense of Dr. Trawick. I said that "if the propaganda from our Nashville friends is a political impropriety, so also, and more so, is Dr. Steel's campaign against it." I have not seen "the Beecher tract." I have no evidence that my brother and sister in Nashville have entered upon a campaign for woman's suffrage. I know that they are interested in trying to secure lalty rights for the women of our Church, which is a thing different and far away from political or civil suffrage for women. "Woman's Suffrage" is the Doctor's phrase, and I was trying to make him see that if our Nashville friends were really, as he charges, campaigning politically for the thing, the Doctor was campaigning politically against it. Why should this "political" business be so bad in Dr. Trawick holding some official relation to our church affairs in Nashville, and yet be all right in Dr. Sam'l A. Steel, the President of a Methodist Female College? As I see it, Dr. Steel has "found a mare's nest." He has a right, if he sees fit, to write a tract on "The Reign of the Petticoat." Whatever I may think of his had taste, I concede him that right; and shall not charge him with offending gravely, even if by so doing he should seem to commit a Methodist college to his political creed on the woman question.

He insists that according to my argument Dr. Trawick would be justifiable in sending out Republican campaign literature. This is cross-eyed throw No. 2. I intimated no such thing—much less did I say it. I have no knowledge, save a vague charge by the Doctor, which I have a good right to discredit, that Dr. Trawick is in any way connected with any political propaganda. Dr. Steel may sneer at our Woman's Lalty Rights Movement and call it a political campaign, but there is no logic in his sneer and no justice in his insinuation.

The Doctor tries to place me in a striking contrast with a certain Roman Catholic politician who protested against some political or semi-political utterances of his Archbishop. This is cross-eyed throw No. 3. I have never yet trerpassed as the Archbishop is charged as doing; nor have I ever advocated the entrance into politics by our preachers. I have only wondered why Dr. Steel should throw stones, while dwelling in a glass house. "Physician, heal thyself!" Let him read some homely advice found in Matt. vii, 1-5.

The Doctor says that I seek to commit the Church to the advocacy of woman's suffrage. I do nothing of the sort. This is the Doctor's cross-eyed throw No. 4. Handsome as he is, eloquent in speech and elegant in rhetoric as he is known to be, yet Dr. Steel's logic is cross-eyed.

His last paragraph runs thus: "Now, don't confuse the issue between Dr. Featherstun and myself—he approves the sending out from our connectional offices political campaign literature, thus committing the Church to a political party; I condemn it, as contrary to the whole history of our Church and as sure to produce discord and disaster." Cross-eyed throw No. 5.

As a matter of course, as shown above, there never has been such an issue between us. Dr. Steel declares a certain business as political—he confesses that he is in the business—writing a tract—political campaign literature. I am not. I do not have anything to say for or against his campaigning thus politically from his College President's chair. I am just laughing at him and his antics—that is all.

LEND A HAND NOW.

The Kenyon Bill, which proposes to restrict the shipment of liquor into dry territory, will, by unanimous consent of the Senate of the United States, have consideration on December 16. It is to be hoped that the friends of the measure will see that their representatives in the Senate shall know how anxiously they wish this bill to become a law, and the strong reasons why they so desire it. Where a territory is dry, it is a simple matter of fairness and justice that Congress should protect such territory from the greed of the liquor men, who would make the law of none effect.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

PROCEEDINGS.

There is connection with the Seashore Divinity School.

Mr. W. A. Stokes, of Macon, read the Temperance report, endorsing the action of Governor Brewer in his efforts to enforce the law against the illicit sale of intoxicants. Dr. Eichelberger addressed the Conference on the work of the Anti-Saloon League. He said that Jackson, Vicksburg and Gulfport have been ridden of the illicit sale of whiskey.

J. M. Guinn, W. W. Hartsfield, Thomas Mills, Anderson Bennett and W. T. Shearer were admitted into full connection. In the course of his remarks Bishop Morrison said: "No man can preach who is not in vital contact with God." He warned the class on two points: First, the mistake of getting into debt; the second, doubting Christ's power to sustain us amid all the trials of life. He urged the young men not to compromise with the world, saying that if the seven thousand Methodist preachers would stay close to God, it would go a long way toward the solution of the perplexing problems of this age.

The appointments for Sunday were announced as follows:

Methodist Church—11 a.m., Dr. James Cannon; 7 p.m., Dr. P. S. Parker.

Baptist Church—11 a.m., Isaac D. Borders; 7 p.m., J. A. Hall.

Presbyterian Church—11 a.m., Dr. A. P. Watkins; 7 p.m., J. R. Countiss.

Dr. Carlisle, of Missouri, preached at the Baptist Church Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Dr. H. G. Henderson occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church at 7 p.m.

Sunday, December 8th.

The day opened with bright sunshine, but the sky was soon overcast with clouds, and before the hour of service rain was falling. The rain did not deter the crowds. The commodious church was filled long before the hour for the love-feast. Rev. W. S. Lagrone led a host of eager worshippers in this annual event. Many stirring and inspiring testimonies fell from trembling lips, rising again and again in triumphant songs of praise, and closing with low-murmured shouts of "glory, hallelujah!" It was good to be there.

Bishop Morrison led the great audience in prayer. Dr. James Cannon preached to the edification of all from Gen. 17:1. He made an earnest plea to the preachers to spread "Scriptural holiness over these lands." It was a great audience, a great theme, and a great sermon.

Following the sermon, the Bishop was assisted by Drs. Henderson and Price in the ordination of the following deacons: W. V. Shearer, W. W. Hartsfield, J. M. Guinn, E. M. Shaw, D. R. McDougal, R. B. Burks, Thos. O. Mills, W. S. Selman.

The memorial session of the Conference at 3 p. m. was presided over by Rev. W. W. Woollard. Prayer was offered by Rev. C. N. Terry. The question "What preachers have died during the year?" was called, and it was announced that Revs. J. W. Honnoll, J. T. Murrah, and J. T. Cunningham had died. The memoir of Brother Honnoll was read by Rev. W. W. Woollard; that of Brother Murrah, by Rev. J. E. Cunningham; that of Brother Cunningham by Rev. J. C. Park. In the loss of these strong, true, brave and faithful fellow-soldiers of the Cross, the North Mississippi Conference is much the poorer. Rev. G. W. Bachman placed in the hands of the Secretary a memoir of Mrs. Amos Kendall, which will find a place in the Journal.

Dr. P. S. Parker preached at the evening hour to another large audience. And again did the people of Greenwood hear an excellent sermon. The following elders were ordained by Bishop Morrison: James Robert Bright, David Harrison Crowson, James Luther Nabors, and William Joseph Wood.

Monday, December 9th.

Rev. J. D. Newton led the devotional services. Rev. W. W. Woollard was appointed on the Committee of Administration.

Rev. I. D. Borders read the report on Books and Periodicals. The church papers were commended. The report gave some strong words of encouragement to the Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

W. W. Woollard, H. S. Spraggins and J. D. Barbee were elected members of the Publishing Committee.

Dr. P. S. Parker, Editor of the Epworth Era, addressed the Conference on the League work. He said the aim of the League was to save souls. Dr. Parker spoke against the elimination of the reading of the Old Testament in the morning church services.

Rev. R. P. Gear was superannuated.

Rev. E. S. Lewis read the Sunday School report. Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick was re-elected Sunday School Field Agent, and R. M. Weaver was named as Assistant Agent.

J. W. Dorman, B. P. Jacob and R. A. Tucker were named as a Committee of Presiding Elders to report at the next session of the Conference on the matter of re-arranging the Districts of the Conference.

E. G. Mohler was received as a transfer from the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. K. P. Foust was located by the Conference.

R. L. Allen was granted a supernumerary relation.

Rev. J. T. Lewis was again chosen Missionary Secretary.

Rev. Nash Broyles read the Statistical report. The Church has prospered along all lines. Brother Broyles made a most excellent statistical secretary.

A resolution of thanks to the people of Greenwood for their kind hospitality was unanimously adopted. Never was a Conference better entertained than this one. The preachers and laymen will not soon forget the good people of Greenwood.

The Conference adjourned at 12 o'clock.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI NOTES.

Greenwood did herself proud in entertaining the Conference. We did not hear a syllable of complaint. Every person seemed to think that he had the best home. It was the first time that we had ever seen stationery specially prepared for the occasion and stamped envelopes furnished free to all visitors. The praise of the Queen City of the Delta was upon every lip.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, the esteemed colporteur of the two Mississippi Conferences, had the misfortune to be struck by an automobile one evening when it was quite dark and was considerably, though not dangerously, hurt. This occurrence was deeply and universally regretted, and many were the expressions of sympathy for this worthy minister. All were delighted when Brother Bachman was able to make his appearance in the Conference room, though he did so with bandaged brow. He had a very narrow escape.

Bishop Morrison, though the session of the Conference was in many respects a trying one, steadily gained in physical strength from the first day to the last. In view of the fact, however, that he had two other Conferences immediately following the one he had in hand, he deemed it best not to preach on Sunday at 11 o'clock. He invited Dr. James Cannon, of Virginia, to occupy the pulpit at the Methodist Church in his stead, which he did, preaching a great sermon on "The Obligation to Live a Holy Life." Dr. Cannon is one of the strongest men in the connection. As a debater he has no superior in the Church, as has been proven in our recent General Conferences, and as an impressive pulpit man he ranks with the foremost. There are great things in store for this brilliant son of the Old Dominion.

Rev. H. S. Spragins was an ideal Conference host. Genial, affable, and obliging, everybody is irresistibly drawn toward him. He left nothing undone to make the stay of the members of the Conference and all visitors pleasant. He is perhaps the most popular preacher in North Mississippi.

We doubt if there is a better Secretary in Southern Methodism than Rev. J. R. Countiss. He is quick, accurate, and it is not uncommon for an entire Conference to pass without his minutes being amended.

Rev. J. W. Bell is the church lawyer of the body. He knows the Discipline and McTyeire's Manual, and when things are in a muddle may be depended upon to illuminate the situation if given a chance to speak. He has a clear head—a sound judgment which rarely misleads him.

Millsaps College was represented by President A. F. Watkins and Dr. J. M. Sullivan, both of whom addressed the Conference in a telling manner. Dr. Watkins is already a favorite with the preachers of North Mississippi. His sermon at the Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning was much complimented.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, the accomplished President of Whitworth College, spent two days at the Conference, representing the General Board of Education, of which he is a member, in a pleasing and forcible speech. There is no finer gentleman anywhere than this popular preacher and well-known educator. He has a big heart, overflowing with good-will for all mankind, and to know him is to love him. It is no wonder that Whitworth flourishes with his hand upon the helm.

One of the best reports made was that of Rev. W. D. McCullough, who for the past two years has served the Eupora and Maben charge. He has built at the former place a beautiful house of worship, and all the interests of the Church have gone forward under his guiding hand. He is a strong preacher.

Rev. R. Selby, of Brookhaven, Miss., was on hand to look after the interests of the Seashore Divinity School, and spoke to the Conference in its behalf. The action finally taken concerning this school was to appropriate $250 towards its expenses this year, but instructions were given the representatives from North Mississippi not to obligate the Conference to support it in any way after the session next summer.

The following brethren attended the Conference in the interest of the work with which they are connected and delivered addresses: Dr. J. M. Moore, Dr. F. S. Parker, Dr. J. D. Hammond, Dr. Chas. D. Bulla, Rev. W. M. Williams, and Dr. J. W. Gilbert.

One of the best speeches delivered during the session was that of Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Agent for the Tri-State Methodist Hospital at Memphis. His utterances were vigorous, and when the Bishop interrupted him with humorous remarks, he proved to be quick at repartee. This great enterprise is making gratifying headway. More than $60,000 have already been secured in cash and good subscriptions. Brother Ellis has shown himself to be the right man in the right place.

Among the visitors in attendance upon the Conference we noted the following: Hon. W. W. Magruder, Starkville; Dr. T. L. Wilburn, Kilmichael; Mr. H. D. Chaney, Rosedale; Capt. W. C. Boyd, Gunnison; Mr. G. B. Clower, Itta Bena; Mr. Russell Jones, Indianola; Hon. J. D. Magruder, Tunica; Mr. S. J. High, Tupelo; and Mr. W. F. Lagrone, West Point.

The laymen participating in the work of the Conference were a fine body of men. The following is a partial list of them: P. T. Callicott, Coldwater; J. R. Bingham, Carrollton; J. B. Streater, Black Hawk; Mr. J. D. Barbee and Judge Percy Bell, Greenville; Mr. J. G. McGowan, Water Valley; Mr. R. P. Johnson, Acona; Mr. Walter Stokes, Macon; Mr. J. S. Carlton, Sardis; Mr. J. H. Sherard, Sherard; Dr. J. Y. Murry, Ripley.

The Editor was entertained in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Jones, who kept open house, and who left nothing undone to minister to the comfort of all sheltered beneath their hospitable roof. Our associate guests were Dr. I. W. Cooper, Dr. James Cannon, Rev. J. E. Cunningham, Mr. R. P. Johnson, Mr. J. S. Carlton, Mrs. L. M. Streater, and Mrs. H. H. Harrison. It is needless to say that in this genial circle good fellowship abounded.

Mr. J. H. Ledyard, of Tupelo, was chosen a trustee of Millsaps College in place of Hon. G. L. Jones, who has moved to El Paso, Texas. Mr. Ledyard is one of the leading business men of Northeast Mississippi, and this selection is an admirable one.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. A. Burroughs has moved to Waco, Texas, and is now in charge of the Methodist Orphanage at that place. That great institution is in safe hands.

There are sixty-five boys now enrolled in the Seashore Campground School, and Rev. H. W. Van Hook, the President, expects that number to be largely increased after Christmas.

It is stated that Dr. W. E. Thompson, formerly of Memphis and Chattanooga; Dr. H. G. Davis, of Alabama, and Dr. J. E. Wray, of Georgia, will be transferred to the Florida Conference.

From Waynesville, N. C., under date of December 4, Rev. H. G. Hawkins writes as follows: "I visited the Southern Assembly grounds to-day, guided by Bishop Atkins. It is to be a place of unsurpassed beauty and grandeur."

Rev. T. H. Morris, of Mansfield, La., is closing a most successful year's work. He has raised enough money this year to pay off the entire indebtedness on the parsonage, and to make a large payment on the church debt. He is in great favor among his people.

Rev. C. F. Emery has done a good year's work at Canton, Miss. He has received sixty-three members into the Church, and has been able to meet all outstanding claims. He announces that the new pipe organ that has been purchased by the Canton congregation will be installed in time to be used next Easter Sunday.

Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Jackson District, has had his work enthusiastically commended in resolutions passed by quarterly conferences of the Capitol Street Church of Jackson and the Methodist Church at Canton, Miss. We regret that lack of space forbids us to print these resolutions in full.

We have received a paper from the stewards of the Homewood Circuit, Mississippi Conference, highly commending Rev. W. W. Graves, the pastor, who has served that charge for a quadrennium with great acceptability. He seems to have won all hearts and will leave behind a host of friends and admirers when he goes to his new field.

We are in receipt of a letter signed by Brothers E. L. Joyner, O. F. Moore and T. F. Smith, in which they speak commendatory of their pastor, the Rev. S. S. Holladay, who is closing a quadrennium as pastor of the Pelican (La.) charge. Brother Holladay is a strong preacher and a diligent pastor, and it is no wonder that his members are loath to give him up.

Rev. R. O. Weir, who last year transferred from the Louisiana Conference to Texas, has been stationed for the coming year at Anderson, Tex. He has already reached his new field, and reports that he has met with a very cordial reception. Brother Weir was a popular preacher in Louisiana, and the people of Texas may rest assured that in him they have a worthy minister.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, whose labors in the presiding eldership on the Newton (Miss.) District have often been commended in these columns, is the subject of a resolution of appreciation sent in from Chunky, Miss. Brother O'Neil has been elected President of the Montrose Training School for a term of five years, and it is reported that he will accept the position.

Brothers Lyman R. Roberts, R. M. Roberts, Q. C. Roberts and S. R. Ratliff, of the Vancleave (Miss.) charge, are the signers of a resolution recently passed by the Quarterly Conference of that circuit strongly commending the work of Rev. W. B. Jones, who, as is stated in the resolution, has ably performed the duties of the office of presiding elder on the Seashore District for the past four years.

Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, pastor of the Scooba (Miss.) charge, has been suffering recently with an attack of illness, but is able to go to Conference and carry with him an excellent report. In a letter to this office last week he inclosed a copy of resolutions passed by his fourth quarterly conference praising the work done by their presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Lewis, during his four years on the Meridian District.

The congregation at Starkville, Miss., is to be congratulated upon the assignment of Rev. T. H. Lipscomb to that important charge. He is a minister of far more than ordinary accomplishments, and there is no truer, manlier man than he. He will worthily represent Methodism at the seat of the Mississippi A. & M. College, where hundreds of young men assemble annually to prepare themselves for the work of life.

Mrs. M. E. Baskin and Miss Lilly Baskin, of Conway, Ark., formerly of North Mississippi, in renewing their subscription a few days ago took time to say some kindly things about the Advocate, for which we are grateful. They expressed a desire to have us convey for them greetings to their many friends in the Magnolia State. They are much pleased that their pastor, Rev. E. R. Steel, has been returned to Conway for another year.

Dr. S. A. Steel has been transferred to the South Carolina Conference and stationed at the Washington Street Church, Columbia. This excellent congregation is to be heartily congratulated upon having Dr. Steel as its pastor. We regret to see this brilliant lecturer and preacher taken so far away from our patronizing territory. His successor as President of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, at Jackson, Tenn., has not yet been chosen.

Rev. J. A. Bowen and Rev. J. O. Hanes, of Birmingham, Ala., were present one day at the late session of the North Mississippi Conference. They expected to remain longer, but Brother Hanes was called to the bedside of his mother, who was thought to be in a dying condition, and Brother Bowen returned home with him. Elsewhere in this issue appears a note of thanks from the latter for the many kindly messages received since the translation of his beloved wife.

In a brief summary of his year's work at Bogalusa, La., the pastor, Rev. L. I. McCain, says: "Our membership has been doubled; our contributions to the Conference benevolences trebled; our prayer meeting and Epworth League services are among the best in the Conference; we have a young man in Vanderbilt University studying for the ministry and others at home who feel the inward call to preach. 'The Lord has done great things for us, whereof we are glad.'"

From Brundage, Texas, Sister T. S. Randle writes: "We like our Texas home, and feel thankful that our loved ones are much better in this delightful climate; but now, as the time for the Louisiana Conference draws near, we long to gather with our old friends in their annual meeting. How you will miss the dear brethren who have crossed over the river!" We are glad to have this cheering message from our good friends, whom many in this State hold in loving remembrance.

Mr. H. H. Ahrens, who was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, and is now one of the editors of the New Orleans Picayune, has reported the proceedings of the Louisiana Conference for that paper at every session for the last twenty years, and has been given that assignment for this year. He is personally acquainted with all the ministers of the Conference, and his familiarity with the doctrines of our Church and the style of secular journalism enables him to write illuminating reports of the Conference sessions.

A note from Rev. J. W. Rogers, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, but who transferred to Oklahoma a couple of years ago, states that Bishop Candler's presidency over the East Oklahoma Conference gave great satisfaction. This will occasion little surprise, since our Georgia Chief Pastor is both a great preacher and an able administrator. Brother Rogers was at this Conference taken from Madill and stationed at the Tigert Memorial Church in Tulsa, a $1500 appointment. The church which he will now serve was erected at a cost of $15,000, and was named for the late Bishop J. J. Tigert. Tulsa is the third city in the State, having a population of more than 30,000.

Of the seven presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference, all except Dr. W. H. Huntley of the Port Gibson District, will necessarily be moved by the operation of the time limit. Their names and districts are as follows: Rev. J. R. Jones, Jackson District; Rev. J. T. Leggett, Brookhaven District; Rev. T. J. O'Neil, Newton District; Rev. W. H. Lewis, Meridian District; Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, Hattiesburg District; and Rev. W. B. Jones, Seashore District. These elders, without exception, have wrought faithfully and well and have "obtained a good report." Bishop Morrison will find it exceedingly difficult to improve upon this panel of "beloveds" when he comes to make his selections for the ensuing year. If we mistake not, all six of those who are finishing a four-year term were appointed by Bishop Morrison at Yazoo City in 1908.

The following is a list of the pastors in the Mississippi Conference who have served their charges for four years and who will be assigned to new fields at the Conference now in session at Hazlehurst: J. Tidings From the Field

Indian Bayou, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: We are preparing to leave this charge after a stay of four years, which have been pleasant ones. We have learned to love the people here very much. The man who serves this charge next year will find it a fruitful field. I have baptized 300 infants and received about the same number of members into the Church since coming here. You see, I watch after the lambs that I "brand." I have buried about 100, which gives us a net increase of nearly 200 members in the four years. The church is growing, as the above figures indicate, and the people are in love and harmony with one another. We have had many marriages. Announcements are out for the marriage of Mr. Clarence Wagner and Miss Sarah Hoffpauir. Miss Hoffpauir is the sister of five Methodist preachers, two of whom are members of the Louisiana Conference. We are closing our third quadrennium in twelve years' time. It appears that the lines always fall to us in pleasant places. May the good Lord bless the people of this charge.—J. S. Rutledge.

Itta Bena, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: Our Thanksgiving service this year was not a union service. Circumstances were such that we could not have it so. I think, however, it was perhaps the greatest I ever attended of the kind. There was no sermon. The choir rendered an elaborate program of inspiring Thanksgiving anthems, hymns, quartettes, and solos. Brother Bradford read both the President's and Governor's proclamation, and made a most fitting talk on the subject of the day. Mr. Albert Reese, the worthy superintendent of our Sunday school, led the congregation in the reading of the 118th Psalm. The pastor made a short talk, and Prof. Crowell, one of our most excellent laymen, led the prayer. Our new church was full and overflowing. Some stood during the service. The congregation was given an opportunity to contribute to the Orphanage at Jackson. As a result of the offering, we secured $60.67 in cash, and the Sunday school children laid 197 articles of clothing (mostly new) on the altar, the value of which was estimated to be about $60. It was an inspiration to see a church literally crowded on the day and at the service set apart expressly for the giving of thanks to our great Lord and God. We have had a prosperous year in our church.—S. L. Pope.

Terry, Miss.

We have just closed a Sunday school campaign on the Terry charge that was in every way a success. We began at Bynum on Nov. 21, with an inter-denominational convention which was well attended. The officers and members of the Sunday schools participating were ably assisted by Rev. R. A. Maddox, our Conference Sunday school specialist, and Rev. Mr. Chisholm, of the Baptist Church. Dinner was served by the ladies of Bynum. The weather was pleasant; the dinner was delightful, and it was good to be there.....The next day, Friday, an all day's rally was held at Forest Hill, and another feast was spread by the good ladies. Two excellent services were held at 11 a. m. and two at 2 p. m., led by Brothers Maddox and Chisholm.....On Saturday Brother Maddox was with us at Spring Bridge and delivered two inspiring addresses, which, together with the elegant dinner served, made the day both pleasant and profitable.It remained for Sunday to witness the greatest rally service of all. Spring Ridge, Terry and Bynum were each visited at 11 a. m., 3:30 p. m., and 7:30 p. m., respectively. The organization of a graded Sunday school with a Cradle Roll and Home Department was effected at Spring Ridge. There were good attendance and fine interest at both Terry and Bynum. The importance of organization and teacher-training was emphasized, and twenty-one sets of the five-book teacher-training course were ordered, together with five of the Legion of Honor books, making a total of twenty-six who enrolled as students of some teacher-training course. Our Conference Sunday School Board was fortunate in securing Brother Maddox as our Conference Sunday School specialist. If he receives the hearty support and co-operation of the pastors and Sunday school superintendents, he will do a great work.—C. H. Ellis.

Louisiana Avenue, New Orleans.

The protracted meeting held at the Louisiana Avenue Church, Nov. 17-28, was a season of great refreshing to the membership and a success from the initial meeting, at which time Rev. I. W. Cooper, D. D., President of Whitworth Female College, preached. I secured the Rev. Charles C. Selecman, of Webb City, Mo., to do the preaching. Brother Selecman entered upon the work with prayer and faith and preached the old-time gospel which resulted in mourners coming to the altar at every service. He is a man of prayer and his preaching was of the highest order. Perhaps no man in the entire connection is better qualified to hold a protracted meeting than is he. The people waited gladly upon his ministry and the congregations constantly became larger. His service for men only on Sunday afternoon was one at which the presence and power of the Holy Spirit was felt and young and old men came forward, asking for the prayers of God's people.

The results of the meeting were fourteen received into the Church, with several more to follow. The entire congregation was revived and several backsliders were reclaimed. The influence of this meeting, just closed, not only was of benefit to the Louisiana Avenue Church, but its influence was felt in the other churches whose members attended.

Brother Selecman is a safe leader of the people and his method of work in getting sinners to the altar has nothing of the sensational about it. All who heard his preaching were edified and built up in their most holy faith. The singing was lead by Mr. I. N. Nelbergall, and the following brethren were with us during the meeting: Revs. J. W. Moore, W. W. Holmes, W. E. Thomas, Jno. T. Sawyer, A. G. Shankle, G. B. Hines, Mr. McClure, Brother Jeffries, an evangelist singer, and Mr. C. C. Hard, of the Y. M. C. A.—John L. Sutton.

WISO'S REMEDY
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by Druggists.
FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

Try This Home-Made Cough Remedy

Costs Little, But Does the Work Quickly, or Money Refunded.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle; then add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

You will find that this simple remedy takes hold of a cough more quickly than anything else you ever used. Usually ends a deep seated cough inside of 24 hours. Splendid, too, for whooping cough, croup, chest pains, bronchitis and other throat troubles. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

This recipe makes more and better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasantly.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural pine elements which are so healing to the membranes. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

This plan of making cough syrup with Pinex and sugar syrup (or strained honey) has proven so popular throughout the United States and Canada that it is often imitated. But the old, successful formula has never been equaled.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THE SWEETEST SINGER IN THE WORLD.

Who is it? The mocking bird, of course. The sunshine of Dixie scintillates in its liquid notes. The sweet singer of the Southland, famous the world around, knows no competitor in the softness, purity and melody of its musical notes.

And what the sunshine of the South has accomplished in softening and sweetening the tones of the mocking bird has its parallel in the field of instrumental music, for it was a Southern piano house that is responsible for perfecting the superb Ludden & Bates Piano, claimed by critics to possess the sweetest tone of any piano that has yet been built. Professional musicians pronounce its notes absolutely free from the "metallic" quality which piano builders have found so much difficulty in avoiding.

It is this "Mocking Bird of the Piano World," the peerless Ludden & Bates Piano, which is eliciting so much praise from the members of the Advocate Piano Club. A beautifully illustrated catalogue describing the five different styles, will be sent free on request to and reader. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

Rév. P. O. Lowrey.

Mrs. S. A. Alexander, teacher of the "Laurel Wreath" young people's Bible class of Greenwood, recently entertained her class by giving a pleasant social. She has adopted an individual grading system in which each pupil keeps his own card and does his own grading. She is delighted with the renewed interest that has thus been awakened in the class work.

Mr. V. L. Fulton, teacher of the class bearing his name, has about ten of his class members off at college, and he has the commendable habit of having the home members occasionally remember them in writing some "howdys" and good wishes on their lesson papers and mailing the same to them. Such a fraternal spirit as should obtain in a Bible class should not be broken by a member's temporary absence. Especially should pupils be remembered on special days, or in any crisis in their lives.

The Queensboro Sunday school is using collection devices that are a foot long and hold sixteen pennies, and they are working to raise a mile of pennies, the surplus above the expenses to go to the new church building fund. Since using this means of appeal to the sense of sight, and setting a definite object to which to give, the offerings have greatly increased. In too many instances children bring their gifts to Sunday school with no knowledge of what becomes of them, and such blind giving can have but little educative or spiritual power, and some Sunday school leaders have adopted the plan of reporting in detail how the money is spent, giving to missions, pastoral support, for sexton hire, etc., as well as for Sunday school supplies. According to this plan the stewards may have to appropriate to the expenses of the school out of the general budget, but in following it the Sunday school scholars will learn to give to the support of the church. Blessed is that leader who has ingenuity enough to get out of ruts that are worn deep by those who travel them simply because it is convenient to do like others are doing!

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The best illustrated and most largely accessible history of the Church and Nation is written by the training of its boys and girls.

Hold the boy for the Sunday school: by an interesting lesson; by living before him a sincere Christian life; by earnest, faithful prayer, and by personal association. If you don't hold him, the world will.

Quite a number of Adult Classes for men and women are taking one Sunday a month to discuss civic improvement problems, having as a special objective their own town and its needs—and it is not a bad idea.

Mr. John Alexander, the International Superintendent for the Secondary or Teen Age Department, says: "And now abideth the lesson, the class and the teacher, and the greatest of these is the teacher."

In the Teen Age class a skillful teacher can place some fine uplifting and character-making missionary hero books in the hands of each pupil at the coming Christmas time. This is an opportunity not to be neglected.

In "Pell's Secrets of Sunday-school Training" there is a fine and helpful key-note embodied in this one sentence, "The supreme need of the average Sunday school teacher is not a method of work, but a motive for work!"

Remember that Christmas is the next special day to celebrate. Also remember that in its celebration the life and purpose of Him whose birth was on the 25th of December are annually glorified. Do not let one organized class in Southern Methodism fail to celebrate this day. Decorate, plan, and enjoy an ideal season of social as well as spiritual pleasure.

A boy in the Senior Department of an otherwise good Sunday school was asked why so many boys left the Sunday school. He answered laconically, "Nothin' doin'." Our Adult Departments are increasing and we had best turn the white light on the depleted ranks of this Senior Department and lend it the help it so much needs.

Does your class care? Yes, that's the sentence: Does your class care for the great Sunday school cause, its growth and broader propagation, for the teen age boy and girl, for the local church, for its own class brothers, and for all the highest and best things? And, if your class does care, how has it been manifested? Caring means a great deal, and more would be the pity of it if 'twas known abroad that the class, or any class, or my class, or yours, did not care. But it rather seems that it is occasionally true.

Tightness of the Stomach Caused by Undigested Food Stopped with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet.

When you feel as if your stomach was being tightly choked—when the pain is intense and you break out in a cold and clammy perspiration and there is a lump in your throat and you are weak and nauseated—all you need is a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet to clear away the wreckage of undigested food left in the stomach and intestines and restore you to your normal self again. And this can all be accomplished within a few moments.

You May Have Often Envied the Hearty Eater! Why Not Emulate Him?

Thousands of people have learned so well how sure and dependable Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for all stomach ills that they now eat anything they want without fear of distress. They are never without a package at home and at the office, and upon any indication that the stomach is a little weary, they take a Stuart's Tablet after each meal for a few days until the digestive organs get rested up again.

This is a splendid plan to follow and always results in much good. The appetite is improved, the food is relished more, your sleep is more refreshing, and your disposition will make you friends instead of enemies.

For Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Belching, Gas, Coated Tongue, Intestinal Indigestion and all Stomach Disorders and Pains—or for Loss of Appetite—Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are invaluable.

Use them freely—they are as harmless as sugar would be—and are not to be classed as "medicine." They have no effect whatever on the system except the benefits they bring you through the proper digestion of your food.

All Drug stores sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. The price is 50 cents per box.

CATARRH TRUTH

You Can Plainly See the Truth This Picture Tells.

This picture shows the mucous membrane tract of the nose, throat, and air passages. This is where catarrh germs live and where the disease spreads. The small black spot No. 1, shows where balms, creams, pastes, ointments and such treatments reach by direct application. You can see that it doesn't reach more than 2 per cent of the disease.

No. 2 shows where douches, sprays, atomizers and similar treatments reach. So their cures, like 1 and 2, only reach a tiny part of the disease. You cannot cure catarrh by stopping the disease only in a very small part.

No. 3 shows that medicated smoke can, will and does reach ALL the corners, nooks and creases, touching every part. Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy, which I will send you free, is made of herbs, roots, flowers and leaves; no tobacco or habit-forming drugs. When this mixture is burned in a tube or new clean pipe, which I send you free, it sends forth a powerful, germ-killing, volatile smoke, relieving the distress and killing the germs. You can instantly feel the beneficial effects. I have shown you in the picture the truth about various treatments. You can see it is reasonable and fair.

Now I want you to write for a free treatment to let you prove for yourself what a grand remedy I have. The regular treatment costs only $1.00, postpaid. Just say in a letter or on a postal to me "Please send me Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy Free." When I get your request I will send the treatment by mail free and also facts about catarrh you will be glad to know. Address Dr. J. W. Blosser, 204 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga.

Popular Science.

This is the day of popular education on the subject of sanitation. The best method of combating disease is to prevent it.

Hence the necessity for the people to be informed as to the nature and causes of prevalent diseases.

Great progress has been made along this line by informing the people.

Typhoid, Dysentery, Malaria, Yellow Fever and Tuberculosis are giving way before popular education on sanitary methods.

But education is necessary also as to coughs, colds, croup, catarrh and pneumonia.

All of these are diseases due to infection of the air passages.

The germs are taken in with the air as it enters the nasal passages or by the mouth.

They attack the delicate mucous membrane which forms the lining of these passages.

Nature resists the attack by a rush of blood to the affected parts.

This is inflammation or congestion. We call it soreness and think it an evidence of disease.

In reality it is nature hating to destroy the germs and restore health.

The blood is doing the fighting for us.

Good blood becomes bad blood in the struggle.

It has to be renewed constantly.

This is done with plenty of good, fresh air in the lungs and good digestion of wholesome food by the stomach.

These processes mean the renewing of the old blood by oxidation in the lungs and the addition of fresh blood by the stomach.

Hence plenty of fresh air and good food is important.

In the struggle, at the point of inflammation, the debris of the battle is thrown off in the phlegm.

This phlegm is full of disease germs. It should be removed from the air passages and destroyed.

As long as it remains it coats the air passages and prevents the life-renewing oxygen of the air from fully reaching the blood in the lungs.

Hence the blood is not properly oxidized, remains filled with impurities and this weakens the struggle for health and encourages the spread of the disease.

In combating croup, coughs, colds, pneumonia and catarrh the following directions should be followed.

Don't medicate through the stomach if it can be avoided, you may upset digestion if you do.

Don't fail to give the patient plenty of fresh, pure air. You can't have pure blood without pure air.

Don't fail to remove the phlegm, so that air can reach all parts of the lungs.

Apply stimulating antiseptic and healing vapors, to the inner linings of the air passages, to attract fresh blood to the parts, stimulate the normal flow of secretion, loosen the obstructing and disease-laden phlegm, encourage its ejection, cleanse the parts and induce healing of the wounded surfaces.

This process is assisted if the skin of throat and chest is also stimulated.

The above is a description of the modern treatment of croup, coughs, colds, catarrh and pneumonia as practiced in the use of Vicks Croup and Pneumonia Salve.

When directions are followed the results are very satisfactory.

Breathing immediately becomes easier; and croup is usually relieved in fifteen minutes.

The proper use of the salve reduces the fever attendant upon these diseases by removing the cause.

It is equally effective on external inflammations or congestion.

Full directions with each jar of Vicks Croup and Pneumonia Salve.

At druggists or by mail 25c, 50c, and $1.00.

A full sized jar will be sent free of charge to physicians who are desirous of testing the Vicks treatment.

A sample will be sent to anyone on request by The Vicks Chemical Company, 28 Milton Ave., Greensboro, N.C.

A NOTE OF THANKS.

Please permit me to thank all the members of the North Mississippi Conference and other good friends in my native State and elsewhere for their spoken and written messages of love and sympathy in my great sorrow. The day I spent at the sessions of the North Mississippi Conference was a blessing to me. I am sorry that a telegram called me away before the session closed. I always loved my brethren, but now I love them more than ever. They can command me.

BETTER RECONSIDER IT.

And so you have about decided, my friend, that you can do without God. You will excuse me for saying so, but I fear that it cannot be done. Something will happen the day after tomorrow to show you that I am right. Being a man, there are cords that are binding you to him that you will find it desperately hard to break. And after all, why should you try to break them? Yes, why should you not take him into your life, an honored Partner in all your affairs? You will need him, for how many reasons I cannot tell you, but I know you will. And I wouldn't say that to frighten you, nor would I urge it for any merely sentimental or selfish reason. But you will make the most stupendous mistake if you try to get along without him.

TRACTOR CHEAPER THAN MULES.

An oil tractor which will do the work of twenty-five to thirty good, big, young mules will cost only twenty-four hundred dollars. It will do your work for just as many years as they will. You will not have the loss of time and the annoyance from lameness, sickness, sore shoulders and harness galls.

By working the tractor day and night, as many owners do, it is doing the work of fifty or sixty mules. And that without having cost any more for the first investment.

It does not cost as much to run one of these tractors as it does to feed the mules which it displaces. Fifty gallons of the cheapest kerosene and two gallons of lubrication oil will run it for ten hours and do the work of fully twenty-five mules. When it is not working it is not consuming anything at all. The mules must be fed whether they are at work or whether they are idle.

The cost of housing and caring for a tractor is also small as compared with its equivalent in mule flesh. The cost of a good shed for it would be no more than the cost of a cheap barn for one team of mules. When the tractor is in use it requires no more work to care for it than it does to feed, curry, and harness a team. And when it is idle it requires no feeding or currying at all.

If you are interested in a more detailed comparison of the costs of mule power and of tractor power, write a letter to the Hart-Parr Company, 330R Lawler Street, Charles City, Iowa, and ask them to send you their literature on the subject.

Woman's Missionary Work

Edited by Mrs. R. F. Harrell, 1329 Josephine St., New Orleans Conference Press Superintendents:

Louisiana Mrs. A. C. McKinney, Ruston, La.
Mississippi Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Hazlehurst, Miss.
North Mississippi Mrs. A. C. Yeager, Water Valley, Miss.

New Orleans Missionary Union.

The Woman's Interdenominational Missionary Union held meetings three afternoons during the week of prayer which were largely attended, and the programs interesting. The first was held in the Soniat Christian Church and was led by Mrs. Leverich; the second at the Carrollton Presbyterian Church, led by Mrs. Singleton; and the third at Felicity Church, led by Mrs. Mabry. On the afternoon of the 24th, at the Coliseum Baptist Church, the semi-annual meeting of the Interdenominational Union was held and the same officers were re-elected, with the exception of the assistant secretary, who refused nomination, and Mrs. Lamothe was put in her place. Mrs. Thirkield, wife of Bishop Thirkield, made a pleasing address, and at night a union meeting was addressed by Miss Daisy Davies, Field Secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Tuesday, an all day Institute was held at Parker Memorial Church and Miss Davies delighted the audience with several of her telling speeches. Miss Davies is a ready speaker and always gives her hearers food for thought. Mrs. Crowe Girard was present and gave an encouraging report of everything along Mission lines except the finances which she said had fallen behind.

There were several interesting discussions during the day which were participated in by many women from the different Churches. The Union of the Foreign and Home Societies was pronounced a success, and nearly every Conference has come into line. It was suggested to further unite the Societies as soon as feasible by having a common fund that shall be prorated. Some argued that this could not be done, but others declared harder things had been accomplished and if there were no stated dues more women would become members of the society; for some can afford only a dime while others can give a dollar and not feel it. Some thought the funds would fall far short were such a plan adopted; as many would pay only the minimum, and it would take a revival of religion, or the people would have to be educated up to giving.

The most interesting debate was on the subject of women becoming members of the laity, their right to cast votes on Church matters and their being made stewards, trustees, etc. When such able women as Mrs. Sam Montgomery, Mrs. John Parker, and Miss Davies gave such strong arguments in favor of the women having the same privilege as the men, it was small wonder that the vote stood 7 to 11 in their favor; but there were some who advanced some forceful arguments on the other side. No one denied the ability and the capability of the women to do just what the men do, but some thought it not practical and advanced the argument that women had sufficient to do now and if they had more meetings to attend and more Church business to see to, there would be no home life. Men are scarce enough in the Church as it is, and if the women take from them the few things that they do, they will lose interest and gradually cease attending church. To keep people interested give them work to do. The very fact that women would do the work well, is an argument against granting them the rights of the laity, for they would do it so well as to crowd the men out. Many present did not vote and it was argued by the few who were on the negative side that had they voted, the negatives would have won, for it is the women of the ready-to-speak type who will express their views and the more timid are apt to be those who believe in continuing in the good old way. The debate was not a decisive one by any means, only a pleasing little prelude of a question which may come up at the next General Conference.

MRS. MARY C. BROWN.

Great Results from Week of Prayer in Water Valley, Miss.

The week of prayer just past has been pronounced the best in every respect ever held in Water Valley. The leaders were all of a willing mind and prepared their parts beforehand. It is the policy of the president to train the young ladies as leaders; so the parts were assigned principally to the young women.

The meetings were held every afternoon in the ladies' parlor; the average attendance was twenty-two. The spiritual interest was sustained throughout the whole series of meetings and seemed to increase toward the close of the week. On Saturday the week's services were concluded with a consecration service, which was participated in by women of other denominations. This last meeting was a union service. The "Christians" led one evening also, making very interesting talks and reading papers giving accounts of their work.

The Presbyterians had services at their church. They had with them the mother of their missionary to Korea, who was also a former member of that church; but on Saturday members of the Protestant churches united voices and hearts. All received an inspiration to higher things; vision was broadened, indifference overcome, and a correct perspective gained of the conditions and needs of the field. Many sociological subjects were intelligently discussed. Certainly, in preparing this varied and difficult program, our leaders manifested their confidence in the spirituality, intelligence and literary ability of those who were to conduct the services and those who were to take part.

A goodly offering was made to the needs of the Home Mission Department. It was, indeed, a season of refreshing.

Importance of Mission Study and Christian Stewardship.

Speaking from the standpoint of the Mississippi Conference alone, it would seem that our women are not as interested in this vitally important branch of the work as they should be. Last quarter there were 125 report blanks sent out by the Conference Third Vice-President, and only 35 were returned to be reported to the Council. If any work is being done, it should certainly be reported promptly; and if it is not being done, what a glorious opportunity is being lost!

We cannot be interested in a thing we know nothing about. If the work of this department is neglected in a society, and the very knowledge so essential to intelligent service not gained, then that society is handicapped, hindered and crippled seriously.

The time for election of officers is coming soon. Are we going to neglect this great work any longer, and place in one of the most responsible positions a member who is half-hearted and disinterested, and who is satisfied to be Third Vice President in name only? May God grant that such a member will be hard to find to fill any office, but especially this one.

Let us see to it that the coming year, so rich in promise from the Father, be characterized by a greater effort on our part towards the fulfillment of those promises, and let us above all things not neglect the prayerful study of Missions and Stewardship. It is absolutely essential to our growth in grace.

Extracts from a Superintendent's Letter.

Mrs. Luke Johnson, our Council Press Superintendent, sends us extracts from a letter from the Central Texas Conference Press Superintendent. It contains information which is both interesting and helpful, and we take pleasure in publishing it, feeling sure it will prove an inspiration to all who read it. We hope it will "stir up" some of our auxiliary press officers, and be an incentive to them for more efficient service and more faithful co-operation with their Conference officer. It is far better to leave an office vacant than to have it filled by a woman who fails to realize her responsibility. How any Christian woman can accept an office and then calmly fold her hands and do nothing is beyond our comprehension. This is a most important office, for through it we are trying to supply the Church with the great facts of missions. We are trying to present the live facts in all the auxiliary meetings, and in the secular press. Mrs. Johnson says: "I appeal, through your page, to the Conference Officers, District Secretaries, and Auxiliary Presidents to assist the Conference Press Superintendents in their efforts to establish this most helpful line of work—the line that is to make known to the public the work of all our departments." Now let us read how the work is done by one woman:

"The Bulletins have never been handled by any one in this Conference save the Press Superintendent. For almost two years I have filled this office prayerfully, conscientiously, and I believe I can say I have done my duty as best I know how. I have worked very hard and refused God nothing. * * * In the face of many difficulties I do my work, but I never allow my 'press work' to suffer. Many nights I am up till midnight. About three hours of nearly every day belong to my press work. I send one copy of the Bulletin to every Conference officer, and one to each of the twenty-four District Secretaries on time. By 'on time' I mean that they receive them 24 hours after I get them from Nashville. You ask how I do this? This way: On the fifteenth of each month I get 250 envelopes and address them, stamp my name and address on each envelope so each one may know it is the Bulletin. I find this such a help. They are all ready and on the 24th or 25th of the month I get the Bulletins as regularly as clock-work. In less than two hours they are folded, put in the envelopes and mailed. I do not permit company nor anything else to come between me and the work of those two sacred hours. Everybody folds Bulletins, even the preacher, if he chances to be company in the home. Several preachers have learned of our Bulletin work this way and have been much interested. * * * The Bulletins are my sacred charge. I guard them and never waste a single one. Many write me how much help they are, and everybody entitled to them in our Conference receives them before the first of the month. Sometimes I send a Bulletin by special delivery to wake up a sleepy auxiliary."

Adopted by the Fourth Quarterly Conference of the M. E. Church, South, Osyka, Miss., Dec. 7, 1912.

CUTTING DOWN THE COST OF PIANOS.

Have you ever stopped to ask yourself the question why oranges which sell for five cents apiece cost only forty cents a dozen? Or why apples sell so much cheaper by the bushel than by the nickel's worth?

It is the same way with pianos and everything else you buy. If you were to purchase one hundred pianos (eight car loads) you would expect to get a much lower price than if you purchased only one. That is why the Advocate Piano Club, composed of one hundred piano buyers, who club their orders into one big order, is able to save its members at least one dollar out of three and still provide pianos of much better quality.

You are cordially invited to write for your copy of the Club's beautifully illustrated catalogue, which fully explains every feature of this unusual piano opportunity and pictures and describes each of the five different styles of pianos offered. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

WEAVING IN SHADOW.

In one of the famous lace shops of Brussels there are certain rooms devoted to the weaving of the finest and most delicate lace patterns. These rooms are altogether darkened, save for the light from one small window falling directly upon the pattern. There is only one lace-maker in the room, and she sits where the narrow stream of light falls upon the thread she is weaving. "Thus," you are told by your guide, "do we secure our choicest products. Lace is always more delicately and beautifully woven when the worker is in the dark and only her pattern is in the light."

Does not the same beautiful and mysterious result appear in work of any kind, when surrounding shadows compel the toiler to fix his attention solely upon the task in hand—the task upon which falls the concentrated light of life? When a soul finds itself shut in by disappointments, trials, bereavements, disciplines or physical limitations to its divinely appointed task, the one thing it is best fitted to do or teach in this world, how marvelously the pattern is wrought! What new power and beauty appear in both work and character! That one small window through which falls the light of heaven full upon our task is, how often, the essential condition of highest achievement.—The Continent.

THE BATTLE OF LIFE.

Both observation and experience, as well as God's Word, teach us that life is a struggle, and that the strife is between truth and falsehood, good and evil, God and Satan. Moreover, the fight is hard and long, and the forces are ever in line of battle. There is scarcely a moment that the soul is not assailed, openly or secretly, and the danger of being taken unawares is always upon us. That is why it is so important to watch and pray. The wiles of the devil are hard to withstand. "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Wherefore, for that very reason, we are to take to ourselves the "whole armor of God," that we may be able to withstand in the evil day, and remain true to God and ourselves, and unscathed by sin. The battle is on, and we are in it. If we are on the right side, we will have a long and fierce struggle, but we are bound to win in the end. The Lord's side is the safe side. If we are on his side and have on his armor, there can be no doubt as to the result of the fight.—Religious Telescope.

CHIEFLY A RURAL CHURCH.

In a recent issue the Central Christian Advocate, of Kansas City, uses a series of charts to show the relative strength of the leading religious denominations in a number of the large cities of the United States. We are unable to reproduce these pictures which so impressively set forth the facts which the writer of the article desired to convey, but we quote some of his striking statements in the discussion of this most interesting subject:

"Almost 60 per cent of the Jewish congregations are in cities of 300,000 population, while less than 5 per cent of Methodists are in cities of that size and over. Almost 90 per cent of the Jewish worshippers are in cities of more than 25,000; 60 per cent of Christian scientists are in cities of 300,000, and only about 15 per cent are outside of cities; more than 50 per cent of Roman Catholics are in cities having more than 25,000 population; the Protestant Episcopal Church is also a city Church, while only 10 per cent of Methodists of whatever name are in cities larger than 50,000, and less than 15 per cent of all Methodists are in cities, even as large as 25,000. That is to say, 85 per cent of all the Methodists in the United States are in the country, or in the small towns and little cities.

"We are a rural Church. We have a considerable membership in some cities, but essentially we are a rural Church.

"But we must not press this statement too far. All the Protestant Churches are rural churches. And, for that matter, there are in the cities of 25,000 and over, nearly as many Methodists as there are Congregationalists, Disciples, and Presbyterians combined.

"But this diagram states the problem of Methodism. That problem is two-fold: first, to evangelize the country, maintain the rural church—for the country is the base of our supplies—(but is not the country slipping out of our fingers?); and second, to plan to capture the city because the city is our challenge.

"Calcutta is not more a challenge to Methodism than New York or St. Louis. We will not own up to it that Methodism is a failure if it can not adjust its machinery, its diplomacy, and energies, so as to really attack and master, at least in part, New York; but we will have to own up to it that its success is rather microscopic. Is it a fact that we simply can not impress the modern Babylons? Have we a place only under the vines and maples of the country? Is there not alive some John the Baptist, some Bernard of Clairvaux, who can lead a crusade which will master our cities?

"The open country is once more the challenge of the Church, lest it slip from us into materialism.

"The modern city is our test. The city, the American city, the minotaur, the vat, the slum, the drinking, pleasure-made city, that's our test. Are we equal to it? If not, why not? Who will stand in the open place and take up the challenge of the city and, crying in the wilderness, point the way?"

THE MUTUAL OBLIGATION OF PASTOR AND PEOPLE.

Have you welcomed him? We mean the preacher who has been sent to you for another year, whether he is the same one who served you last year or is a new one. You should take the time and trouble, if such it be, to extend him a kindly greeting and assure him of your co-operation in the Master's work, if you have not already done so. He needs it. The life of an itinerant minister has in it many privations and discouragements. Kindliness and a manifestation of sympathy with the cause he represents is a tonic to any pastor. And let your welcome also include the mistress of the parsonage and its other occupants. Trying as is the path that the Methodist preacher has to tread, that of his wife is even more so. And his children also must share in the inconveniences and unpleasantness of having no permanent home and of moving hither and thither at the call of the Church. As far as is possible, every congregation should seek to reduce to a minimum the unpleasant features of our itinerant system.

If the new minister has had a long and expensive move, he is apt to be in need of money, and quarterage paid at such a time not infrequently makes light a heavy and troubled heart. He is a wise giver who contributes at the seasonable hour. Especially is it reprehensible for a people who are displeased with the action of a Bishop to make the man who comes to their charge suffer from the indignation which they feel. In most cases, he is in nowise responsible for his assignment, and perhaps he is as averse to coming as the congregation is to receiving him. To treat him coolly or discourteously under such circumstances is a gross injustice.

We by no means believe that all the appointments made in our Church are divinely ordered; but our itinerant system is largely in the nature of a compact which it behooves both our pastors and flocks to abide by, so long as it is kept in force. And what we regard as serious mistakes in fitting the men to the charges, often prove otherwise when accepted in the right spirit. The most discerning finite judgment lacks much of being inerrant. And almost any kind of a misfit can be endured for a year by both the preacher and the parishioners, if they have even a modicum of consecration. There is little justification for explosions under our plan of operation on the side of either the pastor or the people. We do not hesitate to say, however, that we think it is usually well for the appointing power to consult freely with the ministers who are to be placed and the representatives of the charges. We are far from being convinced that a cabinet that is tightly sealed up always yields the best results.

WHAT THE CHRISTIAN IS.

Few Christians realize the importance of their position in the world. Christ said, "Ye are the light of the world." He also called his followers the salt of the earth, and Paul refers to them as the sons of God. If, then, as Christians we are to our fellow-men light and salt and sons of God, we should not be unmindful of our responsibility and the importance of our position.

What does it mean to be light and salt and a son of God? It means that the Christian enters into every phase of human activity. To be light and salt, one must first be a son of God. To be a son of God, one must be led by the Spirit of God, for "as many as are led by the Spirit, the same are the sons of God."

Sometimes we feel embarrassed, as did Peter at the trial of Christ, when we are called followers of Jesus; but no honor was ever conferred upon man equal to that of being a Christian. By human effort one may become an officer in a high position; by industry one may amass a great fortune; by the chance of birth or the fortunes of war one may be the son of a king and the heir of a kingdom; but by the grace of God whosoever will may become a son of God, the heir of a kingdom, and a joint heir with Jesus-Christ. Earthly positions are temporal and end with the passing of time, but to be a son of God is to occupy a position that time cannot affect—a position the honor and dignity of which eternity alone will reveal.

As sons of God we are the salt of the earth. The function of salt is to season, and in a sense all Christians are seasoners. As food is made palatable by the use of salt, so is a community made hearable by the presence in it of Christian people. We find that as late as the fifteenth century, Paracelsus, the Swiss philosopher, held that salt was the principal element in the composition of the earth, and that no matter could exist without it. We of to-day know that it is one of the greatest preservatives known to scientists. By "salt of the earth," Christ probably meant that the Christian is the principal element, and the preservative element, in the composition of human society.

As the light of the world, the Christian sustains a personal relation to every one with whom he comes in contact. The service of light to the individual is to reveal to him the right way, and to show him a place to toil. As a light in the world we thus help others to find the way of life and become workers in the vineyard of the Lord. The light that emanates from us is but the Great Light shining through us.

To be led by the Spirit of God requires an act of self-sacrifice on the part of man. It requires the submission of his will to the will of God. It is a voluntary act and brings the reward of sonship, and consequently makes us heirs, with Father Abraham, of the Eternal City. It requires all the time one has during life to follow faithfully the leadership of the Spirit. If one successfully follows God's leadership in all things, he involuntarily serves humanity as both salt and light. Then, let us spend our time in seeking to know the will of God, and in doing it.

SENSE OR SENTIMENTALITY.

By Rev. J. W. Moore.

Perhaps, in his thought-provoking book entitled, "Positive Preaching and The Modern Mind," speaks of a certain class "who are more drawn to the realm of speculation, the mysticism of science, the romance of the heart, the mysticism of the imagination, than to the historical and ethical spirituality of the evangelical Christ, the crucified."

In the foregoing statement there are some very apt and striking phrases. To very many religion is the realm of speculation, the mysticism of a vivid imagination, a romance prompted by the heart's longings. Our fathers may have possessed too definite a creed, and have claimed such a knowledge of the divine plan as to lay them open to the ridicule of the wits. Their cock-sureness is far preferable to the hazy conceptions of the mystical theology of to-day. Their beliefs were well articulated, like the skeleton in the doctor's office, each joint fitting perfectly in its appropriate socket and the mechanism all too apparent to the eye. Shake it and you heard the rattling of dry bones. It was built for strength and not for beauty.

Our modern theological teaching may be summed up in Matthew Arnold's expression, "Sweetness and light." It is every day growing sweeter, and I fear, lighter. Its sweetness is that of saccharine, which is nauseating and insipid. Hazy and honeyed sentimentalities have superseded the strong expressions of truth. Our most modern caterers feed neither on milk nor meat, but a sillibub beaten to ten times its normal lightness. Mystical moonshine catches the attention of this thoughtless generation, or degeneration. To them the fog of Eddysia assumes the shape and solidity of Gibraltar.

Religious activities assume a new and a lighter phase. A naked soul does not arouse a tithe as much sympathy as sore feet and protruding elbows inspire. Our effervescent religious sentimentality gets as much delight from Johnny's outing in the country as our fathers received from the conversion of Johnny's father. Our fathers wept and shouted because a soul had been delivered from the thralldom of sin, but we, their children, obtain the same pleasurable thrill from the picnic of the poor in the park.

Humanitarianism is an easy and a cheap substitute for Christianity. But what a poor one! Even the neurasthenic age wants something more substantial. Christianity is not a rainbow of beauty against a black background of vapor—something intangible and evasive—but it is a "rock in a wearied land and a shelter in the time of storm."

THE RISE OF METHODISM IN AMERICA.

Dear Dr. Meek: I find in the third Discipline of the Methodist Church in America, published in 1778, the following question and answer:

"What was the rise of Methodism, so-called, in America?"

"Answer: During the space of thirty years past certain persons, members of the Society emigrated from England and Ireland, and settled in various parts of this country. About twenty years ago, Philip Embury, a local preacher from Ireland, began to preach in the City of New York and formed a Society of his own countrymen and the citizens. About the same time, Robert Strawbridge, a local preacher from Ireland, settled in Frederick County, in the State of Maryland, and preaching there, formed some Societies. In 1769, Richard Boardman and Joseph Pilmoor came to New York, who were the first regular Methodist preachers on the Continent. In the latter end of the year 1771, Francis Asbury and Richard Wright, of the same order, came over."

This conference was composed of all the Methodist preachers then in America, and evidently is intended to give priority to Philip Embury, in the City of New York. As most of these preachers were living at the time of this planting of Methodism in America, and as they came from both the points to the Conference and were required to read and study the Discipline next to their Bibles, and inasmuch as there was no correction of this impression in the two next succeeding Disciplines, it would seem that this was the accepted history at this early date.

STATUS OF METHODISM IN THE MISSISSIPPI INDUSTRIAL INSTITUTE AND COLLEGE.

Dear Brother Meek: It has occurred to me that possibly your readers of the two Mississippi Conferences would be interested in the present status of Methodism in this great State institution. To me, this new opportunity of observing the moral and religious forces at work in the Industrial Institute and College has brought nothing less than a positive revelation; particularly has the conspicuous part therein played by Methodism both surprised and delighted me.

Our Church has been honorably and helpfully associated with this College since its pioneer days under that scholarly gentleman, devout Christian and loyal Methodist, Dr. R. W. Jones, its first President. More than once has he told me that his selection of the first Faculty of the new College was the supremely important and responsible task of his life, and that it was accomplished in the fear of God, after months of earnest prayer for Divine wisdom and guidance. Truly, "more things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of." Associated with him in those early and formative years of the I. I. and C. history—among other fine women—was that grand character, herself the daughter of a pioneer Methodist preacher, Miss M. J. S. Callaway. Her sainted memory is as a precious ointment poured forth in the homes of hundreds, nay, thousands, of women, who, as girls, came under the influence of her remarkable personality during the more than forty years of her teaching life.

The first student body of this College gave to the cause of foreign missions its fairest and best, in the lovely, the consecrated Addie Gordon—a Methodist—who served God and her Church for many years in China. Following in the path she blazed in those early days, six other magnificent Christian women, all of our Church, have received here their first impulse and call to work in foreign fields. The missionary spirit has long been alive and active in the I. I. and C., judged by our Savior's own test: "By their fruits shall ye know them."

The Methodist girls of the present are peculiarly the heirs of this rich heritage of missionary traditions and example. To gather up these sacred influences and incarnate them anew into the lives of our girls, the entire Methodist force is resolved into a great Denominational Missionary Society at the Sunday school hour on every fourth Sunday. What a thrilling, inspiring sight to see this splendid assemblage of 313 Methodist girls carrying on the activities of their missionary organization.

As Superintendent of the Methodist division of the College Sunday school, under the appointment of that elect Christian gentleman, Dr. Dahney Lipscomb, who is general superintendent of all the Sunday school forces, it is my great privilege to help direct the religious and Church life of more than three hundred Methodist girls. My first impulse was to love and "mother" them all, and yet the relation involves something of the duties and responsibilities of a pastor as well; hence I have coined a word to imply the full content of the relation as I feel it. Consequently I am "Church-Mother" to 313 as fine, promising girls as were ever assembled anywhere. Nor am I, with my large Church family, entirely like "the old woman who lived in the shoe," for in the fear of God and with his guidance and the co-operation of a faithful corps of Sunday school teachers, I hope to learn "what to do" with the sacred interests involved.

We have in the faculty and official staff of the College twenty-four Methodists. From these we draw our teaching force for the Sunday school and Y. W. C. A. Bible study classes, both of which hold their weekly sessions from 9:30 to 10:45 on Sunday mornings. We are assigned the large Chapel building for our Sunday school, and here, with the help of other faithful Methodist teachers, I am endeavoring to make a real, live Sunday school. We have organized a good, full choir, under the direction of a talented Methodist girl as choir leader. By lending thus the charm of music, and the inspiration of worship in song, we hope to keep our Sunday school work from drifting into a mere perfunctory task with little to differentiate it from the other and secular duties of College life.

In every force for good at work here, Methodist girls are taking an enviable and important part. Of the twelve cabinet members of the Y. W. C. A., six are Methodists. The President, Miss Helen Wier, is a granddaughter of our beloved Dr. T. C. Weir, of the North Mississippi Conference, and a worthy descendant is she of that useful, consecrated man. Still another member of this Y. W. C. A. staff is the lovely daughter of our brother, Rev. R. H. B. Bladney, of the Sardis church. Something like 150 of our girls are doing systematic Bible study in the various courses offered by the Young Woman's Christian Association. Among the leaders who conduct these Bible study classes are nine Methodist girls and one member of the Methodist contingent in the Faculty.

The Student Government Association of the College chose this year, both its president and vice president from our denominational ranks. The President, Miss Cunningham, of Booneville—a truly remarkable girl—holds, in my opinion, a position second in importance only to that of the College President, Mr. H. L. Whitfield. The mere mention of the genial, broad-minded head of this institution forces me to digress from Methodist matters long enough to say that President Whitfield is not only a great general, successfully manipulating the forces under his control, but he is the College father, the friend, the confidential adviser, if she needs him in that capacity, of every student here.

Methodist girls are taking an equally important part in other phases of our College life, holding responsible offices in both the Civic League and the Honor Council. They are frequent and forceful leaders in the daily Y. W. C. A. prayer meeting, where, for the present session, an average attendance of over 450 is being maintained.

This hasty and somewhat cursory survey of I. I. and C. Methodism will serve to impress your readers, I trust, with the importance of keeping in close touch, as a Church, with the vital religious and denominational interests centered at present in this splendid State institution, and flowing out hence into every part of our great State.

MARY GORE WYATT.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE IN THE ARMY.

To the Editor:

The following extract from an article under the above heading, by Col. L. M. Maus, Chief Surgeon of the Eastern Division, United States Army, should have the widest possible circulation. The extract is taken from an editorial in the Army and Navy Journal of Nov. 2, 1912:

What may prove to be the first step in a movement to bring about a total abstinence regulation for the Services appears in the November-December issue of the Journal of the Military Service Institution in a paper by Col. L. Mervin Maus, Med. Corps, U. S. A., who has given out previous essays and reports on temperance, and who now asks whether the moderate use of alcohol should be prohibited among officers of the military, naval and civil services of the country. Colonel Maus repeats the many arguments of the total abstainers as to the alleged injurious effects of even moderate drinking and proceeds thus: "Total abstinence should become a requirement in the election of our Presidents, Governors of States, Senators, Congressmen, Judges and all officers within the suffrages of the people. Besides, no one who uses alcoholic beverages should be appointed to the important positions of Cabinet officers, members of the Supreme Bench or district courts, heads of government bureaus, civil or military, to the command of military or naval forces, or any other position of importance or responsibility. In view of our knowledge of the subject, has not the Government the right to prohibit the use of alcohol among its public servants, and especially among the pensionable class? Every officer who accepts a position in the Army or Navy relinquishes in part his civil rights and personal liberty. As a compensation for submission to regulations, orders, command and duty, the Government provides ample pay and allowances, and obligates itself to pension both officers and soldiers on age or length of service or for mental and physical disability contracted in the line of duty. For this reason, I hold that the Government has the right to require every officer and enlisted man on the active list to safeguard himself against disease and vicious habits which are inimical to health and efficiency. Sanitary orders have been issued forbidding the use of non-sterilized water to prevent amoebic dysentery, and certain articles of diet to prevent cholera, beriberi, etc. Vaccinations have been enforced against smallpox, typhoid fever and diphtheria, and mosquito bars against malaria. Why not enforce total abstinence from alcohol, which is one of the greatest factors in the causation of venereal diseases, impaired health and non-efficiency in our public service. Only recently the War Department issued an order depriving officers and enlisted men of pay while on the sick list or unable to perform duty as a result of diseases and conditions contracted through drinking or other vicious practices. In view of its temporary and permanent disabling and disqualifying effects, both on the mind and body, let us hope that the Government may soon see the wisdom of prohibiting the use of alcohol among officers of the military and naval forces and officials and employees of the civil service."

In view of the fact that the law forbidding the sale of intoxicants on military reservations is now largely a dead-letter because of the fact that officers' clubs furnish liquors to their members and post exchanges handle malt and other classes of near-beer at many posts, it is well to take an advanced step in the matter. It seems to me that Colonel Maus' solution is the proper one.

AN AMERICAN CITIZEN.

THE NINETY-NINTH SESSION OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Reported by One of Its Members.

Writing early Saturday morning, before any boards have reported or before the results of those mysterious Cabinet meetings have become known, we should say that the 99th session of the Mississippi Conference has been one of the most entirely pleasant in its history. When the members arrived during Tuesday and Wednesday they were met at the train by an array of automobiles that would have done credit to New Orleans, and that without the embarrassing presence of the man collecting fares. Surely no small city in the South possesses more handsome homes or hospitable people than this same Hazlehurst, where not only Baptists, and Methodists, and Presbyterians, but also Jews and people of every other faith joined in giving the Conference a sample of a really united town and of genuine hospitality. We knew before we went that Hazlehurst was all right, but this morning as we write this we are downright proud of it.

The Historical Society's Meeting Tuesday night was held in the Methodist Church, and was interesting. The paper of Dr. B. F. Jones, which gave a comprehensive historic view of all Methodism and especially of Mississippi Methodism, reminded us again of our debt to the men and women of the past. "Others have labored and we have entered into their labors."

When Bishop Morrison took the chair Wednesday morning the brethren were glad to notice that he seemed well; that the feebleness of which he had complained at the North Mississippi Conference had pretty well passed away, and that he was much like his usual self. His opening talk, based on the Marriage at Cana and our Lord's first miracle, was uplifting, and his prayer was one of the tenderest and strongest we have ever heard from the lips of any man.

Dr. A. F. Watkins called the roll, and at the first session there were 116 preachers and a goodly number of laymen present, which number has been steadily increased until the attendance is fully as large as usual.

Among the laymen we have noted are Major R. W. Millsaps, Profs. Harrell, Burton and Sullivan, of Millsaps College; W. D. Davis, of Brookhaven; Z. Z. Linton, of Fernwood; T. M. Evans and S. H. Tomlinson, of Gulfport; B. F. Goza, of Magnolia. The larger the number of laymen the better are the preachers pleased.

The calling of the roll brought out the fact that five of our men had died during the year, as follows: Revs. F. M. Williams, R. B. Downer, D. C. Langford, W. G. Backus and R. S. Gale. These brethren had all been prominent figures at our Conferences, and were sadly missed this time.

Dr. Watkins was elected Secretary, and G. S. Harmon and Robert Selby, Assistants. J. L. Neill, G. P. McKeown and J. L. Decell did well the work of Statistical Secretaries.

No Conference has a finer array of "grand old men" than ours, and while some faces were absent, the brethren were glad to hear cheerful talks by Brothers Ira B. Robertson, Henry P. Lewis, Sr., J. W. Simmons, C. McDonald, and Dr. W. C. Black. Rev. J. W. Brown, also one of our superannuates, was present, and seemed to be in fair health.

Early in the session the Bishop called Question 22, and the reports from the presiding elders down to the last pastor were cheerful and hopeful, indicating that the Conference had had an uncommonly fine year. The reports were made, not hurriedly, but briskly and briefly, and little time was consumed in complaints and long descriptions of misfortunes. There were practically no charges that had not had revivals, and in which the kingdom of Christ had not been advanced.

Up to this writing there have been a goodly number of connectional men and other visitors, who brought inspiring messages. Dr. Ed F. Cook, of the Board of Missions, spoke on Wednesday morning, and his message was strong and stirring as he held up a vision of the accessibility of non-Christian lands to our missionaries. Dr. R. P. Wilson, representing the circulation department of the Publishing House, was a welcome visitor, and spoke briefly to the Conference. Dr. John R. Stewart gave his usual forcible presentation of the Superannuate Endowment Fund. Among other cheerful items, he reported that there is now $222,000 in the Loan Fund, none of which is bringing in less than 6 per cent, and more than half is earning 8 per cent.

Dr. Stonewall Anderson was present for several days. He spoke during Thursday's session, and again at the Methodist Church on Friday night. His presentation of the cause of Christian Education was helpful in the extreme.

Dr. Gross Alexander's coming is always an inspiration. Not only his presentation of the Review, but his helpful expository sermons completely recaptured the Conference and the people generally who heard him.

Dr. E. B. Chappell was present and looked well after the interests of the Sunday school. Mr. I. G. Campbell, as usual, looked after the interests of the Publishing House.

The Conference was glad to have present Rev. G. W. Bachman. He was, however, quite feeble, having suffered an accident while attending the session of the North Mississippi Conference. Brother Bachman is a great favorite with the Mississippi Conference brethren.

Pleasant messages were received from Rev. J. E. Carpenter and Rev. Dan Scarborough, the latter of whom has recently been transferred to the Los Angeles Conference and placed at Santa Anna. The Conference ordered suitable responses sent to these men.

The Conference was interested in the statement made in the report of the Publishing House and the branch house at Dallas, which showed that the joint sales this year amounted to $746,571.43. A resolution asking the management of the Publishing House to establish a book depository in the building occupied by the New Orleans Christian Advocate at 512 Camp Street, New Orleans, was adopted.

Among the happy reports of the Conference was that of Rev. J. M. Morse, of Capitol Street, Jackson, who reported the completion of a new $40,000 church building.

Dr. A. F. Watkins read a report from Millsaps College. The report states that there are now more students in actual attendance than at any other time in its history.

During the time on Tuesday when the Conference was gathering, there occurred at Wesson, ten miles from Hazlehurst, the sad death of Dr. E. A. Rowan, who had been struck by a railroad train. Dr. Rowan had been a friend of every good cause, and the Conference showed its appreciation of that fact by passing tender and beautiful resolutions with reference to his death.

Dr. R. A. Meek and Mr. C. O. Chalmers were present and looked well after the affairs of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

M. H. Honeycutt, who surrendered his credentials when he had a difficulty with a man in Jackson last year, asked for the restoration of his credentials, but subsequently withdrew his request for this session.

When the name of H. G. Hawkins was called, he announced that he had asked for a transfer to the Memphis Conference, where he goes to do educational work as President of the Memphis Conference Female Institute. His Mississippi brethren regret his going, and passed resolutions commending him to the people of Tennessee.

Dr. I. W. Cooper submitted a very hopeful report of affairs at Whitworth College, showing 207 students enrolled; that the new Lampton auditorium is under construction, and the new President's home completed.

Among the most interesting reports before the Conference was that of Rev. John D. Ellis, who is Chaplain of the State Penitentiary, where there are 1820 prisoners. He stated that there were 1600 negro and 235 white prisoners, and that they are responsive to moral influences. The Conference asked that his report should be published in the Minutes.

The following were admitted on trial: Hugh Robert McKee, Oro Creal Seevers, Albert Webster O'Bryant, Albert Sydney Byrd, Algernon Sidney Oliver, Robert Faiklin Harrell, Albert Harold Steele, Sherbert Hughes Frasier, Hancy M. Johnson, Thomas A. Ferguson, Charles Equin Downer, Paul Foster Daniel, and Samuel E. Flurry.

The following were advanced to the second year: J. H. Moore, C. A. Shultz, B. L. Sutherland, Will M. Thomas, W. B. Waldrop, H. A. Maples, and H. N. McKibben.

The following were advanced to the class of the third year and admitted into full connection: W. M. Nelson, A. J. Davis, J. L. Decell, H. K. McKee, G. J. Yeager, A. B. Barry, and J. M. Smith.

The following were advanced to the class of the fourth year: L. E. Wicht, B. F. Crook, H. F. Tolle, J. F. Campbell, J. A. Wells, H. S. Westbrook, C. C. Griffin, Roy H. Kleiser, J. E. Sampley, H. J. Maddox, Fred L. Applewhite, and J. W. Price.

The following finished the course: E. C. Gunn, J. V. Bennett, M. R. Jones, C. H. Herring, F. L. Applewhite, and C. C. Griffin.

The Conference unanimously accepted the invitation of Natchez to meet there for the next session.

Those added to the Superannuate Roll this session were L. Carley, R. Bradley, and C. M. Martin.

W. W. Hopper was readmitted. W. F. McCrory was discontinued at his own request.

Brother W. M. Williams represented the Orphans' Home in his usual good style. M. L. Burton and S. W. Taylor were elected to succeed themselves on the Board of Trustees of the Orphans' Home. There are now 214 children in the home.

The following were selected as Commissioners of the Tri-State Hospital at Memphis: T. B. Clifford, L. L. Roberts, P. D. Hardin, W. J. Dawson, and W. G. Forsythe. Brother H. M. Ellis represented the Hospital with ability and enthusiasm.

The temperance question received careful attention by the Conference. Early in the session of the Conference a resolution was passed congratulating our two United States Senators on their support of the Shepherd-Kenyon Bill, now before the United States Senate. On Saturday morning Rev. G. W. Eichelberger and Captain W. T. Ratliff, representing the Anti-Saloon League, spoke to the Conference, after which the report on temperance was enthusiastically adopted.

During the session Monday morning a collection was taken to place a monument at the grave of Rev. A. B. Nicholson, of blessed memory, who sleeps in the cemetery at Hazlehurst.

Rev. C. M. Chapman read the report on Sabbath observance. Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb spoke briefly during Friday morning on the work of the Woman's Missionary Society. Rev. Robert Selby represented the Divinity School.

The preaching during the Conference was unusually fine, and the people spoke often of the old and meeting times. Brother J. E. Robertson, of the Methodist Church, presented a well-prepared sermon that was thoughtful and helpful. On Wednesday afternoon Dr. E. F. O'Neil presided at the installation of a new congregation.

On Thursday afternoon the only sermon, Rev. E. H. Sawyer, who comes to us from the South Georgia Conference, preached. His sermon was highly enjoyed. On Thursday night Rev. W. A. Johnson, of Chicago, addressed the congregation on the Sunday school work. Dr. George Allen presided on Friday night, and Dr. Chappell presided on Saturday night.

A resolution toward newness was made by the Sunday School Board, when they elected Mr. E. A. Madden, of Mendenhall, as Sunday School Agent. Each Sunday school in the Conference is asked to give 2 cents per scholar for the support of this cause. Brother Madden is to give his work more especially to the Sunday school work of the area.

Rev. and Mrs. E. H. Sawyer are enjoying the Conference. Brother Sawyer is in the health. Among other ministers wives present are Mrs. H. A. Mayfield, Mrs. H. E. Carter, Mrs. J. N. Callaway, and Mrs. J. M. Smith.

Saturday, Sunday, and Monday.

The full sessions of the Conference were held on Saturday and reports of committees and boards followed in an orderly way.

Rev. C. O'Neil read the report on Publishing. In which, the interest of which, providing for the establishment of a committee looking to the establishment of an Advocate to be located at Jacksonville was called.

A resolution asking for the appointment of a committee to study the question of lady rights for women was passed.

The resolutions by resolution were asked to preach a sermon on January 5, 1913, on Christian Hospitality. The report of the Special Hospital Committee showed that $42,000 had been raised in cash and subscription for that cause.

The report of the Board of Trustees of the Conference Endowment Fund showed that the total was increased to $1500.

An amendment was adopted to the report on Sabbath Observance providing for a Sabbath Observance Committee in each charge who shall protect the interests of a Christian Sabbath.

The report of the American Bible Society Board showed that an assessment of $1600 has been levied for next year.

The report of the Epworth League Board stated that the gifts of the Leaguers amounted to $25,441.35 this year. It informed the Cuban Special for another year.

Rev. B. F. Lewis read the report of the Sunday School Board. It announced that, besides the election of Mr. R. A. Maddox as Field Agent, Mr. K. A. Mott would have charge of organized Bible Class work; Mrs. G. D. Cameron of the Mission Department, and Miss Daisy Magee of the Elementary work. These are now salaried officers.

The report of the Joint Board of Finance stated that $12,000 is the assessment for next year for Conference claimants, $2700 for Bishops, and $1182, or an amount equal to 1 per cent of the pastors' salaries, for the Superannuate Endowment Fund. The claimants were paid in full this year. The report of the Board of Missions showed the assessments for next year to be for Foreign Missions, $12,100, and for Domestic Missions $12,200.

A resolution was passed at the Monday's session asking that no man whose orthodoxy is questionable should be given a place in the faculty of the Divinity School.

A resolution was passed pledging the Conference during its centennial year, 1913, to pray and work for 10,000 conversions.

The report of the Board of Education announced an assessment of $7050 for 1913.

Rev. C. F. Emery offered the usual resolutions of thanks. Special thanks are due to the Hazlehurst people who gave the Conference such magnificent entertainment; also to Rev. N. B. Harmon, who left nothing undone to make this a splendid session. The Baptist Congregation was also given thanks for the use of their beautiful church, in which the sessions of the Conference were held. The Presbyterian and Episcopal churches were also included, for the use of their churches in various ways. Pastors Caldwell and Pugh, of the Presbyterian and Baptist churches, have showed the Conference many courtesies.

Rev. W. F. Quillian, of the Mississippi Training School, was with the Conference during Sunday evening and addressing the Conference early Monday morning.

A resolution was passed commending the work of Bishop Morrison and asking the College of Bishops to return him next year.

The class of the First Year announced that they had met and organized for mutual helpfulness and prayer.

Sunday was a great day in Hazlehurst. The Love Feast, held in the Methodist Church and led by Dr. J. M. Williams was unusually inspiring.

At eleven o'clock Dr. Samuel Anderson presided in a magnificent congregation on "The Love Feast, the life for my sake shall find it." The sermon was highly commended by every one. At the morning session Bishop Morrison presided the following session: A. J. Davis, J. L. Decell, W. W. Nelson, J. L. Smith, G. G. Taylor, A. A. Phillips, H. E. Gilmore, Louis Fayard, R. E. Flurry, R. G. Watkins.

Dr. A. F. Watkins presided at the Baptist Church and Rev. W. H. Sanders of the Presbyterian Church. At eight Rev. John Paul presided in the Baptist Church and Rev. J. L. Wall presided at 11 a. m. at the Episcopal Church.

At night, in the Methodist Church, Dr. Gross presided in a magnificent congregation on "The Kingdom of God" as explained by Jesus and Paul. The great audience was thrilled by it. After the sermon Bishop Morrison presided the following session: E. C. Gann, J. V. Bennett, M. R. Jones, C. H. Herring, F. L. Applewhite, H. F. Tolle, and N. B. McLeod, who is a member of the North Alabama Conference, and who has served with Street, Hazlehurst, for a part of the year.

At 3:30 in the afternoon a beautiful memorial service was held in memory of the brethren who had died during the year.

Only a short session was held Monday morning in which a small amount of business was transacted, after which the Bishop read the appointment ending one of the happiest sessions of the Mississippi Conference ever held anywhere. Bishop Morrison left at 10:30 a. m. for Tampa, Florida.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By a Member.

The educational addresses of Dr. A. F. Watkins and Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps; Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Whitworth College; Rev. C. M. Chapman, of Port Gibson, and Rev. T. J. O'Neil, of the Mississippi Conference Training School, Saturday afternoon formed a splendid educational program.

Mrs. T. B. Holloman, Mrs. E. H. Moulter, Mrs. J. L. Decell, Mrs. J. L. Smith, Mrs. H. A. Maples, Mrs. H. E. Carter and Mrs. R. B. Downer were among the preachers' wives who attended this session of the Conference.

Both Drs. J. W. and M. A. Beeson, of the Meridian Male and Female Colleges, were welcomed members of the Meridian delegation.

Messrs. S. A. Tomlinson, L. P. Brown and Z. Z. Linton were among the laymen who watched the proceedings of the Conference with a great deal of interest.

The new Presiding Elders, Rev. P. D. Hardin, Rev. C. F. Emery, and Rev. R. Selby, are splendid selections for that office. Rev. George H. Thompson and T. W. Adams have both served in that capacity before.

The Orphans' Home is to be congratulated on securing the service of Rev. H. E. Carter and his wife. The Conference has made no greater contribution to the Orphans' Home.

The pastorate at Wesson will share the attention of Rev. L. L. Roberts with the financial interests of Whitworth College. This is a nice arrangement.

Among the fine reports at the Conference was that of Rev. D. E. Kelly, Conference Evangelist, who reported 15 meetings and 625 accessions to the Church. Brother Kelly will do the same work for another year. His address is Hattiesburg, Miss.

Such laymen as Wilson, Sexton, Wise, Herlong, McKewen, Mesmith, Rogers, Garland, and others, who assisted the pastor in receiving at Hazlehurst, are a great joy to the Church.

The minutes of the Mississippi Conference are in the hands of G. S. Harmon, of Meridian, who will look after their publication.

We congratulate the people of Yazoo City on their new pastor, Rev. N. B. Harmon. This is regarded as one of the happiest assignments made by Bishop Morrison.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS.

Reported by Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

The Louisiana Annual Conference convened in Monroe on Wednesday morning for its 67th annual session. Thirteen years ago the same body held its session in this beautiful city on the Ouachita River. The lamented Bishop Charles Betts Galloway presided over that session, and those who sat under his presidency are yet talking about the great sermon he preached on "The Friendship of Jesus." Death and the processes of time have wrought, and great changes have taken place since the 1890 session. Brothers Miller, Upton, White, Keener and Jackson are no more. J. A. Parker, R. J. Harp, and B. F. Crews are, because of the lengthening shadows, detained at home. Dr. Carter is here; J. D. Harper is here, and the familiar faces of Tucker, F. S. Parker, F. N. Parker, Henry, and others are seen on the floor as they were at that gathering. However, the majority of the present body are young men. Forty-four of the 154 preachers serving charges are undergraduates. Even the presiding Bishop, E. D. Mouzon, is a young man.

Wednesday's Session.

On Wednesday morning, promptly at 9 o'clock, Bishop Mouzon called the Conference to order and conducted the devotional service. He read the first chapter of II Timothy, and gave a lucid exegesis of the same. After roll call, Dr. F. S. Parker was re-elected secretary, and upon his nomination the following assistants were elected: M. C. Holt, first assistant; R. W. Vaughan, Statistical Secretary, with Revs. Harry Bowman, W. L. Doss and Henry Harper as his assistants.

The names of R. W. Tucker and P. M. Brown were added to the Legal Conference by a unanimous vote. Dr. Stonewall Anderson, Secretary of the General Board of Education; Dr. Gross Alexander, Editor of the Methodist Review; Dr. W. F. McMurtry, Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, and Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, pastor of First Methodist Church of Monroe, and but recently from the Southwest Missouri Conference, were introduced. The names of the preachers and the wives or widows of preachers who had died during the year were read and their names were referred to the Committee on Memoirs, and that Committee was asked to present its report at 10 o'clock Friday morning.

The names of the presiding elders were called and each one in turn reported the leading events of the year within the bounds of his district. Rev. E. N. Evans, a supernumerary, was granted a location at his own request. The name of Dr. J. T. Sawyer was referred to the committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation. With the exception of Rev. T. M. Buley, who was reported as having withdrawn from our Church, and Rev. J. R. Roy, whose name was submitted to the same committee without recommendation, the list of superannuated preachers remained unchanged. Dr. Gross Alexander made a brief address, and the Conference adjourned on motion.

In the afternoon Dr. Gross Alexander delivered an inspiring address on New Testament Exegesis, and at night Dr. W. F. McMurtry spoke in the interest of the cause of Church Extension.

Thursday's Session.

After the singing of hymn No. 393, Rev. J. D. Harper led in prayer. Bishop Mouzon read the second chapter of II Timothy and delivered an eloquent and forceful address bearing upon it. After the reading of the minutes of Wednesday's session, Question 6 was called and Bishop Mouzon announced that the following were received by transfer from other Conferences: Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, from the Southwest Missouri Conference; Rev. W. W. Armstrong, from the Texas Conference, and Rev. W. S. Henry, from the South Carolina Conference.

Question 1 was called, and the following were received on trial: W. A. Mangum, W. V. Falcon, E. B. Troy, F. L. Tucker, and C. E. Fike.

Question 10 was called and the following, having completed their second year's course, were elected to deacon's orders: H. W. Jamieson, R. M. Brown, George Fox, T. J. Embree, O. L. Tucker and J. H. Hoffpauir. G. P. White, being in deacon's orders, was advanced to the class of the third year. J. E. Craig, W. B. Perritt, R. V. Fulton, W. F. Roberts and D. C. Bennett were continued in the class of the second year, and J. W. Reed was discontinued.

R. S. Walton, T. V. Peters, G. A. Morgan, F. R. Power, J. G. Snelling, H. T. Young, R. H. Bamberg, L. E. Crooks, T. J. Holladay, J. L. Sutton, S. S. Holladay, and J. W. Faulk, having completed their fourth year's course of study, were elected to elder's orders. C. B. Powell and J. C. Price, already being in orders, were reported as having completed the four-year course of study, and their characters were passed. T. D. Lipscomb, L. A. Sims and T. M. Wafer were continued in the class of the fourth year.

The New M. E. Church, South, at Crowley, La. (now in process of construction), in which the Louisiana Conference will meet next year.

Dr. Gross Alexander spoke at length concerning the merits of the Methodist Review, of which he is the able editor. Mrs. Abel Bliss, of Shreveport, the President of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Conference, was introduced and represented her work.

Rev. J. J. Rogers, representing the American Bible Society, Prof. J. W. Gilbert (colored), W. C. Everett, manager of the Dallas branch of the Publishing House, and Miss Belle Roberts, Field Agent of the Advocate in Louisiana, were introduced.

On Thursday afternoon Dr. Alexander delivered another great address, and at night Dr. G. E. Cameron, of Shreveport, preached a great sermon.

Friday's Session.

On Friday morning the gloom of three days of clouds and rain was broken, and Monroe was bathed in an effulgence of sunlight. The preachers joined heartily in the singing of hymn No. 355, after which Rev. H. Armstrong led in prayer. Bishop Mouzon read the third chapter of II Timothy, and without comment, called for the reading of the minutes.

At this time the sad news of the death of Mrs. R. W. Tucker, wife of the presiding elder of the Ruston District, was announced by Bishop Mouzon. The ministers were moved by deep sympathy and instructed the Secretary to send to Brother Tucker a telegram of sympathy.

Rev. T. H. Morris, of Mansfield, was introduced. Rev. J. J. Morgan spoke briefly in the interest of the American Bible Society. Dr. Ed. F. Cook, Secretary of the Foreign Department of the General Board of Missions, was introduced. W. T. Woodard, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, was readmitted.

Rev. D. A. Morris was received into the Conference from the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Rev. W. H. Long was received from the Baptist Church. The hour set apart for the memorial service having arrived, the names of those who had died during the year were called and their memoirs read as follows: John A. Miller, by C. W. Carter; T. J. Upton, by Rev. J. D. Harper; H. O. White, by Rev. S. J. Davies; George Jackson, by Dr. F. R. Hill, Sr.; J. M. Johnston, by Rev. J. M. Brown; N. S. Cornell, by Rev. C. M. Morris; S. S. Keener, by Mr. Crow Girard; Mrs. J. D. Staten, by Rev. R. A. Davis; and Mrs. B. F. Alexander, by Rev. Robert Randle. A large number of the ministers spoke feelingly concerning the work done by this departed band of noble men and women.

Saturday's Session—Morning.

After the singing of hymn No. 506, Rev. V. D. Skipper led in prayer. Bishop Mouzon read 2d Timothy, 4, and commented upon it. The minutes were read by Dr. F. S. Parker and Question 7 was called. Rev. Abel Hoffpauir was received into the local ministry from the M. E. Church, and his orders were recognized on condition that he appear before one of our Bishops at his earliest convenience and give satisfactory evidence as to his agreement with our Church as to its form of government.

Rev. T. W. H. Chisolm was discontinued by the Conference; C. C. Clark, S. J. McLean and W. M. Oakes were discontinued at their own request. J. L. Cady was continued in the class of the first year, and Louis Hoffpauir and S. D. Roberts were advanced to the class of the second year.

In answer to Question 9, the following made their reports and were advanced to the class of the fourth year: A. J. Bonnett, J. C. Rousseaux, H.

W. Cudd, and J. A. McCormick. J. A. Alford, J. W. Harper and J. W. Newsom were continued in the class of the third year.

At this time Dr. C. S. Newman, pastor of the Monroe Presbyterian Church and Moderator of the Louisiana Presbytery, was introduced.

The names of all the preachers that had not been called, excepting those of the Monroe District, were called, and, without offering them an opportunity to report the work of their charges, their characters were passed. A. R. Hoffpauir was located at his own request. The names of I. T. Reames and B. T. Crews were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for superannuation. Rev. C. B. Carter, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, made his report; he had been ill and was absent from the Conference when the district reports were called for.

"Where shall the next Conference be held?" was asked. Rev. S. J. Davies nominated Shreveport, and Dr. Cameron designated First Church as the one in Shreveport that desired the Conference next year. C. D. Atkinson nominated Crowley, and W. W. Drake nominated Baton Rouge. For the next few minutes the Conference was submerged in a sea of eloquence, and the three named places will have much to do in the future to live up to the reputations that have been given them. The result of the first vote was Shreveport 51, Crowley 63, and Baton Rouge 29. On the second vote Shreveport received 59 and Crowley 84. By motion of Dr. G. E. Cameron, the choice of Crowley was then made unanimous.

The Committee on Prison Reform rendered its report through J. L. Sutton, the President.

The hour set apart for the reception of the class into full connection having arrived, the Secretary called their names and the following responded and stood before the altar: J. H. Hoffpauir, G. P. White, R. M. Brown, H. W. Jamieson, George Fox and T. J. Embree. Rev. O. L. Tucker, who had finished the Second Year's course and been elected to deacon's orders, was absent on account of the death of his mother. Bishop Mouzon delivered an address to the class that was practical, eloquent, and deeply spiritual. The class was admitted.

By motion, the Conference adjourned to meet at 3 p. m. for an afternoon session.

Saturday Afternoon.

After the reading of a portion of John 14 by Rev. J. M. Brown, hymn No. 544 was sung. The minutes of the morning session were read. Bishop Mouzon requested the presiding elders to meet him at once in his room, and invited Dr. C. W. Carter to preside during his absence.

Dr. Carter occupied the chair during the afternoon with grace and dignity. There is not a man in the Louisiana Conference who is more loved and respected than is Dr. Carter.

The report of the Board of Missions was read and adopted. It contained the following items of interest: A. W. Turner and L. N. Hoffpauir were recommended for appointment to the work of Conference Evangelists, but without any claim upon the Board for their support. W. W. Drake was named as Missionary Secretary and the following constitute the Committee on Evangelization: Dr. J. W. Moore, W. H. Coleman and W. W. Drake. Dr. Moore spoke for a few minutes concerning the work of evangelizing Louisiana. Dr. Moore and Dr. G. E. Cameron were elected to fill vacancies on the Board of Missions.

Reports were heard and adopted as follows:

THE BIBLICAL DEPARTMENT OF VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY

The Editor asks me for a word concerning the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University.

The leading thought in the founding of Vanderbilt University was to provide a Theological school where young ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church South might receive the best possible preparation for their life work in the itinerant ministry, such training as would be them for effective service in any place and in any kind of ministerial work to which they might be assigned by the authorities of the Church. Among the five departments named in the charter as constituting the University, the "Theological school for the training of our young preachers" comes first in the list.

Not long before the founding of the University a terrible dissension took place between Bishop McTyeire and Bishop Pierce as to the real value of theological schools, and as to whether or not such a school was needed in the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Bishop Pierce opposed and Bishop McTyeire strongly favored the establishment by our Church of a school for the special training of such of our young ministers as could avail themselves of its advantages. What he envisioned for was realized in Vanderbilt University.

Among those who favored a Theological school for the Church there was a difference of opinion as to whether it should be a theological seminary located apart by itself, separate and distinct from any institution giving instruction in literary, classical and scientific studies, or a department in a university where the students should not only have the benefit of such university courses of instruction as might be desired, but where they should be brought in daily contact with the general body of students preparing for the many different vocations of life. Among those interested in establishing a theological school for our Church, the latter idea prevailed. It was felt that a more robust, practical and useful type of ministerial character would be developed in the atmosphere of a great university, than could be produced in a theological seminary entirely removed from the broadening influences of a university community.

If the Southern Methodist Church, through its ministers and members, ever founded anything, it surely founded Vanderbilt University. Great as is our debt to Mr. Vanderbilt, who was in a true sense its financial founder, we yet owe even more to Bishop McTyeire, in whose head and heart were cherished the idea and the plan of a great central university for the entire Church, with a theological school always placed in the foreground as that department of the university in which the Church would be most deeply interested.

The first qualification for efficiency in the itinerant ministry is a genuine religious experience, and next to that a deep sense on the part of the preacher of his own divine call to the ministry. The young preachers who have these more spiritual qualifications are just as much needed and desired in a theological school in order to create the right kind of atmosphere, and to do the right kind of work, as they are desired and needed in the active work of the ministry. Next to this primary spiritual qualification, which is all important, it is very desirable and important that a student who enters a theological school shall have previous college education—a complete college course if possible; but certainly, sufficient academic education to make him capable of understanding and appreciating the many different subjects and books which are embraced in a theological course of study. Having these spiritual and intellectual qualifications, there is no more congenial and delightful work and life that ever comes to any young man, than that of a theological student.

Theological schools are meant to prepare young ministers for service, not for big salaries and high places in them, unless the effective service they render in humbler and smaller places shall itself, without any demands or self-seeking of their own, bring them into the more important and responsible places in the Church. The real test and proof of the value of such a school is in our day a service—self-sacrificing service. The value of a theological school must be measured by the service which its graduates render the Church in which it belongs.

Few people know how much money it takes to run a theological school. It not only receives no income whatever from tuition fees, as in other schools, but well nigh all of its students come from homes of poverty and self-denial, it is not of positive poverty. To spend three years in a good preparatory school, four years in college and three years in the theological department of a university, means ten years at school, which at an average cost of $250 a year means an expense which not one ministerial student in a hundred can undergo without involving himself seriously in debt. The college graduates who enter the Biblical Department of the University are in fact (we have found upon inquiry) to the extent of about $250 or an average for their previous college education. If each ministerial student should receive $100 free, he would still have to provide at least $150 additional to meet the remainder of his expenses. We had 119 theological students last year, of which number 138 received help from our Student Aid Fund. If each of these remained the full nine months, and received $10 a month, or $180 for the full session, it called for $11,820 to meet this demand. The Church is calling more and more, and properly so, for well equipped men in the ministry. This equipment for most young men means time and money spent in obtaining an education in the colleges and universities of the Church. Let not the Church begrudge the expenditures made through its boards of education and its colleges and through the Biblical Department of its one central University here at Nashville, to help its young ministers secure the education which has become necessary in order to fit them for the most effective service in the Church. It is money well invested.

Although Vanderbilt University is comparatively young, and has cost the Church comparatively little in money, yet it is already true that one man in every nine or ten in the active ministry of our Church is a former Vanderbilt student. But we can send out into the Church only so many men, and only such men, as the Church sends up to us. Let the churches send up to us their best young men, and then will we send out into the Church our best men to serve it.

To that portion of our Church that is ministered to by the New Orleans Christian Advocate we are indebted for the great man that led the movement to found the University, and who shaped all its policies for the first fifteen years of its existence, the greatest statesman our Church ever produced—Holland N. McTyeire. To you we are also indebted for Thomas Carter and Henry Beach Carré, who came to us first as students and later as professors, and who are now serving us and the Church with fidelity and efficiency in their present positions of responsibility. And yet I am not sure but that Vanderbilt has sent you some men who, in the active and hard work of the itinerant ministry, are doing for the Church in your section just as effective and successful work as these honored and faithful teachers are doing here.

AN INTERESTING STUDY OF THE CONSPIRACY CASE.

The Japan Chronicle, published at Kobe, Japan, presents in its issue of November 7th, an interesting study of the Korean Conspiracy Case from the pen of Dr. Richard Arthur Bolt, of Peking, China, who made an exhaustive inquiry of the case while on a recent visit of some months to Korea. He summarizes the matter in the following passage in which, unless the effective service they render in humbler and smaller places shall itself, without any demands or self-seeking of their own, bring them into the more important and responsible places in the Church. The real test and proof of the value of such a school is in our day a service—self-sacrificing service. The value of a theological school must be measured by the service which its graduates render the Church in which it belongs.

Few people know how much money it takes to run a theological school. It not only receives no income whatever from tuition fees, as in other schools, but well nigh all of its students come from homes of poverty and self-denial, it is not of positive poverty. To spend three years in a good preparatory school, four years in college and three years in the theological department of a university, means ten years at school, which at an average cost of $250 a year means an expense which not one ministerial student in a hundred can undergo without involving himself seriously in debt.

The college graduates who enter the Biblical Department of the University are in fact (we have found upon inquiry) to the extent of about $250 or an average for their previous college education. If each ministerial student should receive $100 free, he would still have to provide at least $150 additional to meet the remainder of his expenses.

We had 119 theological students last year, of which number 138 received help from our Student Aid Fund. If each of these remained the full nine months, and received $10 a month, or $180 for the full session, it called for $11,820 to meet this demand.

The Church is calling more and more, and properly so, for well equipped men in the ministry. This equipment for most young men means time and money spent in obtaining an education in the colleges and universities of the Church.

Let not the Church begrudge the expenditures made through its boards of education and its colleges and through the Biblical Department of its one central University here at Nashville, to help its young ministers secure the education which has become necessary in order to fit them for the most effective service in the Church.

It is money well invested.

From all the obtainable evidence it is not reasonable to suppose that even the military authorities, though responsible for this conspiracy yarn, really believe that there was any concerted effort to assassinate the Governor-General. If they had, no such travesty on justice would have occurred.

While Christianity in Korea may perhaps suffer a temporary set-back by this apparent persecution, it will finally result, as in every attempt to restrict religious freedom, only in adding strength to the cause.

The ultimate results of this affair no one will be bold enough to predict. It seems now that the only course open to Japan to clear herself in the eyes of the world, will be to disavow and repudiate this extreme military policy in Korea, which is leading to results that must seriously discredit the officials in the peninsula and materially affect Japan's reputation.

A BOY'S LOGIC.

When President Taft was seven years old his mother bought him a pair of short duck trousers. The first time they were washed they shrank badly. The boy was fat, but his mother wedged him into the trousers against his protest. He went out to play, but in a few minutes returned. "Mamma," he said, "I can't wear these pants; they are too tight. Why, mamma, they are tighter than my skin."

"Oh, no, they're not, Billy," replied his mother. "Nothing could be tighter than your skin."

"All the same, these pants are, I can sit down in my skin, but I can't in these pants."—Times-Democrat.

THE SKYLARK'S BARGAIN.

It was nearly bedtime and little Robert was sitting in the kitchen gazing into the fire. "A penny for your thoughts, my boy," said his mother. "Ah!" said Robert, "my thoughts just then were worth more than a penny. I was thinking about hundreds and hundreds of dollars. I was thinking if only I were rich, mother, how I would take you to live in a big house, and keep horses and motor cars and buy as many sweets and toys and nuts as ever I wanted. Mother, I would give everything if only I could make my fortune."

His mother did not answer, and there was silence for a long time, until at last Robert said, "A penny for your thoughts, mammy, dear."

"Well, Robert," said his mother slowly, "I was thinking of the story of the bird who sold his wings."

"What sort of a bird was it?" asked Robert quickly.

"Why," said his mother, "let me think; yes, it was a skylark. And this skylark," she went on, "was awfully fond of worms. He used to say he would give anything if only he could always make sure of getting as many worms as he could eat. Well, one day as he was flying right up in the sky, he looked down and saw something rather unusual traveling along the car-track which ran through the forest. Feeling curious, the skylark dropped lower and lower, until at last he saw—O wonder!—he saw a tiny coach, painted black, with red blinds and yellow wheels, drawn by two great magpies. Walking in front of the coach was an old man, very little and ugly, wearing a black coat with red trousers and yellow stockings. He carried a bell, and as he walked he kept swinging this and shouting:

"Who will buy? Who will buy?

I am selling in all weathers,

Fine and fat and juicy worms,

In exchange for skylark feathers."

"Good morning, my young friend," said the old man, as the skylark stood in the pathway, "and what can I do for you?"

"How much are they?" asked the skylark.

"Two for a feather, my child, and the coach is nearly full of them."

"Are they fresh?"

"All gathered this morning, my pretty bird."

The skylark gave a painful little tug at his wing, and dropping the feather into the old man's hand, he said, "Two, please."

"As the coach passed on he felt rather guilty, but he enjoyed his feast, and was pleased to find afterward that no one noticed the missing feather."

"The next day he flew with his father."

"My son," said the old skylark, as they rose higher and higher until they were far above the tops of the tallest trees in the forest, "my son, I think we skylarks should be the happiest of birds. We have such brave wings. See how they carry us up into the blue sky and lift us nearer and yet nearer to God."

"Yes," said the little skylark, "yes." But all the time he was watching a tiny speck which crept like a black beetle far below on the forest track, and he thought, "There! I've missed the coach!"

"The following day the little skylark plucked another feather, and it came out so easily that he pulled two more after it. Then he waited close to the cart-worn track. Soon he heard the ringing of a bell and the shouting of a hoarse voice:

"Who will buy? Who will buy?

Surely we can come to terms.

In exchange for skylarks' feathers

I am selling luscious worms."

"Three here," said the skylark, as the old man stopped the coach.

"Very good, sonny, very good indeed. That will be nine worms," and then, with a chuckle, he added, "and there is another for luck."

"My word!" thought Skylark, "that's a bargain." And so the skylark became a regular customer.

"He found after a bit that he could not fly so high; but he did not greatly mind that; there was less fear of the coach passing without being seen."

"But one day, when his poor wings were thin and torn and ragged, he suddenly felt he had been making a terrible mistake. He tried to fly up into the sunshine, but he fell back like a stone to the earth."

"And then he had an idea. He said, 'Dear me, of course. Why did I not think of that before? That is what I will do.' Day and night he searched and gathered and stored, and then he hid himself in the long grass and waited for the coach. By and by it came."

"Please sir, said the skylark, stepping in front of the coach, 'I want to know how many feathers you will give me for these worms.'

"Then the old coachman laughed, and set off again at once, saying over his shoulder, "'Worms for feathers' is my business, sonny, not 'Feathers for worms.'

"And what was the end of it, mother?" asked Robert.

"The skylark died, dear, and was buried under the green turf. And now they say that every summer the older birds take the young ones and they fly mournfully about the grave, and as they fly one bird calls to another:

"Here lies a foolish skylark;

Hush you not, each bird that sings!

Here lies a poor lost skylark,

Who for earthworms sold his wings!"

There was a long quiet in the kitchen, and then a boy's voice:

"Mother, did I say I would give anything to be rich?"

"You did, Robert."

"Well, then, mother, I wouldn't and I wouldn't, and I wouldn't!" With that he kissed her and climbed up the narrow, creaky staircase to his bed.—Joyful News.

SOME EXPERIENCES IN PASTORAL WORK AND ELSE.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis.

One among the many duties of a pastor is "visiting from house to house, instructing the children in every place, etc." (See discipline, paragraph 151, page 79 and 80; also James the first chapter, last verse).

In the early days of Methodism in our country, much time was given by our faithful itinerants to visiting the people from house to house, reading from the good Book, commenting thereon, and singing and praying. This was the principal part of divine service and the best that many of the poor of our Church had access to. Not only preachers, but faithful laymen often participated in this now much neglected work. By the faithful discharge of this important duty many of the poor, afflicted, tempted followers of the blessed Master have been strengthened, comforted and encouraged, when but for this, they might have fallen by the way.

I call to mind a visit I made, accompanied by a young preacher, in 1890. It was to the home of a poor widow with several children who, though a woman of good sense, because of the fact she had been neglected by some of her former pastors, had concluded it was due to her poverty that this was done. Brother Reagan and I tried to get her into an interesting conversation, but failed. Before leaving we sang a song and knelt in prayer. After prayer we sang the song beginning:

"I sometimes think 'tis too good to be true
When we talk of life's fair river;

Of the land so bright, where falls no night,
In the beautiful, glad forever."

The song had the desired effect, she mellowed down, wept, and in a pleasant way invited us to come again.

Years ago, on one occasion, I visited one of my stewards, dined with him and had a very pleasant day. Before leaving I called for his Bible and proposed prayer. He went pretending in search for his Bible but did not find it. "Where is the Bible?" he said to his wife. "You know," she replied, "we have no Bible." Before the year was out I sold him one. I served the church of which he was a member twelve months, and received, if my memory serves me correctly, less than $20. This same steward did not pay anything, neither did he collect anything from others. Of course, he was not continued in the stewardship. He was simply a sorry church member, and I have had to deal with many such during the fifty-five years of my ministry.

As a rule, I enjoyed pastoral work. I visited Baptists and Presbyterians, when convenient, as well as my own people. I spent a night more than forty-five years ago with a Baptist brother in Lawrence County. Before retiring for rest, he handed me his Bible, asking me to hold prayer. I did so. Before we were off our knees he said, "You are the first preacher that ever prayed in my home and I have been keeping house for fifteen years." His pastor, while a good man and a fine preacher, did not spend much time in pastoral work. While in charge of the Liberty work I visited a home four or five times where the wife was a Methodist and the husband a member of another Church. The brother seemed to enjoy my visits and said to me once, "My pastor does not know where I live."

WILL LEAVE THE TRIPOD.

Having fully decided to give up the position of Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate a year hence, we deem it our duty to make a public announcement of this fact. We think it proper to do this in order that the patronizing Conferences, and especially the Publishing Committee through which they act, may have ample time to provide for filling the vacancy which will result from our resignation. Our decision to leave the tripod is entirely voluntary upon our part, and has been reached after the most mature deliberation. Three years of the term for which we were last elected yet remain to be served, and there has not been the slightest degree of friction between the Editor and the Publisher or Publishing Committee. Our relations have been entirely harmonious, and no complaint of consequence as to the character of our service has reached us from any part of the field.

In adopting the course which we have determined to pursue we have been influenced by a number of considerations, some of which are of a nature so strictly personal that it would be out of place to mention them. The chief cause of our action is the inadequate financial support afforded by the income of the paper. The salary is so small and the cost of living in New Orleans is so high that we have been able to remain here during the past three years only by drawing heavily upon our private means. We cared little for this, so long as our personal financial affairs were in shape to stand this drain upon them, but the invasion of Middle Mississippi by the boll weevil has placed us where we can no longer afford it. Moreover, in New Orleans we are too far away to give our personal business the attention which it so urgently needs at this critical time. However willing one might be to make sacrifices for the Church, there is an obligation upon one to keep out of debt which cannot be disregarded. Nor do we feel that a further sacrifice upon our part is at all necessary, as there are doubtless others, differently situated, who can perform the task of editing the paper in a far more efficient manner than our very moderate abilities have enabled us to do.

We sincerely hope that this prospective change of editors will not affect adversely the interests of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. It is our purpose during the coming year to spend freely our energies to make the paper better than it has been since our connection with it. We are on the eve of another General Conference, and issues that will profoundly influence the future of the Church will be settled within the next eighteen months. In the battle that will take place over these great questions, we shall faithfully endeavor to see that the New Orleans Advocate performs a worthy part while it remains under our direction. Our pastors, therefore, may press the claims of the Conference organ upon their people with increased urgency, feeling assured that it will stand up fearlessly for the preservation of Methodism in its purity and integrity.

Perhaps we should say a word concerning the sentiment that has recently manifested itself in Mississippi in favor of the establishment of a Methodist weekly in that State. As to the wisdom or unwisdom of such a movement, we have no definite conviction. Any who may imagine that we could be influenced to take charge of such an organ, after leaving New Orleans, are liable to find themselves entirely mistaken. We have not given the least assurance to that effect. In our judgment it is not at all likely that a paper could be started in Mississippi upon such a basis that we could afford to entertain the question of becoming its editor. If the advisability of such an enterprise is to be considered, this should be done wholly apart from any assumption that our services could be commanded in any capacity.

But, whatever may be the final outcome of that issue, the Methodists of Mississippi and Louisiana should not let it abate their present activity in behalf of the New Orleans Advocate. Even if a separation should ultimately come and a paper be issued in each State, both journals would be advantaged by the present Conference organ having a large subscription at the time of the severance. So let us, each and all, work energetically and persistently to make this the best year that the New Orleans Advocate has ever had in its long and honored history. We can do so if we will.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Why not send the Advocate for a year to some one as a Christmas or New Year present? It will remind the recipient of you every week, and may prove a blessing to him in many ways.

We make grateful acknowledgment to Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, of Forest, Miss., for a nice list of subscribers sent in on December 10. We are glad to have the Advocate circulate among the good people of that interesting charge.

On account of a severe attack of la grippe, Dr. J. A. Parker, of Lafayette, La., was not able to attend the Annual Conference at Monroe. We dare say that he was much missed by the brethren. The name of this honored minister is writ enduringly in the annals of Louisiana Methodism.

Rev. T. H. B. Anderson, D. D., a superannuate member of the Missouri Conference, who was supplying our congregation at Salinas, Cal., for the second year, died in the parsonage at that place on November 30. He was a man of parts, and was held in high esteem both in Missouri and on the Pacific Coast.

An appreciated caller at the Advocate office this week was Dr. Theodore Bell, of New Orleans, who is an eye, nose, and throat specialist of note, and a most affable and agreeable gentleman. He is a Methodist who keeps up with connectional affairs, and converses most entertainingly concerning them. We hope that he will come again.

A special edition of The Purple and White, the Millisaps College weekly, was issued for each of the Mississippi Conferences. The paper attracted much attention among the preachers and laymen attending these gatherings. These numbers were excellent in every respect, and reflected great credit upon the editorial staff of this interesting periodical.

In the person of the Rev. W. S. Shipman, the Durant District (North Mississippi Conference) will have a true and dependable leader. He is energetic, warm-hearted, and orthodox, which is saying much in these troublous times. We predict that despite the boll weevil, the Church will hold its own in the territory over which this new-made sub-bishop has been given supervision.

Rev. C. C. Selecman, of Webb City, Mo., who is pleasantly remembered in New Orleans, will give his congregation a series of twelve sermons on "The Books of the Bible." The first, which is entitled "Genesis—the Gate of Wonders," has been printed in pamphlet form and a copy of it lies before us. It is a fresh and most informing discourse. We thank Brother Selecman for the opportunity of reading it.

Dr. Shailer Mathews, of the University of Chicago, has been chosen President of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, succeeding Bishop E. R. Hendrix. Rev. Charles S. MacFarland has been elected Secretary of the Council, and Rev. Frank Mason North, Corresponding Secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Board of Foreign Missions, has been made Chairman of the Executive Committee.

After an incumbency of three years in the presiding eldership, Rev. W. W. Woollard has re-entered the pastorate at the behest of the appointing power. His service on the Greenville District was of a superior order, and we sincerely regretted to see him leave that great field where his leadership was so highly valued. In the person of Rev. H. S. Spraggins, however, he will have a worthy and capable successor.

The Midland Methodist of December 11, says: "Dr. H. M. DuBose probably has more genuine friends in and about the Methodist Publishing House in Nashville than any other man ever connected with the House. His many friends here wish to congratulate the First Methodist Church of Atlanta on securing him as its pastor. He is one of the strongest men in our Church, and will no doubt do a great work in his new field."

Rev. J. H. O'Bryant, an ex-Mississippian who stands in the forefront in the Arkansas Conference, has been changed from Rogers to Boonville. In renewing his subscription to the Advocate, he very kindly says: "Your excellent paper continues to grow better. You are making for the Church one of its very best organs." It is needless to say that we appreciate the good opinion of our esteemed brother across the Great Father of Waters.

We are pleased to note that Mrs. J. R. Birmingham, of Carrollton, Miss., who has been in Memphis under the treatment of a specialist for some time, has returned home much improved. North Mississippi Methodism has no choicer worker than this elect lady. The Editor owes much to her gracious influence in other days, and it pains him to know that her health for several months has not been robust. We trust that it will soon be completely restored.

Neither of the Mississippi Conferences appointed a committee to study the question of laity rights for women. It is our impression that the matter was not even proposed at Greenwood. It was voted down by the Mississippi Conference, at Hazlehurst. The Louisiana Conference appointed the committee. Bishop Mouzon courageously put himself on record as being uncompromisingly opposed to this innovation. No trimmer is this gifted son of the Lone Star State.

We take off our hat and make our best bow to Brother T. M. Babington, of Franklinton, La., for a list of twelve subscribers sent us from that goodly town on Dec. 11. Brother Babington is one of the substantial business men and citizens of Washington Parish, and belongs to a family which has done much for Methodism in that vicinity. We wish him and the firm with which he is connected—"Robert Babington, Limited, General Merchandise"—a large degree of prosperity during the approaching new year.

From the Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative of November 14, we take the following: "At the Conference at Greenwood Mr. S. M. Thames was appointed to Hernando. He goes from Carrollton with the profound respect of all and to the deep regret of many. Mrs. Thames and her daughter, Mrs. Lloyd, were very useful in church work and were important factors in the social life of the community. They will be very much missed from our midst. No occupants of the parsonage ever meant more to Carrollton than Mr. Thames and his family."

While recently in attendance upon the Mississippi Conference, it was our great pleasure to be thrown in the company of Dr. E. B. Chappell, our Sunday School Editor, quite a good deal. We fell completely in love with this brilliant member of the old Jerusalem Conference. He is a Methodist of the very best type, and has no disposition to apologize for being such. He is one of the most capable men in the connection, and our Sunday school literature under his guiding hand has pretty nearly attained unto a state of perfection. It is fully equal to any in existence.

A note from Rev. Thomas Cameron, of New Albany, Miss., expresses regret that he was unable to attend the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference at Greenwood. His many friends felt that something was lacking without his presence. Referring to the reappointment of Rev. L. M. Lipscomb to New Albany Station for another year, Brother Cameron says: "Not only the Methodists, but all the churches are glad that Brother Lipscomb was returned to us. He could stay here indefinitely. I think, if the time limit were not in the way."

Rev. J. E. Thomas, the spiritual and faithful presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, states that in the territory under his supervision every charge has a neat, comfortable parsonage, and that most of the churches are very well heated and have creditable pews. This is a good showing. It counts for much to have our places of worship safeguarded against the hindering influences of winter and our workmen in the itinerancy well housed. As parsonage builders our Methodist people lead the van. Look over the minutes of other church gatherings and see how in this respect we outstrip them.

The transfer of Rev. H. G. Hawkins from the Mississippi to the Memphis Conference, where he has become Associate President of the Memphis Conference Female Institute at Jackson, Tenn., will be generally regretted throughout South Mississippi, though his host of friends are pleased to see opened to him so large an opportunity for service. A forward movement is under way to strengthen this historic institution and equip it more amply for work. That Brother Hawkins will give a good account of himself in his new field, those who know him do not at all doubt. We most heartily commend him to the West Tennesseans as a Christian gentleman and an efficient educator.

Our heart goes out in tenderest sympathy to Rev. R. W. Tucker, formerly presiding elder of the Ruston District, but now stationed at Leesville, La., in the loss which he has sustained in the death of his wife, which occurred in Ruston, as a result of a stroke of paralysis, while the Louisiana Conference was in session at Monroe last week. Brother Tucker was hurriedly called from the labors of the Conference session to the bedside of his stricken companion. Truly, we know not what a day may bring forth. Sister Tucker was a woman of noble Christian character, as is attested by activity of her children in the Master's service and the testimony of all who knew her. We hope that a fitting memoir will be furnished the Advocate at an early date.

During the recent session of the Mississippi Conference at Hazlehurst, Bishop Morrison, Dr. Ed F. Cook of Nashville, Dr. and Mrs. T. B. Holman of Port Gibson, Mr. S. A. Tomlinson of Gulfport, and Mr. C. O. Chalmers of New Orleans were entertained in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Wilson, who dispensed an unsurpassed hospitality. Mr. Wilson is the capable County Attorney of Copiah County. Not soon will those sheltered beneath this kindly roof forget the many attentions and courtesies of their obliging host and accomplished hostess. This also was to have been the Editor's home, but on account of not being well, he felt unwarranted in intruding himself into this genial circle, and so remained at a hotel. He realizes, however, that in doing so he denied himself a rare privilege.

The Mid-Winter Missionary Institute, which will be held in Nashville, December 27 to January 3, under the auspices of the Methodist Training School, is offering to the public a most excellent program. Among the leading speakers announced are: Dr. I. K. Headland, of Peking University, China; Dr. T. H. Hadden, who has done so much for the cause of missions in Japan; Dr. Egbert W. Smith, Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Missions; Dr. Charles R. Watson, of the United Presbyterian Church; Dr. I. N. McCash, Secretary of the Home Department of the Disciples' Church, and Bishop E. R. Hendrix, of Kansas City. An interesting feature of the exercises will be the Open Conferences, in which information may be sought upon any question of interest. Persons attending this gathering could scarcely keep from being profited.

from the Committee on Temperance, the Joint Board of Finance, Epworth League Board, the Sunday School Board, the Committee on Church Publications, the Orphanage Board, and the Committee on American Bible Society Work. The Sunday School Board report recommended the election of Dr. F. R. Hill, Jr., to take the place on the Board made vacant by the resignation of Dr. G. E. Cameron.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan read the statistical report which was filed with the Secretary without action. On Saturday night the Board of Education held an anniversary with the following speakers: Rev. H. T. Carley, Prof. R. E. Bobbitt and Dr. F. N. Parker. The service was one of the most profitable of the entire Conference session.

Sunday's Services.

Sunday dawned beautiful and bright. At 9 o'clock Rev. R. S. Isbell announced a hymn and opened the annual Love Feast. For nearly two hours the brethren gave their testimonials and experiences. Promptly at 11 a. m., the preaching service was begun. The great church was filled to the limit of its standing room. Bishop Mouzon was at his best. For a text he read Luke 24: 45-48. Space forbids any attempt to give an outline of his sermon, but suffice it to say that it was a great sermon and a spiritual one to the core. At the close of the sermon a class of six young men were ordained deacons.

In the afternoon Dr. C. W. Carter maintained his reputation as a great preacher, by delivering a masterful discourse before a large audience. After his sermon a class of eleven were ordained elders.

At night the Sunday School Board held its anniversary and Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Mr. T. B. Holman, and Dr. H. M. Hamill delivered interesting addresses.

The pulpits of the various churches of Monroe were filled, both Sunday morning and at night, by the members of the Conference.

Monday's Session.

After the singing of "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," Rev. K. W. Dodson led the Conference in prayer. Bishop Mouzon read a passage of Scripture from the 9th and 10th chapters of St. Luke. After the reading of the minutes, Rev. O. L. Tucker was received into the Conference in full connection; the name of R. A. Davis was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for superannuation; the Board of Missions' request for the re-appointment of R. H. Harper to Natchitoches was granted, and the name of J. G. Ray was placed on the Conference Sunday School Board.

The names of the preachers in the Monroe District were called and their characters were passed. Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, after stating that it was his desire to give his entire time to the work of an evangelist, requested that he be given an honorable location. His request was granted. W. E. Thomas was announced as a transfer from the North Texas Conference and his character was passed. The report of the Board of Church Extension was read and adopted.

After the reading of the report of the Board of Education, it was ordered by the Conference that it be considered in two sections: The first section, being minute business, was adopted as read. The second section, a proposed charter for the correlation of Centenary and Mansfield Colleges, met with opposition, and a substitute was adopted in its stead. The substitute included a recommendation that Revs. C. B. Carter, M. C. Holt, and P. M. Brown be appointed a special committee, the business of which shall be to thoroughly investigate the advisability of adopting the said charter, and report their findings, together with a copy of the proposed charter in printed form, to all the members of the Louisiana Conference, not later than Oct. 1, 1913.

T. M. Wafer was granted an honorable location at his own request. Bishop Mouzon announced that he had ordained the following men to be deacons: O. L. Tucker, J. H. Hoffpauir, R. M. Brown, H. W. Jamieson, George Fox, T. J. Embree, and G. P. White. He announced further that he had ordained the following to be elders: R. S. Walton, T. V. Peters, F. R. Power, J. G. Snelling, H. T. Young, R. H. Bamburg, L. E. Crooks, T. J. Holladay, J. L. Sutton, J. W. Faulk, and G. A. Morgan.

The report of the Committee on Conference Relations was read and adopted. A resolution was presented and adopted asking that a committee be appointed to make a study of the subject of laity rights for women and report its findings to the 1913 session of this Conference. Upon nomination of the presiding elders, the following committee was appointed: S. H. Werlein, R. R. Reid, K. W. Dodson, R. O. Randle, E. K. Means, T. H. Morris, and J. W. Moore.

The report of the Legal Conference and that of the Committee on District Conference Records were read and filed for record. A resolution of thanks was adopted. Mr. V. L. Fulton was re-elected Lay Leader of the Conference. After the reading of the report on Sabbath observance, which was adopted, Dr. F. S. Parker read the minutes of the morning's session, which were approved.

At this time, the business of the Conference having been finished, Bishop Mouzon arose and delivered an able address, after which he led the Conference in a fervent prayer. Question 49 was asked and the following appointments were read in answer to it:

THE INTERNATIONAL REVIEW OF MISSIONS.

This periodical was authorized by the World Missionary Conference at Edinburgh, and began publication with January, 1912. Four numbers have appeared, containing matter of such exceptional quality that the existence of the magazine has been fully justified by them. It will be enlarged and mechanically improved for the second volume, beginning with January of 1913. The subscription list, drawn from Christians of all branches throughout the English-speaking world has grown so large as to justify the management in taking this step. The editor has shown much skill in securing contributions from missionary and religious leaders in all parts of the world. The questions discussed have already covered a wide range.

The fourth number for 1912 is an excellent example of what may be expected in variety of interest. It has two most illuminating articles on Moslemism—one a philosophical examination of the inner nature of Islam by a missionary born in the East and familiar from infancy with the speech and life of Mohammedans; the other, a minute survey of Moslem influence in the Sudan. There are, besides, a discussion of the missionary situation in South Africa, an account of the growth of the Baptist work among the Telugu; an exhibit of the opportunity for the mission school in China; a luminous discussion of woman's relation to missionary administration, besides other briefer but not less interesting articles and editorials.

The scope of this Review is such that it does not compete with denominational publications. It is beautifully printed in the best Scottish style, and the editor evidently has a fondness for excellent English, since practically all the accepted articles are of faultless literary quality. At two dollars a year it is a good investment for any who would keep abreast of the great religious movements of the world. It may be ordered from the Missionary Education Movement, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York. Subscriptions for the 1913 volume should be sent in before the middle of December.

SOME RELIGIOUS UTTERANCES.

"He alone can rule his own spirit who puts himself under the command of the spirit of God revealed in his son, Jesus Christ, our Savior." "No great nation can ever survive its own temptations and its own follies that does not indoctrinate its children in the word of God, so that as schoolmaster and as governor I know that my feet must rest with the feet of my fellow men upon this foundation, and upon this foundation only, for the righteousness of nations like the righteousness of men must take its source from these foundations of inspiration." "I am sorry for the men who do not read the Bible every day." * * * It is one of the most singular books in the world, for every time you open it some old text that you have read a score of times suddenly beams with a new meaning. "There are problems which will need purity of spirit and an integrity of purpose such as have never been called for before in the history of this country. I should be afraid to go forward if I did not believe that there lay at the foundation of all our schooling and of all our thought the incomparable and unimpeachable word of God." "The providence of God is the foundation of affairs, and only those can guide and only those can follow who take this providence of God from the sources where it is authentically interpreted."—Woodrow Wilson.

HE GAVE ME HIS HAND.

It is said that Judson, one of the first missionaries in Burma, once stopped in a village on the banks of a river. Seeing a woman close to the landing place, he offered her his hand, and asked how she was. A few moments afterward he was called back to the boat, and left her with his blessing. Judson probably thought no more about the incident; but what was the result? The woman had never before received such courtesy from any man. Though a princess, she had been treated as a slave. She had seen, she said, "one of the sons of God," and after this nothing would persuade her to worship the heathen gods again. She had served them ever since she was a child, but she said, "they have never prevented my husband from beating me. This man spoke kindly to me, and gave me his hand. His God must be the God." That very night she began to pray to the unknown God of the white foreigner—a most touching prayer: "Lord God, in the heavens, in the earth, in the mountains, in the seas, in the north, in the south, in the east, in the west, pity me. I pray. Show me thy glory, that I may know thee who thou art." Thus she continued to pray for five years. Then a Christian missionary came to that district. She heard the gospel, and at once became a Christian. She helped to establish a Christian church at Dong Yahn, out of which two others soon grew. From that time Guapung (that was her name) tried to win for Christ all she came in contact with. She had great power with every one, for she herself lived so near to Christ.—The King's Messengers.

"SHE HATH DONE WHAT SHE COULD."

We are constantly told in the newspapers and elsewhere about the great and generous things that are freely done by women of large wealth who have large hearts. Thus, in liberal gifts and continual benefactions, our ministering women still, as when Jesus was on earth, give of their abundance that he may be supported and comforted. Does he not still say from the home above, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me?" Those who give great gifts of talent, influence, and money freely for Christ's sake are the successors of those ministering women who went everywhere with him when he was on earth.

There are those of whom the world never hears—women who have no fortune, little time, and only a great love for Jesus Christ, who are doing large things for him, and on whom he looks with smiles of love. In a certain home presided over successfully by two quiet women, children who were waifs of poverty have been fed, clothed, taught, trained and brought into the refined atmosphere of an affectionate Christian household. This daily work of tender ministry has been going on for years, and the most beautiful thing about it all is that those who are doing it are not in the least aware that they are doing angels' work.—Margaret E. Sangster.

A Talk to Mothers

Every good mother is something of a doctor.

She is called upon almost daily to practice medicine in the lesser ailments of the children.

Frequently she is forced to use her skill on more important diseases until a doctor can be secured.

Hence every mother should be as well informed as to advanced methods of sanitation and medical practice as possible.

Here are some valuable medical facts which every mother ought to know.

1.—In treatment of coughs, colds, catarrh, croup, and especially pneumonia, plenty of fresh air is all important. It is life to the organs of respiration.

2.—In the treatment of these and of other diseases it is very important not to disturb digestion.

The stomach is the laboratory in which fresh life blood is made from food and drink.

In the interest of health the process should never be interfered with, if it can be avoided.

3.—Given plenty of fresh air, and good digestion, it only remains to eliminate the cause of disease and nature quickly responds to complete recovery.

4.—The modern treatment of croup, colds, catarrh and pneumonia with Vick's Croup and Pneumonia Salve permits plenty of fresh air to enter the lungs, avoids interference with digestion, by stomach medication and instead attacks the disease at the real seat of infection, the air passages of head, throat and lungs.

5.—The process involves the application of antiseptic and healing vapors direct to the internal linings of the air passages, by inhalation, with plenty of good fresh air.

6.—This loosens the phlegm, cleanses the mucous membrane and allays the inflammation.

The process also stimulates the organs, by absorption into the skin of throat and chest, overlying the seat of the trouble.

The fever is reduced by elimination of the congestion, which is its cause?

In cases of croup, breathing becomes easier immediately and in fifteen minutes the case is relieved.

Similar excellent results are secured by using Vick's as a salve for various forms of diseases due to inflammation or congestion.

The price of Vick's Croup and Pneumonia Salve is 25c, 50c and $1.00 at druggists, or by mail.

A full sized jar will be sent free of charge to any practicing physician desiring to test the Vick treatment.

Sample sent to anyone on request.

LEADS IN LOUISIANA.

(We take the following interesting account of the Sunday school of the First Methodist Church at Shreveport, La., from the Shreveport Times of December 8. The pastor of this church is Dr. G. E. Cameron, and the Sunday school superintendent is Mr. W. A. McKennon.)

To-day is the last Sunday of the year with the Methodists of Shreveport, and the Sunday school of the First Methodist Church is rejoicing that to them belongs the honor of having the largest Sunday school of any Methodist Church in the State. It has not always been so.

Some years ago this Sunday School put on a forward movement with the aim of making a Sunday School worth the interest of every one in the church. How well they have succeeded is now commented upon generally, and especially by those who have come in contact with the school during the year. Beginning with the "Cradle Roll Class," which has a membership of about 250, the interest throughout every department is active, and the work is in the hands of competent and enthusiastic Christian workers.

The largest class in the school is "The Baird Class," which is an organized adult Bible class, with an enrollment of about 300. There are three other adult classes, "The Wesley Adult Bible Class," with an enrollment of 125, and the "Baraca" and "The Fulton." There are twenty-four classes in the Elementary Department having pupils under 12 years of age. The total number of officers and teachers necessary in this school is 91.

One feature of the school, which illustrates the interest and enthusiasm, is the orchestra. The singing is led by an organized orchestra of fourteen instruments, consisting of a piano, four violins, four cornets, a trombone, a flute, a clarinet, a tuba and drums.

The new church, now under construction, is especially designed to accommodate in the most approved fashion this great school, of which all the city is proud. There are thirty-five rooms for separate class recitation, the largest seating 150, and the smallest 20. The church will provide comfortable quarters for a school of 2,000.

This school has planned for an attendance to-day of 750. On special days they have had larger attendance, three times this year having had over 1,000 present. The record attendance was 1,605.

APPRECIATORY RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Methodist Congregation at Prentiss, Miss., on Sunday, Nov. 24.

Whereas, this is the close of Brother White's four-year limit on the Prentiss Circuit and at this church, and under the rules of our Church he will not be permitted to return to us; and whereas, our church has been greatly benefited and revived under his kind and helpful pastorate, zealous work, and faithful and fearless preaching of the Word; therefore be it resolved by the Prentiss Church:

1. That we the members of this church hereby extend to Brother White our sincere thanks for his faithful and efficient labors among us during his four-year stay, now closing.

2. We especially give him our heartfelt thanks and genuine appreciation for his noble and generous work in causing this edifice in which we now worship to be built. To him belongs the principal credit for the erection of this magnificent little church, of which we are all so proud.

3. That he has been a great blessing to our church by inaugurating therein the Laymen's Missionary Movement,

ORIGIN OF THE BOLSTER.

The Crusaders are said to have brought home with them the bolster, and, according to Dr. Cantlie, their wives, in ignorance of the only rational way of using the article (that is, placed lengthwise as a support for the back of a person when lying on his side), and not knowing what else to do with it, put the bolster where it is still found on the beds of those who have not learned the wisdom of discarding it altogether—under the pillow!—London Chronicle.

Little things are little things, but faithfulness in little things is something great.—St. Augustine.

To Auxiliary Presidents.

January 1st closes our fiscal year—the first full year of twelve months since our new plans and organization went into effect. What is the record for this year in your auxiliary? Has your auxiliary gone backward, or forward? If your present financial status satisfactory to you? If not, won't you rally around your officers? Take the books and pore over them; compare, pray, plan—and then execute. Call upon God for wisdom and guidance, and let not your auxiliary fall short anywhere. Why may not we, at this happy Christmas time, bring in great offerings to our Lord? Let us not be content with merely that which we promised. Let us shower upon him our love and our gifts as we celebrate his coming to liberate man from sin. What a stimulus to the work of the whole Church if the women should bring in an excess!

Will you do your part? Don't leave this for some other auxiliary that may feel the same way, but do it yourself. We want to roll in such a big surplus that our work may advance and not be forced to stand still.

What We Face.

We face failure and disappointment unless this is done. In the Foreign Department $140,000 must be sent to the General Treasurer by January 1st, if the record of the past is to be kept up, without any advance at all. This amount is sufficient only for expenses already incurred. In the Home Department $60,000 must be collected before January 1st. To fail in this will bring debt. Even a $1 deficit in every auxiliary makes a big debt arise. Let us advance on our knees and send in a surplus for the enlargement of our work. This is the Lord's work; this call is critical—do not pass it by.

Items from the Foreign Department.

The following items were sent by Mrs. J. B. Cobb, Secretary of the Council, Foreign Department:

South Georgia's beloved leader, Mrs. S. W. Hitch, went to heaven Nov. 6. The last work she did for her Conference showed her executive ability. On Oct. 23-25, at a meeting of the Conference officers at Macon, she committed to her District Secretaries the work for next year. The women to whom her courage and faith had been an inspiration, and who have gladly followed her leadership, will carry out her wish and raise the pledge she proposed to them.

Our new missionaries have reached their respective fields of labor, and they are imparting strength and hopefulness to the over-worked women in the fields.

Misses Drake, Claiborne, and Lester have been given permission to spend several months in study before returning to China.

Miss Nina Keiser will go to China with her sister, Mrs. W. B. Nance, who with her husband and children will return in January. Miss Keiser, a teacher of unusual ability, will assist in the Laura Haygood School at Soochow. Miss Drake, who has been connected with that school, will take charge of the Susan B. Wilson School at Sungkong. Other adjustments will be made by the Bishop. The appointments of several of the new missionaries will be changed on account of the sad death of Miss Sophia Manns. The Mission has been slow to rally from this unexpected and heavy blow.

Thursday, Jan. 9, 1913, was chosen by the Women's Board of Foreign Boards of Foreign Missions at their triennial conference in Philadelphia as a day for united prayer. Will you not arrange to have it observed in your Conference?

Miss Linnie Barcroft, who was granted a year at home from her work in the Mary Keener Institute, in Mexico City, is spending the winter with her mother in Tupelo; but when we know of the work she is doing at home, we sometimes wonder when she rests. She teaches a mission study class among the young girls in Tupelo. Recently she attended a rally service at a country charge in the Aberdeen District, where she made a strong missionary address, and received a voluntary offering for missions from a congregation that has not had a foreign missionary society. She was a helpful messenger at the Institute that was held at New Albany in November. And the daily papers recently gave an account of a stirring address she made at the session of the Memphis Conference, which was held in Brownsville, Tenn. (This last item was furnished by Mrs. T. M. Clarke, Conf. Sec. For'n. Dept., North Miss. Conf.)

Week of Prayer and Missionary Institute at Lexington, Miss.

The members of the two departments of the Missionary Society at Lexington received so much enthusiasm from the talks of Misses Davies and Knapp that they observed the Week of Prayer with a larger attendance and with a much larger offering than in any previous year. At the monthly meeting they achieved union by unanimous consent, and the offering of the prayer service ($41) will be equally divided between the two departments. This is a step in the right direction. These women have ever been faithful workers, but will be able to do much more effective work, since the union is under the leadership of a wise and able President. A. C. Y.

The following from Miss Godat was delayed in reaching us, but we trust the delay will not affect the response of our Louisiana women. Miss Godat writes: "We are planning to have a linen shower for Scarritt on Christmas to celebrate its 21st birthday, and I know you would be glad to have a part in it. THE SWEETEST SINGER IN THE WORLD.

Who is it? The mocking bird, of course. The sunshine of Dixie scintillates in its liquid notes. The sweet singer of the Southland, famous the world around, knows no competitor in the softness, purity and melody of its musical notes.

And what the sunshine of the South has accomplished in softening and sweetening the tones of the mocking bird has its parallel in the field of instrumental music, for it was a Southern piano bouse that is responsible for perfecting the superb Ludden & Bates Piano, claimed by critics to possess the sweetest tone of any piano that has yet been built. Professional musicians pronounce its notes absolutely free from the "metallic" quality which piano builders have found so much difficulty in avoiding.

It is this "Mocking Bird of the Piano World," the peerless Ludden & Bates Piano, which is eliciting so much praise from the members of the Advocate Piano Club. A beautifully illustrated catalogue describing the five different styles, will be sent free on request to and reader. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

(The following preamble and resolutions were passed by the Fourth Quarterly Conference of Seminary Charge, Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, on November 16, 1912.)

Whereas, The Lord in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to call our friend and brother, Rev. J. O. Windburn, to his final reward; therefore be it resolved:

1. That we recognize that a godly man and one useful in the ministry has gone from us, and realize the great loss sustained by ourselves and the church in his departure.

2. That we greatly sympathize with the bereaved wife and children of our deceased brother in their bereavement and loss.

3. That these resolutions be recorded in our minutes; that a copy of them be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy be furnished to the family of the deceased. Signed: L. W. Pearson, C. J. Willett, committee.

GATHERING THE ROSEBUDS.

"O, it is a pity to cut them," exclaimed the caller to the generous one in the flower garden, as she led the way from bush to bush and cut the most beautiful blooms from each for the caller to carry home with her. The owner of the flower garden laughed as her sharp scissors snipped off another lovely bloom.

"They last only a day or two. You might just as well have them and enjoy them while they are in their beauty," she answered, and put the great bunch of fragrant blooms in the other's hands.

There are many things in life that are like the blossoms in the flower garden. They come and brighten a day or an hour and are gone; they are not meant to be hoarded in miserly fashion, but to be shared and passed on and so made to bring joy to as many as possible while they last.

Young people can take a lesson from this accident. They have youth and energy and enthusiasm. How are they using these? Selfishly for just their own good or pleasure? Or are they sharing them with those who may have none of these beautiful things; giving freely of their own abundance that others may forget the burdening years, and under the inspiration of their help do good things that they could not accomplish alone?

It is a wonderful and beautiful thing to gather the rosebuds of life and pass them on to others. Do not put it off until the flower blooms and fades and the opportunity is gone. Better to—

"Gather ye rosebuds while ye may,
Old time is still a-flying;
And this same flower that smiles to-day,
To-morrow will be dying."

THE SOURCE OF SPIRITUAL STRENGTH.

The Bible is a book to be read quietly, if possible, thoughtfully, and with desires Godward, for the illumination of the Holy Spirit every day. It is the source of spiritual strength, the divine manna for the soul. It is the guide of our steps, the lamp for our path, provided by the Creator for our souls. It gives the peace, the serenity, so necessary to the proper performance of duty. It contains the highest knowledge and wisdom, and makes men intelligent and sagacious as no other book does or can. It is the strong consolation of men in a world where divine discipline is administered; where loss, sorrow, sickness and death are constantly present. Clear seeing and right thinking and lofty ideas and desires are promoted by the Bible. Read every day in faith and love, as a message from God to the reader, as a little child reads a beloved father's letter—it will give all that it promises.—Christian Intelligencer.

I believe if it had not been for Gray's Ointment my leg would have killed me long ago. There is grateful relief for anyone suffering from old sores, cuts, boils, carbuncles, burns, bruises, festering wounds, ulcers, tumors, etc., in Gray's Ointment. THE SOUTH LEADS THE NATION.

Has it ever occurred to you in how many different fields of human activity the South has led the nation and the world? A Southern physician discovered Anaesthesia and gave the world painless surgery. A Southern surgeon revolutionized surgical procedure and won for himself the name of "The Father of Gynecology." A Southern man invented the harvesting machine. A Southern General and Statesman was the "Father of his Country" and still another the "Father of Democracy." Southern theologians, orators, jurists, statesmen, generals, scientists, authors, artists and inventors have time and again led the world to greater achievements in their respective fields.

And in the field of instrumental music it is a Southern Piano House that is responsible for the perfecting of the peerless Ludden & Bates Piano, said to possess the sweetest and purest musical tone of any instrument ever built. It is this superb piano, that we have secured for members of the Advocate Piano Club. Five beautiful styles including the Baby Grand, three Cabinet Grand Uprights and a Self-Player Piano are offered in the Club's catalogue, a copy of which will be sent free upon request to any reader. Address Ludden & Bates Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

Get Rid of Shiftless Help

THE farm labor problem in the South is a serious one. Scarcity of dependable help causes tremendous money losses every year, especially on big farms and ranches.

Don't let poor, shiftless help hamper and delay your farm work. Save your share of these money losses. Turn them into profits. A solves the problem in a practical way. Solves it permanently, too, by doing as much work as 3 to 6 men and 15 to 30 strong horses or mules. And no matter what kind of work it is doing, a man of ordinary mechanical ability can properly operate and care for the tractor. It is a One Man Outfit, both in traction and belt.

HART-PARR OIL TRACTOR

Less stock to feed—fewer farm hands to board—means a saving that pays for your tractor in a few seasons. Then there is the additional saving in fuel expense. A Hart-Parr tractor uses cheapest KEROSENE for fuel and uses it only when actually producing power.

You need this tractor because it furnishes dependable power, day after day, without tiring. You need it because it really is an economy over any other kind of power, either animal or mechanical.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS.

Rousseaux, President Centenary College, F. R. Hill, Sr., Professor Centenary College, H. T. Carley, Students Centenary College, J. L. Cady, L. A. Sims, Sunday School Missionary Secretary, P. O. Lowrey, Conference Missionary Evangelist, A. W. Turner, Transferred, C. C. Seelman to Southwest, Missouri Conference.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE ITEMS.

Rev. A. W. Turner did a very acceptable year's work as Conference Evangelist. His report was entirely satisfactory to the Board of Missions with just one exception: the collections were not large enough to pay the salary promised. Brother Turner's faith in the future success of the work was so great that he volunteered to continue as Conference Evangelist without a salary. With the past year as a criterion by which to judge Brother Turner's ability as an evangelist, there is no question that he will find ready access to the best pulpits of the State.

Prof. H. B. Carre and Dr. F. N. Parker were present at the Conference. It was a pleasure to the brethren to meet these two men who are giving such great satisfaction as teachers of the Bible at Vanderbilt University and Trinity College.

Rev. J. C. Rousseaux, who was returned to the Zwolle charge, received last year 120 persons into the Church. Brother Rousseaux is taking rank as one of our most effective young men.

Rev. C. C. Miller stated that there had been a number of precipitations over his being compelled to leave the Baton Rouge District, but that he had skillfully prevented any report of them getting into the columns of the Advocate. There is an old adage that "murder will out," and though late, the fact that many charges passed resolutions of appreciation of Brother Miller's services is hereby stated.

Dr. Gross Alexander claimed kinship to the Louisiana Conference. He said that he is the nephew of two former members of this Conference.

At the close of Prof. Gilbert's address on Friday afternoon, a collection was taken which amounted to $126 in cash and about an equal amount in subscriptions. The money will be used in opening our new mission in Africa.

It was stated on the floor of the Conference that there is now living no male relative of the late Bishop Keener bearing his noble name.

Two young men of the Louisiana Conference, Revs. F. R. Power and H. T. Young, not only served charges and passed in their Conference course of study during the past year, but did full work in Centenary College and won medals for merit.

There were seventeen lay delegates present on the first day of the Conference and enough others came during the session to make almost a full lay delegation. It augurs well for the future of our Church when our laymen make a sacrifice of time and money to attend to the business of the Church.

The sermon on Thursday night by Dr. G. E. Cameron was full of spiritual truth and was enjoyed by all present. Dr. Cameron has a way of talking to the hearts of men, and his methods are Methodist to the core. To look into the faces of the brethren as they sang the old songs and shook hands around the altar, made us feel that it would be better if we had more preaching and fewer anniversaries at our Conference sessions.

The following are a few striking statements made by Bishop Mouzon during the session of the Conference: "Grace is a much bigger word than love." "The time has come to re-instate the doctrine of entire sanctification and preach it anew." "The sermon is the central thing in Protestant worship." "The Discipline is not a rod with which to beat people, but a staff to support them. The end of discipline is the salvation of the soul." "The budget plan is the cause of short collections. It is a systematic education to stinginess." "A man in the national army cannot do his duty and devote any considerable time to the making of money; neither can a soldier of the Cross." "I wish the word salary would drop out of the vocabulary of the Methodist ministry. We are not working for hire; we are working for the Lord." "When a preacher's salary is not in full, it is falsifying when you report it in full."

A. J. GEARHEARD.

REPORT OF THE HOSPITAL COMMITTEE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Your committee is pleased to report that progress has been made during the past year in raising funds to establish a Methodist Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Over $63,000 has been raised in subscriptions, and about $15,000 of this amount has been paid. We are fully convinced that our people have not yet realized the magnitude and importance of this enterprise. The erection and equipment of an adequate and creditable hospital in the city of Memphis is a stupendous undertaking; but it can be done. The need for it is undeniable. Every hospital in Memphis is now crowded with patients, and as medical science progresses the facilities of a well equipped institution for the care and cure of the sick will be more and more in demand.

That the Methodists of this section have not done this work long before this time is not at all creditable. Surely this neglect is not a token of their lack of sympathy for the sick and diseased; but the fact that they have failed to enter this field has occasioned unfortunate criticism and possibly loss. We are not willing for other religious bodies to care for our sick. The beginning already made puts the matter squarely before us. It is a promise to the public that we will build. The present situation is a challenge to all our Methodist people within the bounds of the four Conferences proposing to take part, more especially to our wealthy people. If there is needless delay in pushing the enterprise to a speedy conclusion, it will be an unpardonable shame to us.

Our Field Secretary, Rev. H. M. Ellis, has been diligent and faithful, and in the face of hard conditions has gone forward with his work. We commend him and his work to all our people. Let our preachers open the way for him in their charges and co-operate with him in his plans.

We offer the following suggestions for your consideration:

1. That Jan. 19, 1913, be set apart to be observed as Hospital Day throughout the bounds of our Conference, the Field Secretary to arrange and furnish, on request of the pastors, such a program as shall meet the demands of the occasion.

2. That our laymen should be actively engaged in this campaign, offering their services to pastors and Sunday school superintendents in any way that may advance the cause.

3. That committees be appointed in every church to secure a subscription from every member.

4. That our pastors and Sunday school superintendents take a cash collection for the Hospital on Sunday preceding Christmas as a Christmas offering.

J. C. PARK.

A PLEDGE OF LOVE.

"Forever will I love Him
Who saw my hopeless plight,
Who felt my sorrows move Him,
And brought me life and light;
Whose arm shall be around me
When my last hour is come,
And suffer none to wound me,
Though dark the passage home."

FAR-REACHING IN ITS INFLUENCE.

The birth of Jesus is the most outstanding event of all time. It was a mighty achievement when by the exercise of his wisdom and power God brought the stupendous universe, with its rolling suns and systems and multitudinous forms of life, into existence. But it was a far nobler consummation when he sent his only begotten Son, who was "the brightness of his glory and the express image of his person," stripped of his heavenly honors and in extreme humiliation, to this lost planet to enlighten, uplift, and save it. 'Twas great to speak a world from naught; 'twas greater to redeem it. Moreover, there are intimations in the Scriptures that the incarnation is cosmical in its reach: that it was not designed to affect the earth alone, but all the widely extended dominions of Deity. It was this Pauline suggestion that the sainted Enoch Marvin had in mind when he wrote: "The waves of infinite love, agitated by the death pain of Jesus, may wash all the shores of eternity and of being."

WHO CAN RIGHTLY CELEBRATE IT.

Only the true Christian can properly celebrate Christmas, because he only knows the deeper significance of the Master's advent. In a sense, all the millions of the race are the beneficiaries of our Lord's coming, whether they have heard his blessed name or not. He is the "true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." There is no heart upon the planet untouched by "preventive grace." The atonement undergirds the whole vast fabric of human society; indeed, but for it the career of humanity would have ended with the fall of the first pair in Eden.

But the material blessings of Christianity are of all the things it brings the least valuable. True, it does much for the physical man, making immensely brighter and better his temporal habitation; but its nobler and more enduring work is found in what it does for the deathless human spirit. To it, it gives pardon, peace, joy, holiness, conscious communion with God, and an inheritance rich beyond finite conception. The soul to which these glorious experiences have not come, must necessarily have an inadequate appreciation of what the incarnation meant, and consequently cannot vibrate with the deeper notes of praise to the Heavenly Father for his "unspeakable gift."

To what heights those who enthrone Christ within shall finally be raised, we may not know until the curtain of eternity lifts. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is."

THE INCREASING CHRIST.

Between the world's appraisal of Christ in the first and twentieth centuries there is a striking contrast. The first picture that we have of him is as the Babe of Bethlehem, shut out of the inn and sleeping in a manger. Then followed thirty years of poverty and obscurity, during which time he learned the trade of a carpenter. Next we see him as a comparatively unknown teacher, discoursing in public, as opportunity offered, in one of the petty provinces of the wide-reaching Roman Empire. At the close of three years of such a life, we see him arrested, arraigned, condemned, and crucified between two malefactors. If ever a career seemed a complete failure it was when the Man of Galilee expired in agony upon the cross. Every follower had forsaken him. He had talked of founding a kingdom and doing other great things, but there his body hung a bloody corpse and apparently nothing had been accomplished. His end, so far as the human mind could see, was an ignominious one and his name stigmatized for all time to come.

A few days pass and we witness a marvelous transformation in the few former disciples of Jesus. They are again loyal; their cowardice is gone; nothing can now frighten them. They boldly proclaim that the Crucified One was the long-promised Messiah. They affirm that he is risen from the dead and has ascended to sit again upon his eternal throne. A strange power attends their words; the consciences and hearts of men are stirred, and their number begins to increase. That these early disciples had a lofty conception of the Master's personality and work after the Holy Ghost had descended upon them at Pentecost, is clearly manifest from their writings. St. John, in the prologue to his wonderful gospel—perhaps the sublimest piece of writing in all human literature—says: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life; and the life was the light of men." And St. Paul in his extraordinary Second Chapter of Philippians, after telling how Christ Jesus had counted it nobler to serve and die in abasement on earth than to continue to reign in glory with the Father above and let humanity perish, breaks forth in the rapturous exclamation, "Wherefore also God hath highly exalted him and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

But while the early Christians, with their visions clarified by the Holy Spirit, soon began to catch some glimpses of the majestic stature of him who had lived, and wrought, and suffered the fate of martyrdom among them, this was not true of the great masses of mankind. Long after the Master's triumphant ascension from the slopes of Olivet, he continued to be to the world at large the unknown Christ. The odium visited upon the Leader in his closing days still clung to his adherents. They were a despised and hated sect. The more powerful nations, busy with what they regarded as more important matters, seem not to have noticed the new propagandists. Contemporaneous historians and those living in the decades immediately following scarcely mention the career of the Galilean Teacher.

But how different it is in this age! The name then pronounced in derision and obloquy is now the most honored and revered spoken by human lips. All history is to-day classified with reference to that name. It appears in every book issued by the world's largest printing-presses and upon every coin and bank-note of mighty nations. It occupies the most conspicuous place in the world's literature, music, art, and architecture. It is chisled upon towering structures that hid defiance to the corroding tooth of time; it is the inspiration of earth's loftiest oratory, and the theme of its grandest songs. It is invoked wherever men engage in heroic struggles in behalf of the high and good; it is spoken in accents soft and low when the shadows gather and human hearts are bleeding; and it is the talismanic word that opens the doors of heaven and brings its richest blessings down. Tottering infants lisp it at their mothers' knees; the dying whisper it as the flickering fire of life goes out, and it gleams upon the marble slabs that guard the sacred dust of our dead in our cemeteries.

Nor is the end yet. He who has marched across the centuries from a position of lowly obscurity, and even seeming disgrace, to his present place of unchallenged pre-eminence upon our planet, is still ascending to loftier heights. Every passing year finds him occupying a larger place in human thought and affairs. His kingdom widens with every setting sun. We have scant patience with blind optimists who prate about the battle for human redemption being nearly won, and of how we shall soon be singing the songs of the Millennium. Though we believe that vast moral progress has been made since the first Christmas morning more than nineteen hundred years ago, it is our conviction that the fiercest part of the long, long struggle is yet to come. The forces of darkness are strongly entrenched and still control the vast majority of the race. Armageddon is not in the past, but in the future. But we believe that we shall finally win. Our faith is not in feeble men, but in our all-sufficient Leader. When he descended to earth, he came never to forsake it, but to subdue it more and more, until all enemies are put under his feet and he holds the scepter of universal dominion securely in his scarred hand.

"Lo! 'tis coming up the steep of time,
And this old world is growing brighter;
We may not see its dawn sublime,
But high hopes make the heart thro' lighter;
We may be sleeping in the ground,
When it awakes the people's wonder;
But we have felt it gathering round,
And heard its voice of living thunder:
Christ's reign—ah, yes, 'tis coming."

THE NATIVITY.

Phillips Brooks.

O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie:
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by.
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee to-night.

For Christ is born of Mary:
And gathered all above,
While mortals sleep, the angels keep
Their watch of wondering love.
O morning stars, together
Proclaim the holy birth;
And praises sing to God the King,
And peace to men on earth.

O holy Child of Bethlehem,
Descend to us, we pray:
Cast out our sin, and enter in,
Be born in us to-day.
We hear the Christmas angels
The great glad tidings tell:
O come to us, abide with us,
Our Lord Emmanuel.

THE BIRTHDAY OF JESUS CHRIST.

Christmas has become not only a universal but the chief holiday of all the year. If we tenderly regard the birthdays of those near and dear to us; if we rather to hear and utter praises on the birthdays of great poets, statesmen, and generals; if we make noisily merry the birthdays of great events; of the founding of the Nation, of the winning of a victory, of the beginning of some vast project of practical science; so much the more befitting is it that we should above all mark the birthday from which we date all that is best and noblest in the world's civilization; on which began the one perfect life and the one perfect example which has appeared on earth; the day which brought mortals those "tidings of great joy" which are infinitely more precious than the most thrilling tidings of worldly fortune that could possibly greet our ears.

There need be nothing solemn or gloomy about the celebration of Christmas. The serious thoughts it should inspire in every mind need cast no shadow on the cheery and merry enjoyment of the day's festivities—the joyous greetings of relatives and friends.

Those are wisest who think gladly of the significance of the day, and take real pleasure in its spiritual, as well as its palpable, bounties. It is a time to rest and be thankful, to utter praises, to make the hearts of others glad; to be mindful of the poor, and cast the rays of genial charity within forgotten doors; to renew expressions of the love that dwells in the breast for kindred and neighbors; to be thankful, generous, and grateful, and to look forward with pure desires and loftier aims.—Youth's Companion.

A CHRISTMAS MEDITATION.

Until Jesus came, humility was not accounted a virtue. Pagan sages taught their disciples to despise meekness. The militant spirit was considered the most manly. Humility was thought to be weak and cowardly. Some of the ancient Hebrew prophets pointed out the excellence of humility, but the Jews never learned the great lesson.

Of all the great leaders of men, Jesus alone could say, "I am meek and lowly in heart." He alone proclaimed the blessedness of meekness. He came to show men that the lowliest path leads to the highest glory. He being exalted above all creatures in heaven and upon earth, humbled himself, took upon him the form of a servant, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.

He was born in a manger. His mother was a lowly peasant. He chose for himself a lowly path through the world. He was not afraid of poverty, nor ashamed to be numbered with those who had no reputation. He refused worldly wealth, worldly honor and glory. He was despised and rejected of men.

The men of this world are slow to learn the lesson of lowliness. Two of our Lord's disciples, after having walked with him for years, felt the touch of his spirit and witnessed the beauty of his example, knew no better than to beg of him the honor of a place on his right and left hand in his kingdom. We see the folly and weakness of this petition, but in presenting it these two men were closely following the spirit of the time in which they lived and of the world in which they were dwelling. It is not easy for any to escape the bondage of this spirit.

To most men it still seems that noble birth, worldly position, political preferment and official distinction really exalt a man and make him great. Jesus taught a different lesson, and placed tremendous emphasis on it. To the ambitious disciples he said: "Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you; but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant; even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." Office never exalted any man. Birth never made anyone great. One may be the son of a king, and for all that he may be a very small man. It is character that exalts men. Position never made any man great. Lowliness is greatness. Service is pre-eminence.

How hard it is to learn this lesson! How subtle the temptation to seek pre-eminence through office! On this rock the Church has been stumbling through all the Christian centuries. By a strange infatuation the chief men of the Church are generally betrayed into an unseemly assumption of superiority. Unconsciously they cease to be meek and lowly and become high and mighty. High-sounding titles are coveted by them more than the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit. They exercise dominion over their brethren, and become masters instead of servants. When these symptoms appear the decay of the Church has already set in. So subtle is this evil that decay is often far advanced before it is suspected.

The benefits of Christmas day will be missed by the Church if we fail to learn the lesson of lowliness. Let the advent of our Lord, the words of our Lord and the example of our Lord conquer all our pride and create within us the spirit of humility. "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus."—New York Christian Advocate.

THE COUNTRY CHURCH.

By Rev. John M. Moore, D.D.

The farmers and the farmers' churches in the South need and deserve better treatment from the religious denominations than they are receiving. In no State in the union is the church in the country receiving the consideration and the service, in quantity or quality, which its importance should warrant. Between thirty and forty millions of people of these United States live on the farm—more than one-third—and yet the country church that gets efficient service once a week is the exception, while the town or city church that fails to get weekly service is the exception. Country people have been required so long to be content with one service a month, because they must be a part of a circuit, that they have ceased to expect very much attention.

A new era has begun in the attitude of publicists, educators, philanthropists and other leaders in the world's work toward the farm, the farmer and farm life. The Roosevelt Commission on Country Life was the beginning of a national campaign in the interest of rural progress. The demonstration work of the Department of Agriculture of the United States is putting farming upon a new basis. The Southern Commercial Congress at its meeting in Nashville, last spring, discussed principally agriculture and farm life. The Conference on Education in the South, two years preceding, discussed the present country school and agricultural instruction in all the country schools. Representatives of the State Bankers Associations, meeting in Memphis, and the American Bankers Association in Detroit, recently discussed chiefly farming and farm credit. Many books have recently been written as follows: Bailey's "The Country Life Movement"; Butterfield's "The Country Church and Rural Progress"; Roads' "Rural Christianity"; Wilson's "The Church of the Open Country"; Carver's "Principles of Rural Economics"; Beard's "The Life of John Frederick Oberlin"; Dr. Warren H. Wilson, the superintendent of the Department of the Church and Country Life in the Presbyterian Church, has made surveys in five States that have revealed startling facts as to the conditions of churches in the country. Emphasis is being put upon country life, the country school and the country church. The consensus of opinion seems to be that the church should furnish the leadership for the social and intellectual as well as religious life in the country. The country church is being called upon as never before in any country.

What is the key to success in the country? The same as elsewhere—the man. John Frederick Oberlin, a university graduate, a theologian of profound thought, a preacher of commanding ability, declined to leave his rural community in Alsace for a great church in Strasbourg. He led in the building of good roads, good schools and good society, during his long life in the country places. Denmark owes the credit of her world-renowned dairy farming to one of her bishops. Men! Men! that is the need in the country. But no man, however brilliant, masterful and heroic, can render his best service where he must be anxious from day to day about food, raiment and shelter for himself and his family. The great preachers of the towns and cities have social and intellectual advantages for themselves and their wives and children. The preacher who is to render a needed and commanding service in the country, as well as in town, must have such a support as to banish anxiety and furnish him with books, leisure and facilities for carrying on proper work. A starved man can never supply an enthusiastic and capable leadership to the Church or to country life.

While competent, trained men are essential to the rejuvenation and complete establishment of the country church, yet the primary and fundamental consideration is that of support. Without proper support, no man can accomplish his best work and no man will do very much in the country or anywhere else. With proper support, the Church can demand that her ministers meet the requirements of the country and country life, or retire from ministerial leadership. So long as the Church gives insufficient support incompetent service must be not only expected, but endured. Poor circuits, paying starvation stipends, will always have very inadequate service.

There should be no poor circuits in any Conference. Every man who enters the Methodist itinerancy should be insured a living wage. The Conference doors should be jealously guarded so that no incompetent man will get in; and if one gets in by mistake or otherwise, perfect candor should be used in asking him to retire to the local ranks. Our Conferences have not always been honest with men and given them a chance to enter other fields of life service when it was apparent that their success in the ministry was highly problematical. The ministry of Methodism is its leadership, and it must be strong intellectually, socially and religiously if it is to win and hold the respect of the people that make and direct the affairs of social, industrial, professional and commercial life of a community. Oatmeal, blue milk and faded clothes will never make a strong ministry. The church or community that wants meat in the sermon must put beef on the preacher's table. Since no man and no church wants a poor preacher, so no preacher should be compelled to go to a poor circuit. The charges in the country, as well as in the towns and cities, should not be allowed to starve a preacher, but all should be brought to the basis of a living wage, which should be designated by the Conference as the minimum salary that can be assessed for ministerial support by the Boards of Stewards. The figure should be set by the Conference that sends the man, below which no salary can be assessed.

"Good"—some man says, "hut how?" "Where there is a will there is a way." First, the Conference must "will," and then proceed to make the way. Second, the scale of minimum salaries should be agreed upon. The Methodist Church of Canada at its last General Conference set as the minimum salaries exclusive of expense of moving, parsonage or house rent to be assessed by the stewards, as follows: For married ordained men, $1000; for single men, $800; for single unordained men, $600. These amounts were increased from $750, $600 and $400, respectively, which were fixed by a previous General Conference. What scale should be adopted by our Conferences? Let each Conference decide for itself; but $900, $700 and $500 would be small enough for the three ranks of ministers. Third, the cabinets might be respectfully requested to arrange the charges so that these minimum salaries would be possible. The large circuits might be made to take care of a married senior preacher at $900 to $1200, and a junior single preacher at $500 or $600; or a senior ordained single preacher at $700; and a junior unordained single preacher at $500. Local preachers and lay helpers should be enlisted for unpaid services as assistants upon the circuits under the direction of the preacher in charge. Fourth, the Conference mission money should be largely used as a sustentation fund to help bring the salaries to the minimum. In one Conference in New York the sustentation fund is being increased by special contributions from those pastors that receive large salaries. A preacher that receives $3000 to $5000 should be willing to share a part of that salary with a brother minister who is assigned to a country circuit. A system of equalization would aid in driving out the spirit of restlessness which is found in the ministry in some sections. In Canada a Children's Fund is collected in the churches and Sunday schools to assist in bringing the salaries up to the standard, and each minister who serves a needy circuit is given an amount not exceeding twenty-five dollars for each child that he has under a certain age.

The new developments in country life will make new demands upon the country ministry which must be met or the ministry will be more and more discounted, and the country church become less and less a factor in the affairs of the community. The country people must have more and better service from the Church, if the Church is to retain its rightful place in their regard and affection. The character of the ministry which is granted the country churches will be the determining element in their development or deterioration. "Men! Men!" The response is, "Support! Support! Support!" Supply the support and the men will be forthcoming. This matter cannot be worked out in a day, but it is time that we were making a start in this direction. Let serious thought be given to this great interest.

LAITY RIGHTS VERSUS POLITICAL SUFFRAGE.

By Rev. John Paul.

It has been surprising to some of us that talented brethren on both sides of the question should confuse the lay privileges sought for the women of Southern Methodism with woman's suffrage in the political world. Where an individual has the right of suffrage in the State, it is unethical for him to neglect to exercise it. You cannot permit a people to vote by civil law without compelling them to vote by moral law. A right always involves an obligation. Our objection to woman's suffrage would be removed in a large measure if they were all equal to the obligation; but we would be unwilling to compel our mothers and sisters to vote just because a third or even half of our feminine citizenship wanted to vote. Indeed, it would not be fair, if nine-tenths of the ladies wanted the ballot, to compel the one-tenth to go to the polls, which we would be doing if we established woman's suffrage.

But there is no serious analogy between woman's suffrage and laity rights in the Methodist Church. At the polls and in the conventions of the political world she would have to jostle against people of low ideals and little reverence. In exercising a voice in the Church she may sit in the pew where she always sits, and there is no necessity of her going anywhere except where she is needed for the promotion of Christ's kingdom; nor does it follow that she must fill any office, as Conference delegate, steward, class leader or Sunday school superintendent, excepting under those particular circumstances where she is the most suitable and capable person to be found. And where she is the most suitable person, it is pitiful that we should be hampered by an economy which makes it necessary for us to exclude her and put in some figurehead because he happens to be of the masculine gender. It would not be so pathetic if there were any Scripture for it, and if it were not based upon an illogical abhorrence for innovation which has always made the Church die hard to its old measures, thus opening the way to new measures which would get results.

When some of the brethren a hundred years ago objected to organs and brass violins in the church, they said, "The next thing, you will be wanting to dance in the church." Some recent writers in this paper seem to have grave fears that if our ladies were granted lay rights in the Church, they might become suffragettes, or aspire to the order of Elder or the office of Bishop. In the first place, these brethren ought to be too chivalrous to impugn the ladies' motives; and, in the second place, they ought to be too fair in argument to heg the question by holding up scare crows. Nor should it be thought that this is a thing sought by the ladies out of egotistic or selfish motives. They represent the stronger moral wing of the human race, and are modestly seeking to help advance the kingdom of Christ.

The Methodist Episcopal Church (North) enacted this lay rights privilege for women at their General Conference in 1904. It is freely granted that much good has come of it, and in a constant reading of their papers I have not seen a complaint of its working from the pen of any of its former opponents. This cannot be said of their measure abrogating the time limit, or the one changing the name "presiding elder" to "district superintendent." Indeed, it is a rare thing that you see a measure enacted that proves to be so wholesome as to allay all objection and leave no faction to advocate a return to the old way; but such has been the fortune of that movement which places woman along with man in the more active positions of lay work in the Church.

MY LAST CHARGE AND ELSE.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis.

III.

After staying five years in charge of the original, and a part of the original, Liberty circuit (having served under Jas. A. Godbey three years as my P. E., H. F. Johnson, one year, and J. A. B. Jones one year), I was sent to Providence circuit.

After being elsewhere, here and there, for twenty-four years, I was returned on Dec. 17, 1906, to Liberty. What wonderful changes had taken place during the twenty-four years! I had ten in family when sent away, but only one—myself—when read out for Liberty in December, 1906.

Children were all gone—six of them in the ministry; one on the Railroad (how I wish he had yielded to the call like his brothers did); one in business in Jackson, and one—the precious wife and mother, gone home to rest. What a lonely, sad life I had lived for more than two years; no one knows except those who have had a like experience.

Of course it was understood by the Bishop and his advisers that I would not be alone when I got to Liberty. The Good Book says, "It is not good that man should be alone." I fully concur. In a few days I was in Liberty, mixing with the people. I found four Baptist, one Presbyterian, and one Methodist preacher there. I told one Baptist brother that there were preachers enough there to capture Liberty for Christ, if they were any account; and if not, that Liberty would be better off without them. Some preachers are worthless when it comes to winning souls to Christ.

Well, I found but few members that were there thirty years before. A new church had been built at Woodland, also at Salem. Tarver's Chapel had been torn down and moved to Glading, a thing that ought not to have been done. How short-sighted we are sometimes! The old church I left standing in Liberty was still there, but in a dilapidated condition. A movement was on foot to build a new church; so in less than twelve months time we had a beautiful church in a more desirable place. I found the Sunday school in almost a dying condition. It did die, or was suspended in June, but was resurrected in the new Church in December, and has been doing finely since.

There are many splendid people in and around Liberty. Then there are some of the other sort. It has been a long time since I served a people who held their preacher and his wife in higher esteem than did many of the people of the Liberty charge; especially was this true of those at Liberty and Glading. Among the excellent people of those places we mention the Brewers, Butlers, Sabines, Terrels, at Liberty; and the Smiths, Harveys, Webbs, at Glading. At Woodland, Brother Dan Kelly, father of our Conference evangelist, D. E. Kelly, was still holding on, the same good man he was thirty years before, though feeble with age. But few better men are found anywhere than old Father Dan Kelly. He has one son and one stepson in the ministry, both doing good work.

At one place I read, as my usual custom had been for many years, the General Rules of the Church, and commented on them. A widow woman, a hater of the Methodists, said to her pastor, "Mr. Lewis preached a doctrinal sermon, I want you to preach one in our Church." She did not know the difference between the General Rules of our Church and a doctrinal sermon. There are many such people in our land. I want to say right here, I found Brother Patton, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and Brother Sproles, pastor of the Baptist church, to be good and true men of God.

During the last thirty years, seven young men who were brought up in the Woodland neighborhood, were licensed to preach. Six of them went into the itinerancy. All of them, save one, have done good service and are still in the ministry. One brother, a man I dearly loved, fell by the way. My prayer is that he may yet see the error of his way, return unto the Lord, and be reinstated in the Church and ministry. God bless him! A brother who was converted, licensed to preach in early life, but was afterwards expelled from the Church and ministry for immoral conduct, while I was his pastor in 1866, was awakened, reclaimed, restored to the Church, and afterwards proved faithful and true to God and the Church till the day of his death. For ten years he had not gone inside of a church; yet God was still good to him. "Return unto me and I will return unto you." God willeth not the death of any, but that all should come to repentance. May God still have compassion on and help the erring brother!

Church News

The Methodists of South Carolina are planning to raise $100,000 for Wofford, Lander, and Columbia Colleges.

The College Presidents' Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church will meet in Lincoln, Nebraska, January 14-16. This conference of educators ought to be productive of great good.

Dr. John P. Goucher is reported to have said that one in every three persons in Baltimore, Md., is either a Methodist or a descendant of Methodists. Much of the great Episcopal Methodisms are strong in the Monumental City.

To his other helpful and widely read volumes—"Other Sheep," "Twice Born Men" and "Souls in Action"—Harold Regbie has added another, entitled "The Ordinary Man and Extraordinary Thing." The George H. Doran Company, of New York, are its publishers.

From many sources we have recently heard words highly commendatory of the preaching and episcopal work of Bishop J. H. McCoy. Everywhere he goes he seems to captivate the people. By no means least among his many splendid qualifications for the episcopal office are his unfeigned modesty and his sincere brotherliness.

It is stated that the number of Presbyterians in Chicago has increased from 14,870 to 20,807 since 1890. Over 100 per cent in twenty-two years is a fact showing in a city which is considered one of the most wicked in the Western Hemisphere. However, this is barely keeping pace with the growth of the city's population which was 1,093,850 in 1890, and 2,185,283 in 1910.

Dr. Shailer Matthews, the new President of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, is a Baptist. He is a teacher of theology in the University of Chicago, editor of the Biblical World, and is an author of note, two of his best known books being "The Church and the Changing Order" and "The Gospel and the Modern Man." His orthodoxy has at times been challenged.

Bishop A. W. Wilson will on the fifth of next February celebrate his seventy-ninth birthday. He was elected to the episcopacy in 1882. Bishops Linus Parker, J. C. Granbery and R. K. Hargrove, who were elected at the same time, have long since passed to the Church Triumphant. The oldest living Southern Methodist Bishop is Bishop S. Key, who was born July 18, 1829. Bishop Morrison was born May 30, 1842; Bishop Hendrix May 17, 1847, and Bishop Hoss, April 14, 1849.

At the first meeting of the Methodist preachers of Louisville, Ky., after the Annual Conference, Dr. F. M. Thomas, the brilliant presiding elder, in a brief address suggested three keynotes to success: First, sole-leadership: under this head he emphasized the necessity of faithful pastoral visitation. Second, sympathy: he urged the preachers to acquire and evince a genuine feeling of interest in their people. Third, spirituality: this he insisted must be the underlying basis of all truly successful Christian work.

Bishop Candler has evidently been having a great time with the brethren in Oklahoma and Arkansas. Recent issues of the Western Methodist have contained a number of his striking sayings from the chair and pulpit. The great Georgian is not only a vigorous thinker, but we know of no living man who can compress more sound truth into a sentence than he can. Bishop Candler will go to Cuba to perform official duties about the middle of next January. Dr. I. W. Cooper, the President of Whitworth College, will accompany him.

The Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with headquarters in the Methodist Publishing House, has received information that a valuable piece of property in Cuba had been given to the Council by Senor Pedro G. Tosca, of Matanzas, Cuba, who was for many years a teacher in the government schools of his country. He expressed the desire that the property, which consists of a splendid building with attractive grounds, be used as an orphanage; but in the event that this was not practical, it was to be used, as the Council wished. The property is valued at $7,000. —Nashville Banner.

The Baltimore Southern Methodist states that Dr. John Poisal Hyde is a candidate for the Chaplaincy of the United States Senate, and that he is a typical Southern gentleman and has the endorsement of some of the strongest Democratic leaders in Virginia and elsewhere. We do not know to what Church Dr. Hyde belongs or how well fitted he is for the place to which he aspires, but we sincerely hope that the retirement of Mr. Taft will mark the end of any official recognition of Unitarianism at Washington. It is little less than an affront to the millions of orthodox Christian men and women in the United States for Congress to choose its chaplains from the comparatively insignificant little band in the nation who deny the Deity of Christ.

The Christian Index, of Atlanta, Ga., a Baptist paper, which has been owned and published by Mr. T. P. Bell and Mr. B. J. W. Graham for several years, will be taken over by the Index Printing Company on January 1. It is stated that this paper for the past four years has paid a 9 per cent annual dividend on a $30,000 valuation, and that every $100 share of stock is worth $166. It is announced by the new management that an effort will be made to distribute this stock more generally among the Baptists of Georgia, though those owning it are little disposed to place it on the market. The Baptist Church claims a membership of 275,000 in that State. It is refreshing to hear of a religious journal in the South that is being published at a good profit. The price of the Christian Index is $2 a year.

DR. DUBOSE AS A REFORMER.

An Augusta (Ga.) dispatch to the Atlanta Georgian and News, bearing date of December 2, refers to Dr. H. M. DuBose's work as a reformer during his two years' pastorate in Augusta, as follows:

"If there are any blind tigers in Atlanta, Dr. H. M. DuBose, the new pastor of the First Methodist Church, will certainly go gunning for them and he will not be long about it. During his two years as pastor of St. John's Methodist Church of Augusta, Dr. DuBose has made things extremely uncomfortable for law-breakers. He spoke right out in meeting about the condition of affairs in this city. As the leading spirit in the ministerial alliance, Dr. DuBose framed and had passed some of the strongest resolutions against local conditions that have ever been read here. Mayor Thomas Barrett was attacked repeatedly, although what has been going on under the Barrett administration is not any worse than has been going on for many years under other administrations. As far as gambling in Augusta is concerned, it is believed to have been effectually stopped, but as for selling whiskey, that, seemingly, will go on forever, as the juries refuse to convict and the sentiment of the people seems to be in favor of selling whiskey. Dr. DuBose is a brilliant writer and speaker and he had many strong supporters here in his attacks on local conditions."

HELPFUL COMMENTARY.

The pastor of the First Church of Manchester, N. H., Rev. William Wapsett who is a lover of Methodist hymns, and as such a close student of them, writes this interesting comment concerning a recent editorial note in the Herald:

"Appropos of 'The Commentary' in this week's Herald on Job 1: 'As the sparrow fly upward, I would seek unto God—truly a beautiful and suggestive interpretation—may I call attention to a similar utterance in stanza 2 of Robert Seagrave's inspiring hymn, No. 933 in our Methodist Hymnal, a hymn not as well known nor as much used as it might be with profit in our worship:

Rivers to the ocean run,
Nor stay in all their course;
Fire ascending seeks the sun;
Both speed them to their source:
So a soul that's born of God,
Pants to view His glorious face:
Upward tends to His abode,
To rest in His embrace."

The poet had caught a vision which the translator had evidently failed to see. How often this is the case! Which leads to the remark that there are few forms of devotional literature as valuable as the hymns of the Church. To love and know them means inspiration and help, strength and comfort.—Zion's Herald.

A STRIKING ILLUSTRATION.

A Chinese preacher, in urging the sacredness of the Lord's Day, used this story: "It came to pass that a man went to market, having on his shoulder a string of seven large copper coins (Chinese coins are strung on strings and carried on the shoulder). Seeing a beggar crying for alms, he gave the poor creature six of his seven coins. Then the beggar, instead of being grateful, crept up behind the kind man, and stole the seventh coin also. What an abominable wretch! Yes, but in saying this you condemn yourselves. You receive from the hand of the gracious God six days, yet you are not content. The seventh also you steal!"—World Wide Missions.

A CHRISTIAN INDEED.

Mr. Chung, head of the Canton Christian College, was in the United States during the recent revolution in China. Immediately upon his return to Canton he was sought as chairman of the Board of Education, at a salary of $4,000; the College was giving him $900. At once he made this proposition to the College: "Allow me to retain my position and salary as head Chinese teacher in the College, but give me time to direct the Board of Education in this work, and I will take my salary of $4,000 in that position and turn it over to the College."—Christian Work.

Secular News and Comment

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

Woodrow Wilson is just fifty-six years of age. His birthday is December 28.

The body of the Hon. Whitelaw Reid is being borne from England to America aboard the British battleship, Natal.

It is claimed that a number of women have organized a company in Canton, China, and will conduct and edit a daily paper in the Chinese language.

The latest compilation of statistics concerning the 1912 cotton crop gives the total number of bales as 13,700,000. Texas produced 4,725,000 bales; Georgia, 2,750,000; Mississippi, 1,050,000, and Louisiana 440,000.

President-elect Wilson has little desire to be the target of curious eyes. He has announced that there will be no public receptions in the big East Room of the White House while he is President.

It has been authoritatively announced that the Nobel Peace Prize will not be awarded this year. The reason of this is that the Committee having the giving of it in charge did not think there was anyone who had done enough for the cause of peace to merit such a prize.

A British committee, organized for the purpose of preparing a program for the celebration of the centennial of Anglo-American peace in 1914, has proposed the erection of a statue of George Washington in Westminster Abbey or in Westminster Hall, adjoining the House of Commons.

Andrew Carnegie has announced that all his fortune except $25,000,000 will be left to the Carnegie Corporation of New York, which corporation will continue to carry forward his plans for uplifting the American people by the promotion of educational and charitable work.

Jan Kubelik, the famous violinist, who but a year ago boasted that he had accumulated a million dollars with his violin and would rest and enjoy his money, has been forced to give up his favorite instrument, Virtuoso's famous "Guarnerius," to satisfy a judgment. Truly, money has wings.

Woman suffragists are planning to run a paper in the interest of their cause in New York. The paper is to be named "The Woman's Political World," and Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch is to be its editress. The suffragists hope to carry New York State for the enfranchisement of women in 1915.

The residence occupied by Jefferson Davis as an executive mansion during the closing days of the Civil War is located at Danville, Va., and is valued at $48,000. A movement has been inaugurated to secure enough money to purchase the property and preserve it as a memorial of this honored leader of the Old South.

President W. H. Taft has announced his acceptance of the Kent Professorship of Law in Yale University at a salary of $5000 per annum. He will probably enter upon his new duties immediately upon his retirement from the White House. In addition to his duties as a lecturer in Yale, he will have ample time to lecture in other schools and pursue other lines of business.

Mr. A. H. Babcock, a member of an anthropological society in Washington, D. C., denies that Christopher Columbus discovered America. He has in his possession a map which he claims was drawn by Martin Behaim before Columbus made his voyage. He may be right, but we seriously doubt his ability to shake the faith of the American people in the claim made for Columbus.

Mr. F. Hopkins Smith, a noted writer and lecturer, expressed his opinion recently that the book, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," not only did untold harm before the war of the sixties, but that it is yet bearing a false message to the youth of America and should not be circulated. He says that the relationship that existed between the negro and the people of the South was not then understood, and that it is not any better understood to-day. Mr. Smith, in our judgment, is not far from right.

Recently a New York City official was convicted on the charge of bribery and sentenced to prison. He was taken to Sing Sing, and there given special apartments and permitted to have the attention of private servants. The New York Tribune has editorially denounced the prison officials for allowing what it terms partiality among convicts. We believe the Tribune has taken a proper stand. The sooner the moneyed man is toppled off the pedestal of special privileges in America, the sooner will we be served with more impartiality by our courts.

The librarian of Congress favors changing the name of the Congressional Library to the "Library of the United States." He further suggests that the Library should be divided, and parts of it located in the leading cities of the nation so that it would serve a larger number of people. During the last year there were added to the Library 120,000 printed volumes and pamphlets. The most notable addition was that of 7,000 volumes of Chinese books bearing on the subjects of agriculture, botany, horticulture, and materia medica. They were selected by Dr. Hing Kwai Fung.

The teachers of journalism recently met in Chicago for a conference. There were twelve universities represented. Profs. Talcott Williams, of Columbia University, and Walter Williams, of the Missouri University, were the principal speakers. The dominant note in the convention seemed to favor stricter rules for secular journalism. It seems that the great teachers would have our news written in conformity to a fixed standard, as are modern business letters. If such a method becomes the rule, we predict that there will be a sharp decline in the interest of the public in the secular papers. Individuality, in our opinion, is the soul of interest in any kind of journalism.

AN INTERESTING SITUATION FOR OUR IMMERSIONISTS.

The age in which we live is characterized by acuteness of vision and the power to detect the false and the sham. False ideas are now being punctured and truth is gradually working its way from the junk-heaps of error and prejudice to its place of power in the larger life of the world. In religion the process is perhaps slower than anywhere else, but even here many favorable signs are beginning to appear.

When Rev. J. E. Mahaffey, of Clinton, S. C., two years ago pointed out some grave errors upon which immersionists have based their theory for ages—errors published in their standard works and remaining unchallenged for scores of years—it was thought by some that perhaps he was mistaken and that the standard works and the denominations which they represent would be defended by some one who might at least offer some explanation of the matters in question.

The stern fact remains, however, that, after being read by nearly a half-million people and carefully examined by modern scholars, Mahaffey's book stands the test; the immersion guns are silent, and it is believed that a great step has been taken toward securing from our immersion brethren the recognition which our position deserves and thus bring about a more fraternal relation between the differing denominations. Such a result would surely be hailed with delight by all sincere followers of our only Lord and Savior.

The Baptist Commonwealth says: "As a denomination Baptists are confronted by what, in general, we may call a new departure. The Mt. Morris Church, of New York City, the First Church, of Ithaca, N. Y., and the First Church, of Los Gatos, Cal., have voted to receive to their membership members of other than Baptist Churches on the baptism that is satisfactory to the person thus received. There may be other than those, of which we have not heard. Others still are said to be considering such a movement, while it is a fact well-known, though not widely proclaimed, that many of our younger ministers and some of them among the most prominent, favor such a change. Surely, in view of the fact that our uniform Baptist usage in this country has been the reverse of this, we may call it a new departure."

A most favorable indication of this trend of things is seen in a recent utterance of the Christian Century, which paper is a loyal exponent of the Disciples, or Christian Church. They seem to be preparing to lead the way in a great movement in the right direction. Extreme immersionists would do well to ponder seriously the suggestive extract quoted from the Century, as follows:

"There is a deep-rooted and rapidly spreading conviction among the Disciples of Christ that both our historic plea and the demands of the age into which we have come call for the casting away of this one last survival of sectarianism in our practice—the practice of selecting from among Christ's followers only the immersed and rejecting all others from our fellowship. * * * There is a widespread disillusionment with regard to the immersion dogma. The sanctions for this dogma are breaking down. The New Testament facts are against it. The spirit of Christianity is against it. The spirit of the age is against it."

* * * The immersion dogma is a sectarian obsession in which the big, sane-visioned men and women of the world, who are working at the world's real task, have no interest."

To all of the above we heartily say, "Amen," and patiently await the right hand of fellowship from our immersion friends in Christian recognition. May the "wide-spread disillusionment" continue to widen until some glad day not far away we shall see how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity—Observer.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

Bishop F. J. McConnell, of the Methodist Episcopal Church

When we try to urge upon a man the thought of the opportunity lost through not making way for Joseph and Mary, he talks to us again about first come, first served. He says that this is the only rule by which we can get along. He tells us that while the Golden Rule is good, it is not to be taken "literally," as he calls it, by which he is apt to mean that the rule is not to be taken as if it meant what it says, but as if it meant what it does not say. He may even say things that seem to him very funny about what would happen if everybody waited for everybody else, and if everybody gave up to everybody else. But all such talk misses the point. The Golden Rule would have us treat others as ourselves and in cases of unusual need render unto others the good that at such times we should like to have given to ourselves. There is something wrong with first come, first served, when it allows a strong, healthy man to sleep in comfort while Mary goes to the manger.

We must not make our list too long, but we ought to hear at least one more man. This man tells us that he saw Joseph and Mary come into the inn and that he intended to give his place to them. While he was thinking about it, though, they passed on. He could not get Joseph and Mary out of his mind, but after he had failed to speak to them on first seeing them, he felt ashamed to hunt them up. As it was, they were on his mind all night. He felt once or twice that he must get up, even in the middle of the night, and let them have his place. But he didn't. He pulled his blanket around his shoulders and fell into a doze.

Now why do we talk in this way about these people? Just because the persons did what we would probably have done if we had been in their place. For many of us, day after day, act just as they did. To be sure we do not have the chance to aid Christ as did these travelers who stopped on the first Christmas Eve at the inn, but Christ has told us that he is before us when one of his children anywhere is in need. And Christian parents have trained us to manners of consideration for others, not merely to have us appear better at dinners and parties, but to put us onto the way of rendering Christ service. We do not say that those travelers in the inn at Bethlehem were wicked; we do not say that they wished to have the new-born Christ laid in a manger. We simply say that they were thoughtless or that they were thinking only of themselves.

If we could call back together the different persons we have mentioned—all who might have made a place for Christ but did not—there is one thing they would all alike say: that if they had known that Christ was to come to the inn that night they would have been glad to make a place for him, but they did not know. We sometimes make the same excuse, but we cannot make it with the same right that the travelers in the inn did. For since Christ has spoken his truth to us, we know that every time one in real need stands before us Christ stands before us.

There is something more. Christ comes to us, not only in the form of those in distress or need, but he comes to us in promptings to do right—those inner promptings that no one may know of except ourselves. Our lives, after all, may be spoken of as Bethlehem inns, where Christ may be born. The little promptings to do right are the coming of Christ. But what if all the room is taken? If we are thoughtless or careless or interested merely in our own pleasures, some of these strivings toward the better life have no place to stay in our hearts. Let us remember that Christ was kept out of the inn, not because the people in the inn did not like him or because they were trying to keep him out. He was kept out because the places were all taken. If I want to have my own way, that takes a room. If I am interested just in myself, that takes a room—maybe all the rooms. Every time I fill up the rooms in this way and keep out the good impulses, I am making what happened in the olden time to happen again. There is no room for Christ in the inn. And our lives are really more than inns. They are dwelling houses. Christ comes not to stay over night, but to stay all the time. He comes to live with us. But he cannot stay with us unless he can get in. And he cannot get in if there is no room. And there cannot be room unless we make room. We can make room if we will. It need never be said of our lives that they had no room for Christ.—From "Christmas Sermons."

REV. R. S. GALE.

Robert Sidney Gale was born near Satartia, Yazoo County, Miss., February 14, 1851. After serving faithfully his day and generation according to the will of God, he peacefully "fell on sleep" in his parsonage home at Summit, Miss., on Sunday afternoon, September 1, 1912.

Brother Gale was the last surviving member of his father's family, an only sister having preceded him to the grave but a few weeks; so it has been impossible to obtain satisfactory information concerning his ancestry and early life. This much, however, we know: the home of his childhood was not without culture, refinement and Christian training. His parents were Presbyterians and he was brought up in the faith of that great Church. However, his conversion did not take place until he had reached young manhood and after he was married to his first wife. It was largely due to the influence of this excellent Christian woman that this promising young man was soundly converted to God and brought into the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

His call to the ministry followed soon after his conversion, and he was licensed to preach in the twenty-seventh year of his age. The license was granted by the Quarterly Conference of the Mount Olivet Circuit, Vicksburg District, on Nov. 10, 1877, and was signed by Rev. F. M. Featherston, P. E.

Brother Gale served eight years in the local ranks, two of which he spent as a supply on the Paulding Circuit. He was elected to Local Deacon's orders at Brookhaven and was ordained by Bishop John C. Keener, December 18, 1881. The Annual Conference which was held at Meridian in December, 1885, admitted him on trial, and his first regular appointment was Columbia. The second year he served the Holmesville charge and was admitted into full connection at Jackson in December, 1887. From this Conference he was returned to Holmesville. The year 1888 he spent on the Adams charge. At Crystal Springs, in December, 1889, he was ordained Elder by Bishop Charles B. Galloway, and was appointed to the Bowerton (now Bayou Pierre) charge. In 1890 he was sent to the Shiloh charge, and to Trenton in 1891. While on this charge his health failed and he was placed on the superannuate list for the following year. He served the Bayou Sara charge in 1894 and was again superannuated. However, after a year's rest, he was able to resume his "loved employ" and continued in unbroken service until called to his reward. He served the Meadville charge the years of 1897-8; Decatur, 1899; Raleigh, 1900-01; Taylorsville, 1902-03; Eucutta, 1904; Vossburg and Heidelberg, 1905-06; Lucedale, 1907-08; New Augusta and Richton, 1909; and McHenry and Wiggins, 1910-11.

In December, 1911, he was appointed to the Eden charge, where he remained until May, when he was changed to Summit and East McComb to fill the vacancy caused by the election of Rev. C. M. Chapman to the presidency of Port Gibson Female College. He entered upon the work of this important charge with commendable energy and with the promise of success; but even then a deadly disease had marked him for its prey, and after weary weeks of suffering he heard the voice of his Lord saying, "It is enough, come up higher."

Brother Gale was married four times. First to Miss Abby Luella Pease, of Mobile, Ala. Of this union five children were born, only one of whom survives. His second wife was Miss Elizabeth Lewis, of Wesson, Miss., a niece of our honored brother, the Rev. H. P. Lewis. She lived but a short while and died at Adams, in 1888. In the year 1889 he was married to Miss Allie Leggett, of Barlow, Miss., a sister of the Rev. J. T. Leggett of the Mississippi Conference. For more than a score of years this most excellent woman walked by his side and shared heroically the varying fortunes of the itinerant life. Of this union were born four children, all of whom survive. On the 21st day of May, 1912, he was married to Miss Catherine Cox of McHenry, Miss., who, like some good angel of love and mercy, seemed to have been sent into this good man's life just in time to minister to him in the time of weakness and pain.

In the death of Brother Gale the Mississippi Conference has lost one of its most worthy and faithful members. Were I called upon to give in a single word the key-note of his life, that word would be "fidelity." Perhaps, among us there have been men of greater talent and more conspicuous ability, but not in our history have we had one who was more faithful to the trust committed to him.

The greater part of the twenty-seven years of his itinerant ministry was spent in what are considered the harder charges of our Conference, often with a very inadequate support, yet he went willingly and wrought faithfully for God and the Church.

As a preacher, Brother Gale was above the average. His sermons gave evidence of much prayer and careful preparation. He was clear in his exposition of the great doctrines of the Holy Scriptures. While he did not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, yet his choice theme seemed to be the great love of the Father, as manifest in the Cross of Calvary. He recognized the fact that his ministerial vows laid upon him a two-fold obligation: to be a faithful dispenser of the Word and Sacraments, and to visit from house to house among his people. As a pastor, Brother Gale excelled. Kind, sympathetic and tactful, he loved his people and carried their interests and sorrows upon his heart. He was very helpful to young Christians, especially to young preachers. The writer of these lines makes grateful acknowledgment of the benefit which he derived early in his ministry from the godly counsel of this good man.

In his attitude toward his brethren of the ministry we have never had a more sincere, a more guileless man among us. During an acquaintance of twenty years, during much of which time we were intimately associated, I do not recall one unkind word spoken by him concerning his brethren. Among his last words was a message of tender love for them.

The Psalmist has said, "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." And so it was with our beloved brother. Death was to him but the home-going. "He was confident and willing, rather to be absent from the body and present with the Lord."

On the morning of September 2, after service conducted by the writer, assisted by Brothers J. H. Foreman, R. H. Barr, Jno. A. Moore and Nolan B. Harmon, we tenderly laid his body to rest in the cemetery at Wesson, near the sacred dust of loved ones gone before.

"Our friend serenely to his final rest has passed, While the memory of his virtues lingers yet, Like twilight hues when the bright sun is set"

"GRAMPA."

My grampa, when it's Chris'mas, he Comes to our house the day before,
An' Chris'mas mornin' him an' me
Gets all my toys down on th' floor,
An' he winds up my engine men
An' makes my train go 'round the track,
An' helps me march my soldier men
An' shows me 'bout my jumping jack.
An' ever'thing I say I know
'Bout Santa Claus he says it's so.

My grampa he don't ever care
How much I rumple up his clo'es
Or muss his whiskers or his hair—
He says 'at such things only shows
'At boys is hoys, an' has to play
An' be as glad as they can be—
An' ever' time it's Chris'mas Day,
W'y he comes here to play with me,
An' ma, one time, she kind o' smiled
An' said, "Which one o' you's the child?"

My grampa always understands
Just what I mean an' how I feel
When I don't want to wash my hands
Before I sit down to a meal,
An' ma she laughs at him an' says
"A man of his age ought to know
'Bout raisin' children—anyways,
He really musn't spoil me so."
An' onct I ask her, when he's gone,
"Is grampa a boy with whiskers on?"

AT CHRISTMAS TIME.

If you were a little Belgian girl or boy you would fill your shoes with beans and carrots, and set them in the chimney place for the good saint's horse. In the morning your carrots and beans would be gone (of course the horse ate them), and in their place would be sweetmeats.

If you lived in Italy, you would go to the church to see the Bambino, or image of the Christ-child, who is supposed to give the presents.

If you were a little Spaniard, you would hide your shoes or slippers in the bushes on Christmas Eve, and find them filled with fruit and sugar plums in the morning.

In Bohemia, you would watch and listen for the chariot and the white horse of the Christ-child, who comes flying through the air with his Krippe full of gifts.

If you were a French child, you would find gifts in your shoe if you were good; but if you had been naughty, Noel, who brings the Christmas gifts, would leave instead a whip in your shoe.—Normal Instructor.

THE KITTEN'S CHRISTMAS TREE.

Helen M. Richardson, in the Western Christian Advocate.

It was so unfortunate that measles should swoop down on the Cartwright family just as the Christmas holidays set in. But measles is a disease that can not be bribed, Graham, who was the oldest of the two Cartwright children, had heard his mother say.

Anita was at first too sick to give the subject much thought. But a few days before Christmas she began to join her brother in wishing that they were going to the Sunday school Christmas tree.

As Bob and Betsy, the two Angora kittens, were playing together one afternoon, Anita suddenly thought that it would be great fun to have a Christmas tree for them, if mamma were willing.

"Why, yes," assented Mrs. Cartwright, "I should enjoy getting one ready for them, and we will go right to work."

Mrs. Cartwright was very willing to procure a tree, which must be small, of course, in order that the kittens could get at their presents themselves. "Santa Claus would be apt to frighten them; so we will have to get along without him, I think," Mrs. Cartwright said.

How the children laughed when they saw the tree! "Why, it's the cunningest little fir tree I ever saw!" said Anita.

"I believe Betsy could climb it," asserted Graham.

"We will test her climbing capacity," Mrs. Cartwright said in a laughing tone. "We will put a mouse on the top branch and give her and Bob a chance at it. The one that gets it may keep it."

Such fun as the children had getting that Christmas tree ready! There were little muslin bags to be made which were to be filled with catnip, instead of candy. A very few were to contain some tender meat very finely cut up, because the Angoras were not allowed much as it was not considered good for them.

Numerous small gray flannel mice were filled with catnip before they were sewed together. And last of all there were strings of popcorn, because the kittens liked popcorn and milk. Then several rubber balls were suspended by strings from the branches for them to play with.

It was to be a daylight tree, because Bob and Betsy might burn their paws on lighted candles. Therefore, nine o'clock Christmas morning was the time set.

The day before Christmas the kittens' fur was nicely combed, and on Christmas morning Betsy was adorned with a blue and Bob with a pink ribbon. As both kittens were black, they made a very fine appearance.

"Well, I do not consider this a very measly-looking crowd," Mr. Cartwright remarked, as a bright-eyed, expectant group of kittens and children stood awaiting the removal of the screen that concealed the tree from view.

The kittens had already commenced to sniff, for the odor of catnip is very penetrating. Bob's whiskers were twitching, and Betsy's little up-raised paw was on a catnip bag as soon as the screen was removed.

Such fun as they had! It was not long ere the catnip bags were torn open, and the contents scattered over the floor to be eaten or rolled in as the whim seized these frolicsome kittens. All the catnip mice were disposed of in like manner.

Then Bob seized a ball and amused himself by rolling it over the floor, and Betsy busied herself trying to pull off the strings of popcorn.

It was while doing this that the mouse upon the topmost branch was discovered by her. This caused a scramble to the top of the tree, during which the tree, Betsy, and the mouse all fell to the floor in a heap.

"I think the pussies' Christmas tree has been excellent medicine for measles," Father Cartwright remarked, with a twinkie in his eye when the fun was all over.

"So do we!" chorused the children.

"And so do I!" chimed in Mother.

"And so do we!" purred the delighted pussies as they blinked their sleepy eyes from amid the catnip ruins of their dismantled Christmas tree.

THE CHEERFUL GIVER.

A cheerful giver! Who hut mother can claim that title? Think of her daily sacrifices, her endless gifts, her faithful devotion, and her loving, cheering words.

From the time her eldest is a wee little tot, to the time her youngest is a stately mother, her whole life is a sacrifice for her children. She gives—what? Her time, thoughts, everything to her children. She sews for them, plays with them, and teaches them the right way. She entertains for them; in short—she gives her whole life, her whole ambition.

Those of you who have a mother's love, think this over, and I am sure you will agree with me that it would be vain to search the whole world for a more cheerful giver than "mother."—Helen L. Eckel, in St. Nicholas.

GIPSY SMITH'S EPIGRAMS.

What is the use of a religious profession if Jesus is out of it?

I wonder if Jesus Christ came to some of our churches where they are looking for a pastor, if he would be invited to fill the vacant pulpit.

God can open the blind eye or unstop the deaf ear, or paint a lilly bell, or form a dewdrop, or create the trill of the bird song, or open the gates of the morning without a creak of their hinges, or set an atom swinging in the sunshine, with all its rhythm and poetry, as much as in the movement of a constellation; but he can save no man against his will.

St. Paul's Cathedral is nothing but a glorified quarry if Christ be out of it, and my old gipsy tent is a cathedral when Christ is in it. Christ makes the temple.

Your soul is not a trinket that you can buy for 5 cents and replace when you have lost it.

Wherever Jesus comes somebody knows and wants to be where he is, for the great throbbing, weary, weeping, sad, broken heart of the world needs Jesus.—Central Christian Advocate.

TO THE MINISTRY IN MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Brethren:

(1). If any of the ministers are not receiving "American Issue," it is because their names were overlooked in copying names from the Minutes. Please notify this office, if you do not receive it.

(2) Please get in touch with some two or three or more good citizens on the First Monday in January, go in a body before your County Board of Supervisors and ask them to make an order appropriating one-third of the fines from liquor convictions (or as much of one-third as may be necessary) to defray expenses of the catching and convicting. Get them to make the order right then and there, and take the vote while you are present. Then when persons in your county write for detective service, they know where the expense money is coming from to pay for it. This makes the criminal "blind tiger" pay for his own conviction and makes one fellow pay to catch the other fellow.

Please notify this office of the result of your visit to the Supervisors. When Mr. J. C. Cavett and I asked the Hinds County Board to make this standing order, it was the beginning of the Jackson clean-up. It is really a revenue measure, as they ought to see, unless the supervisors are themselves whiskey sympathizers.

Yours for a truly dry State,

G. W. EICHELBARGER,

State Supt. of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League, Jackson, Miss.

BEAUTIFUL STORY OF THE EVANGELISTS.

How simple and beautiful are the accounts of the nativity of our Lord given by the Evangelists! And in this respect they differ most strikingly from those contained in the apocryphal books. As is usually the case with uninspired writers, the latter show a disposition to pry into everything, and there is in their narratives an exuberance of marvels. They have flying birds poised perfectly still in the air and donkeys and oxen kneeling to worship the Babe in the manger. Many kinds of curious occurrences are described. This is out of harmony with the divine method. God has never been prodigal in the exercise of his miracle-working power. The same conservation of energy that we see in the physical world is characteristic of the operations of Deity in all realms. With the Lord there is no confusion nor waste. He does what ought to be done and no more; he says what is proper and then ceases to speak. The silence of the Bible concerning many of the great questions upon which it touches is one of its most remarkable features, and is no mean attestation of its superhuman origin.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS.

Representatives of the six great Powers of Europe—England, France, Germany, Russia, Austria, and Italy,—are now assembled in London for the purpose of securing peace upon satisfactory terms between Turkey and the Balkan States. The sittings of the body are being held in the historic St. James Palace, where they are entirely shut off from the noise of the street, and where they have in view a peaceful, grass-covered quadrangle. The Outlook sums up the questions before the Conference as follows:

"The new boundaries in the provinces of Thrace, Macedonia, and Albania, as the result of the successful advance of the allies.

"The disposition of the fortress of Adrianople and the city of Salonika.

"The disposition of the district of Novibazar.

"The question as to whether Albania is to be erected into an independent state.

"The claim of Serbia to an AEgean or Adriatic port.

"The claim of Greece to Crete and the islands in the AEgean Sea.

"The question as to what indemnity, if any, Turkey shall pay to the victors.

"The adjustment of the Turkish debt.

"The guarantees to be given by Turkey for the well-being of Christians in any territory now occupied by the allies but to be restored to Turkey."

SENATOR WILLIAMS AT COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY.

Senator John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, is not only possessed of extraordinary gifts as a debater, but is also an accomplished and widely read scholar. He was educated at that famous Southern seat of letters, the University of Virginia, and also in his early years prosecuted his studies in Germany. Many in this section will read with interest the following press dispatch from Washington City, concerning the service recently performed for one of America's leading educational institutions by this gifted Southerner:

"Senator Williams has completed his series of lectures before the students of Columbia University, New York, on 'The Influence of Thomas Jefferson.' These lectures, under the auspices of the George Blumenthal foundation, which carries an endowment to secure a series of eight lectures from national figures on the science of government, were largely attended, and, as the New York newspapers show, were heard with the keenest interest. A number of letters of the highest commendation have come to Mr. Williams, showing appreciation of the light shed upon the character and attainments of the Republic's great constructor. These lectures will be published by the University as soon as Mr. Williams corrects the proofs. Among former lecturers on the Blumenthal foundation is Gov. Woodrow Wilson, whose subject was, 'Constitutional Government,' a work from which there have been numerous citations."

In this connection, it may not be amiss to recall the fact that the religious press of the country last year did Mr. Williams a very grave injustice when he recited his parody on the Apostles' Creed in Congress. That act was, in our judgment, a regrettable one, but it did not justify any journal in holding Mr. Williams up to the public as an unbeliever and a scoffer. The truth is, the Mississippi Senator is an Episcopalian and is entirely respectful in his attitude toward the Christian religion. The effort to catalogue him with the skeptics was only another illustration of how poorly informed many church editors are concerning public men and public affairs. The reckless use of the tongue does much harm, but even more is done by the reckless use of the pen. We write this in the interest of truth, and in justice to the distinguished publicist who was misrepresented and the Christian constituency that he serves. No infidel could be elected to high office in Mississippi.

DRAWING TO A CLOSE.

After continuing for about six weeks, the trial of the Vanderbilt University lawsuit in the Chancery Court of Davidson County, Tennessee, is drawing to a close. The attorneys for the defendants completed the presentation of their proof on December 18, and it was announced that the solicitors for the complainants had very little additional evidence to submit. It was agreed that the arguments in the case, which are not to be limited by the Court, should be deferred until after the holidays.

So many misleading statements as to Bishop Hoss's position concerning the management of the University have appeared in the Nashville papers, that he was led last week to make a public statement on the subject. We may let our readers see it next week. The Bishop's mental machinery is manifestly all right, despite his physical condition. He still possesses that remarkable power of lucid and vigorous expression for which he has long been distinguished. Few men in the course of their lives have been so much misrepresented, as Bishop Hoss has since the beginning of this regrettable controversy.

HOSPITAL DAY.

By action of the North Mississippi Annual Conference, Sunday, January 19, has been named as Hospital Day throughout its bounds. Every pastor and congregation are urged to arrange a service suitable for the occasion and to present the claims of this great enterprise to those in attendance and to take an offering for it. Rev. H. M. Ellis, of Memphis, Tenn., will take pleasure in furnishing suggestions as to a fitting program for the day, if asked to do so. We are now thoroughly committed to this urgently needed project, and it behooves us to unite our efforts in carrying it speedily forward. Brother Ellis has already secured in cash and subscriptions more than $63,000. It is to be hoped that every church in North Mississippi will obey this order of the Annual Conference, and that a creditable showing will be made on January 19. If all will lend a hand, something worth while will be accomplished.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Birmingham, Ala., attended the recent session of the Florida Conference, in Tampa.

It has been announced that Dr. J. B. Lawrence, of Columbus, Miss., will edit the Mississippi Baptist, published at Newton, Miss. Dr. Lawrence has had editorial experience, and is a fluent and forceful writer.

Rev. Brisco Carter's title of "Presiding Elder-at-Large" has been confirmed. He was recently introduced as such to the members of the North Texas Conference, and Bishop Mouzon thus referred to him at Monroe last week.

Among the preachers who took sick in Monroe last week before the appointments were read out were Rev. C. C. Miller, Rev. C. B. Carter, and Rev. H. N. Brown. We forbear to mention the names of those who took sick after the appointments were read.

"It would be like parting from a dear friend to give up the Advocate," writes Sister M. L. Wilson, of Aberdeen, Miss. We are glad to know that our paper wins its way into the hearts of some of its readers and renders them a service which they highly value.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, who has been assigned to Donaldsonville and Vacherie for the next year, was in the city last Saturday. He says that since returning from Conference he has been so busy telling the people at Slidell good-bye, that he has scarcely had time to pack up to move.

At the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, Rev. J. W. Rutledge was assigned to the Pine Ridge circuit, where he formerly served successfully as pastor for four years. Later, however, a change was made, and it is now reported that he will serve the Bell City charge.

Dr. S. A. Steel has begun his pastorate most auspiciously at Washington Street Church, Columbia, S. C. On a recent Sunday evening the other six churches of the city called in their services and came to Washington Street to hear Dr. Steel deliver his great address on "The Pioneers of Methodism."

An effort is being made to effect the organization of a choral club to be composed of members of the Louisiana Conference. The purpose of the club will be to assist in the leading of the old-time hymns at the Conference sessions and to render quartettes and such other special selections as may be called for.

There are now three former members of the Louisiana Conference engaged in evangelical work in the State, besides the two members of the Conference who were appointed to that work at Monroe last week. Surely it should not be necessary for the Louisiana pastors to send off for helpers in their revival campaigns.

A leading member of the Louisiana Conference, who chanced to drop into our office last week, stated that Bishop Mouzon's sermon in Monroe on the Sunday that the Louisiana Conference was in session there was a really great utterance. He predicted a career of large usefulness and increasing influence for this youngest of our Chief Pastors.

An exchange of appointments between Rev. A. F. Vaughan and Rev. R. W. Vaughan was effected after the assignments were announced at Monroe last week. Rev. Floyd Vaughan will serve the Franklin Church, and Rev. Robert Vaughan will serve Mer Rouge charge. Brother R. W. Vaughan was formerly pastor of the Franklin congregation for four years.

At the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, Rev. W. L. Duren was returned to Tupelo to round out his quadrennium. Brother Duren is one of the most forceful pastors and efficient workers in North Mississippi, and many think that he has the most desirable charge in the northern half of the Magnolia State, if not in the entire commonwealth.

The Nashville Christian Advocate of December 13, stated that Dr. T. N. Ivey entered a Sanitarium at Statesville, N. C., on Dec. 7, and that, though improving, he would likely be compelled to remain there for a few weeks longer. We regret to hear of the illness of the capable editor of our General Organ, and we trust that no complications will arise and that he will make steady progress toward a complete recovery. Dr. Ivey's work on the tripod has been highly complimented in all parts of the connection.

Rev. O. L. Savage writes that the Belzoni charge, North Mississippi Conference, has given him a royal welcome. Already this stirring pastor is sending in subscriptions to the Advocate.

Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb, Dean of the Whitworth College faculty, left Brookhaven for Kansas City last Friday, whither she has gone to spend the holidays with her daughter, Miss Olive Lipscomb, who is attending the Scarritt Bible and Training School.

We regret to be informed that Rev. C. McDonald, of Pelahatchie, Miss., has been ill since his return home from the Conference at Hazlehurst. We are pleased to state, however, that he is now much improved. Already he has had an appreciated "pounding" from his parishioners, and his pantry is filled with a sufficiency of good things to last for weeks.

Information has reached us that Dr. Tho. Cope land is having a great year at Cabanne Street Church, St. Louis. He is preaching to the largest congregations that he has had since he has been stationed in the Missouri metropolis, and the outlook from every view point is most encouraging. He has received 35 members into the Church since the Annual Conference.

We take the following from the Lincoln County Times of December 19: "Rev. J. T. Leggett and family leave to-day for their new home in Meridian. They will visit relatives at Wesson and Jackson en route. During their four years' residence here, they have greatly endeared themselves to the Brookhaven people, whose good wishes follow them to their new place of residence."

After a successful pastorate at Coldwater, Miss., Rev. D. W. Babb has been assigned to Charleston, Miss., as the successor of Rev. J. W. Bell, who is now presiding elder of the Aberdeen District. Brother Babb has the confidence and high esteem of all who know him. It would not be amiss to call him the St. John of his Conference. The Charleston church should count itself most fortunate to secure his services.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley will visit relatives in Tennessee during the Christmas holidays, while Sister Townsley carries with the home folk in New Orleans. Brother Townsley expects to be in place soon at Rayville, La., his new appointment. It goes without saying that the people of that charge will be highly pleased when they become acquainted with their pastor. He has a way of winning the hearts of the people wherever he goes.

Rev. A. G. Shankie, at his own request, was taken out of New Orleans at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference and sent to Minden, La., which is an excellent appointment. Brother Shankie served the Rayne Memorial Church for the past two years, and has shown himself to be a preacher of uncommon strength and impressiveness. He will leave behind in the Crescent City a host of friends who will ever hold him in loving remembrance.

The Magnolia (Miss.) Gazette of last week says: "In the list of appointments of the Louisiana Annual Conference, which completed its work at Monroe on Monday, the 16th inst, we notice the designation of Rev. J. M. Alford as pastor at Tioga next year, and the assignment of Rev. J. A. Alford to the churches at Simsport and Evergreen. Both of these splendid young preachers are Pike County boys, sons of Rev. N. E. Alford of this vicinity, and it pleases us to see them taking high rank in the Louisiana Conference."

From a late number of the Columbus (Miss.) Commercial, we clip the following: "The people of Lexington, Miss., who are noted for their culture, are to be congratulated upon having Dr. H. G. Henderson as their minister. He is a man of scholarly attainments, and is thoroughly conversant with the Scriptures. His sermons are always logical and free from the claptrap arguments characteristic of so many preachers of the day. His countless friends in Columbus wish for him abundant blessings in his new field of labor."

Last week's issue of the Alabama Advocate contained stenographic reports of the sermons delivered by Bishop Wilson and Bishop Kilgo at the late session of the Alabama Conference at Union Springs. Both discourses were of an uncommonly high order, and are well worth reading and meditating upon. Bishop Wilson has long been regarded as a pulpit star of the first magnitude, and the spiritual and eloquent utterances of Bishop Kilgo are attracting much attention wherever he goes. Southern Methodism has never been without her "sons of thunder."

Our sanctum was gladdened one day last week by the genial presence of Rev. W. W. Holmes, who was associate pastor of the First Methodist Church of this city last year, but who has lately been given charge of our church in Ruston, La. Brother Holmes has spent most of his ministerial life in New Orleans, and was perhaps the best known and most popular Methodist minister here. He was President of the Protestant Ministers' Association, a position of considerable honor. We give this choice young itinerant up with not a little reluctance.

Dr. W. F. McMurray has gathered together in a book the various Church Extension sermons and addresses which he has been collecting from the brethren for several months, and which have already been largely distributed in pamphlet form. The new volume, which appears under the suggestive title, "Priming for the Future," is handy in size and quite attractive in its mechanical make-up. The price is 25 cents, which barely covers the cost of publication. Our distinguished Church Extension Secretary has a Rooseveltian energy, and is doing a great work for the Church. He is a leader who leads.

Dr. A. F. Smith, the accomplished and popular pastor of our First Church at Jackson, Miss., has been sent back for another year, to the great delight of the people. Dr. Smith serves the largest congregation, and perhaps occupies the most responsible place, of any pastor in Mississippi. In carrying forward the enterprise to erect the new Galloway Memorial Church, just across the street from the residence of the late Bishop Charles B. Galloway, he is rendering an important service to the Methodism of the entire commonwealth. Our Church needs to be at her best at the Capital of the State and the seat of Millsaps College.

We were honored last Saturday by a visit to the Advocate office of the Rev. Dr. E. B. Ryckman, a member of the Montreal Conference of the Canadian Methodist Church. Dr. Ryckman, accompanied by his daughter, is making a tour of the United States. He served in the active ministry for 51 years and has been in the superannuate relation for five years. He served for twenty-seven years as the President of his district, a position similar in the Canadian Church to that of presiding elder in our Church; he has been a member of the General Conference continually since 1874; he was twice elected President of the London Conference and once of the Montreal Conference, and has been a member of the last three Ecumenical Conferences. We are pleased to have so distinguished a minister among us.

THE BINDING FORCE OF SCRIPTURE.

Our Savior astonished the people because, instead of being lost in the mazes of arbitrary and vicious excrescences that darkened the face of religion, he taught them "with authority, and not as the scribes." Taught them with authority, that is to say, with the title to command, and with the force of command. If God has given us a revelation of his will, whether in the laws of our nature, or in a kingdom of grace, that revelation not only illuminates but binds. Like the credentials of an earthly ambassador, it is just and necessary that the credentials of that revelation should be tested. But, if it be found genuine, if we have proofs of its being genuine, equal to those of which, in the ordinary concerns of life, reason acknowledges the obligatory character, then we find ourselves to be not independent beings engaged in an optional inquiry, but the servants of a Master, the pupils of a Teacher, the children of a Father, and each of us already bound with the bonds which those relations imply. Then head and knee must bow before the Eternal, and the divine will must be embraced and followed by man with all his heart, with all his mind, with all his soul, and with all his strength.—W. E. Gladstone.

WHEN YOU HAVE FOUND YOUR PLACE.

You will be happy in it, contented, joyous, cheerful, energetic.

The days will be all too short for you. Dinner time and closing time will come before you realize it.

All your faculties will give their consent to your work, will say "Amen" to your occupation. There will be no protest anywhere in your nature.

You will not feel humiliated because you are a farmer, or a blacksmith, or a shoemaker, because, whatever your occupation or profession, you will be an artist instead of an artisan.

You will not apologize because you are not this or that, because you will have found your place and will be satisfied.

You will feel yourself growing in your work, and your life broadening and deepening.

Your work will be a perpetual tonic to you. There will be no drudgery in it.

You will go to your task with delight and leave it with regret.

Life will be a glory, not a grind.—Great Thoughts.

A NEW EDITION OF THE BIBLE.

A New York dispatch to the Times-Democrat, bearing date of November 18, reads as follows:

"First copies of the revised edition of the Bible published by the American Baptist Publication Society reached the Society's headquarters to-day. The new edition is a radical departure in its construction from the language used in the King James version. In the new Bible the names 'Adam and Eve' do not appear. Their place is taken by the words 'man' and 'woman,' which is a direct translation of the old Hebrew names. The word 'hell' is eliminated, 'underworld' being inserted in its place. Other great changes are made. The story of Jonah and the whale is changed so that the words 'Great Fish'—as being a nearer interpretation of the ancient Hebrew—take the place of 'whale.' 'Jehovah Thy God' takes the place of 'Lord Thy God.' 'Carved' replaces 'graven' and the word 'immersed' in parenthesis follows the word baptize in every instance. In the new edition the Lord's prayer becomes: 'Our Father who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy Name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in Heaven so on earth. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debt, as we also have forgiven our debtors. And bring us not into temptation, but deliver us from the evil one. Amen.'"

ASK GREAT THINGS.

The story goes that Sir Walter Raleigh one day asked a favor from Queen Elizabeth, whereupon the latter said to him: "Raleigh, when will you leave off begging?" To which the ambitious courtier replied: "When your Majesty leaves off giving." This was a shrewd answer from a worldly point of view, and it is not without its spiritual application. God, who is the King of kings, is actuated by a royal generosity. He loves to be asked, in a humble and trustful way, for the best things, and should be approached by every believer in the spirit of an ample expectancy. "Thou art coming to a King, large petitions with thee bring." It will be time to leave off asking when God leaves off giving.

—Zion's Herald.

A KING WHO REGARDS HIS SUBJECTS.

King Nicholas, the grand old Montenegrin King who is battling with Turkey, when asked by impatient ones how long the besieged city of Scutari would hold out, replied:

"We should have been in possession days ago if I were not obliged always to have regard for the valuable lives of my soldiers. My Montenegrins are brave and full of self-sacrifice, but their numbers are inconsiderable. My sacred duty is to spare their lives so that Montenegro may be able to win more battles. We have sufficient time, for, even without our assistance, the common cause of the Balkan kingdoms has already been crowned with success."

Had kings and generals from the beginning spoken and acted thus, much of the horror of war would have been unknown. To drive troops to certain death in a desperate, almost hopeless venture, when even victory was of minor importance, merely to add luster to a leader's fame, is murder. A man's life is sacred and valuable in war as in peace.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

That is what life means to me—a place where true joys don't hang on material pegs, and where all the while the fact that God our Father is on his throne lines every cloud with gold.—Wilfred T. Grenfell, M. D.

MRS. POLLY FALKNER DAY, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Decatur Butler, of Amite County, Miss., was born August 20, 1853, and died Nov. 19, 1912. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Salem Church in 1868, under the ministry of the late Rev. Jas. A. Godfrey. She was married to William Hockett Day, Oct. 8, 1872. Nine children—four sons and five daughters—with their father, survive to mourn her death. Truly it can be said that Mrs. Day lived for God, her Church, and her family. The old home is sad and can never again be the happy gathering place of the family as once it was, yet we are assured that there is a place where all can gather and be forever in happy, eternal union. To such a place she has gone to await our coming. She was buried Nov. 21, in the Zion Hill cemetery. The funeral service was conducted by the Revs. H. C. Herring and J. Lloyd Decell in the presence of a large gathering of sorrowing loved ones and sympathizing friends. We tenderly laid her away to await the call of God. Our sorrow is borne in triumphant faith, hope and love. J. EARLY GRAY.

On the night of Dec. 2, 1912, the home of J. L. McBryde was overshadowed by a cloud of great sorrow, and Wells' Chapel, of New Albany circuit, North Mississippi Conference, was made poorer, by the death of Mrs. MARY L. MCBRYDE. Sister McBryde was born in Tippah County, Miss., March 18, 1858, and was married to J. L. McBryde, Dec. 20, 1877. To them were given six sons and one daughter, all of whom, with their father, are now living and bearing the burden of this great sorrow. Sister McBryde became a member of the Methodist church at Wells' Chapel twenty-two years ago, and she was a faithful member till death. She had not only the respect of the community in which she was reared under the wholesome influence of her father and mother, Mr. J. W. and Mrs. Mary Jamieson, but the love and perfect confidence of the church in her neighborhood and wherever she was known. Sister McBryde was the child of affliction for several months before her death, but she bore it patiently and in the spirit of submission to her Heavenly Father's will, and died in peace, testifying that she was ready. Her former pastor,

A SAFE PATH.

A little child of three or four years was taken down into the heart of a great city one day by a relative who was on a shopping expedition. The thronged sidewalks, and especially the crowded streets with their stream of traffic—cars, automobiles and horses pressing upon each other continually—greatly interested the baby, and she told of it on her return home. "Weren't you afraid to go across among all those things?" she was asked.

"No," she answered serenely. "The big policeman just held up his hand, and all the folks and horses just waited while Charlotte went over."

To her childish thought it was all for Charlotte—just a moment of enforced quiet that one little girl might pass safely. It was all she needed to know; and practically it was true. We older ones, bewildered and often sore trouble by all the whirl of life about us, the cares and problems of the world that press us on every hand, might learn a lesson of comfort from the little one's faith and confidence. However alarming and hopeless the outlook may seem, things are never beyond the control of the Power that keeps watch over all. For the soul that trusts in him God will make a safe path, day by day, amid all the turmoil and perplexities, a quiet place where we may walk undisturbed and unafraid.

"Among so many, can he care? Can special love be everywhere?" I asked. My soul bethought of this: "In just that very place of his, Where he hath put and keepeth you, God hath no other thing to do."

—From Forward.

IN FAVOR OF A NEW ORLEANS DEPOSITORY.

(Adopted by the Mississippi Conference in Its Recent Session at Hazlehurst.

Whereas, in the City of New Orleans, La., the Methodist Church owns a building known by the corporate name of "The New Orleans Methodist Depository," and that this building in construction and location is well adapted for a book store, and

Whereas, there is no place in the city where Protestant literature, Bibles, and religious books are kept on sale, which lack is a great drawback to our work in that city and the surrounding country; and

Whereas, the charter of incorporation of this building provides that said building shall be used by our Publishing House free of rent for the purpose of storing and disseminating our books and literature, as well as for the publication of the New Orleans Christian Advocate; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Mississippi Conference joins the Louisiana and North Mississippi Conferences in petitioning the Book Committee, or Smith and Lamar, the Publishing Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to establish and maintain a book depository in the city of New Orleans, similar to the branches that have been established in other cities.

CHEAP PIANOS CAUSE NEURASTHENIA.

An eminent nerve specialist is authority for the statement that pianos of a "tin-panny" tone are responsible for many cases of neurasthenia or nervous prostration. If you have ever lived next door to such an instrument you will doubtless agree with the doctor.

In selecting a piano it is well to remember that instruments which are ordinarily sold at two hundred to two hundred and twenty dollars, almost invariably develop a metallic tone within one to five years. Such instruments soon become a nuisance to the neighborhood and fall into disuse. They are the most expensive pianos you can possibly buy.

It is here that the Advocate Piano Club comes to the rescue of the man with a limited purse, for, by uniting our interests in a Club of one hundred buyers, instead of each one purchasing from a different factory, we are able to secure the wholesale instead of the retail price, and thus obtain instruments of standard quality for a price such as we are ordinarily asked to pay for an inferior product. Every reader is cordially invited to write for the Club's beautifully illustrated catalogue, which gives full information. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

(Adopted by the Home Mission Society at Coldwater, Miss.)

On Dec. 4, 1912, the sweet spirit of our sister and co-worker, Mrs. EMMA CANADA, winged its flight from earth to the God who gave it. We miss her sadly, but we are thankful for having known and been associated with one of so gentle and sweet a nature as was hers. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That the Coldwater (Miss.) Home Mission Society has lost a faithful and beloved member, and that, while we mourn her loss, we bow in humble submission to the Divine will, knowing that all things work together for good to those that love the Lord.

2. That we extend to the bereaved family our deep and sincere sympathy and commend them to the care of the Father above.

3. That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Home Mission Society and published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

(Signed): Mrs. R. A. Jones, Mrs. J. D. Turley, Mrs. C. L. Graham.

WORK WANTED.

The undersigned is a Methodist preacher who desires to supply a work somewhere within Louisiana or Mississippi. I have a fair literary education, taught school six years, during which time I held a first-grade license, and have a wife and one child. I have had experience as a pastor, and will gladly give the details of my experiences in the ministry and make satisfactory explanation as to my former connection with the Mississippi Conference to any presiding elder who will write me. I have been offered employment in the secular world, but my heart is in the work of the ministry, and I prefer to serve any kind of a charge rather than enter the secular world.

VERONA, MISS.

These good people at Verona, will not quit their old ways. As soon as they got the Conference news they came to the parsonage to welcome us back for the third year, bringing with them flour, meat, sugar, coffee, fruits, both canned and fresh, and many other good things too numerous to mention—a sufficiency to supply our table for many days. Indeed, they have given us a most cordial reception. Sunday was a beautiful day upon which to begin the work of the new year. We had good congregations at each hour. It looks to me as if the indications are favorable for success. I feel sure that every preacher left Greenwood resolved to try to live nearer to the Lord and do more for His glory than in the time past.

THREE KINDS OF CHRISTIANS.

There are, as a matter of fact, three kinds of Christians. Some Christians give God a place in their lives. They would not for a moment think of banishing him, or give up the thought of some measure of fellowship with him. These are the nominal Christians. There are many of them, and of a most respectable class, in all our churches.

There are others who give him much prominence in their lives. They make much of the church, love the society of Christians, yet have not gone far enough to realize for themselves the "seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness" of the Master's requirement. These are the active members and the workers in most of our churches. They keep most of the church machinery moving. They seldom, however, touch the real spiritual work of the kingdom.

Then there are those who give him pre-eminence in all things. Christ occupies all the field. Outside of his fellowship there is nothing worth having. All of the life, with its plans and aims, has been consecrated to him. These are the real workers, those finding the real joy as well as the real fruitfulness in Christian service. To belong to this last class is the blessed privilege of every Christian; and this is the only Christian it is worth while to be.—Methodist Recorder.

GOD THE FATHER.

When one of the Roman emperors was entering Rome in triumph, a little child darted through the ranks of the soldiers who lined the road, and made for the gorgeous car in which the emperor was seated. Some of the soldiers tried to restrain the little one, and said to him: "It is the emperor." "Your emperor," said the boy, "but my father." That was the boy's warrant to approach.

And so some would say: "What right have you, a poor sinner, to approach the King of kings and Lord of lords, before whom cherubim and seraphim veil their faces with their wings?" The right this word gives, "Our Father!"

This name, "Father," is a new name. It is a name no one but Jesus could have revealed to men. We could never have known God the Father save through the Incarnate Son. Men only saw God from the outside. They only judged him by his works. * * * But here we get a view of God, if I may so speak, but from the inside. Here you have God's heart laid bare. * * * In Bethlehem, in Nazareth, in Galilee, in the Garden of Gethsemane, on the cross of Calvary, Jesus was spelling out for us this new name, revealing to us that God is more than wisdom, more than power, more than justice; that God above and beyond everything else is Love.

A MOTHER'S LOVE.

Rev. Sam. P. Jones had the following peroration at the close of one of his lectures:

"An angel was sent down from heaven one day to bring back the most beautiful thing on earth. He hunted long and carefully, saw a bed of full blown American Beauty roses, lovely beyond compare, and he gathered an armful and started to return to his home above. As he soared into the air he saw a baby's smile, and filled with rapturous admiration at the sight, returned to take it, too. By its side he discovered a mother's love, and with all three in his arms, he mounted to the place beyond the skies. Just outside the pearly gates the spirit paused for a moment, and lo! the roses had withered and were dead, the baby's smile had vanished, but strong as ever the mother's love remained, and he cast the others aside and took this and laid it at the Master's feet as the most lovely and lasting thing on earth."

A REPEATED REQUEST TO OUR PASTORS.

So cordial was the response of our pastors to the request made last year for a sermon on Christian Stewardship that we feel encouraged to repeat the request. January 5th is the day selected for the sermon this year. If this date conflicts with your plans we shall be glad to have you present the subject on the first Sunday that is convenient.

There is no more opportune time to stress this important subject, and we shall appreciate very much your cooperation in this effort to get this very vital matter on the conscience of the whole Church.

CUTTING DOWN THE COST OF PIANOS.

Have you ever stopped to ask yourself the question why oranges which sell for five cents apiece cost only forty cents a dozen? Or why apples sell so much cheaper by the bushel than by the nickel's worth?

It is the same way with pianos and everything else you buy. If you were to purchase one hundred pianos (eight car loads) you would expect to get a much lower price than if you purchased only one. That is why the Advocate Piano Club, composed of one hundred piano buyers, who club their orders into one big order, is able to save its members at least one dollar out of three and still provide pianos of much better quality.

You are cordially invited to write for your copy of the Club's beautifully illustrated catalogue, which fully explains every feature of this unusual piano opportunity and pictures and describes each of the five different styles of pianos offered. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

AN INTERESTING ORGANIZATION.

On the afternoon of December 14th, 1912, at 2:30 o'clock, there met in the auditorium of the Methodist church in Hazlehurst, Miss., those who were admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference at the recent session. Those present were as follows, to-wit:—

R. F. Harrell, S. H. Frazier, P. F. Daniel, H. M. Johnson, T. A. Ferguson, C. E. Downer, S. E. Finny, A. S. Oliver, A. S. Byrd, H. R. McKee, A. W. O'Bryant, and A. H. Steele. O. C. SeEVERS was absent.

R. F. Harrell was elected temporary chairman and P. F. Daniel temporary secretary of this class.

It was understood to be the sense of the meeting that we form a permanent class organization; so a motion to that effect was made and carried, and to that end the election of officers was in order.

R. F. Harrell was elected President, and S. H. Frazier was elected vice-president.

A motion was made and carried that the office of Secretary and Treasurer be combined, and P. F. Daniel was elected to that place.

A motion was made and adopted to the effect that, as not one of our class of thirteen, just admitted on trial into the Conference, used tobacco in any form, we place ourselves on record as being opposed to its use and pledge ourselves to war against its use as being injurious both to mind and body.

The Secretary was instructed to write up the proceedings of this meeting and send it to be published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

On motion, it was voted that seven members of this class, meeting in any place in pursuance to notice from the President, shall constitute a quorum.

It was resolved that we consider ourselves a prayer circle and that we covenant together that on each day of the ensuing year each of our number shall take the names of all the others to a throne of Divine Grace and pray God's blessing upon them in their respective fields of labor; that they might have the guidance of the Holy Spirit in all things they undertake to do in the Master's name. And, further, that we pledge ourselves to keep in touch with each other during the year by some means of communication.

A motion was carried that, in view of the fact that the next meeting of this Conference to be held in Natchez, Miss., will be its hundredth anniversary, that we, as a class, at that time and place should express our appreciation of the labors of our superannuated brethren by giving them a banquet.

It was agreed that we should meet at the Methodist church to-morrow morning, Sunday, Dec. 15, 1912, at 9 o'clock for the purpose of engaging in a devotional service to be conducted by Bro. O. C. SeEVERS. The class adjourned with a short prayer by each member.

R. F. HARRELL,
President.

P. E. DANIEL,
Secretary.

THE BOOKS OF THE BIBLE.

How many books are there in the Bible? Here is one good way to remember. First, write down the words, "Old Testament." Now, how many letters are in the word "Old?" Three. How many in the word "Testament?" Nine. Put three and nine together and you have 39—the number of books in the Old Testament.

Next, write down the words, "New Testament." There are also in "New" and "Testament" 3 and 9 letters. Multiply 3 by 9 and you have 27—the number of books in the New Testament. By adding 39 and 27 you have 66—the number of books in the Bible.—New York Christian Advocate.

TRACTOR EDUCATION.

Every year thousands of gas and oil tractors are built and sold. There is a consequent large demand for knowledge concerning the operation and use of these engines. The majority of those who purchase these machines have at the time of their purchase very little if any practical knowledge of the construction, operation and care of the tractor, which they are buying.

About the only use with which they are familiar is for the operation of belt driven machinery; consequently, they must be taught how to operate, care for and repair their tractors. They want to know how to do the various things for which the tractor is adapted.

The Hart-Parr Company, Charles City, Iowa, has adopted a very novel, practical and successful method of supplying this knowledge. They have established what is known as the Hart-Parr School of Tractor Farming and Tractor Engineering.

This school gives very thorough instructions regarding the construction and function of all the various parts of internal combustion tractors; how to operate, care for, adjust and repair such tractors; and the best methods of using them for all the various types of work to which they are adapted.

This instruction is given in two ways: First, by correspondence; Second, by means of practice or demonstration schools. The correspondence course, as now compiled, consists of 15 lesson booklets.

These lessons are thorough, complete, up-to-date.

During the winter of 1911-12, fourteen practice or demonstration schools of ten days each were conducted at their various branch houses throughout the United States and Canada. During the winter of 1912-13 about the same number of these practice schools will be conducted. Here actual experience is given the students in handling engines. They are taught to readjust engines that are out of adjustment; they are shown how to repair various parts. The more intricate parts of an engine are shown dismantled, so that the students can see each individual part and just how they work together to accomplish their purpose.

At the present time they have 1900 students enrolled in the correspondence department of this school. Last winter over 900 of these attended some one of the different practice schools, which were conducted. The students who are enrolled in the correspondence department, and, especially those who attended the practice school, are very enthusiastic regarding the character of the instruction which they have been given.

The natural result of the work of this school is that the owners of tractor engines are enabled to get much wider use and much more economical use out of their engines than they could have without this instruction. Many young men who do not own engines are taking this course of study and fitting themselves to operate engines owned by others. Thus the number of experienced, practical operators throughout the country are being greatly increased. Still, it is impossible to supply the demand for thoroughly capable operators.

It is expected that this school each year will do more and more in supplying this great demand and need for experienced operators. And in doing so make an opportunity for many young men to fit themselves to earn larger and better pay on the farm than they could receive without it.

CATARRH TRUTH

You Can Plainly See the Truth This Picture Tells.

This picture shows the mucous membrane tract of the nose, throat, and air passages. This is where catarrh germs live and where the disease spreads. The small black spot No. 1, shows where balms, creams, pastes, ointments and such treatments reach by direct application. You can see that it doesn't reach more than 2 per cent of the disease.

No. 2 shows where douches, sprays, atomizers and similar treatments reach. So their cures, like 1 and 2, only reach a tiny part of the disease. You cannot cure catarrh by stopping the disease only in a very small part.

No. 3 shows that medicated smoke can, will and does reach ALL the corners, nooks and creases, touching every part. Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy which I will send you free, is made of herbs, roots, flowers and leaves; no tobacco or habit-forming drugs. When this mixture is burned in a tube or new clean pipe, which I send you free, it sends forth a powerful, germ-killing, volatile smoke, relieving the distress and killing the germs. You can instantly feel the beneficial effects. I have shown you in the picture the truth about various treatments. You can see it is reasonable and fair.

Now I want you to write for a free treatment to let you prove for yourself what a grand remedy I have. The regular treatment costs only $1.00, postpaid. Just say in a letter or on a postal to me, "Please send me Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy Free." When I get your request I will send the treatment by mail free and also facts about catarrh you will be glad to know. Address Dr. J. W. Blosser, 224 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Brother Manotte, the New Orleans colporter for the American Bible Society, found 35 copies of the King James translation of the Bible in 150 Catholic homes in New Orleans, while in the same round of visits he only found one Bible to every ten Protestant families. These nominal Protestants were from all parts of the country and belong to the "lost sight of" church members, those who simply did not adhere to the Church of Rome. None of them claimed to be Southern Methodists. This record among Catholics is an encouraging sign of their growth in independence in the matter of Bible reading.

Rev. J. W. Moore is planning a Sunday school thermometer in the form of the face of a clock with movable hour and second hands. At the hour marks the daily attendance is to be noted, and the second hand marks the new scholars. He plans his totals from one hundred as the minimum at the one o'clock mark, up to three hundred, at the twelve o'clock mark. The second marks, used for new scholars each Sunday, goes from one to ten. This strikes us as a fine scheme for picturing to the eye the progress made by the school in getting new scholars, and we commend it to all who have no better plan.

When Mr. W. W. Williams, superintendent of the Pineville Sunday school, took charge last May, there were in regular attendance about eighteen. Now there are fifty pupils organized into regular graded classes, from the Beginners to the Adults. One of his first problems was to secure good order, and this he did by curtailing off some rooms and by treating the bad boys like he esteemed them to be gentlemen. But the exceptional thing about this school is that it has made this progress without a pastor or a preaching service of any kind. And this also puts the burden of raising all the finances for maintaining the building upon the Sunday school. Br. A. T. Manifold is the assistant superintendent.

For many years Louisiana Methodists have felt the importance of a model Sunday school at Natchitoches where so many of our young Methodists are trained to teach in the public schools of the State, and who would, should they have this further knowledge of Sunday school work, be of inestimable value to Christianity and the Church. We have had such Methodist leaders in the State: Normal school there as Mrs. Lizzie Carter McVoy, Prof. D. B. Pickles, and Prof. R. E. Bobbitt, who have been faithful Methodists and who were consecrated to the task of making a model Sunday school. In spite of the cramped quarters of the little makeshift of a church where they have had to work, they have done magnificently. Now at the beginning of Rev. R. H. Harper's fifth year's pastorate, the long hoped for church is being completed and is about ready for occupancy. If not all that Natchitoches needs, the new church is at least an attractive edifice of the stucco type of architecture, and has, with the Sunday school department immediately in the rear, ample room for the present. One happy incident connected with the building of this church was the enlistment of Mr. James Dezendorf, who became its supervising builder and architect. He was a skilled workman who resided in Natchitoches, and on a Sunday that Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick was to speak there, was on his way to the baseball park when met by Prof. Bobbitt, who was on his way to hear Miss Kilpatrick's address to the Adult Bible Classes. Upon an invitation from Prof. Bobbitt to go with him to church Mr. Dezendorf accepted, since he was only going to the park to kill time. The address captured him and he joined one of the classes. Later he became a teacher in the Sunday school, a steward, and came to his recent death only after he had the church building so near completed that a brother has taken up the task of finishing it without any inconvenience. Who can estimate the final worth of this invitation to bear a Sunday school address?

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

A giving Christmas is the only one real Christians can enjoy. Let this be the kind the Sunday schools in North Mississippi observe.

Some thoughtful Adult Classes are ordering big fragrant Balsam pillows from the Adirondacks for tuberculosis and bronchial patients for Christmas. These are said to make coughing less and bring sleep to weary eyes, and thus prove a great blessing.

Mrs. Wyatt, now teaching in Columbus at the I. I. & C., has organized the 300 Methodist girls in attendance upon that institution into a regular Sunday school. She has quite a number of classes all doing fine work and is accenting church and Sunday school interest in her own fine way. Heretofore little definite denominational work has been done in this institution, and Mrs. Wyatt is to be congratulated on her effort and her success.

The Men's Banquet given by the W. A. B. C. Class, First Church, Greenville, was a great success—sixty were present and such timely topics as the following were discussed:—"The Need and Opportunity for Men in the Church," "Man's Place in the Sunday School," and "Social Service." The ladies of the church served a well-appointed banquet, and great fellowship was enjoyed. Dr. Bulla and the Field Secretary are going down later to assist this class in some additional good work. A girls' class in this same school has raised $25 for the Hospital in Memphis and hopes to double that amount by this time next year.

The Boy Scouts in Greenwood have a splendid organization. During the late Conference they met all trains and assisted in numberless ways in making everybody comfortable. One boy, so the story goes, had not been overly imbued with piety or courtesy till he joined the Scouts and learned the various and sundry fine things they had to do to keep up the scout ideals. One day the mud was deep, the streets were almost impassable, and an old lady, none too wealthy or attractive, contemplated a street-crossing very ruefully, before even attempting to start over. This erstwhile thoughtless bad boy told her to wait a bit, then he went over fitting toe and heel, in an unbroken, if straight and narrow, path, and then returned and started her on a smoother, dryer path. When thanked, he said: "Oh! don't mention it; I'm a Boy Scout, and we each help somebody every day." That is quite a worthy companion picture to hang by the one of Sir Walter Raleigh and Queen Elizabeth, and it is beautiful to know that such courtesy and thoughtfulness are not extinct.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By R. A. Maddox, Field Secretary.

During the three months preceding the Annual Conference, the Field Secretary traveled 1637 miles, working along the lines laid down by our Sunday school authorities, and organized teacher-training classes with 217 members.

The Mississippi Conference at its recent session resolved to pray and work for the salvation of 10,000 souls during its centennial year of 1913. Do not forget that, as a rule, 85 per cent of the persons converted in our churches come from our Sunday schools.

The Conference Sunday School Board has arranged for a series of Sunday School Institutes in our territory during the year 1913. All pastors wanting such an institute would do well to apply early to the Chairman of the Board, or to the Field Secretary.

The writer is at present at Louise and Silver City in the interest of our Sunday School work at these places. He will spend the first Sunday in January with Brother Morton at Purvis, with a view to helping the Teacher Training Work. He would be pleased to hear from any of the pastors when they feel that they need him.

At the meeting of the Conference Sunday School Board a few days ago, Mr. N. A. Mott, of Yazoo City, was elected Superintendent of the Wesley Adult Bible Class work; Mrs. G. D. Cameron, of Canton, was elected Superintendent of Mission Work; Miss Daisy Magee of Columbia, was chosen Superintendent of the Elementary Department; and the Executive Committee was authorized to employ a Superintendent for the Teacher Training work. These, together with the Field Secretary, will give us five special workers in our Conference. This is proof that we have a progressive Sunday School Board.

Cancer-Free Treatise.

The Leach Sanatorium, Indianapolis, Indiana, has published a booklet which gives interesting facts about the cause of Cancer, also tells what to do for pain, bleeding, odor, etc. Write for it to-day, mentioning this paper.

COSTS OF POWER IN FARMING.

A practical Texas farmer estimates the cost of plowing with an Oil Tractor as compared with an equivalent number of horses as follows:

Fuel and Oil	$ 3.22
Labor, plowman and engineer ..	4.00
Board of two men	1.14
1/2 per cent of year's depreciation	1.15
1/2 per cent of year's interest ..	.69

Total cost for 25 acres, $10.20
25 Horses for one day:

Feed for horses	$ 6.64
Labor of five men	7.50
Board of five men	2.85
1-3 per cent of year's depreciation	1.66
1-3 per cent of year's interest ..	1.00

Total cost for 25 acres, $19.65

This shows a saving of 37.8c, almost one-half, in the cost of plowing each acre. And even then he has not considered the cost of the horse feed on those days they did not work. And one should remember that this saving in cost is not the only item in favor of the tractor. It does the work quicker and deeper than it is done with animal power. This means that the work is done better. The Tractor will do all other kinds of farm work correspondingly cheaper and better than it can be done with horses or mules.

The Hart-Parr Company, 330R Lawler Street, Charles City, Iowa, have prepared some very interesting comparisons of this kind, which are both instructive and of vital importance to the Southern farmer. We suggest that you write them and ask for their booklet, "Plowing and Tilling with the Modern Farm Horse."

How to Make Better Cough Syrup than You Can Buy

A Family Supply, Saving $2 and Fully Guaranteed.

A full pint of cough syrup—as much as you could buy for $2.50—can easily be made at home. You will find nothing that takes hold of an obstinate cough more quickly, usually ending it inside of 24 hours. Excellent, too, for croup, whooping cough, sore lungs, asthma, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, then add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

This is just laxative enough to help cure a cough. Also stimulates the appetite, which is usually upset by a cough. The taste is pleasant.

The effect of pine and sugar syrup on the inflamed membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe is now used by thousands of housewives throughout the United States and Canada. The plan has been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THE SOUTH LEADS THE NATION.

Has it ever occurred to you in how many different fields of human activity the South has led the nation and the world? A Southern physician discovered Anaesthesia and gave the world painless surgery. A Southern surgeon revolutionized surgical procedure and won for himself the name of "The Father of Gynecology." A Southern man invented the harvesting machine. A Southern General and Statesman was the "Father of his Country" and still another the "Father of Democracy." Southern theologians, orators, jurists, statesmen, generals, scientists, authors, artists and inventors have time and again led the world to greater achievements in their respective fields.

And in the field of instrumental music it is a Southern Piano House that is responsible for the perfecting of the peerless Ludden & Bates Piano, said to possess the sweetest and purest musical tone of any instrument ever built. It is this superb piano, that we have secured for members of the Advocate Piano Club. Five beautiful styles including the Baby Grand, three Cabinet Grand Uprights and a Self-Player Piano are offered in the Club's catalogue, a copy of which will be sent free upon request to any reader. Woman's Missionary Work

SOME FURTHER WORDS OF EXHORTATION.

Again we appeal to the auxiliary presidents. Our fiscal year closes Jan. 1, and our funds are wholly inadequate for the demands made upon them. Oh, sisters, how long will you continue to be "at ease in Zion?" Is it not time to be up and doing? Our Christmas season is upon us, and every woman knows the true meaning of the Christmas-tide. We are all busy planning gifts for our loved ones, but what about the gifts for the One who gave us the greatest and most precious gift the world has ever known? Are we going to forget Him? If our love were more divided our gifts would be more commensurate, and our coffers would be filled to overflowing. There would be no need for repeated appeals, and the work would go forward with strides and bounds. This is what should be, but the state of affairs which really exists is quite different. Failure and disappointment are staring us in the face if our women do not put forth extra efforts during these last weeks of December. Our obligations must be met. Don't wait for some one else to take the initiative, but you, dear sister, be the first one to make the move. Make every effort to have your collections in full, for even a small deficit from each auxiliary means a large debt for the general treasury to face. Now, this is what we want each auxiliary to do: read the following and see which ones your auxiliary has failed to meet; then pray over them; plan, and carry into execution your plans. You will more than succeed.

To have all of our financial obligations met in full we must pay:

1. Dues—full 10 cents from each department.
2. Offerings from both young people and children.
3. Full enrollment fee—Baby Division—25 cents per year for each child enrolled.
4. Mite offering from Junior and Baby Division.
5. Special Funds promised to both departments.
6. Conference Pledge for both departments.
7. Conference Expense Funds.
8. Relief and Retirement Fund, 5 cents per year per member for each department.
9. $2.00 per year from both Home and Foreign departments for Scarritt.

Echoes from Institutes.

We have received quite a number of reports of Institutes held throughout Mississippi and Louisiana, and as it is impossible to publish all of them at one time, and keeping them for several weeks will cause them to lose their freshness and interest, we are just going to publish the best and most helpful parts of those sent in, hoping that this will meet with the approval of the Press Superintendents as well as the women who took the trouble to write up the Institutes. We appreciate what they have done for us, and ask that they continue to give us their co-operation.

Cleveland, Miss.—"Delegates reported from ten different societies. The hospitality of the people of Cleveland was unstinted, and their kindness unsurpassed. All felt that it was good to have been there. Miss Davies was present at every service, except part of the last afternoon, giving information to those who were so fortunate as to hear her. She was, indeed, a benediction to us all and we regret exceedingly that more of our women could not have heard her, for we consider it a rare opportunity to hear one so gifted, so well informed—one with such practical knowledge and at the same time so full of the spirit of Christ. The burden of her talk was for more definite, importunate prayer; more conscientious, painstaking study; more liberal, systematic giving. A strong appeal was made to the womanhood of the Church to arise from a state of indifference into which we have fallen through callousness.

"Considering its resources, Greenville district is not doing what it should. We need a broader vision. Miss Davies said that church work such as building and equipping parsonages and churches was not missions. Miss Knapp, our deaconess from Corinth, was present, and told of her work. She said her work was different from all others of her class in that she was the only one that has ever been sent to a small town and the only one supported by a Conference."

Starkville, Miss.—"At Starkville there was a greater number of delegates than at Okolona, 22 delegates being present. Miss Knapp and Miss Davies were the Council's Representatives. Mrs. Scales, Mrs. J. E. Thomas, Mrs. Susie Thomas, Mrs. S. B. White, and Mrs. T. M. Clark were the Conference officers. The meeting was very profitable."

Okolona, Miss.—"A rain in the early morning prevented many who were coming from catching their trains. The attendance on the meetings was largely local."

New Albany, Miss.—"Miss Knapp, our deaconess, complimented the meeting at this place, under the leadership of the efficient District Secretary, Miss C. Rogers, with a double "E" mark. This is very encouraging. Of course, all enjoyed Miss Davies wherever she went."

Ruston, La.—"Miss Daisy Davies, assisted by Mrs. R. W. Vaughan, conducted the Institute in Ruston. Miss Davies is a power for good, an eloquent and forceful speaker who carries conviction with her message. Several nearby towns sent delegates. The few of us who were so fortunate as to have the benefit of her instruction will doubtless profit by it. Unfortunately a large majority of our members failed to attend."

Hammond, La.—"After reading the reports from the auxiliaries in the district, Miss Davies gave a talk on 'How the Missionary Work is Organized.' In the afternoon Rev. C. C. Miller talked on 'Home and Foreign Missions,' followed by Miss Davies, who discussed the duties of the officers of the Missionary Society. 'Social Service' and 'Lay Rights for Women' were fully discussed by her. At night Miss Davies gave an address on 'The Home the Center of Civilization.' Being a disagreeable day there were not many delegates present, but those who were, felt they had enjoyed a rare treat in hearing Miss Davies."

Almost every report from the Institutes chortled the same sad fact—small attendance. Many and varied are the excuses given. We evidently are not in earnest about our King's business; in fact, we seem to be just "playing at missions." How long are we going to continue in the state of indifference? Our Father's business re-

THE CENTURY'S "AFTER-THE-WAR" SERIES.

The January "Century" will contain the third in that magazine's notable "After-the-War" Series. The topic is the Impeachment of Andrew Johnson, the introduction to which was discussed in the December number by Gen. H. S. Otis and Gen. J. B. Henderson. Gaillard Hunt, Chief of the Bureau of Manuscripts in the Library of Congress, now gives with much personal detail President Johnson's defense—his side of the case as told by his correspondence. Major Benjamin C. Truman, who was Secretary to Johnson as Military Governor and as President, supplements Mr. Hunt's article with a wealth of anecdotes of Johnson, in which the character of the man stands out strongly.

THE SWEETEST SINGER IN THE WORLD.

Who is it? The mocking bird, of course. The sunshine of Dixie scintillates in its liquid notes. The sweet singer of the Southland, famous the world around, knows no competitor in the softness, purity and melody of its musical notes.

And what the sunshine of the South has accomplished in softening and sweetening the tones of the mocking bird has its parallel in the field of instrumental music, for it was a Southern piano house that is responsible for perfecting the superb Ludden & Bates Piano, claimed by critics to possess the sweetest tone of any piano that has yet been built. Professional musicians pronounce its notes absolutely free from the "metallic" quality which piano builders have found so much difficulty in avoiding.

It is this "Mocking Bird of the Piano World," the peerless Ludden & Bates Piano, which is eliciting so much praise from the members of the Advocate Piano Club. A beautifully illustrated catalogue describing the five different styles, will be sent free on request to and reader. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

(Report of the Committee of the North Mississippi Conference.)

Publishing House.

The exhibit of our Publishing Agents, Smith & Lamar, for the year ending February 29, 1912, shows that our Publishing House is still in a flourishing condition, a fact that should prove gratifying to every member of our Church. It is an indication of a healthy condition.

This exhibit shows that the assets of the House amount to $1,327,826.18; with liabilities to the amount of $159,877.00; leaving as net capital of the House the sum of $1,167,949.12.

The total receipts for the year amounted to $831,902.45, the profit on which was $23,329.18, an increase in profits over the preceding year of $3249.75. It is particularly gratifying to note that out of the year's profits, the Book Committee appropriated $10,000.00 to the annual Conferences for the benefit of the superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans of preachers.

The Christian Advocate.

We feel that it would not be easy to overstate the value of The Christian Advocate to our people. It is thoroughly awake to every field and interest of Southern Methodism. Its editorial utterances deal with every thing of interest to church and Christian life; and they are clear and forceful, liberal in spirit and safe and conservative in tone. Its departments were, perhaps, never better edited than now; and the contributed articles add greatly to its worth in the way of provoking serious and profitable thought. We do not hesitate to say that, so far as we have knowledge of the periodical literature of American Methodism, it easily ranks with the best.

The Methodist Review.

We have been pleased to note during the past year the absence in our Methodist Review of articles favorable to the new theology, to which objection was raised in the report of this Committee adopted last year. We should be glad now to affirm that this, the leading journal of our Church, is admirably meeting the needs of our Methodist ministry; but if that ministry is to retain its aggressive, evangelical character, and if the Methodism of today, as the Methodism of yesterday, is to "deeply and mightily stir the hearts of men," there is need that this source of inspiring thought and purpose should touch more frequently and more deeply the fundamentals of personal faith and evangelical doctrine. As at present edited by our brilliant brother, the Rev. Gross Alexander, our Methodist Review is undoubtedly a scholarly journal, dealing with a wide variety of subjects—sociological, psychological, theological, educational, historical, and literary—in an interesting and informing manner; but that the cumulative effect of it is such as our ordination vows conceive to be the end and aim of all ministerial studies we seriously doubt.

Sunday School Periodicals.

The young people and children of to-day will constitute the Church of to-morrow. Hence we do well to put forth our greatest effort and make our largest expenditures to secure their conversion and training. We have found that the Sunday school is the most effective organized agency to accomplish that end, and proper periodical literature is necessary to the work. We commend our Sunday School Department for the exalted ideals of what that literature should be, and congratulate those in charge on their approach towards the ideal. We hope they will never reach perfection, because we desire that the ideals shall always advance as the accomplishment approaches towards it. We urge upon our preachers and people the use of our own literature to the exclusion of all others.

There is great need for a song book that is excellent and popular, and that can be introduced into all our rural churches and Sunday schools. Such a book should be composed of three parts. Part I should consist of not more than fifteen of the best hymns from the Methodist Hymnal; Part II not more than fifteen of the best gospel songs that have permanent value; Part III, not more than fifteen new songs. Parts I and II should be stereotyped and not revised for a generation. Part III may be revised annually, or as often as new songs appear that are desirable. The average rural church has from five to ten or a dozen song books of from two to three different kinds. This evil has resulted from the frequent publication and exploitation of song books containing from 150 to 175 songs, costing from 20 cents to 30 cents each. Less than fifty of the songs of each book are used by the people. Such a book as we recommend could be sold for 10c a copy. We urge upon the Sunday School Department the speedy preparation of such books.

Epworth Era.

The Epworth Era has been changed from a weekly to a monthly publication, and is being issued in very attractive form. Its value as a working manual is quite evident; but it is to be doubted whether it takes the place now vacant in our scheme of church literature, which can only be supplied by a high class weekly paper for our young people.

New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate represents admirably, in its limited sphere, our ideal of what religious journalism should mean. Assuming no neutral attitude, yet with its columns open to a fair discussion of all subjects within the legitimate range of Christian controversy, its Editor stands squarely for that which all men recognize to be the fundamentals of Methodism, and against all that he believes to be misleading and perilous to the Church. Such an editorial policy we can but admire and heartily endorse; and a church journal, breathing such a spirit of aggressive conservatism until fully convinced of the wisdom of change, can but make powerful impress upon the mind and heart of the Church.

We congratulate the church at large, and the patronizing conferences of the New Orleans Christian Advocate in particular, upon having as the Editor of their conference organ so sane, so orthodox, so evangelical, so able a man as Dr. R. A. Meek. We are proud of the influence which this journal is exerting throughout the Church; and we believe that if all official organs would follow its example, and "stand for something," even Methodism in its purity and power, its doctrine, its polity, its aggressive evangelism, much of the insipidity and colorlessness of religious journalism to-day would pass away. Interest in it and its influence would, we are convinced, be mightily increased.

Conference Colporter.

Our Colporter, Brother Bachman, has rendered a great service to the Church and continues to be abundant in good works. The different cults are circulating their literature in the homes of our people, and good books are our defense. We commend Brother Bachman to all our pastors—that he may be given an opportunity to visit their charges and that we assist him in doing a work needed at this time. We request that he be re-appointed to this work.

Mississippi has a great Methodism, with a number of flourishing institutions and the time has fully come when an organ should be established which will be entirely devoted to its interests; therefore we instruct our representatives, in co-operation with

In clubs of five or more, each	1.25 net
Eight months	1.00 net
To preachers	1.00 net

The commission heretofore allowed has been discontinued, because only a very few of the preachers accept commission, and the great majority we have talked with expressed it as their opinion that a commission has proven a hindrance to them in working up the subscription list on their charges.

In cases where persons are very poor, the pastor may recommend that the paper be sent at a reduction. Remittances should be made by Money Order, Registered Letter, or in Stamps. Preachers may deduct for any expense incurred in remitting.
